THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY,
24, NIMTOLA STREET,

Proceedings of the Inaugural Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 4th January, 1875, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, Principal of the School, Author of several works, &c., &c., &c. The Meeting was largely attended.

The Inaugural Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great clat, at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 4th January, 1875, at 4 30 P.M. Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, Principal of the School, Author of several works, &c., &c., &c., was voted to the chair. The Meeting was largely attended. The President, on entering the hall, was received with an outburst of applause, and took his seat amidst cheers.

Address by the Secretary :—

The President, on taking his chair, Babu Sham Lal Day addressed the Meeting thus :

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN,

I stand before you in the hope that you will second me in my efforts to establish a Literary Society, under the designation of the Calcutta Literary Society, the objects of which will be the following : viz :—

- (a) To further the cause of intellectual culture,
- (b) To promote social union between Europeans and Indians.

I feel it to be the duty of every educated young man to come forward, and do his best to promote a feeling of amity between the two different Races,—divided as they are, in color and creed. I must, therefore, trust, Gentlemen, that you will readily come forward and join the Society with alacrity.

By doing so, you will be really promoting a good cause, which has the first claim on the time and attention of every educated youth, whose duty it is to endeavour to promote the cause of good Government in this country, as best befits every loyal subject of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland.

Literary Societies have always done a great good by encouraging young men to devote their leisure hours to the study of various subjects, other than those, which come within the curriculum of studies in colleges and schools.

If you wish to lecture or debate upon a subject, you should, first of all, endeavour to join such Societies, and to learn how to discourse upon, and to discuss a given subject readily, and at a moment's notice.

The Pleaders of the High Court, our Lawyers and Barristers are required to deal with problems that come before them for solution, whilst pleading cases before the Judges of Courts. Men of literary culture start Journals and Magazines, and become leaders of Society, in course of time.

The true greatness of a Nation consists in the number of its literary men, and the Journals and Newspapers, which the reading-public supports and encourages. If you wish to criticise the action of men-in-authority, you should do so either by a speech, or by contributions in the columns of a Newspaper.

With these few words, Gentlemen, I ask the President to declare the Meeting open (Cheers).

The Meeting having been declared open by the President, in some well-chosen words, the following Elections were made for five years :—

- (1) Proposed by Babu Mohesh Chandra Banerjea, seconded by Babu Gokul Chandra Dhar, and resolved :—That Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, Principal, Government Normal School, be elected President to the Society.

- (2) Proposed by Babu Bobai Chand Singh, seconded by Babu Ashini Kumar Halder, and resolved :—That Babu Nobogopal Mitra, Editor, National Paper, be elected Vice President to the Society.

- (3) Proposed by the Revd. C. H. A. Dall, M.A., seconded by Babu Shama Charan Mukerjea, of the Hindu-School, and resolved :—That Babu Sham Lal Day, be elected Secretary to the Society.

- (4) Proposed by Babu Kali Pada Banerjea, seconded by Babu Nilmadhab Chatterjea, and carried :—that :—

Babu Mohesh Chandra Banerjea, „ Parua Chandra Mukerjea,
„ Kanai Lal Sil,

The President, or the Vice-President, and the Secretary to the Society be the Councillors of the Institution.

- (5) On the proposal of Babu Chandī Charan Banerjea the following Gentlemen were elected as Honorary Members to the Society :—

Babu Satish Chandra Banerjea, „ Harendra Kumar Roy,
„ Chandī Charan Banerjea, „ Rameswar Mondol,
„ Kali Pada Banerjea,
„ Sarat Chandra Ghosal,
„ Mathura Nath Chatterjea,
„ Ram Lal Shaw.

After the Elections were made,

Babu Sham Lal Day, said, Gentlemen, many thanks for your kindly electing me as Secretary to the Society. I accept the honor with great pleasure.

My connection with this Society, therefore, dates from today, and as our caste and religion enjoin on such occasions to invoke the blessings of our superiors, I will ask you, Mr. President, as a high caste Kulin Brahmin, whose Ashis is always sought for on such occasions, to bless this Society with long life, and career of usefulness (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, had resumed his seat, the Chairman asked Babu Gobin Chandra Dass to deliver his lecture on Education.

The lecturer rose, amidst cheers, and discoursed very eloquently on the subject for upwards of an hour. He said that the subject that deserves our first consideration, and utmost attention, is the improvement of the human mind,—by Education. But, as the Field of Learning is so very extensive, the object of it of so much importance, the lights in which it may be viewed so various, and the methods, by which instruction can be given, so numerous, it requires such a system as shall meet the advanced state of the Times, so as to prove equally beneficial to all ranks of Society.

The Legislators frame Laws, for the suppression of vice and immorality. The Pandits lecture on Devines against the vices that stain the characters of Men. But do Laws and Lectures effect a Reformation of Manners?—To this inquiry, experience would not give a very favorable answer.

The reason is obvious. Laws can only check the public effects of vicious principles, but can never reach the principles themselves; and Divine lectures are not very intelligible to people, till they arrive at an age, when their principles are rooted, or their habits firmly established.

The only practicable method to reform mankind is to begin with children; to banish, if possible, from their company, every low-bred, and immoral character. Virtue and Vice will not readily grow together, but they will grow, where they are planted, and when one has taken root, it is not easily supplanted by the other. The Great Art of correcting Mankind, therefore, consists in prepossessing the youthful Mind, with good principles.

For this reason, the welfare of Society requires that the Education of Youth should be watched with the most scrupulous attention. Education, in a great measure, forms the moral characters of Men, and Morals are the basis of Government.

The inestimable advantages of Education cannot, perhaps, be more properly explained than by considering in its most extensive sense as applied to almost every object in Nature.

In every production of Nature there are manners latent qualities, which it is the province of enlightened men to draw forth and bring to light. This is properly Education.

The Almighty has graciously provided every thing in this world that can conduce to the benefit of all His creatures. But, having endowed Man with the faculty of Reason, He has, in His wisdom, left many of these benefits un-developed, for the purpose of exercising that Reason, and calling forth that Skill which would otherwise lie dormant and useless.

Thus, Gold and Jewels lie hidden in the obscurity of the Mine, until brought to light by Human Industry; and even when thus produced, they will not display their beauty and lustre until one is refined, and the other polished. This may be called their Education, the drawing forth their qualities to view.

In the Vegetable world we see the great importance of Education in the improvement which takes place in plants, fruits, and flowers, from judicious cultivation.

Compare the wild plants of the woods and wilderness with those of the same genius that have been reared in gardens with care and skill.

In the Animal world, Education is exercised in various ways. Birds have been seen teaching their nestlings to fly, and pointing out to them the places and manner in which their food is to be preserved; and thus bestowing on them the Education they need.

Education is essentially necessary to draw forth the Physical Powers of Man, and to enable him to execute with skill works in which the mind has but little share.

The improved method of imparting it should be frequently adopted as they are suggested by improvements in Arts and Science. The body of man, in itself feeble and inert when compared with those of many inferior animals, becomes wonderfully expert and active when improved by instruction and practice. Education is necessary to the comfort and prosperity of every human being.

That the Mind is of infinitely greater importance than the body, is universally allowed. It is that which properly constitutes humanity. If then, the Mind is to be the Sovereign director of all our actions, how essential is it that the Mind should be rendered properly qualified for the task, and enabled to form a sound judgment of things submitted to its cognizance.

The advantages of Education would be almost as futile as to attempt to prove, by argument,—Self-evident truths.

That by Education a person is taught to conduct himself in his station in Society with decorum and propriety. That he is enabled thereby to discern his duties, and the proper method of fulfilling them. That he learns to avoid errors and mistakes by profiting by the experience of others; and that his mind is expanded, his sentiments are liberalized, and his heart improved, is too evident to need any other proof than observation.

Ignorance, on the other hand, is the parent of brutality, superstition, and bigotry.

It frequently induces on blind and obstinate commencement of, and perseverance in the measures diametrically opposed to the good of the individual, and to the community at large.

To reason with ignorance is unavailing, because it is incapable of comprehending the force of argument. To prevent the injuries of which it is capable, it must be destroyed.

In whatever light we view Education, it cannot fail to appear the most important subject that can engage the attention of Mankind. When we contrast the ignorance, the rudeness, and the helplessness of the savage, with the knowledge, the refinement, and the resources of civilized man, the difference between them appears so wide, that they can hardly be regarded as of the same species.

Throughout all the States of America there is the utmost anxiety to really educate. School-books, of a character never, until recently, known in that country, are selling by thousands, not merely working knowledge more facile, but also more practical. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the President addressed the Meeting for sometime, and blessed the Society.

The assembly broke at 6-30 P.M., with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

A public Meeting, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Oriental-Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Friday, the 26th March, 1875, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Behary Lall Banerjea, B.A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Prasanna Kumar Bose to deliver his lecture on Sanskrit Language.

The lecturer dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour. He said, that the Sanskrit was the Mother of all languages—the most ancient language in India—the language in which the Munis and Rishis of old expressed their thoughts. The Sanskrit is most sonorous, sweet, beautiful and grand. Our Ramayan, Mahabharat and Srimat-Bhagbat are written in this language. The thoughts, they express, are most sublime and beautiful. Every body ought to study the Sanskrit. The Government has also adopted Sanskrit as a part of University Curriculum (Cheers).

After the lecturer had concluded his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer. The Meeting dissolved at 6 P.M., after a vote of thanks to the Chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Training Academy, Cornwallis Street, on Monday, the 28th June, 1875, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Naraiyan Dass Banerjea. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Gosta Behari Sil to deliver his lecture on—

Choice of Books.

The lecturer spoke on the subject for more than an hour. He said, that books are the great vehicles through which the knowledge of one part of the human species is conveyed to the other.

Books, like many other noble discoveries, have their origin in the necessities of Human Nature. The wants of men soon induced them to put those wants into writing, that others might be informed of their wants, and induced to supply them.

No sooner, therefore, were men formed into Society and inclined to cultivate knowledge, than books were written to communicate it,

The communication of knowledge, however, was comparatively slow till the discovery of printing in the Fifteenth Century. Since which time books have been so amazingly multiplied, and knowledge so widely dispersed, that printing may be said to have formed a new epoch in Society.

By books, that Science which is dispersed throughout the human race becomes the property of every individual; and thus it is that every individual has an opportunity of improving himself by the joint-labours of the whole species.

They bring the most ancient times to our view, as if they were present, and, like a telescope, enable us to see the most distant places and transactions, as if they were directly under our eyes.

But as books are written by men, they are as various in their merits; and, to the disadvantage of Human Nature, it may be observed, that as there is a great deal of evil among mankind, so there are a great many bad books in the world.

This observation naturally leads us to reflect how careful we ought to be in the choice of books. If bad companions will both disgrace and corrupt us, so will bad books. If we are ashamed of being seen with a person of ill-fame, ought we not to be as much ashamed to be seen perusing an ill book?—Certainly. For, those who understand Human Nature will form an estimate to our advantage or disadvantage; as much by the books we read and are fond of, as by the company we keep.

There is no mistake more common among young people, than that of supposing, that if they had a multiplicity of books they must necessarily have a great deal of knowledge.

The contrary to this is often the truth. A great number of ill chosen books confuse the mind, and form no regular consistent chain of instruction. While a few of the best books afford no clear ideas of what is worth-knowing, about loading the mind with what is impertinent or noxious (Cheer).

The lecturer said that good books are necessary aids to religion and morals,—specially with the young. Our schools, ought to make, therefore, a good selection of books, in order that they might prove useful in doing all that is necessary to be done to train up our boys in all that is really good, and that which conduces to intellectual and moral culture. The law of libel is very wholesome in itself, and calculated to protect the morals of our youths from being degenerated. The Government by appointing a Text-book Committee, the Members of which consist of well-educated persons, have done all in their power to safe-guard the morals of our youths.

It is always to be regarded as a fortunate circumstance where a young person has early acquired a taste for Reading. So much may our usefulness and happiness be increased by the results of well-directed reading, that a fondness for it may justly be considered as affording the best augury of a respectable and virtuous character.

Reading-Books are the guides of youth, the pastime of manhood and the solace of old age. They furnish the materials of conversation and reflection, the embellishment of refined Society. They enlighten and perpetuate the liberal arts also.

To all our young friends I would say—Read. If you have not already acquired a taste for this most delightful of all occupations, begin with the most interesting book you can find. Be assured that any sacrifice of inclination, you may make at first, will be amply repaid in select enjoyment at last.

Great caution is required in the Choice of books. For, if they produce no effect on the mind, the time spent in reading them is wasted. Every book should be read with a distinct view to some good effect on the Mind, or, to some definite objects in the business of life. The Choice of books is important in every point of view. Where a judicious and well-read friend can be found, his advice should be constantly sought in this matter.

In the first place, a considerable portion of every one's leisure for Reading should be devoted to that all-important subject in which every rational being has an equal interest. I mean the subject of Religion.

So wide a field of Literature and Science is now opened to the general reader, that we are almost at a loss where to begin our Choice of books. History certainly claims early attention. Not only as supplying materials for conversation, but as furnishing subjects for profitable reflection and study.

Sir Walter Scott is a delightful Author. His Novels and Historical Tales abound with moral truth and just views of life. Novels, in general, however, are very unprofitable reading. Buffon's Natural History is a work of deservedly popular character from its fascinating style, and its numerous embellishments.

Comper is certainly the Poet, whose works we should first place in the hands of a young man. Then Milton, Goldsmith, Scott, Wordsworth, Southey, Coleridge, Campbell, Rogers, Montgomery. Specimens of eloquence are worthy of your occasional attention.

Persons, who do not read, may pick up much by observation, but their knowledge must be comparatively scanty. An Author is one who has picked up much by observation too. If you read Fifty Authors, you have the advantage of fifty times the observation, which can possibly come under your own eye. Nay, though a mere observer, who does not read, may gain ideas, yet on such terms seldom is judgment attained. It is seldom that intelligent persons are disinclined to Reading.

It is Reading, says Lord Bacon, makes a full man. Unless your talents are very considerable, Reading is absolutely necessary for you. You have some books brought from school, some presented to you, perhaps, on that occasion; regard them as a Treasure; add to them as opportunity offers.

Adopt Reading, therefore, as one staple means of Mental Improvement; and give it that sort of attention, which its importance deserves. Many young persons will read a book, and are even fond of it, when they happen on one, which greatly excites curiosity. When this feat is over, then for weeks, or months possibly, they never turn over a single page. Such a desultory mode can seldom effect any thing of value.

To attain the love of reading, and obtain the benefit it is calculated to afford, being it into a habit. Five minutes now, and ten minutes then, would, in a comparatively short time, get through a volume. The resolution to read should be accompanied with a resolution to select the Author, subject, and rotation, with the utmost care.

The books, decidedly the most important, are those which relate to your specific profession. There can scarcely be any situation or occupation which has not something to be learnt from Authors.

Whatever may enlarge your mental powers, will be worth your while to Study. One small volume may open to you many views, which you could not otherwise obtain ; to have had only a glimpse of them is to be many degrees above absolute ignorance.

A walk in the country will be made far more interesting, by even a slight acquaintance with Natural History. Whatever page is open to you, scan it well. But to do this, it will be requisite that you borrow the assistance of some abler Authors.

Read Authors who have seen life, and display it. Travellers shew the species in many varieties. History marks the grander movements of the multitude. Biography shews you more minutely some single individual. You will from each, and especially from all, gain an insight into the true Nature of the world you live in, and the beings whom you must encounter, either in a friendly, or in an adverse manner. To know your company is of great importance to your own proper behaviour, to your comfort, and your safety.

As the mind of man is his prime excellence, emanations of mind are peculiarly valuable. General literature has peculiar charms, and dull must our eyesight be, if we are not more or less fascinated by them. The mind should not only be cultivated, but dressed into neatness.

Facts are the solid treasures of the mind, Reasoning assort and shapes them into their most useful forms. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had done, the Chairman spoke a few words. The Meeting separated at 6 p.m., with votes of thanks to the Chair, and the learned lecturer.

A very crowded Meeting, convened by the Society, came off on Thursday, the 30th September, 1875, at 4.30 p.m., at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, under the presidency of Babu Chandra Kumar Bandyopadhyaya, B.A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Srish Chandra Mukerjee to deliver his lecture on Friendship.

The learned speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour. In the course of which he said, that the principal fruit of Friendship is the ease and discharge of the fullness of the heart, which passions of all kinds do cause and induce. No receipt openeth the heart but a True Friend, to whom you may impart griefs, joys, fears, hopes, suspicions, counsels, and whatever lieth upon the heart to oppress it, in a kind of civil shrift or confessions. If a man have a True Friend, he may rest almost secure that the care of those things will continue after him.

Do not suppose that people become friends at first sight, or even upon a short acquaintance. Real Friendship is a slow grower, and never thrives unless engrafted upon a stock of known and reciprocal merit.

There is another kind of nominal Friendship among young people, which is warm for the time, but luckily of short duration. This Friendship is hastily produced, by their being accidentally thrown together, and pursuing the same course of riot and debauchery.

A fine Friendship, truly ! And well-cemented by drunkenness and lewdness. It should rather be called a conspiracy against Morals and good Manners, and be punished as such by the Civil Magistrate. However, they have the imprudence and the folly to call this conspiracy a Friendship. They lend one another money for bad purposes. They engage in quarrels, offensive and defensive, for their accomplishments. They tell one another all they know, and often more too. When, on a sudden, some accident disperses them, and they think no more of each other, unless it be to betray and laugh at their imprudent confidence.

When a man uses strong protestations or oaths to make you believe a thing, which is of itself so probable that the bare saying of it would be sufficient, depend upon it he deceives you, and is highly interested in making you believe it, or else, he would not take so much pains.

Remember to make a great difference between companions and friends. People will, in a great degree, form their opinion of you upon that which they have of your friends. There is a Spanish Proverb which says, very justly, Tell me whom you live with, and I will tell you who you are.

Have a real reserve with almost every body ; and have a seeming reserve with almost nobody. For, it is very disagreeable to seem reserved, and very dangerous not to be so. Few people find the true medium. Many are ridiculously mysterious, and reserved upon trifles ; and very imprudently communicative of all they know.

Friendship is love without desire. Less passionate than love, it is also less selfish. Founded on equality, it is strengthened by similarity of tastes and disposition. In life, there is scarcely a greater blessing than a real friendship. To have one whom we can consult in our perplexity, rely upon in our need, and rejoice with in our hours of prosperity, renders our delights more delightful, and our afflictions more supportable.

Lord Bacon says, The man entirely alone is he who has no Friends. To him the world is but a vast desert, which he shares with the wandering animals. A Friend is the greatest requisite to enable us to bear up against the cares and crosses which are inseparable from our social condition.

In choosing a Friend, it is necessary thoroughly to know him ere we confide in him ; and to choose from among honest men. For there is no real friendship where there is no confidence. Friendship should tolerate whatever is not repugnant to itself.

Commencing in esteem it is maintained and increased by interchange of attention and confidence and is so rarely perfect and durable, only because, we so rarely form a just estimate of the qualities of those whom we select as Friends, or because, when our intercourse has become familiar, we relax in our attention to them, or fail to have proper consideration for their self-love.

Friendship should tolerate whatever is not repugnant to itself. We should easily forgive our friend those faults in which his head, and not his heart is concerned, and which do not demonstrate any diminution in his Friendship to us.

Though Real Friendship is essentially dis-interested, yet assiduous attentions are pleasing to it. Both because, they gratify, or serve, our friend, and are evidences of the affection we bear him.

Kindness are not in themselves all sufficient motives to affection. But they increase it, as a gentle mind increases the flame, which it did not create, or the spark it could not kindle (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had concluded his speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting at some length.

The assembly dispersed at 6.30 p.m., after a vote of thanks to the Chair.

The Meeting was largely attended.

Address by the Secretary :—

The President, on taking his seat amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, spoke as follows :—

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN,

We have met together this evening to celebrate the First Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, having for its objects—a creation of social union between Europeans and Indians, and furtherance of intellectual culture. Several young men and friends having expressed a wish to meet together occasionally for the exchange of views,—educational and social, and having requested me to form a Society for the same, the Calcutta Literary Society was, therefore, established on Monday, the 4th January, 1875, to afford them an opportunity of meeting together on one common platform, and to discuss matters freely.

The Inaugural Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 4th January, 1875, at 4-30 P.M., when Babu Gobin Chandra Dass delivered a lecture on Education, under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, Principal, Government Normal School.

Besides the Inaugural Meeting of the Society, the following three lectures were delivered during the session ; viz :—

- (1) On Sanskrit Language, by Babu Prasanna Kumar Bose, under the presidency of Babu Behari Lal Banerjea, B.A., at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Friday, the 26th March, 1875, at 4-30 P.M.
- (2) On Choice of Books, by Babu Gosta Behari Sil, under the presidency of Babu Narayan Dass Banerjea, at the hall of the Training Academy, Cornwallis Street, on Monday, the 28th June, 1875, at 4-30 P.M.
- (3) On Friendship, by Babu Srish Chandra Mukerjea, under the presidency of Babu Chandrar Kumar Vandyapadhyay, B.A., at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Thursday, the 30th September, 1875, at 4-30 P.M.

Gentlemen, you have already heard of the progress made by the Society in so short a time since its establishment. Young men attended the Meetings to hear lectures on important subjects, such as would help in training them up in all that is beautiful and grand. The time and labor devoted to such Meetings, always bear good fruits. The efforts made by our young men to prepare themselves to deliver lectures were highly useful, in as much as they trained them up to qualify themselves in all that was necessary to start for public life.

Some of the best men of England received their Education in the Universities. But the reputation, which they acquired in public life, was due to the training, which they received in Literary Societies and Clubs. I hope that by the blessing of our Almighty Disposer of All Good, our Society will go on improving year after year, (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, had finished the Report, which was duly confirmed, several Gentlemen addressed the Meeting.

The Treasurer then presented the Accounts for the year, and they were passed.

The Secretary next proposed that the following Gentlemen be elected Honorary Members of the Society, and they were duly elected :—

- Babu Surendra Nath Banerjea,
 „ Loke Nath Ghose,
 „ Ganendra Nath Addy,
 „ Jetendra Nath Palit,
 „ Raj Krishna Ray,

The President then announced that Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, has given a contribution of Rupees Five hundred and fifty to the Funds of the Society, and proposed a vote of acknowledgment and cordial thanks for the same.

The proposal was carried unanimously.

The President, who, on rising, was received with cheers, addressed the Meeting for nearly an hour. He said, that he was deeply sensible of the high honour the Society had done in electing him their President. He wished the task had fallen into abler hands, for he was painfully conscious of his inability to discharge the duties that had devolved upon him. He, however, would try his best to do justice to them. He then dwelt on—

The Importance of our Society :—

He continued that a person cannot often realise the Importance of the Society in which he lives, dwells, and has his being.

Society is the intercourse of persons on a footing of equality, real or apparent. Social intercourse is the consequence of a necessity felt by men and women for new channels of thought, and new impulses of feeling.

It is Society that moulds our manners, practically educates us, and brings us up in all that is good and great. The ties of Society bind us together, and we live in unity, peace and happiness. In the absence of a good Society, a person can never become well-bred.

It is Society that keeps us on the path of virtue, and leads us to the right path when we go astray. A person always respects the Society of friends and relatives. He apprehends that if any thing goes wrong with him, he will not be admitted into their Society, in future.

A person, who keeps good Society, is always an honest man. A person, who keeps the Society of the Educated, knows what is going around him. A person, who keeps the Society of the Virtuous, is always pious. He learns to detest vice, to shun the Society of Vicious men, as the company of such persons, he fears, will corrupt his morals, and afterwards make him miserable. He endeavours to cultivate his intellectual and moral faculties in order that he might leave a stamp on those with whom he associates.

Gentlemen, keep the Society of honest men, therefore, and you will learn good manners. Try to lead a religious and good life, and you will then surely be contented and happy (Cheers).

The Meeting terminated at 7-30 P.M., after a vote of thanks to the Chair.

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Training Academy, Cornwallis Street, on Friday, the 18th February, 1876, at 4-30 p.m., under the presidency of Babu Govinda Nath Mukerjee, B.A. There were a large gathering.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Hari Dass Dutt to deliver his lecture on—

Knowledge :—

The lecturer dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour. In the course of which he said, that Knowledge is a question that has been frequently asked, but, perhaps, never satisfactorily answered, yet it is a question, which, of all others, those who pretend to disseminate Knowledge are bound to resolve.—Book-learning is one of the Materials,—but it is not Knowledge of itself. Reading, study, and acquaintance with the living and dead languages, are also Materials, but they are not Knowledge. They are only ingredients, to make up the prescriptions.

Knowledge enables us, by the examples with which we become acquainted, through Historical and Biographical Readings, to think, and feel, and act with propriety, sensibility, and dignity; such as we appreciate and admire in the characters and deeds recorded.

Knowledge guides us to the paths of rectitude, sobriety and diligence in our proper avocations, and by convincing us of our own infirmities, teaches charity towards the foibles of others.

Knowledge removes prejudices, and while it claims our rights, it curbs licentiousness; it maintains and supports the scale that holds an even balance between self-esteem and subordination, so that the one shall not diverge into arrogance, nor the other into slavishness.

Knowledge teaches us to know that the sum of human happiness consists of the contributions that individuals bring to the aggregate amount of industry, honesty and benevolence, and that it is the duty of every one to augment this fund as much as possible, whether others do so or not.

Knowledge exhibits to our view the evil of indulging the bad passions, and the wicked inclinations of our Nature. It shows to avarice the uncertain tenure of riches. It points out the folly of pride; and, it exposes the heinousness and terrific character of Revenge.

Knowledge teaches the duty, we owe to our neighbour. It also inculcates universal philanthropy, and not only shows what is right, but urges to the performance thereof.

Above all things, Knowledge shows us the proofs that establish an indisputable belief in the Being of a True God! and convinces us, that the whole Creation, insensible and intelligent, should be devoted to His honour and glory, and that man, in lowly reverence, should humbly endeavour to imitate His unbounded kindness and most gracious Mercy.

Lord Bacon also says that Knowledge is Power. There are people, who declare that Wealth is Power. The contention, no doubt, is well-founded. Without wealth, you cannot get on in this world. But you should also remember that without Knowledge you cannot acquire an ascendancy over the animal kingdom. It is brute force that keeps you down. One Nation overpowers another Nation, with the number of its soldiery. But that Nation which has cultivated Knowledge for its own sake, possesses powers invincible.

The strength of the arm is all very good. A Sikh, a Purba and a Cabuli can stand side by side with the most powerful men of different Nationalities. But the person, who has a Scientific Knowledge, possesses powers overwhelming with which he can throw down a giant by his skill.

An English Soldier fights well. But it should be recollected that the invention of shot and powder, and the use thereof have made European Nations powerful over Eastern Races. The skill, with which the former handle the most powerful weapons that are used in war, had enabled them to domineer over other peoples and races, who lack in Knowledge—the Science of War.

Now then, can it be denied that Knowledge is Power?—That by a skilful use of Knowledge, you can navigate oceans and seas, you can construct railways and telegraphs, and go from one end of the world to the other, without fear of being lost. Knowledge, then, is Power. True Power with which you can subjugate the elements, utilise and turn them to your advantage. The use of Balloon was, perhaps, unknown before. Scientific men have, by acquiring a Knowledge of Science, learnt to use it to the advantage of man.

I, therefore, urge upon you, Youngmen, to educate yourselves to endeavour to learn and benefit by the instruction that may be imparted to you, and acquire a Knowledge of things which will make you truly great, and enable you to gain an ascendancy over the water, the air, the clouds and the skies (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 p.m., with votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned lecturer.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Wednesday, the 3rd May, 1876, at 4-30 p.m., There was a large attendance. Babu Hem Chandra Mukerjee presided.

After the proceedings of the previous Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Ram Chandra Nag to begin his lecture on—

Unity :—

The speaker spoke on the subject for nearly an hour. He said, that Unity is Strength. If you wish to be strong, you should unite yourselves.—United you gain, and Divided you fall. A Nation, to become great, should first learn to unite. The ancient Romans and Greeks were powerful, so long as they were united. But when they began to dis-unite, there was weakness, decay, and at last ruin.

It is a matter of great regret that Unity is very much wanting amongst our countrymen. They do not understand that by becoming of one opinion in respect of what they want, and suffer from, their wants and grievances may be removed. Whether Hindu or Mahamedan, we are all children of one Common Father. The same God, who governs the Universe, created us all. We ought, therefore, to have one feeling in common amongst ourselves.

We ought not to divide ourselves. Because, by so doing, we will simply lose, and not gain. When we have any representation to make to the Authorities, we should all unite together, so that our prayer may be heard and attended to. But, it so happens, that the Hindus and Mahamedans are not only dis-united, but that they have not one Common Bond of Unity amongst themselves, and their co-religionists.

When the Hindus ask for one thing from the Government, the Mahamedans say that they do not want it. But what is still more strange is, that when one section of Hindu Religionists ask for one thing, another section of the same Hindu community are not only not satisfied in not asking for it, but, they go further, and even oppose it.

This is the reason why the Government has so little regard for its Hindu and Mahamedan subjects. For this, however, we cannot blame the Government. Because, it finds itself placed between the horns of a dilemma. It knows not, whether to respect the feelings of Mahamedans or Hindus, and whom to please. Because, if it complies with the request of one section of its subjects, it will dissatisfy the other section, which is divided in color, race and creed.

Again, if it wishes to please one section of Hindu or Mahamedan Religionists, it will displease the different sections of the same community, which is divided among itself. My advice to you, therefore, Youngmen, is that you should always learn the advantage of being united, and never dis-unite amongst yourselves (Cheers.)

The speech was concluded amidst loud applause. The Chairman having spoken a few words, the large assembly dispersed after 6 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair, and the learned lecturer.

A public Meeting, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Wednesday, the 19th July, 1876, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, the President of the Society. The Meeting was fairly attended.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the President asked Babu Satis Chandra Chatterjea to deliver his lecture

Cultivation:—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour. He tried to persuade his audience to take themselves to Cultivation. He said that Agriculture is an art of the very first rank, and is one of those, which, are termed the Liberal Arts. It feeds us. It supplies our necessities. It affords the principal Revenue of a State—It is a Science of rural affairs. The art of Cultivating and Tilling the ground, so that it shall be fruitful, and afford grain and pasturage in abundance.

The following qualifications are necessary for a man to possess a knowledge of Husbandry; viz:—

- (1) He must thoroughly understand the nature and variety of soils, and the proper methods necessary for their Cultivation and improvement.
- (2) He must so prepare the earth by ploughing, harrowing, and other labour, as to make it productive of good and fine fruits.
- (3) A perfect knowledge of the quality of good and sound corn, and other seeds, he must have; besides, being well-informed in the proper times and seasons for sowing them.
- (4) He must be a competent judge of Meadow and Wood-land; and so far acquainted with the nature, plantation, and appearance of trees, as to be able, at one glance, to form a correct estimate of the timber they would produce.
- (5) The choice and management of Cattle must be thoroughly understood by him.

Order, frugality, cleanliness, and industry, are qualities too essential to be forgotten. They form the very ground-work of prosperity, and the husbandman that is void of them had better look to the work-house than to his farm.

From the above qualifications it will appear that the farmer must be, or ought to be intimate with Geology, Mineralogy, Chemistry, Botany, Medicine and Natural History.

Now I will advert to the several kinds of Agricultural property:—

- (a) Corn-land is that cultivated ground appropriated to the growing of wheat, and other grain. It requires much labour and attention, and a thorough acquaintance with the Nature of the Soil, so as to know what rotation of crops will yield the greatest produce.
- (b) Wood-land, which is the most lucrative of rural property, from its requiring little expense and trouble, and from being subject to fewer accidents, is land occupied in nourishing trees and wood generally.
- (c) A Wood, newly-planted, consists of fine young trees, well-rooted, and the ground between the trees is generally cultivated. The thinning, or under-wood, in about ten years produces abundant cuttings; when it is suffered to grow twenty or thirty years, the produce is considerable; it is at this period called Brush, or Copse-wood.
- (d) Forests are extensive tracts of Wood-land, and afford abundant quantities of timber, which is used for a multitude of purposes.
Under wood is used for faggots, poles, hoops, &c., &c.
Wood-land is considered to be in a thriving state when the trees upon it are well-grown, close, and of a flourishing appearance.
- (e) Meadow-land is that portion of a farm occupied in the production of grass. The Meadows, situated by the sides of rivers, or contiguous to ponds or brooks, yield three times the crop of Natural Meadows.
- (f) Grass-lands are situated on the sides of hills. They produce better grass. The Grass of Marshes is of the very worst kind. The Water-meadows are of great use to the farmer in rearing his cows and other cattle.
- (g) Pasture-land is appropriated to the feeding and rearing of cattle, and by many Agriculturists is preferred to Corn-land, and thought to possess greater advantages.

Agriculture being the most important of all the Arts of civilized man, and as it were, the Nursing Mother of all the other Arts—the fact of the Art of Working in Metals being essential to its perfection, is sufficient to show us that we owe much of our wealth, civilization, and enjoyment, to the power of forming and fashioning the Metals into implements, fit for various purposes.

He continued, that unless a people become enterprising, and learn to devote their time and energy to develop the resources of their country, no Nation can become rich and great. Servitude degrades a people. Keranidom only makes a Nation servile. It loses its independence of thought and action, and becomes lazy and luxurious.

You, Youngmen, should endeavour to give up all thoughts of Servitude, and learn to devote yourselves in developing the resources of your country. The Soil of Bengal is good and fertile, and you will reap rich harvest, and live happily in the enjoyment of peace and plenty. (Cheers.)

The lecturer, having finished his speech, was followed by several speakers, some of whom agreed with him in what he had said.

The Chairman then spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer for his very able speech.

The Meeting broke up at 6 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair, and the learned lecturer.

Proceedings of the Second Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Friday, the 13th October, 1876, at 5-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Naba Gopal Mitra, Editor, National Paper, &c., &c., &c. The Meeting was largely attended.

The Second Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Friday, the 13th October, 1876, at 5-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Naba Gopal Mitra, Editor, National Paper, &c., &c., &c. The Meeting was largely attended.

Address by the Secretary:—

The Chairman, on taking his seat, amidst Cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, said:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

It affords me much pleasure to see the Second Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society celebrated this afternoon.

The First Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Friday, the 26th November, 1875, at 4-30 P.M., when Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, the worthy President of the Society, delivered his presidential speech on the Importance of our Society, before a crowded house.

Besides the Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following three lectures were delivered during the session; viz:—

- (1). On Knowledge, by Babu Hari Dass Dutt, under the presidency of Babu Gobinda Nath Mukerjea, B.A., at the hall of the Training Academy, Cornwallis Street, on Friday, the 18th February, 1876, at 4-30 P.M.
- (2). On Unity, by Babu Ram Chandra Nag, under the presidency of Babu Hem Chandra Mukerjea, at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Wednesday, the 3rd May, 1876, at 4-30 P.M.
- (3). On Cultivation, by Babu Satis Chandra Chatterjea, under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, (Principal, Government Normal School), at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Wednesday, the 19th July, 1876, at 4-30 P.M.

This indicates the interest which the public takes in the transactions of this Society.

Knowledge, as you all know, is necessary to enable a people to learn the way by which to become polished and great, and to rise in the estimation of the world.

Unity is essential to impart strength to a people, who wish to raise themselves from all that is degrading, and all that is calculated to lower them in the esteem of their fellow-brethren.

Cultivation was the last subject dwelt upon at the third Meeting of the Society.

To the Honorary Members and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the prosperity of the Society.

May God bless the Society in its laudable undertaking (Cheers).

The Treasurer then presented the Accounts for the year, and they were passed.

The Secretary next proposed that the following Gentlemen be elected Honorary Members of the Society:—

The Revd. C. H. A. Dall, M. A., Babu Gosta Behari Chatterberti,
„ Jodn Gopal Chatterjea,
„ Chinta Mani Boral, „ Suresh Chandra Dutt, „ Bhubau Mahan Rai.

The proposal was carried with acclamation.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Shama Charn Ganguli to deliver his lecture on—

The Life of Goldsmith:—

The lecturer spoke on the subject for more than an hour. He said, that Oliver Goldsmith was born at Pallas, in Ireland, in November, 1728. His father, the Rev. Charles Goldsmith, lived in the reign of Queen Anne, became attached to the daughter of the School-Master, married her, took orders, and settled at a place called Pallas, in the County of Longford. There, with difficulty, he supported his wife, and children in what he could earn, partly as a curate and partly as a farmer.

While Oliver was still a child, his father was presented to a living, worth about £ 200 a year, in the County of West Meath. The family, accordingly, quitted their cottage in the wilderness for a spacious house on a frequented-road, near the village of Lissay.

Here the boy was taught his letters by a Maid-servant, and was sent in the Seventh year to a Village-School, kept by an old Quarter-Master on half-pay, who professed to teach nothing—but reading, writing and Arithmetic, but who had an inexhaustible fund of stories about Ghosts, banshes and fairies, about the great Rapparee Chiefs, Baldearg O'Donnell and galloping Hogan, and about the exploits of Peterborough and Stanhope, the surprise of Merijinch and the glorious disaster of Brihuega.

Oliver early became, and through life continued to be a passionate admirer of the Irish Music, and especially of the compositions of Carolar, some of the last notes of whose harp he heard.

From the humble Academy kept by the old soldier, Goldsmith was removed in his Ninth year. He went to several Grammar-Schools, and acquired some knowledge of the Ancient languages. His life, at this time, seems to have been far from happy.

Oliver went up to Trinity College, Dublin, in his Seventeen years of age, as a Sizar. The Sizars paid nothing for food and tuition, and very little for lodging; but they had to perform some menial services, from which they have long been relieved. They swept the Court, they carried up the dinner to the Fellow's Table, and changed the plates and poured out the ale of the Rulers of the Society.

While Oliver was leading at Dublin, a life divided between squalid distress and squalid dissipation,—his father died, leaving a mere pittance.

Oliver was then sent to Edinburgh to study Physic. Here he entered into all the convivialities of the social inhabitants of that city, but having become security for the debt of a Fellow-student, he was obliged to escape to England, but was soon after arrested at Sunderland, and released by two College-friends, whom he met there accidentally.

He was next sent to Leyden, in Holland, through the generosity of an uncle, Contarine, whose exhaustless goodness and kind-heartedness to the way-ward and thoughtless Oliver do honor to his species.

Leaving Leyden, poor but adventurous Goldsmith, in February 1755, set out to travel over Europe on foot. On this occasion, and for this enterprise, he was furnished exactly with One Guinea in his pocket, a shirt on his back, and a flute in his hand.

He partly disputed his way, by accepting University challenges; and when weary of this, he betook himself of his flute.

The remembrance of the Festive Joy, which his Merry Pipe produced at such times, is finely recalled in his Poem of—The Traveller.

At Lawvain, he took the Degree of Bachelor of Physic,—the highest Degree he ever attained.

Goldsmith then returned to England in 1756, labouring under the disadvantages of poverty, a rustic appearance, and a strong Irish accent. These things operated so much against him, that, on his arrival in London, he found it impossible for sometime to procure employment. At length a Chemist in Fish-Street, pitying his distressed condition, received him into his Laboratory.

He then engaged in writing some articles for the Monthly Review, which acquired him both profit and reputation in the literary world.

One of his first performances was an Inquiry into the State of Polite Learning in Europe.

Encouraged by this success, he wrote his Citizen of the World, which first appeared in the Public Ledger of Mr. Newbery, under the name of Chinese Letters. Meeting with equal success in this attempt, he determined to pursue the profession of an Author—an employment much more congenial to his taste than instilling the rudiments of learning into the minds of the rising generation.

Being now in comparative affluence, Goldsmith removed from Green Arbour Court, took chambers in the Temple, and commenced Man of Fashion. His Society was courted by many in respectable stations in life, and his prospects seemed to open with peculiar brightness.

He, at the same time, became a contributor to various other publications.

The appearance of his Poem entitled the Traveller, or a Prospect of Society, in 1764, brought him before the public in a new character, and with increased reputation. His Prose writings were pleasing and instructive, but as a Poet, he charmed all hearts by sweetness of versification, beauty of description, and simplicity of style.

No species of writing seemed to come amiss to him, soon after the Traveller. The year following, he published his beautiful Novel called The Vicar of Wakefield, which continues to maintain a distinguished place among the few performances of that kind of sterling worth in language.

This was followed by his History of England. It is written in a pleasing style, as also are his Histories of Greece and Rome.

His next attempt was the Drama, and here he was equally successful. In 1768, he brought out his Comedy of—The Good-Natured Man, which was performed at Covent Garden with great applause, and brought him a considerable sum.

Goldsmith's reputation was high, and his powers un-exhausted. But he was thought-less, extravagant, and fond of gaming, though frequently the dupe of those who took advantage of his probity and want of skill.

In 1770, appeared his Great Work, which raised his reputation as a Poet to its height; viz.—The Deserted Village—a more beautiful and finished Poem does not, perhaps, adorn the English language.

Two years after this, he produced the Comedy of She Stoops to Conquer, or, The Mistake of a Night, which, though improbable in its plot, was very successful, and furnished its Author with a considerable sum.

Goldsmith's extravagance now rendered him dependent on the Book-sellers, for whom he compiled many works of considerable merit. He was, indeed, emphatically a popular writer.

To his Histories, I have just mentioned,—A History of England, in a Series of Letters from a Nobleman to His Son, (2 vols. 12 mo.), was from his pen. This useful and pleasing work was, for a long time, attributed to Lord Lyttleton.

A History of England, (4 vols. 8 vo.) A Roman History, (2 vols. 8 vo.) A Grecian History, (2 vols.) and A History of the Earth and Animated Nature (8 vols. 8 vo.) is a pleasing, though not an accurate performance; and many of his minor Poems by no means detract from his reputation.

For many years, Goldsmith had the happiness of enjoying the Society, and being on terms of intimacy with the greatest wits and geniuses of the age. Of these mention may be made of Johnson, Garrick, Reynolds, Douglas, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury and Lord Lyttleton.

The latter part of his life was embittered by the lingering suffering arising from bodily disease, which, aiding the Natural dejection of his mind, threw him into a settled melancholy. This was succeeded by a Nervous Fever, which being improperly treated, hastened his dissolution, which took place in London, on the 3rd April, 1774, at the early age of forty-six. He was laid in the Church Yard of the Temple, and a Monument was erected to his Memory in Westminster Abbey, with a Latin Epithet, by Dr. Johnson.

The lecturer having resumed his seat, amidst cheers, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer for his very able speech.

The Meeting then came to a close at 7-30 p. m., with votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned lecturer.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Friday, the 12th January, 1877, at 4-30 p. m., under the presidency of Babu Ram Naraiyan Bandyapadhyaya, B. A. Over Five hundred Gentlemen were present, and the hall was crowded almost to suffocation.

After the proceedings of the previous Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Nani Gopal Dhar to deliver his lecture on—

The Revival of Indian Arts :—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour. He observed that the early History of the Arts—like the History of Mankind, is hidden in the obscurity of ages. It required a very considerable progress in Knowledge and Refinement to Discover the Art. While the earth was in its infancy, and its inhabitants amounted to no more than four or five persons, nothing less than Divine Instruction could have informed man that its produce could be improved by Cultivation, could have directed him what methods to adopt for that purpose, and show him how to construct the instruments necessary to the success of his attempt.

Many fancied Philosophers and well-meaning, but ignorant persons, imagine, that, Refinements in Ancient Arts, and the Discovery of New Arts, tend to the disadvantage of Man. That the indulgence of the noble and wealthy in fine houses, fine clothes, splendid equipages, rich jewels, and other luxuries, is an offence against propriety and the welfare of their poorer brethren. That the Wealth, which they thus expend in articles of show and splendour, would much be better bestowed in Deeds of Charity and Beneficence. That Rich Men are fattening on the Necessities of the Poor, and contrasting their excessive enjoyments with the squalid wretchedness of those beneath them.

But this is, by no means, a fair statement of the case. Did the higher classes of Society live in a state of primeval simplicity?—Were they content with habitations that would merely shelter them from the weather, with garments of a coarse and homely texture, spun and manufactured by the Members of their own families?—Were they satisfied with transporting themselves from place to place on foot; or in such rude vehicles as would merely answer the purpose for which they were designed?—Were the Jewels with which they now adorn their persons to be allowed to rest unmolested in their Native Mines?—What would become of the millions, who now procure a comfortable maintainance by the exercise of their Industry, their skill and ingenuity?—

The mere Cultivation of the ground, tending of cattle, and fabrication of things of necessity only, would not afford employment for half the population of the earth, so that multitude must then subsist in idleness on the earnings of their more active brethren.

Both Arts and Manufactures are, generally speaking, but very little known among Savages. This partly arises from their want of those theoretical principles which the practical men of more enlightened countries find so exceedingly valuable to them. Though Savages are, on this account, apparently at least, much more independent upon each other than Civilized men, yet they are proportionately poorer, more helpless, and more destitute of resources.

There are two grand requisites to perfect Art, and to make it productive; viz:—

- (1) The division of labour.
- (2) The excellence of tools and instruments.

The silk and cotton goods of India are admitted by all writers upon statistics to be incomparably superior to goods of the same description manufactured in any other part of the world.—But they are the production of a vast term of time, and human labour. The Indian Weaver works in the open air, and his machinery consists principally of small stakes, which he sticks into the ground, and to which he fastens his threads. His simple machinery has to be removed every time he ceases to work, and to be re-placed every time he resumes it; and though thus troublesome, scarcely affords him any assistance.

Thus, although the workmanship of the silk and cotton fabrics be universally acknowledged to be superior to that of the productions of all other countries, we must at the same time observe, that Indians can, by no means, pretend to compete with European Nations in the rapidity of production.

They are more especially inferior in this respect to England and France, in which countries Steam and other Mechanism are now arrived at such perfection, that inanimate matter might seem, to a savage, to be gifted with perception, intelligence, and volition.

Now, though we are undoubtedly under immense obligations to those Men of Science, who have devoted their time, talents, and attention, to the improvement of the theory of Agriculture, we must not overlook the fact that, but for the Art of Working in Metals, their improvements would, for the most part, have remained mere theory (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had done, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting separated at 6 p. m. with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

A large number of Gentlemen assembled at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Saturday, the 3rd March, 1877, at 4-30 p. m., to hear the lecture of Babu Ram Chandra Palit on—given under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, the President of the Society, presiding.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to deliver his speech.

The speaker dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour. He said that Commerce is that interchange of commodities between different Nations, which enables them to obtain the productions of every part of the earth.

A spirit of Commercial Enterprise seems inherent in the Nature of Man. For, there are few countries, however savage, or any era, however remote, of which we have any historical account, in which an interchange of common duties has not been more or less practised.

Commerce prevents starvation of one country, and useless waste of another. "We have little corn," says one country, "but very abundant store of gold and silver. Give us of your corn, of which you have infinitely more than consume, and we, in return, will give you of our precious metals, which you make available not only in your internal transactions, and in the purposes of Luxury, but also in your Commerce with those Nations, which have Merchandise that you want, but do not need any portion of the only article of which you are barely possessed."

All Commercial Nations tacitly make the same proposal to each other. Each gives a portion of its superfluities, of whatever kind, in order to procure that of which it is deficient.

In the present exceedingly complex condition of Commerce, it would be impossible to do business, as in the early days of Commerce it undoubtedly was done, by simple Barter. It is necessary that there should be an universal standard of value. Gold primarily, and Silver secondarily, form at once that medium and that standard.

Gold, therefore, and Silver are articles of which all countries stand in positive need. The countries which possess those articles may always rely upon a full and proper supply of every other article of use or luxury, of which they stand in real or imaginary need.

Without trade, no Nation can advance in the path of True Greatness. It is English Commerce that has made England so great and rich. Free Trade guides the principles of English Government. Wherever you go, you will find Englishmen trading in distant lands on Foreign Products. They carry goods with them over seas to find for them a profitable market.

If a Nation wants to become truly rich and great, it should, in the natural course of events, learn to profit by the practical lessons, thus taught.

Our trade consists of two departments ; viz. :—Import and Export. We Export things to other lands. We Import the products of their labour in exchange for those goods. Thus our natural wants are supplied, and we learn to profit by the lessons which the products of other people enable us to learn. We begin to enjoy comforts which make us really happy.

Thus then, if we owe our obligation to other people for what they have done for us, we reciprocally help each and advance a common cause. Men of Lazy habits always love to live upon the Labours of other people. They declare that it is preposterous to suppose that Trade alone can enrich our pauper population. It is for this reason, I direct your special attention to what is called Free Trade (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his speech the Chairman spoke a few words. The Meeting dissolved at 6 P. M. with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the General Assembly's College, Cornwallis Square, on Friday, the 22nd June, 1877, after 4-30 P. M., Babu Haradhone Sarkar, B. A., presided. There was a large gathering of Members and visitors.

After the proceedings of the previous Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Nibaran Chandra Pal to begin his lecture on—

Luxury :—

The lecturer spoke on the subject for nearly an hour, he said that Luxury has been defined to be great refinement in the gratification of the Senses and granting that definition to be both correct and complete. Luxury is advantageous to communities, and not censurable in individuals.

Luxurious eating is a vice only when it is indulged at the expense of the individual's own health, to the injury of his property, to the neglect of the calls of charity, of justice, or of reason.

When a man's whole attention is occupied by the gratification of his palate, we call him a glutton. We perceive that he pampers his body to the neglect of his mind, and we despise him accordingly. We do not despise him because he eats, or even because he eats sumptuously, but, because, he sacrifices all other pleasures, pursuits, and duties, to the pleasures of the table : whence it appears that Luxury is not in itself a Vice, but becomes so when excessively indulged in. For the example we have given above applies not merely to eating, but to apparel, equipage, amusements and every thing by which the mind or body is gratified.

This brings us back again to consider Luxury, granting it to be completely defined as being a Great refinement in the gratification of the senses. Thus considered, Luxury is undoubtedly productive of increased public prosperity, as well as of increased private enjoyment.

The paradoxical advocates of savage life are inconsistent with themselves ; for they, in effect, say that the more man's means of happiness are increased, the more wretched man becomes. They seem to consider that man cannot use, but must infallibly abuse, every blessing of Civilization, and place his means of being virtuous, not in the wisdom and self-control of Philosophy, but in the almost brute-like privation and rudeness of the savage dwellers in woods and mountain-caves.

Let it be remembered, that without Luxury, Civilization cannot exist; and, therefore, to declaim against Luxury, is, in fact, to declaim against Civilization.

Where Luxury is unknown, men's minds are untutored, and their passions un-controlled. Appetite is substituted for reason, and force for right. It is not Luxury, but the abuse of it, that is blamable.

He who, without infringing upon the rights of others, and without neglecting his duty to them, to himself, and to God, enjoys the most Luxuries, is the greatest friend to the community of which he is a Member. But he who, in any shape, is improperly Luxurious, is, insomuch, a scourge to Society.

The poorest man in our foreverd—land lives Luxuriously, if we compare his condition with that of the savage tribes of Africa. Shall we, therefore, declaim against his enjoyments ?—Most certainly not, so long as he performs his duty to his family and to Society.

If we wear rich apparel, while his children are naked, if the banquet upon rich viands, while they starve, he is unjust, he is cruel, he is selfish ; and it is his injustice, cruelty, and selfishness, that we blame. And if we spare all that he enjoys with his family, and procure those enjoyments improperly, we blame his injustice. He is indulgent to his family, we say, but he is so at the expense of other families.

Were we to enter minutely into an examination of Luxury, we should find that every man is Luxurious in a greater or less degree. It is to Luxury mainly that we owe our refinement of Manners and our superiority of Morals ; and the corruption of Manners and Morals which some writers, of more ingenuity than candour, have thought fit to attribute to Luxury, is only fairly attributable to the Abuse of Luxury.

All the social comforts we enjoy are so many Incumbencies. They are blessings to us and benefits to our compeers, and it is only the abuses of them that are evil. Let us then use Luxury and not abuse it.

Luxury, is in fact nothing more than super-abundance, or the application of superfluities to unnecessary purposes. Luxury, therefore, may be found in the cottage as in the palace.

The moralists of all ages have loudly declaimed against Luxury. The Politicians, on the other hand, have often defended it. The Defenders of Luxury, asserted, that it increased population. It is evident that history does not support the friends of Luxury, but it is not more favorable to its enemies.

Opulence is the Mother of Luxury. The Romans were much more wealthy than their modern imitators.

As Civilization advances, people become Luxurious. A Nation becomes more and more industrious in order to meet them. Therefore, a Luxurious people should not be condemned. Where men and women become Luxurious, the people endeavour to their utmost to become inventive, with a view to earn the more and more to enable them to meet the expenses which Luxury creates. But when a people becomes over-luxurious, that is a sign of decay and ruin. An Over-luxurious people become Voluptuous and this is the danger from which it is difficult to save a Luxurious people.

Voluptuousness is bad, and cannot be too strongly condemned. The only danger which Luxury is liable to, is Voluptuousness. Therefore, it is necessary that we should so guard ourselves as not to allow Luxury to run to the extreme of Voluptuousness from which it is difficult to extricate a people—nay, a whole Nation, when the tendency to become Voluptuous affects itself. (Cheers).

The lecturer was followed by several speakers, some of whom agreed with him in what he said.

The Chairman then made a brief speech. The Meeting terminated at 6 P. M. with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

Address by the Secretary :—

The Chairman, on taking his seat amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary of the Society, said :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

We meet here to day to celebrate the Third Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, to which I have the honor of being the Secretary since its foundation in 1875. I am glad to be able to say that the Society has rapidly been marching onward in the path of progress eversince its establishment, and attracting public attention.

Young men were coming forward to join the Society, for it offers them encouragement.

Our youngmen are getting acquainted with the Advantages of Commerce. They are becoming aware of the fact that unless people become Commercial, they can never hope to be great. A Commercial Nation acquires immense Riches, and becomes wealthy. Thus they can depend upon themselves, and not upon other people to fulfill their want. This is a very desirable thing.

If the Calcutta Literary Society can succeed in training up our young men in this line of thought, it will, in time, surely achieve a great success to them.

The Second Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Friday, the 13th October, 1876, at 5-30 P.M., when Babu Shama Charan Ganguli delivered a lecture on the Life of Goldsmith, under the presidency of Babu Naba Gopal Mitra, Editor, National Paper.

Besides the Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following three lectures were delivered during the session ; viz :—

- (1) On Revival of Indian Arts, by Babu Nani Gopal Dhur, under the presidency of Babu Ram Naraiyan Bandyapadhya, B.A., at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Friday, the 12th January, 1877, at 4-30 P.M.
- (2) On Advantages of Commerce, by Babu Ram Chandra Palit, under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, Principal, Government Normal School, at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Saturday, the 3rd March, 1877, at 4-30 P.M.
- (3) On Luxuri, by Babu Nibaran Chandra Paul, under the presidency of Babu Haradhona Sarkar, B.A., at the hall of the General Assembly's College, Cornwallis Square, on Friday, the 22nd June, 1877, at 4-30 P.M.

From this you will find, Gentlemen, that the Society is dealing with practical subjects such as are calculated to enable a people to become rich, and independent of the aid of other country.

If Bengal can learn to produce articles of Arts and Manufactures, which are imported from England and other Foreign Countries, Bengal will surely place itself above want. Some of our cities were distinguished for producing articles of Art, which prove the admiration of the world. The Cloth and Muslin of Dacca, the Filagree Ornaments of Cuttack, and the Earthen-ware Articles of Krishnagar were specimens, such as no other Nation can produce. They formed the admiration of the country to which they were imported.

To the Honorary Members and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the welfare of the Institution.

I hope that by the blessing of Providence, this Institution will go on improving year after year. (Cheers).

The Treasurer then presented the Accounts for the year, and they were passed.

The Secretary next proposed that the following Gentlemen be elected Honorary Members of the Society, and they were duly elected :—

The Rev. Dr. K. M. Banerjea, Babu Umesh Chandra Batabyal, M.A.,
(Prem Chand and Roy Chand Scholar).
,, Tarak Nath Pramanick,
,, Kanai Lal Sil.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, had finished the Report, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer, Babu Hari Pada Naik, to commence with his speech on—

The Life and Teachings of the Great Mogul Emperor Akbar :—

The lecturer spoke on the subject for more than an hour. He laid particular stress upon the precious teachings of toleration, and dilated upon the subject at great length upon the life of the illustrious Mogul Emperor, who has left his foot-prints in the path of time, which can never be effaced.

He said that the Reign of Akbar lasted for the long period of Forty-nine years, from 1556 to 1605, and was equally remarkable for triumphs in war, and successful administration during peace. For, the first Fifteen years he was on the throne, Akbar was almost constantly engaged in Military Expeditions.

The Afghans, under one name or other, had now ruled so long, that, like an aged-tree, they had sent their roots far into the soil, and were not to be torn out without difficulty.

There were, besides, other foes. The proud Rajputs had not yet given up the flattering vision of restored Hindu Dominion ; and, finally Akbar's own officers were not always subordinate as able Asiatic Government servants very seldom are.

Accordingly, he called into his assistance a Turkoman Nobleman, named Bahram Khan, on whom he conferred the power of Regent, and left the administration of affairs chiefly to him.

By the severity of the measures adopted by this personage, the country was restored to comparative tranquillity ; but the rigour with which he exercised his authority was left by Akbar himself, who in 1558, broke from his control, and took the Reigns of Government into his own hands, and dispensed with the services of insolent Bahram.

The dismissed Minister now raised the Standard of Rebellion, and for two years, endeavoured to create an independent Province for himself in Malwa; failing in this, however, he submitted to Akbar, and was pardoned. But he was soon after assassinated.

The young Monarch now turned his attention to the enlargement of his Kingdom, which had been greatly reduced by the Invasions of successful Chiefs, who lost no opportunity of extending their own territories in a country in which the Right of the Sword was the only Power recognized and acknowledged.

At first his Dominions were comprised in the Panjab, and the provinces of Agra and Delhi, but, by the Fortieth year of his Reign, his Empire extended from the Hindu-Kush Mountains to the borders of the Deccan, and from the Brahmaputra to Candahar.

Akbar was most successful in his choice of a Minister of Finance, selecting for the purpose a Hindu, by name Turalmul. At the instance of this distinguished Councillor, he abolished a multitude of taxes that pressed heavily on Industry, and, after a most painstaking Survey, laid an Assessment, never exceeding a third of the produce, on the land, which he made his only source of Revenue.

Other Reforms of Importance were also carried out. A literary man at his court, Abdul Fazl, has recorded the result in the Ayeen Akbaree, or the Laws and Regulations of Akbar. From this it would appear that, when his Empire was at the greatest, it yielded about Thirty Crores of Rupees annually; or, making allowance for arrears never realized, less than Twenty-six Crores of Rupees,—perhaps, as great National Income as was then anywhere possessed.

Akbar's employment of a Hindu in a position so important shows that he had the great virtue of tolerance in Religion, for which so few Mahamedans have been distinguished. Indeed, he seemed to take pleasure in collecting at his court Men of different Creeds and engaging them in disputation, so much so that the Mahamedans complained, and not without plausible reason of his unbelief. Akbar died in the year 1605, and was succeeded by his son Salem.

Great as Akbar was as a Conqueror, his sway was characterized by general mildness, wisdom, and toleration. He laboured to abolish the most cruel superstitious Rites of the Hindus in their Religion, and expressed his opinion, that God could only be worshipped by following reason, and not by yielding an implicit Faith to any alleged revelation.

The Memory of the beneficence of his Reign is still vividly impressed on the mind of the Hindu, and not without reason, as is shown by the following extract from an Address presented by the Maharajah of Jodhpur to the bigoted Aurangzeb, a century after the Reign of Akbar:—

Your Ancestor AKBAR, whose throne is now in Heaven, conducted the affairs of his Empire in equity and security for the space of Fifty years. He preserved every tribe of men, in ease and happiness, whether they were followers of Jesus or of Moses, of Brahma, or Mahamet. Of whatever sect or creed they might be, they all equally enjoyed his countenance and favour, inasmuch that his people, in gratitude for the indiscriminate protection which he afforded them, distinguished him by the appellation of GUARDIAN OF MANKIND. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The proceedings concluded with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Theatre of the Hindu School, College Square, on Saturday, the 9th February, 1878, at 4-30 P.M., in the presence of a large gathering. Babu Rajani Nath Rai, B.A., presided.

After the proceedings of the previous Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Asutose Sil to deliver his lecture on—

Misery :—

The lecturer spoke on the subject for nearly an hour. It was listened to with rapt attention by the audience. He said, that if Misery be the effect of Virtue, it ought to be revered. If of ill fortune,—it ought to be pitied. And if of Vice,—not to be insulted. Because, it is, perhaps, itself a Punishment adequate to the crime by which it was produced. And the humanity of that man can deserve no panegyric, who is capable of reproaching a criminal in the hands of the executioner.

The Misery of man proceeds not from any single crush of overwhelming evil, but from small vexations continually repeated.

That Misery does not make all virtuous, experience, too, certainly informs us; but it is no less certain, that of what virtue there is, Misery produces far the greater part.

Physical Evil may, therefore, be endured with patience, since it is the cause of Moral good; and patience itself is one Virtue by which we are prepared for that state in which Evil shall be no more.

There are some temperaments so melancholy by Nature, that, to their unhappy possessors, every thing has a sombre hue. The dark side of events is perpetually turned towards them. Every good seems to them deceitful, and every danger which threatens, at once inevitable and fatal. To bid such persons be cheerful would be like ordering the blind to see.

Despair signifies the loss of hope and confidence in God's Mercy. To danger, Despair adds danger, and to guilt adds guilt. From the former, Exertion and Presence of Mind may rescue us; and repentance and confidence in God's Mercy will most assuredly procure us pardon for the latter. Thus, under any circumstances, and in any situation, Despair is useless, while in some it is dangerous, and in others, criminal.

Man suffers from Misery through his own folly. If a person commits sin, he becomes Miserable. When a person lives beyond his Means, and becomes Luxurious, creating wants, which he has not the power to supply, he incurs debt, and thereby becomes Miserable.

When a person gives vent to his Passions, and cannot restrain them, he becomes Miserable. When a person is angry, and strikes his neighbour, he soon reaps the fruits of his folly, and suffers incarceration, and makes himself, his parents, his wife and children all Miserable.

Thus, we see that when a person suffers from Misery, it is he, who is to blame in the matter. He should not, therefore, accuse his friends, or his neighbours for his sufferings. When a person eats too much or drinks too much, when a person takes Intoxicating Liquors, and Drugs, when a person indulges himself in Gambling, when a person keeps up Night, and does not go to sleep even at a late hour, when a person contracts Intemperate habits, he must suffer from ill-health, indigestion and other diseases. He should not blame other people for the sufferings, which he creates himself, and which at last cause his Ruin, and sometimes destroy his life in the end. So, Gentlemen, we should always be careful to avoid objects which make Life Miserable.

The lecturer sat down amidst loud applause. The Chairman then made a short speech, and thanked the lecturer for his very able speech.

The proceedings terminated with cordial votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned speaker.

Address by the Secretary :—

The Chairman on taking his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, said :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

The Calcutta Literary Society has, by the blessing of God, completed the Fourth year of its existence. Its object was to hold Friendly gatherings of both communities, and to discuss subjects, Social, Literary and Scientific.

The Third Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 6th August, 1877, at 4-30 P. M., when Babu Haripada Naik delivered a lecture on the Life and Teachings of Akbar, before a crowded house, under the presidency of Babu Chandi Charn Banerjea.

Besides the Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following lecture was delivered during the session ; viz :—

- (1) On Misery by Babu Asutoso Sil, under the presidency of Babu Rajani Nath Rai, B. A., at the Theatre of the Hindu School, College Square, on Saturday, the 19th February, 1878, at 4-30 P. M.

The present Anniversary, which we are assembled to-day to celebrate, evokes a feeling of gladness in our mind in being able to secure the services of Babu Nilmadhab Chatterjea, Superintendent, Oriental-Seminary, a Gentleman well-known in town for his literary career.

The establishment of English Schools and Colleges has marked a new epoch in the History of India. Under the powerful influence of Western Education, the various races inhabiting here are being gradually welded together into one Common Nationality.

To the Honorary Members and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the welfare of the Institution.

Let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of All Events, under whose fostering care, this Society has been able to complete the Third year of its existence. May He continue to shower His manifold blessings upon us, grant us strength enough to sustain us in our work, and cheer us in the time of our difficulties and dangers. This is my fervent prayer. (Cheers.)

The Treasurer then read the Accounts for the year, which were duly passed and confirmed.

The following Gentlemen were next proposed Honorary Members of the Society, and duly elected :—

- Babu Gonesh Chandra Mukerjea,
- „ Romesh Chandra Dutt,
- „ Ram Chandra Palit,
- „ Dena Nath Sil

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, had finished the Report, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman said, that as the expenses of the Society were hitherto all borne by him, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, has been pleased to give his second contribution of Rupees Five hundred and fifty to the Funds of the Society. He, therefore, proposed a hearty vote of acknowledgment and cordial thanks for the same.

The proposal was carried unanimously.

The chairman called upon Babu Madhav Chandra Banerjea to deliver his lecture on—

Etiquette :—

The lecturer spoke on the subject for upwards of an hour and a half. He said that Etiquette had a variety of significations. He hit upon the right nail by pointing out the difference existing between the Eastern and the Western Forms of Etiquette. He continued that when an elderly person makes his appearance, Etiquette requires that all those seated in the room should stand up, and courteously receive him. They should make a low bow, and cease talking and laughing in his presence.

This is called True Etiquette. English and Indian Society both require it. There can be no difference in the Form of Etiquette observed by Englishmen and Indians. Both touch their forehead with their hands when they meet an old, or a respectable person. Both speak in reserve in his presence. They do not expose themselves, but look upon him with awe and reverence.

Unless a Nation learns to be courteous, it becomes the laughing stock of other Races. Civilization means that the people should not only educate themselves, but receive instruction in Manners and Breeding. A well-bred man is a blessing to Society. If you are not well-bred, every body will begin to hate you, and shun your company.

It is Association with good men that a person can reckon upon his advancement in this life. It is, perhaps, not too much to say that unless we show good-breeding in our Manners, we will not be permitted to mix in Civilized Society, and thus be looked upon down with contempt and derision—a lot which is very desirable to avoid.

The real state of a man can only be judged by his action. We are all living in this world as so many actors. The Society, in which we live, is a stage where we must act our part well. If we fail to do so, we are called savage and uncivilized.

Etiquette and Civilization must go hand in hand to take off what we were expected to live upon in course of time. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke with considerable power and eloquence, chiefly dwelling on the subject, for nearly a quarter of an hour.

The Meeting then came to a close at 6-30 P. M., with votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned lecturer.

A crowded and enthusiastic Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Theatre of the Hindu School, College Square, on Friday, the 5th July, 1878, at 4-30 P. M., at which upwards of one thousand persons were present. The chair was taken by Babu Prasanna Kumar Rai, B. A.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Rakhal Dass Dutt to deliver his lecture on—

The Aspirations of Youth:—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour. He said, that our young men ought to be animated by a desire to excel in every thing that was good and great. A young man, who aspires after things, which are not visible to the naked eye, will have to work hard for what he desires to gain. Unless there is Aspiration to stimulate, the world cannot produce great men. Unless we are stimulated with a love for all that is grand and beautiful, we can never be expected to rise in the scale of Nations. There are some people who decry ambition in young men. But those who take that side commit a grave mistake.

The Degree-holders, who make the University the Alma Mater of their conscience, seldom believe that True Education begins after their University Career is over. A high conception of success in life, despises mere getting on and surpassing rivals as compared with internal progress in true culture.

Far from enlarging the range of the students' Aims and Aspirations, it narrows them. It makes him totally indifferent to his higher interest, and leave all his thoughts upon the toss-up Examination upon which, perhaps, his Fellowship depends, or, his success in some learned profession is supposed to depend.

I remember a student, who had an unprecedented University Career, who had so completely made success of this sort his end, that when he had obtained all his Degrees, he confessed that he did not know what to do next, or how to employ himself—A most regrettable instance!

However, University students are no longer boys. They are capable of enjoying a higher motive, and applying it to any branch of study. They differ from boys, in as much as they are old enough to form an opinion of the value of their studies. The formation of such an opinion is very desirable. It is the most important factor of Education.

It promotes good choice of good subjects. In fact, it is the essential duty of the student to consider what subjects he should study, what knowledge and acquirements his after-life is likely to demand, what his own intellectual powers and defects are, and in what way he should best develop the one, and mend the other. He should look attentively on the preparation of his future-life, and realize for himself a nature growing Manhood.

Ambition is noble in itself. When mis-directed, it proves a source of great mischief. But, when directed properly, it leads to beautiful results, and thereby becomes a source of immense good to those around us. Now, then, our youths ought to bear this in mind that unless they keep to the right path, they are sure to go wrong, and bring disaster and ruin on themselves in the end.

It is a well-known fact that Examples teach better than Precepts. It should always be borne in mind that we should always be honest, and not go astray.

Our Aspirations should be directed to the proper source. If we turn to the chapters of our lives, in which are recorded all the good things that we have done to benefit Society, we will begin to abandon such worldly desires, as might prove injurious to it.

Our young men cannot rest satisfied without doing something that is noble in principle, and good in practice. We, therefore, urge upon our Youths to toil hard for intellectual culture. In doing this, they ought to be guided by means of the instructions imparted to them in the lectures that are given to them from time to time. (Cheers.)

• After the speaker had resumed his seat, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The gathering dispersed at 6-30 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

There was a very large gathering of Gentlemen at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 2nd September, 1878, at 4-30 p.m., to hear Babu Romesh Chandra Bose's lecture on—

The Deplorable Condition of Indian Youths, delivered under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society. Babu Umakali Mukerjee, B.A., was in the chair.

After the proceedings of the previous Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to commence his lecture.

The speaker spoke on the subject for more than an hour. In the course of which he said that, a father educates his boy, in order that he might earn a decent livelihood, when he comes to age. But alas! in Nine cases out of Ten, the boy finds it difficult to obtain an Employment, or to enter into some business by which he can earn his own living.

Generally speaking, the condition of Educated-Youths is much to be deplored! But this is due more to themselves, and their parents than to any body else. The latter do not like to part with them, and wish that they should remain with them, and either serve in a Government or a Mercantile Firm, or take to the Profession of a Medical or Legal Practitioner.

To enter the Profession is always difficult. As it requires a great deal of Perseverance, Energy and Intelligence. If an Young man is lucky enough to enter into the Medical College and get his Deploma there, he is sure to do well. If he can become a Solicitor, or a Pleader, he is then said to have been born with Silver spoon in his mouth.

But how many Youngmen are fortunate enough to enter into the Professions?—But alas! After a boy has left school, his parents, if they had capital enough, set him up in some business. But how is he to gain Experience to enable him to carry on his Trade?

He always finds it difficult to enter into somebody's Firm, where he can be initiated properly in the business, which he has a mind to take up. No body is willing to train him up. Even his friends and nearest relatives fear to do so, lest they should bring in competition in the field, and thus deprive himself of a part of the profit which he has hitherto gained by a Monopoly.

With Englishmen, the case is quite different. How many English Youths are bound down to serve as Apprentices in Firms?—They are given respectable allowances to enable them to get on. When they have received a good training, their pay is increased. Subsequently, they are even allowed a share in the Business.

In the case of Indian Youths, this is not the case. They have to struggle hard for their livelihood, however well-educated they may be. The Deplorable Condition of Indian Youths is too patent to those, who take an interest in the affairs of Educated Youngmen.

Whenever there is a post Vacant in a Government Office, hundreds of Indian Youths send in their applications, and compete for it. This indicates the growing necessity of something being done to open a channel for our Young men! No Nation can be great unless its Youths learn to be Enterprising. They should migrate to different lands to find pastures new, but it must be remembered that if they are to embark on some enterprise, Capital is necessary. And where is that to come from?—There lies the rub. The condition of our Young men is truly deplorable, and some necessary steps should, therefore, soon be taken to remedy the evil. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words. The Meeting broke up at 6-30 p.m., with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

The Fifth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the Theatre of the Hindu School, College Square, on Wednesday, the 12th February, 1879, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, B.A., Editor, Bengali, &c. &c. &c. There was a good attendance, a large portion of those present being Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University.

Address by the Secretary :—

The Chairman, on taking his seat amidst cheers. Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, said :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

This is the Fifth Anniversary of the Calcutta Literary Society. We never expected that such a popular and distinguished Gentleman as Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, B. A., Editor, Bengali &c. &c. &c., would agree to honor the Anniversary Meeting of the Society by taking the chair, nor was it expected that an European Gentleman of such high position and respectability, as the Revd. K. S. Macdonald M.A., Principal, Duff College, would come forward and deliver a lecture to the Society on such an interesting subject as, the Educated Youths and their Future Prospects. I am deeply grateful to them for having spared the time in the midst of the absorbing duties of their position to come here this afternoon.

The Calcutta Literary Society has, by the blessing of God, been in existence for the last Five years, and we are assembled here to day to celebrate its Fifth Anniversary.

The Society is going on with its work silently, and in an assuming manner.

Though it will take some years hence to grow into Manhood, yet, I have no doubt, that our care and attention have given to it an impetus which is exercising a wholesome influence on the Calcutta Society. This, indeed, is very hopeful, and I have no doubt, that the presence of Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, B. A., and the Revd. K. S. Macdonald, M. A., will not fail to exert its influence over an Institution, which is only in its Infancy.

We know the countries are Politically united. But what is the effect of Political Union?—It simply changes the color of the map—What we want is the Real Union—the Moral, the Social, and the Intellectual Union of the two countries—Union in body and soul. Then let us see what we have done.

The Fourth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Wednesday, the 10th April, 1878, at 4-15 P.M., when Babu Madhab Chandra Banerjea delivered a lecture on Etiquette, before a crowded house, under the presidency of Babu Nilmadhab Chatterjea, Superintendent, Oriental Seminary.

Besides the Fourth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following two lectures were delivered during the session, viz :—

- (1) On Aspirations of Youth, by Babu Rakhal Das Dutt, under the presidency of Babu Prasanna Kumar Rai, B. A., at the Theatre of the Hindu-School, College Square, on Friday, the 5th July, 1878, at 4-30 P.M.
- (2) On The Deteriorable Condition of Indian Students by Babu Ramesh Chandra Bose, under the presidency of Babu Umakali Mukerjea, B. A., at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chit-pur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 22nd September, 1878, at 4-30 P.M.

To the Honorary Members and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unatated interest in the welfare of the Institution.

I hope, that by the blessing of God, the Society will continue its work of usefulness year after year. (Cheers).

The Treasurer then presented the Accounts for the year, and they were passed.

After the Report had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Revd. K. S. Macdonald, M. A., F. U. C., Principal, Duff College, &c., to deliver his lecture on—

The Educated Youths and their Future Prospects :—

The learned speaker, who on rising, was received with deafening cheers, dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour, during which time he was cheered many times. He very ably pointed out what dark and gloomy prospects were staring at the Graduates and would-be-Graduates of the Calcutta University, and advised them, therefore, not to throw themselves any longer on the charity of our Benign Government, but to shift for themselves.

The aspirations and hopes of our Graduates, now-a-days, are centred only in Government Services. These evils, if not rectified and remedied in time, would prove detrimental to the further rise and progress of the Nation. The Nation that earns its bread by its own exertion, intellect, nay, manual labor, is more happy and contented than those who live on the Charity of others.

He emphatically said that the Educated youth of this country were not acting upon this Golden Rule. What were they doing then?—They rather preferred running across the ocean to compete at the Civil-Service Examination, than laying the foundation stones of Mills, &c.,—the harbingers of civilization.

The English Youths, generally, set about as Merchants, Traders, Mechanics, nay, even Printers in Press, after finishing their Academical Career. But alas! the Educated Youths of this country were really doing nothing to further their prospects. In this respect, our Educated Youths surely yield the palm of superiority to the Youths of Bombay,—Our Indian Manchester.

The lecturer continued that the prospects of the Educated Youths were being lowered. On the one hand, there was a hereditary tendency to Karanidom, and on the other, the Spirit of the West, was not infusing a spirit of independence into our veins, which is militant against all servitude and servility. The lecturer went on saying that the Educated Youths of India should seek out their own Salvation, and not depend upon Government teachings. (Cheers).

After the Ven-able lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman expressed his pleasure at being present, and spoke very eloquently on the subject for some time. It goes without saying that his able speech had a telling-effect on the audience.

In conclusion, he wished the Society every success.

The Proceedings terminated at 7 P.M., with cordial votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer, and with the singing of several songs.

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

A very crowded and enthusiastic Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Duff College, No. 74, Nimtola Street, on Wednesday, the 30th April, 1879, at 6-30 p. m., under the presidency of the Revd. Dr. K. S. Macdonald, M. A., Fellow and Examiner of the Calcutta University, and Principal of the College.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the Fifth Anniversary Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon the Venerable lecturer, the Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerjee, Fellow and Examiner of the Calcutta University (who had established for himself an illustrious name among the sons of literature and knowledge), to deliver his lecture on—

English Education in Bengal :—

The learned speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour, and he was cheered many times.

He said that the Subject was divided into two parts ; viz. :—

- (a) One going under the rank of Conservatism,
- (b) The other under that of Liberalism.

The former was represented by the Present prototype of Hindu-Bengal,—and the latter by the lamented and the re-doubtable Babu Ram Gopal Ghose. The examples of both should be followed by their country-men in course of time, and the result will be considerable good, which cannot fail to influence Society in its progress.

As Education develops itself, and spreads through the length and breadth of the land, it will produce most beneficial effects upon Society, which will march onward, and the Nation will grow in Intellect, Wisdom and Greatness. Every Nation owes its rise to the beneficial effects of Education. Ignorance can never help a Nation to become prosperous and great.

Knowledge is Power. Education imparts that Knowledge, which helps the advancement of a people. No country's material resources can be developed without Education.

It is Education that has made the English Nation what it is at the present day. It is Education that has made the Americans what they are—A Nation that enjoys peace, plenty, and prosperity. Americans what they are! Their Inventions and Discoveries form the Admiration of the World! Their watches and their clocks keep time with such regularity, as can seldom be excelled! They can be had at very moderate prices at which other Nations can seldom produce them. Is not all this owing to the beneficial effects of Education, which exerts great influence for the promotion of the greatest good of the greatest number—which, alone, can make the miserable Happy, and the poor Rich, and enable them to enjoy Peace and Plenty?

On the learned lecturer resuming his seat amidst applause, the Chairman addressed the Meeting for sometime. He said that English Education is baneful, as well as beneficial—Baneful, as it takes off the anchor from our inherited Institutions, and it is beneficial, as it clears from all the dirt received from accredited un wisdom.

The Meeting separated at 9 p.m., after a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to the chair, and the Venerable lecturer.

There was a very large gathering at the Theatre of the Hindu School, College Square, on Wednesday, the 25th February, 1880, at 4-15 p.m., to hear the lecture of Pandit Jogendra Nath Tarkachuramany, (of Benares), on—

What England has, & has not done for India, delivered under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society. Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, B. A., Editor, Bengali, &c., &c., &c., was voted to the chair, amidst shouts of applause.

The business of the Meeting opened with the reading of the Proceedings of the last Meeting by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which was duly confirmed. The Chairman then called upon the lecturer to deliver his lecture.

The speaker dwelt on his subject for upwards of an hour. He said that England had done a great deal for India. Of course, it has still to do more, but that is the work of time. What it has done, will require a volume to enumerate. To be brief, it has introduced English Education into the country,—the results of such Education are manifest enough, and need not be dilated upon. The English Government has opened Colleges and Schools in the Metropolis, and gradually extended the benefits of Education into the provinces.

England is saturated with the capital, which India stands in need of—England abounds with the Scientific information, and the practical ingenuity in which India is remarkably deficient. England, too, possesses, in an eminent degree, that spirit of enterprise, the want of which is one of the most striking characteristic of the larger portion of the inhabitants of the East.

The efforts of England to educate the people were seconded by private Gentlemen and Christian Missionaries, who, also, established Colleges and Schools for the Education of Indian Youths. The people, who were at first averse to receive the instruction imparted in them, gradually learnt to appreciate its benefits.

In cities and villages, where there was a single School before, there are many Schools at the present day, which are engaged in the work of Education. Gradually, as Education began to spread in the country, the Universities were opened, and now Indian Youths have to pass their Examinations in them, for the purpose of obtaining Degrees and Titles, which are conferred by them.

This creates wholesome competition between Private and Government Schools and Missionary Institutions.

The English Government has, not only conferred great benefits on us, by providing us with the means of Educating ourselves, they have, also, to be brief, conferred on us the Railways, the Telegraphs, the Irrigation Works, the Drainage, the Gas, the Filtered Water, a Cheap Penny Postage System, &c., &c.

By Railways, we can travel, from one end of the country to the other, with great speed and rapidity, such as was hardly known before. Now we can go on a Pilgrimage to Mathura in three days, which took us more than two months before by Boat. By Telegram, we can send Messages, from one end of the country to the other, in the course of a few minutes. The Irrigation Works enable the Farmer to cultivate his fields in seasons of drought and scarcity. The Drainage has converted the City of Calcutta,—the Metropolis of British India, into a Sanitarium. The Filtered Water has arrested the prevalence of Cholera and Small-pox in the City, which, before the introduction of Drainage and the present system of Water-supply, devastated the City. For these and other works we are indebted to the Government, and for which, we ought to be thankful.

India owes a deep debt of gratitude to England, and in the same way also to Her Sovereign, Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress of India. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke very fluently on the Subject for sometime.

He thanked the lecturer for his very able speech, and heartily appreciated the Objects of the Society, and wished it every success. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 7 p.m., with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

A large number of Gentlemen assembled at the hall of the General Assembly's College, Cornwallis Square, on Thursday, the 26th February, 1880, at 4-30 P. M., to hear the discourse of the Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerjee, Author of several Works, Fellow and Examiner of the Calcutta University, &c., &c., &c., on delivered, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society. The Revd. W. W. Hastie, M. A., D. D., Principal of the College, presided.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon the Venerable lecturer to begin his lecture.

The learned speaker dwelt on the subject for more than an hour, and he was frequently applauded. He said that Rajah Ram Mohun Roy, a distinguished Orientalist, was born at Burdwan in 1774. His father, Ram Kanta Roy, was a Brahmin of a High Order. His grand father held some important posts under the Mogul Court, but not being well-treated, he had removed from Court and taken up his abode at Burdwan.

Ram Mohun Roy received the Elements of Bengali, and a certain knowledge of Persian, in his father's house at Burdwan. But, as Patna was then the seat of Mahamedan Learning and of Arabic Lore, he was sent thither to study the Second Language of the Mahamedans,—a knowledge of which was supposed to be indispensable to such as would succeed in securing the favour of the Mahamedan Raj.

As a Brahmin, who might be called upon to earn his livelihood, through the Priestly Office, he betook himself the Sacred Language Sanskrit. In Sanskrit, he soon learned to appreciate the simple Elementary Religion of the Veda.

At the age of Sixteen, he composed a Treaties on the Subject, which gave offence to his relatives and friends.—It was, therefore, thought desirable that he should, for a time, leave the paterual roof. His visit to Benares only confirmed in him the determination to expose its iniquity. While at Patna, he heard a good deal of Buddhism.

By going to Thibet, he would come into closer-contact with Buddhism. He spent three years in Thibet, disputing daily with the Worshippers of the living Lama.

On his return from Thibet, he devoted himself with still greater zeal to the study of the Sanskrit,—the Knowledge of the Religion of his Ancestors.

When he had reached the age of Twenty, he began to associate with Europeans, in order to study their Laws and Forms of Government. His father now recalled him, and restored him to his favour. But his continued angry controversies with the Brahmins, on the subject of their Idolatry and Superstition, and his interference with their Cruel and Pernicious Custom of Suttee-ism, or the burning alive of the Poor Hindu-Widows, on the funeral pile of their deceased husbands, and other Pernicious Practices, revived and increased their animosity towards him, and, through their influence, his father was again obliged to withdraw his countenance though his limited pecuniary support was still continued to his son.

The tender heart of Ram Mohun Roy could not brook the idea of such an Inhuman Rite being practiced on Members of the Fair-Sex.

His father died in 1803, and as the survivor of three sons, Ram Mohun Roy inherited considerable property, all of which he would lose, if he legally lost Caste. He now broke openly with the Brahmins, and wrote several works, exposing their Errors.

In 1814, he had purchased a house for himself in Calcutta. He acted as Dewan, or Head Officer in turn to the Collectors or Judges of Rungpur, Bhagalpur and Ramgarh, on account of which, he was spoken of a Dewanji,—until he was made Rajah.

During the Ten years he was Dewan, he is said to have saved so much money, as to enable him to purchase an Estate, worth £1,000 a year, or Rs. 1,000 per month,—a matter which is not supposed to add to his fame. He spent large sums of money in printing and publishing various books, pamphlets and tracts on Idolatry, Hinduism and Christianity.

He published an English Translation of portions of the Vedas, (after he had previously translated them into Bengali and Hindi), in 1817, and subsequently became part-Proprietor of an English Newspaper, called the Bengal-Herald.

He next published a Translation of the Upanisads, one of the Chapters of the Shyam-Veda. This was the beginning of a series of English and Bengali Works on Theism and Idolatry.

He had been on the best terms with the Missionaries. He showed like kindness towards Dr. Duff, Founder of the Scottish Mission. He provided him with the house in which the Institution opened in August 1830, on the Chitpur Road, got pupils for him, and gave him counsel as to the conducting of the School.

Ram Mohun Roy took every means to preserve his Caste. He never threw off his Sacred Thread (Poita). It was on his body when he died. Therefore, he inherited his father's property which was pretty considerable. Had he legally broken Caste, all this property he would have lost. His cousins imagined that they could dis-inherit him, by proving that he had lost Caste. But he successfully proved in the Courts of Bengal, though at an enormous cost, that he had not thus forfeited his Civil Rights.

It is to his credit that when leaving Calcutta for England, a short time thereafter, he charged his two sons to forget the conduct of their cousins, in connection with these Legal Proceedings. During the Two years, the Law Suit went on, his Theistic Meetings were discontinued, seemingly because, he was afraid their very existence would prejudice his worldly interests.

He did not believe in the Transmigration and Final Absorption of the Soul. He believed, that after Death, the Soul lived for ever, and was rewarded or punished by God,—according to the Deeds done in the body,—whether good or evil. He, consequently, believed in a Great Day of Judgment, on which the Living and the Dead would appear before the Judge of All, to have their case decided once for all.

He did not believe himself to be either a Prophet or Inspired. He claimed no personal Inspiration, nor did he claim a Lordship over God's heritage in regard to the Brahma Samaj, which he founded and endowed.

He was a good man, who set up no high pretensions, either to humility, or, to anything else. He did his utmost to improve the condition of his country-men, Morally, Socially, and Spiritually.

With the view of obtaining by personal observation, a more thorough insight into the Manners, Customs, Religion and Political Institutions of Europe, he resolved on going to England. He, accordingly, embarked in November, 1830, as the dissension on the East India Company's Charter was expected to come on, by which the treatment of the Natives of India and its Future Government would be determined for years to come; and an Appeal on the Abolition of the Burning of Innocent Hindu Widows was to be heard before the Privy Council.

The Emperor of Delhi, who complained bitterly to the East India Company of the humble condition of vassalage in which he was placed by the solemn Declaration of Lord Amherst in 1827, appointed Ram Mohun Roy, his Envoy to the British Court, and conferred on him the title of Rajah.

His object as Envoy was to secure a better pension for the Emperor. In this, he was successful. The King of Delhi received an addition to his income of £30,000 a year.

He had also the gratification of knowing that the Law Abolishing Sutteism received the Royal Sanction. He was formally presented to the King and a place was assigned to him at the ceremony of the Coronation.

He arrived in Liverpool in April, 1831. In January, 1833, he visited France. Here his health soon after very visibly declined. He was, therefore, on the eve of returning to his own country, but he was seized with illness, which terminated in his death, on the morning of the 27th September, 1833. He breathed his last in the presence of his son, Rajah Ram Roy and his two Hindu-servants, by whose services, he had all along been enabled to preserve his Caste.

A short time before his death, Mr. John Hare, brother of the well-known Mr. David Hare,—the Calcutta Educational Friend of the Rajah,—told his Brahmin servant, Ram Ratan Mukerjee, that if there were any Observances which were required by his master's Caste, he might now perform them.

Ram Ratan then uttered a Prayer in his master's ear. He also placed iron under his bolster. The Rajah had conversed very little during his illness, but was often observed to be engaged in prayer.

With a view to preserve his Caste, he was not buried in a Christian Burial Ground, but in a retired spot in the Shrubbery, at Stapleton Grove, Bristol, on Friday, the 18th October, 1833,—three weeks after his death. The Interment took place in solemn silence.

The Rajah was not a Vegetarian, but he was very much opposed to Cruelty to Animals. Almost every evening he partook of Animal food. One day, it happened, that his servant tortured to death the Animal, intended for supper. The Rajah, on hearing this, was very angry, and ran bare-footed after the servant with a stick, from the house to the compound. It was, with much difficulty, he was persuaded to give up the chase.

He wrote and spoke English, Bengali, Persian, Hindustani, and was further acquainted with French, Hebrew, Latin, Greek, and Arabic. He was as acute as a Diplomatist, as enlightened and cultivated as a Man could be.

Miss Mary Carpenter, in her Last Days in England of Rajah Ram Mohun Roy, had borne ample testimony to the worth and character of the late-lamented Rajah.

Rajah Ram Mohun Roy was a great Religious Reformer, far in advance of his time, and his name should be held in loving remembrance by his countrymen, and by all interested in the Social and Religious welfare of India.

Rajah Ram Mohun Roy was the Founder of the Brahma Samaj, now called Adi Brahma Samaj. The Theistic Church in India owes its origin to the Venerable Rajah. He lived not for himself, but for Posterity.

He used to meet at the house of Mr. Adams, in Hare Street, where some of the European Theists congregated to discuss the subject of Worshipping One God as the True Way to Salvation.

These discussions led to the Establishment of the only Theistic Church in India, wherein Educated Indian Youths used to meet in Chitpur Road, for the purpose of praying to One God,—as the Almighty Father of the Universe One without a Second. (Cheers).

After the Venerable lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting broke up at 7 P.M., after a customary vote of thanks to the chair, and the learned lecturer.

The Sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the Theatre of the Hindu-School, College Square, on Saturday, the 28th February, 1880, at 3-30 P.M., under the presidency of *Major-General A. C. Address by the Secretary :—

The Chairman, on taking his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, said :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

It is most fortunate that we have had such a high personage as Major-General A. C. Litchfield, Consul-General of the United States of America, to preside at the Sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, a significant fact upon which we might well congratulate ourselves. I am deeply grateful to him for having spared the time in the midst of the absorbing duties of his Exalted Office to come here, and preside this afternoon at our Sixth Anniversary Meeting. I am sure that his labour will not have been thrown away, but they will fructify and bear abundant fruit. (Cheers).

Gentlemen, the Calcutta Literary Society was established in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, and as its Founder and Secretary, it is a matter of great rejoicing to me to find that, for five consecutive years, it has steadily been pursuing its Career of usefulness. The Society is intended to benefit our Young-men by bringing them together, and inducing them to learn what is necessary for the Cultivation and Development of their Intellectual Faculties. I am glad to record that the prospects of the Society are better than ever.

To the Foreign and Honorary Members, Donor, and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the prosperity of this Literary Society.

The best thanks of the Society are also tendered to that illustrious noble Lady, Her Highness Maharani Sarnamayi, C. I., of Cossimbazar, for Her Highness' Voluntary Contribution made to this Literary Institution. Her Highness expressed words of encouragement and sympathy with the work and efforts of the Society, in Her Highness' letter No. 112, dated the 10th April, 1879.

Gentlemen, I cannot allow the present opportunity to pass, without mentioning the Society's Debt Immense of endless gratitude to Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, the worthy President of this Society, since its foundation, for his ceaseless endeavours in the prosperity of this Literary Association.

Now, I pray to God, that He may bless the Society with a long life, and continue to shower His choicest blessings upon it. (Cheers)

The Treasurer then read the Accounts for the year, which were duly passed.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Report, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon the Revd. Dr. K. S. Macdonald, M. A., Fellow and Examiner of the Calcutta University, Principal of the Duff College, &c, to deliver his address on—

The Catholic objects of the Society :—

The learned speaker, who on rising was received with loud cheers, then addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He principally dwelt upon—the Catholic Objects of the Society,—and sketched its history from its foundation.

His speech was listened to with great interest and attention, and the speaker was cheered many times. He threw a flood of light upon various other points, and highly complimented Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Indefatigable worthy Secretary to the Society, for his labor and earnest zeal for the improvement of the Society. He spoke, also, a few kind words of encouragement, and blessed the Society.

After him, the Revd. G. G. Gillan, M. A., in a few well-chosen words, proposed a vote of thanks to the Revd. Dr. K. S. Macdonald, M.A, F.U.C, &c., for his interesting address.

The proposal was carried by acclamation.

The Chairman, who on rising was received with deafening cheers, then addressed the Meeting:—He said, "Gentlemen, before we separate, I think, you will, perhaps, expect that I should say a few words regarding the circumstances under which I am in your midst this evening. When your young Secretary, Mr. Sham Lall Day, very kindly invited me to take part in the proceedings of this Meeting, I felt that I could not shrink from the performance of so pleasant a duty.

From the Report, just presented to us, it appeared that the Calcutta Literary Society has made considerable progress, and has been useful in disseminating Knowledge.

Before sitting down, I must do, what I am sure, you will all expect me to do, and that is, to express the obligations which this Society is under to Mr. Day. If this Society is resuscitated, as I hope and trust it will be, and enter upon a new career of vigour and usefulness, it will be entirely owing to the exertions of my young friend, Mr. Sham Lall Day (Applause).

Now I can only trust that he may live many years, and that every year he lives, he may see this Society growing in usefulness and influence. And I feel confident that it will grow in influence and usefulness year by year, if we will only make up our minds to surrender some small part of our time and leisure to promote the great and good objects, which we all have in view. I wish the Society every success." (Applause).

The Chairman next proposed that Mr. Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Life-Member of this Society, will continue to be the Secretary to the Society for life.

The proposal was carried by acclamation.

After the Chairman had resumed his seat, Babu Sham Lall Day tendered the Society's, gratitude to Major-General, A. C. Litchfield, Consul-Genl., U.S.A. The Chairman acknowledged the vote in grateful terms.

The Meeting dissolved at 5-30 P. M. after singing a few Bengali songs.

(Vide, the Englishman, and the Statesman, 2nd March, 1880.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Sanskrit College, College Square, on Friday, the 5th March, 1880, at 4-45 p.m., Pandit Satya Vrata Samasrami (of Benares), presided over a fair attendance.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Mr. R. N. Dutt to deliver his lecture on—

The Decline of the Glory of India :—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour. He said, that the Ancient India's Glory was the burthen of his song. Of Ancient India, he could but speak in terms of the highest exaltation and praise, but, under the benign influence of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress of India, it had now been turned into a verdant and golden field, where all people might find their pastures. He continued, that it was a matter of regret that India's Past Glory is gone! No one can say when it will come back again!!

India is justly described to be the Brightest Jewel in the British Diadem. Its Resources are vast and extensive. It abounds in Gold and Silver Mines, Coal and Iron Mines. There are to be found Jems, Diamonds and Pearls in large number and variety, in different parts of the country. Some of them are so large and brilliant that no one can properly appraise their proper value! They are priceless. The Intellectual Faculties of her sons are easy of development.

The Munis and Rishis, of old, composed beautiful songs also to the Deity, and wrote Pamphlets, which can hardly be produced in any other country of the world. The Sanskrit, in which our fore-fathers wrote, and expressed their thoughts, still forms the Admiration of such eminent men, as Professor, F. Max Muller, and other Savants of England, Germany and France, in which the Oriental Language and Literature are studied with great zeal and earnestness, which it is difficult to excel.

Our Scientists made discoveries, and invented Machinery, which also form the Admiration of the World. The Europeans now boast of Balloons, upon which, their enterprising country-men ascend and move about in the skies. But, we read in the Puranas, of Sri Krishna, Arjuna and others, travelling from one country to another to the distance of thousands of miles on Raths, driven by some Agent, which was unknown to us in these days. Who can deny that these formed the Ancient Glory of India and that these can hardly have any equal much less be excelled in any other part of the world?

Now, then, it devolves upon you, Youngmen, to endeavour to vie with your fore-fathers, in all the various good qualities that distinguished them. You should go and draw from the Fountain-head, in which the Rich Treasures of all Knowledge,—the products of the brain of your fore-fathers—are stored up. Then, and then only, we might expect the Ancient Glory of India to be revived, and not till then (Cheers).

After the lecturer had, resumed his seat, amidst cheers, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 7-30 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A large number of Gentlemen assembled at the hall of the Calcutta Government Sanskrit College, College-Square, on Saturday, the 6th March, 1880, at 3-30 p.m., to hear the lecture of Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarkachawamany of Benare on—

The Aryans and their Deeds :—

Pandit Satya Vrata Samasrami, (of Benares), was in the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon the lecturer to deliver his lecture.

The speaker spoke on his subject for upwards of an hour. His speech was quite edifying, and the audience heard it with rapt attention. He said, that the Aryans of old were renowned for Deeds, of which we can form no conception at the present day. We cannot understand how the descendants of such a distinguished people, as the Aryans, could have fallen so poor, as we now find them. It is, indeed, a matter of regret, that we should have descended so low, as we now find ourselves, so as to become the derision of the world.

In Ancient Architecture, our countrymen excelled other peoples and Nations. The Taj Mahal of Agra, the Minarat of Delhi, and other magnificent Temples and Buildings, which are to be found in abundance, in the North-Western Provinces and other places, can find no parallel in any other country in the world.

The Ramayan and the Mahabharat contain accounts of Great Battles fought in Ancient India of the Heroic Deeds of such distinguished personages as Arjuna, Bhima and others. The vast strength which Bhima displayed in uprooting trees, and throwing them at his enemies, the ingeniousness, which Arjuna exhibited in aiming darts and arrows in the battlefield, which destroyed not hundreds, but thousands of his opponents, can find no parallel in history.

The Love of Truth which distinguished Yudhishthira, the eldest brother of Arjuna, and which restored his Kingdom, his Wealth and the vast possessions, which he had lost by the machinations of his own relatives, was too deep in his breast, of which we can find no example recorded in the Histories of other Nations. The Devotion of Arjuna to Sri Krishna, his Counsellor, Adviser, Friend and Director of all the Deeds, which still form the Admiration of the World, was so sincere as enchained Sri Krishna to his colleague and disciple, whom he never deserted in different conditions of life, to which he was exposed,—whether in the battle-field, or in his own home.

The way in which Sri Krishna sympathised with Yudhishthira and Arjuna in the different conditions, in which they were placed in this world, at different times, is recorded in Letters of Gold in the Pages of the Mahabharat. The characters, which are depicted therein, whether true, or the product of imagination, are so distinguished from the Heroic Characters of other Nations, that it is difficult to compare them with each other. The Deeds of Ancient Aryans, whether real or visionary, can find no comparison with the Deeds of other races and peoples, who inhabited, in Ancient times, in the different countries of the world. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting then came to a close at 5-15 p.m., with votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned speaker.

A large gathering, composed chiefly of the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, was present on Tuesday, the 16th March, 1880, at 6-30 p.m., at a public Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the hall of the Duff College, No. 74, Nimitola Street, when the Revd. W. Johnson, B. A., Principal, London Missionary Society's Institution, Bhowanipur, delivered a very interesting lecture on—

The Destruction of Pompeii, —(Illustrated by Diagrams) :—

The Revd. Dr. K. S. Macdonald, M. A., Fellow and Examiner of the Calcutta University, Author of several Works, and Principal of the Duff College, Calcutta.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, after introducing the lecturer in a few eulogistic words, asked the Revd. W. Johnson, B. A., Principal, London Missionary Society's Institution, Bhowanipur, to give his intended lecture.

The learned speaker dwelt upon his subject for upwards of an hour and a half. He treated his subject very ably. He said that Pompeii,—an Ancient town of Campania, in Italy,—situated on the shore of the Bay of Naples, almost immediately at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, buried by an Eruption of the Great Volcanic out-burst of Vesuvius, in 79, A.D.

Its ruins were discovered in 1755. About two-fifths of them have been cleared; so that, in the contemplation of these Ancient Remains, there is ample scope for the gratification of Antiquarian Curiosity.

Of its previous history, comparatively little, is recorded, but it appears that, like most other towns in the beautiful region, in which it was situated, it had a population of a very mixed character, and passed successively into the hands of several different Nations, each of which probably contributed an additional element to its composition.

Though its foundation was ascribed by Greek traditions, to Hercules, in common with the neighbouring city of Herculaneum, no value can be attached to these Mythological or Etymological Fables; it is certain that it was not a Greek Colony, in the proper sense of the term, as we know to have been the case with the more important cities of Cumae and Neapolis.

Strabo, in whose time it was a populous and flourishing place, tells us that it was first occupied by the Oscans, afterwards by the Tyrrhenians (i. e.) Etruscans and Pelasgians, and lastly, by the Samnites. The conquest of Campania, by the last mentioned people, is an undoubted historical fact, and, there can be no doubt, that Pompeii shared the fate of the neighbouring cities on this occasion, and afterwards passed in common with them under the yoke of Rome.

But its name is once mentioned during the Wars of the Romans with the Samnites and Campanians, in the Region of Italy, and then only incidentally (Liv., IX. 38). At a later period, however, it took a prominent part in the outbreak of the Nations of Central Italy, known as the Social War (91-89, B.C.), when it withstood a long siege by Sulla, and was one of the last Roman cities of Campania that was reduced by the Roman Arms.

After that event, the inhabitants were admitted to the Roman Franchise, but a Military Colony was settled in their territory by the dictator Sulla, and there can be no doubt that the whole population became rapidly Romanized.

Before the close of the Republic, it became a Favorite Resort of the leading Nobles of Rome,—many of whom acquired Villas in the neighbourhood. Among the most prominent of these was Cicero, whose letters abound with allusions to his Pompeian Villa, which was one of his favorite places of occasional residence. The same fashion continued under the Roman Empire, and, there can be no doubt, that during the First Century after the Christian Era, Pompeii, without rising above the rank of an ordinary provincial town, had become a flourishing place with a considerable population, for which it was indebted in part to its position at the Mouth of the River Sarnus, which rendered it the port of the neighbouring towns in the interior. But two events only are recorded of its history during this period.

In 59 A. D., a tumult took place in the Amphitheatre of Pompeii, between the citizens of the place, and the visitors from the neighbouring Colony of Nuceria, which led to a violent affray, in which many persons were killed and wounded on both sides. The Pompeians were punished for this Theatrical Exhibition for ten years (Tacitus Ann., XIV. 17). A characteristic, though rude, painting, found on the walls of one of the houses, gives a representation of this untoward event.

Only four years afterwards, (63, A. D.), a much more serious disaster befell the city. An Earthquake, which affected all the neighbouring towns, vented its force especially upon Pompeii, a large part of which, including most of the public buildings, was either destroyed, or so seriously damaged, as to require to be rebuilt rather than repaired.

The actual amount of the injuries sustained, which is related in general terms by Tacitus and Seneca, is more accurately known to us from the existing remains. For the inhabitants were still actively engaged in repairing and restoring the Ruined Edifices, when the whole city was overwhelmed by a much more appalling catastrophe.

In 79, A.D., the neighbouring Mountain of Vesuvius,—the Volcanic Forces of which had been slumbering for unknown ages, suddenly burst into a Violent Eruption, which, while it carried devastation all around the Beautiful Gulf, buried the two Cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii under dense beds of cinders and ashes.

Pompeii, was not, like Herculaneum, buried in a solid mass of Volcanic Tuff, but merely covered with a bed of lighter substances, cinders, small stones, and ashes, thrown out by the Volcano, and falling from above on the devoted city. It is clearly established that the whole of this superincumbent mass, though attaining to an average thickness of from 18 to 2 feet, was the product of one Eruption.

So completely was the unfortunate city buried under this overwhelming mass, that its very site was forgot en, and even the celebrated Topographer Cluverius in the Seventeenth Century was unable to fix it with certainty.

What a scene altogether is Pompeii! The mind receives here the Astonishing Impression of a Nation rising from the dead, their daily-life actually passing before an eyes. They are before us, who were suddenly stopped by the Hand of Death, in the midst of their labours and pleasures, surrounded by all circumstances of their Diurnal occupations.

The storm came, but swept them, not away from the face of the earth like other men, who depart, and are seen no more!

This difficulty arose in part from the Physical Changes consequent on the Eruption, and it was not till 1748, A.D., that an Accidental Discovery drew attention to its remains, and revealed the fact that beneath the Vineyards and Mulberry Grounds, which covered the site, there lay entombed the ruins of a City, far more accessible, if not more interesting than those of the neighbouring Herculaneum.

It was not till 1755, that systematic excavations on the site were begun, and, though they were thenceforth carried on more or less cautiously during the whole of that Century, it was not till the beginning of the Present Century that they ascend a regular character; and the work, which had received a vigorous stimulus during the period of the French Government,—(1806—1814), was prosecuted, though in a less Methodical and Systematic Manner, under the succeeding rule to Bourbon Kings. (1815—61).

Of late years, the process has been carried on, under the enlightened direction of Signior Fiorelli, in a much more careful and Scientific manner than before, and the results have been, in many respects, of the highest interest.

At the same time the invention of Photography has enabled the Directors to preserve a far more satisfactory record of every step in the explorations, that could previously be attempted. (Cheers).

He then exhibited several beautiful Diagrams.

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, amidst shouts of Applause, the Revd. R. N. Macdonald, M. A., Professor of the Duff College, proposed, in eloquent terms, a vote of thanks to the learned lecturer, for his very able lecture, and expressed a sincere hope that they would all profit by it. Mr. R. O. Dass having seconded the motion it was carried with acclamation.

The Chairman then made a little nice speech, and closed the business of the evening by conveying the thanks of the Society to the Revd. lecturer.

The Revd. W. Jhonson, B.A., acknowledged the vote of thanks in graceful terms.

The Meeting broke up at 9 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Englishman, 18th March, 1880.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Theatre of the Medical College, College Street, on Saturday, the 25th September, 1880, at 4 p.m. The Chair was occupied by Pandit Jagendra Nath Vidya Bhushan, M. A., B. L., Editor, Argya Darpan. There was a crowded gathering,—upwards of one thousand Gentlemen were present.

Babu Sham Lall Day, the Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Nagendra Nath Chatterjea to deliver his lecture on—

The Travels in the Panjab:—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for upwards of an hour and a half. He particularly dwelt upon the remarkable features and peculiarities of the Panjab, and its people, and related several pleasing and humorous Anecdotes to interest his audience.

The lecturer said, that the land of the Five-Waters was the land celebrated Classically, as well as recently.—Classically, it was the home and the hive of the Ancient Hindus. Vyas, and Professor P. Mar Muller, Webber, and Sir Monier Williams took unusual interest in the history of the Sacred Land, and Sir John Lawrence, during the Sepoy Mutiny, held the sceptre there, and did a good deal to quell the uprising spirit of the revolted Sepoys.

The Soil of the Panjab is various, being in some parts Barren, and in others marked by considerable Fertility. It yields Grain of all kinds, with Opium, Indigo, and Tobacco, the Orange, the Palm, and other fruit-trees.

Camels and Buffaloes are extensively reared there. It produces Rocksalt, Alum, Sulphur, Nitre, Coal, and Gypsum.

Silk and Cotton-fabrics, Carpets, Shawls, and Warlike-Arms are also manufactured in the Panjab.

The Panjab was the scene of Alexander the Great's Indian Conquests.

In 1849, it was annexed to the British possessions in India.

On the lecturer's resuming his seat, the Chairman made some appropriate remarks.

The Secretary then proposed votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer, which were carried by acclamation.

The Meeting dispersed at 7 p.m.

R. N. Dutt, Esq., ...	11-2-80

On the 26th April, 1880, the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, asked for certain Statistics regarding the Society, which were duly supplied.*

From these, you will find, Gentlemen, that our Society was not idle, or indifferent to its chief object, —the diffusion of Knowledge, by means of lectures, and by Social Re-union between Europeans and Indians, and to bridge over the Gulf that has been widened lately. I must congratulate the Society on the great success it has achieved during the year.

The best thanks of the Society are hereby tendered to those distinguished Noble Ladies,—their Highnesses Maharani Sarnamayi, C.I., of Cassimbazar, and Maharani Sarat Sundari Devi of Puthia, for their Highnesses' Voluntary Contributions made to this Literary Institution. Their Highnesses expressed kind words of encouragement and sympathy with the work and efforts of the Society, in their Highnesses' letters No. 104, dated the 4th March, 1880, and No. 136, dated the 16th December, 1880, respectively. (Cheers).

The grateful thanks of the Society are also due to His Highness the Maharaj-Adhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan, His Highness the Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhangah, His Highness the Maharaj-Kumar Bahadur of Bettiah, and Major J. Herschell, R. E., for their making Liberal Contributions to the Association.

On the 9th July, 1880, the Revd. C. H. A. Dall, M.A., an Honorary Member of the Institution presented his following Works, for which the Society congratulates him :—

The Kingdom of God.

Immortality.

I have much pleasure in acknowledging with thanks the receipt of a copy of the Bengali work Jantra-Khetra Depika from Rajah Sir Sourendra Mahan Tagore Bahadur, Musical Doctor, Kt., C.I.E., who is also an Honorary Member of the Society.

To the Patrons, Honorary Members, Members and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the prosperity of this Literary Society.

The Society also records its appreciation of the kindness of the Editors of the Calcutta Newspapers, who have from time to time found space in their columns to notice the doings of the Institution.

In conclusion, it is my earnest prayer to God, that He may grant us strength, that we will be successful in the object, which we have now in view. (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer read the Accounts for the year, which were duly passed.

The following Elections were then made for the next five years :—

(1) Proposed by Babu Chandi Charan Banerjea, seconded by Babu Loke Nath Ghose, and resolved :—That Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjea, Principal, Government Normal School, be re-elected—President of the Society.

(2) Proposed by Babu Satish Chandra Banerjea, seconded by Babu Sarat Chandra Ghosal, and resolved :—That Babu Naba Gopal Mitra, Editor, National Paper, be re-elected—Vice-President of the Society.

(3) Proposed by Babu Raj Krishna Roy, seconded by Babu Eshan Chandra Banerjea, and carried :—That the Affairs of the Society shall be managed by,

Babu Mahesh Chandra Banerjea,

„ Purna Chandra Mukerjea,

„ Radha Nath Day,

The President or the Vice-President, and the Secretary to the Society.

The proposal was carried by acclamation.

After the Elections were made, the Chairman asked Babu Chandra Kumar Bhattacharyya, B. A., to commence with his lecture on—

The Present Condition of Hindu Women :—

The lecturer spoke on the subject for more than an hour and a half. He said, that the present condition of Hindu-Females was deplorable. As Hindu-Females were being intellectually improved, they felt the ignoble condition in which they lived. Emancipation of the Fair-Sex was not to be thought of at the present day, but the improvement of their Social Status was indispensable.

He dwelt upon various other points of interest. The chief amongst these was that Hindu-Females were ignorant. They were not educated at all. They knew not what their duties and responsibilities as human beings were. This was quite natural. For, there was no School to give them proper Instruction. They were, therefore, subject to prejudices and superstitious fears.

They believed in Ghosts and Demons. When a child was ill, they thought that it was under the influence of a Witch. They feared,—where there was no Fear. They knew not what True Love was. They worked like Dumb Animals. (Cheers.)

They got up in the morning, bathed, and gave their children food and drink. They cooked their food, and fed their relatives. At night, they quietly went to bed, and slept. If they had good morning and evening Meals to eat, they thought they were quite happy. All this was going through the dull Routine of Life. Their lives were not devoted to any useful purpose. They knew not how to promote the Interest of Society. They lived for themselves, and not for others. This was the result of their ignorance. (Cheers.)

Of all the Social Questions, which have been brought forward in this Generation, the question of Female Education is one of the most important. (Applause). It is, indeed, almost impossible to exaggerate its importance. Its effects will be felt in every family, except, perhaps, the present homes in this country.

Now, it is impossible to deny that there are difficulties in the way of Educating the Females. Men of Conservative minds, who are wedded to old ideas and old prejudices, are always averse to change, and we ought to pardon them, if they view with apprehension so great an innovation as the Education of their beloved wives and daughters.

They see, and they cannot help seeing, that if you educate the Females of this country, you cannot expect, when the Light of Knowledge has dawned upon them, that they will continue to be satisfied with those pursuits, which, at present, constitute the occupation and pleasure of their lives.

Therefore, I think, that this is a subject, which may well occupy your attention; and if you are able to suggest any means by which the difficulties in the way of Female Education can be removed, you will render an inestimable service to your country. (Applause.)

We should do our best to Educate our Females, and impart to them Knowledge and Wisdom. They were much in want of Proper Instruction, to make them beautiful wives, kind sisters, and good mothers. No Society can improve, where Females are ignorant, and grobbling in darkness and superstition.

It is true, that the Government and Philanthropic Gentlemen are opening Schools for their Instruction. But, until all classes send them there, they can hardly be expected to profit by the acquisition of Knowledge. If we wish to make any advance towards Civilization, we should first educate and civilize our Females. Civilized Female-Society is needed much to improve the Society of Men. But, until Women acquire Knowledge and Wisdom, we cannot hope for any Real Improvement and Progress.

It will, I believe, be acknowledged by all men, who know anything about the state of Female-Education in India, to be one of the most important, and, at the same time, one of the most difficult Problems of the Day. Women ought to be educated certainly by Female Teachers. For, in the first place, it is an acknowledged fact, that Women ought to be educated and trained up as Women,—and not as Men.

In order that Women might be educated and trained up as Women and their Feminine Nature fully developed, they should be educated by Female Teachers. (Hear, Hear).

May I venture to add,—that this Society will regard the promotion of Native-Female-Education, as one of its Primary Objects. (Applause).

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this Mr. P. C. Sen, and two other gentlemen offered a few remarks, in favour of the lecturer.

The Chairman then said,—Gentlemen, I have a peculiar pleasure in presiding the Seventh Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. I have watched its progress and advancement from a very small and humble beginning to the position which it at present occupies. I am sure, those who are present will cordially join with me in congratulating my friend, Babu Sham Lal Day, the indefatigable Secretary and Founder of this Society, on the success which has attended his efforts. I think, he had hardly expected when he started it, that in the course of a few years, it would have attained to its present position, or, that it would command for its Anniversary so large and influential gathering,—as is now present. I shall not detain you any more, but, Gentlemen, I shall ask from you all, not only sympathy, but also your active co-operation in promoting the welfare of this useful Literary Institution. Now, I hope for the continuous progress and improvement of the Society. (Cheers).

The assembly broke up at 7 p. m., with votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, and the Statesman of the 13th December, 1881).

A Public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 84, Upper Chitpar Road, Jorasanko, on Wednesday, the 21st December, 1881, at 4.30 p. m., Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, Principal of the School, took the chair.

The hall was filled up to its utmost capacity, and many distinguished Gentlemen, like Colonel, H. Mattson, Consul General of the United States of America, Dr. George W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law, &c. honoured the Meeting with their presence.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarkacharanamany, (of Benares), to begin with his lecture on,

The Conditions of Literary Growth in India :

The learned speaker spoke on the subject for nearly an hour and a half. He delivered his speech in three different languages, viz :—Sanskrit, Bengali, and English, for the convenience of the different classes of audience, viz. —Hindus, Europeans, and others.

He said, that though no one, in the present enlightened age, denies, or even doubts, that Literary Pursuits are in themselves advantageous, there are many well-informed and truly philanthropic persons, who both entertain, and express their opinion that the Cultivation of Literary Taste is unfit for those, who have to gain their subsistence by their own exertions.

He, who rightly profits by the Knowledge acquired in his leisure hours, will have no inclination to injure his Secular Interests, by neglecting his Secular Duties.

The lecturer principally dwelt upon the Conditions of Literary Growth in India, Greece, and Rome, in Ancient times, and contrasted them with the present condition of Literary India.

He said, that Burns,—the Poet, went abegging, and Edgar Alam Pope was picked up in the streets, dead drunk. Otway was choked while gulping down a loaf down his throat, after starving for three days together, and there is an Adage in Sanskrit, which says, Scholarship is Poverty.

He said, that as in Ancient Greece and Rome, so, in India our Literary men were destined to starve, and led a very poor life. They could hardly acquire the means by which to make both ends meet. The reason of this is plain enough. Literature and Literary men had few supporters. No body cared for those, who devoted their time and energy to the study of what was most useful in life,—the Development of Intellectual Faculties, and the Cultivation and Growth of Reason and Understanding.

Where people are generally ignorant, they do not care for learning and learned men. They have no regard for them. Even at the present day, we have no taste for Sanskrit learning. The reason is clear. For, those, who study the Sanskrit, can find no Employment. The study of English only affords Employment to those, who study that language.

It is, for this reason, that our English Schools and Colleges are so numerously attended. Because, they afford instruction in the English language, the study of which enables our Youths to obtain Employment easily, either in Government or Mercantile Offices.

The present age has been called an Age of Literary Luxury, nor let it blush at the appellation. The Love of Letters is attended with the sweetest satisfaction, and the indulgence of it tends to silence the importunity of many other propensities, which, as they are less innocent, can seldom be gratified without consequent misery.

The study of English, further enables them to follow the professions to acquire a Knowledge of Medicine and Law, which are very lucrative. A Knowledge of these brings Money into the pockets of those, who practice as Medical Advisers to the sick, or, who, attends Law Courts, as Pleaders, in cases in which litigants are engaged.

This is the reason why few persons resort to the study of the Sanskrit Language. This is the reason why our Tolls, where Sanskrit is taught, finds very few pupils. The learned languages do not afford sufficient means to persons to live upon. Our Scholars here, as elsewhere, are always poor, and pass their days in Disguise and Poverty. It is not strange, therefore, that Burns, the Poet, should beg from door to door for his daily bread. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished, the Secretary, in a few words, thanked the lecturer for his able speech.

Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law, then rose, amidst loud cheers, in response to a call from the Chairman, and made the following speech:—

“Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—It gives me much pleasure to be able to say a few words on the subject of Literature. It was said, by a great Latin Writer, that Study gives more to man than anything else; and if, I were to say, what my own ideas of Literature are, I might say that it forms the Food of the Mind.

Without the pleasures of Literature, what, indeed, would life be!—a vast and dreary expanse unrelieved by the pleasures, which can only spring from a communion of mind with mind. The Study of Literature ennobles Mankind. It refines the Intellect.

Literary Studies have employed the thoughts of the noblest intellects of all times and all Nations. It has given a zest to life. It has proved the most graceful ornament of youth. It has been our amusement at home, and our solace abroad. And by Literature, I mean, all those lighter studies, such as Poetry, or Works of Narrative, or of fiction, or of romance, or history, or biographies, all studies which do not trench on the Region of Science. I might here point to the Fine Arts, as belonging to the domain of Literature, for they are much akin, twin-sisters, if I might be allowed to say so.

“Like a pretty lady, Literature must be wooed and won.” Time must be given to its attainment and its fascinations, and its pleasures are always charming. All great men, in different ages and in different parts of the world, have taken to Literature as a Favourite Pursuit, have themselves been great in the Literary world. I need not mention Great Poets or Great Authors only, but great Statesmen, Generals, Philosophers, and Orators.

Cicero said, that he could not find materials for his daily speeches on such a variety of Subjects, as he had to deal with, if he had not improved his mind by Literary Pursuits, or that he could learn up with such a strain, if it was not relieved occasionally by Philosophical Inquiries. I might go further and state, that Literature is necessary to the Mind. It is the Food of the Soul, or, rather to put it more logically,—the Cultivation of the Mind, as a Latin Author said, it is a kind of food supplied for the Soul of Man.

We have heard to day of the discussion raised whether the Language of the Anglicists should be used in India, or whether the Oriental Language should be used as medium of thought. We know that Lord Macaulay and Dr. Duff were instrumental in winning the battle, which introduced the English Language into our Indian Schools and Colleges; but, I do know or rather think, that the gain will be for India.

The English Language is now spoken in nearly every part of the world,—in America, on the distant side of the Atlantic, in China, in India, in Australia and the south of Africa. The Poets that have written in English from Chaucer to the Poets of the present day, have enshrined in that Language, the choicest thoughts and the most refined sentiments, and the great writers of fiction in that Language have established so great a fame, that their Memories will be cherished, and their names will be imperishable.

In India, there appears to me, that, there has not been a sufficient impulse given to Literature. One reason for this is that the great mass of the Inhabitants of India are not yet sufficiently acquainted with the English Language, to appreciate Works of Literature. Hence, there are so few books written in this Language. But, it is hoped, a day will come when India will emulate European countries in its love and reward for Literature (Cheers).

The Chairman then spoke highly of the lecture, which he pronounced to be at once interesting and instructive.

The Founder-Secretary to the Society then proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the chair, which was seconded by Babu Jyotish Chandra Mitra, Barrister-at-Law, and carried by acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P. M.

(Vide the Englishman, the Statesman, the Indian Daily News, and the Indian Mirror, 23rd December, 1881, as well as the Indian Mirror of the 15th January, 1882, respectively).

A crowded and enthusiastic Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Oriental-Seminary, 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Saturday, the 31st December, 1881, at 4 P.M. Dr. Sasi Bhushan Mukerjee was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Jagendra Nath Parkachuramany, (of Benares), to deliver his lecture on—

The Affectation of Business :—

The Speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour. He said, that Affectation is apparent hypocrisy. It is assuming a character, qualification, or accomplishment, which every one perceives is not our own. It is acting a part so injudicious that we impose on no body,—but ourselves.

It has its origin in vanity. Affectation hurts the Pride of others, either by endeavouring to impose upon them, or, excel them, and, thereby make them enemies. This disagreeable style of Manners has its origin in the Love of Fame,—the Universal Passion. This Passion is at the bottom nothing but the vanity of appearing something than we really are.

If this be a True Account of Affectation, it is no wonder that it is held in such Universal Contempt. as we naturally love Truth, whatever endeavours to impose upon us must be offensive.

Affectation is a folly, by which we gain nothing, but Contempt. By endeavouring to shine in borrowed robes for a moment, we incur the disgrace of poverty and contempt for our whole life. The abilities we really possess, however mean, if honestly exercised, will be sure to gain us a proper degree of respect.

Affectation tarnishes the most shining qualities of young people, therefore, who are the most liable to be seduced into Affectation, should be most careful to guard against it. Simplicity and Art-less-ness, as they are the most Natural to Youth, are its greatest ornaments. But, if once Affectation takes possession of the character, it will be sure to tarnish it, and render even youth, beauty and every commendable quality, disgusting and contemptible.

Sincerity must be sought all round. An Affected-man might succeed for a certain length of time, but, in the long run, he will come to nought. All hollowness and lack of substance are found out by the penetration of Wisdom. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Mr. Patrick McGuire rose, and made a short speech. After him, Pandit Kali Prasanna Vidya Ratna spoke for sometime, and made a few appropriate remarks.

The Chairman then spoke a few words, congratulating the Society upon the services which were being done by it to the community at large.

The Proceedings concluded at 7 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

† Vide, the Statesman, 11th January, 1882.

The Chairman then (after introducing the lecturer, in a few Eulogistic words), asked Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his lecture on—

Poetry :—

The learned lecturer, who, on rising, was warmly received with cheers throughout the hall, dwelt upon his Subject for more than an hour. He said :—

“Colonel, H. Mattson and Gentlemen,—It is with the greatest pleasure that I now stand up to say a few words on a Subject, which interests us all and which to me, and many others, has been the solace of many weary hours in the east.

This is the Eighth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, which was established in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, by my young friend, Mr. Sham Lal Day, and which is now under the Patronage of a well-known and respectable Gentleman in India, and once a popular Governor of Bengal. I need not allude to his name, as that name is well-known throughout the Bengal Presidency.

I had in the Central Provinces, when I was there in the Commission, often met Sir George Campbell, G.C.S.I., D.C.L., M.P., and although I was not in Calcutta when he was here, still this Society holds him in estimation as being, if not its founder, at least as one of its Chief Patrons.

Gentlemen, the Calcutta Literary Society has now existed Eight years, and one of its good and laudable objects is,—by bringing Natives of all classes, in contact with European Gentlemen of different Services and European Gentlemen un-connected with the Government Services, to try and fuse Nationalities together, and to endeavour to make men forget that they belong to different Nationalities, to different Castes, or to different Sects. In fact, it endeavours to make the Conquered forget the Conquerers, it endeavours to make the Un-covenanted forget the Covenanted. It endeavours to make the Mahamedans forget the difference of their Religious Prejudices, and to regard with an equal eye Brahmanism and Hindus. For, before Poetry and Literature, all sects, all classes and all men are alike equal. Poetry likes its votaries, and its votaries like Poetry. (Applause). I thank you, Gentlemen, for the very kind way in which you have received me this evening. The Enthusiastic Manner, in which I am greeted by this house, so full, that I can scarcely see an empty seat any where, is in itself a stimulant to me to say something in favour of that which we all allow is the highest branch of Literature. (Cheers).

Gentlemen, I am very glad that though this Society is now in its Juvenile State, it might in time, grow up into an Immense Tree, and accomplish its objects. It has already on its list of Illustrious Patrons, Honorary Members, and Members, so many distinguished names. It has on that list Noblemen like Lord Lawrence, the son of the Illustrious Peer, who once governed India; the Maharaj-Adheraj Sahib of Burdwan, and others; and I now hope that you will soon add to your list of distinguished names—the name of the Illustrious Peer, who now rules the destiny of this vast Indian Peninsula.—I mean, His Excellency The Right Hon'ble Lord Ripon, K.G.P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India. (Applause.)

Gentlemen, I must commence like the Ancient Latin Poet in the middle of my subject, and without for one moment going back to the time when David sang the Glorious Hymns, whose refrains have reverberated ever since for more than Three Thousand years, from fane to fane, from temple to temple, from cathedral to cathedral, from church to church, and finding its silent echoes in the stillness of midnight in human hearts, shed a Holy light on hearts tired and weary of this world, in the last hour of Death! I must at once proceed to tell you what Poetry is—

Poetry is that proportional arrangement of different syllables, which produces a pleasing Melody to the ear, so delightful is this Melody, when happily, accomplished, that it was thought to derive its origin from Heaven. Poetry is the Elevator of Fancy,—the calm to the Troubled Spirit, and the Stimulant to the drooping Soul. It may rank with the Fine Arts as allied to them.

Gentlemen, I have much been gratified on this Anniversary of your Society, to give an Address, or, rather I should say, make a Speech on Poetry. As I have not brought any notes, save a slip of paper, with a Poem, just copied from my collection, what I have to say, can scarcely be called an Address, I have been asked this evening to say something about Poetry.

What is Poetry?—It is the appreciation of facts, and the conception of Truths, expressed in the language of Imagery and Melody. Poetry is the language of passion, or, of an enlivened Imagination, reduced to measure or Rhyme. Poetry can boast of high antiquity. Poetry is not versification only, although it uses versification as a means of illustrating its conceptions. It illustrates its conceptions also by means of the Imagination and Fancy, and employs the power of Melody and Song to give variety to its expressions. It modulates and restricts its language by strict metrical rules. It unites the beauty of sound with the beauty of expression. It appeals to the senses, and to the heart. Poetry is allied to Painting. Its origin takes us back to the distant ages of antiquity, and the past. In its love of the beautiful, it is allied to the Fine Arts and to Music.

Poetical Influences, apart from Poetry or the expression of Poetical feelings, have existed from the very commencement of the world. They have affected alike the untutored savage unable to express the simplest sentiment, as the most refined intellect in all times and ages. But it is the power of utterance in metrical language, which constitutes the Divine Art of Poetry. This Art has existed in all ages and in all countries.

To use the language of one of the gifted-sons of Song, the origin of Poetry is so remote, that it may be ascribed to that age which succeeded the creation. And it has ever since been made the medium of affording pleasure to the world. It has been the pleasant medium for the conveyance of thought from the earliest times. It has irradiated, with its sunny gleams of light, hearts dark with sorrow and grief. It has exalted and refined the Intellect by bringing before the mind Images of pleasure and beauty. It has softened the heart by imprinting on it Images of truth. It appeals to the mind by the Morals, which underlie or illustrate its Songs; to the Imagination by the Images of the objects of which it treats, and to the fancy by the sparkling and lighter flights of thought, which it brings to its aid.

Long before our English Poets lived, the Greek Rhapsodists used to recite Homer to excited crowds; the Rishis used to sing in India, passages from the Vedas; the Scandinavians used to recite to each other, their quaint folk lore; the Ancient Bards of Wales and Germany and the Druid Priests of England, sang the praises of Thor and Woden. Indeed, amongst a primitive people or the peasantry of a mountainous district, Song is more appreciated than in the refined and gilded saloons of Princes. Every one has acknowledged the truth of the lines.—“While Music hath its Charms, Song smooths the Savage Breast.”

In this world, there have been many mute inglorious Miltons, who have been able to appreciate Poetical Influences, but who have not had the gift of utterance. Poetry, as Leigh Hunt has said, begins where matter of facts ends. Poetry, although an Art, illustrates other Arts. She is always in close companionship with the Arts, especially with Music, Painting and Sculpture. But, she is rather afraid of Science—of Prosaic Science, with its subtleties of thought, and and strict rules of logical and accurate expression. She is, however, always bordering on the verge of Science, always hovering on the confines of its regions, especially that of Astronomy, where Poetry often sheds its golden light, but she sometimes laughs at the intense blue of her sister's stockings. Evil be to him that Evil thinks. She wonders at the patience, and the pruderies, at her strict rules and her exact expressions, at her long and solemn hours given up to deep study, and at her Scientific terms and nomenclature; she sometimes comes in laughingly to her aid, and, with a word irradiates the subject, on which her pensive sister has been devoting endless hours of patient thought to unravel

Poetry closely allies herself to the Drama, which she has made illustrious, and which, in turn, has illustrated her doings and sayings, and her writings with jest and youthful jollity, with quips and cranks and wanton wiles, and nods and becks wreathed smiles. Indeed, it has been on the buskin'd stage that she has loved to disport herself most. It is there that she is Idolized by the people. It is there before the foot-lights, and with the aid of voluptuous Music and scenic decorations, under all the illusions, fascinations, and witcheries of Artistic Skill, aided by experienced managers, and before large and appreciative audience, that she is interpreted by her paid servants in livery of purple and gold, tinsel and glitter; her actors and actresses, and by her un-paid servants, her amateurs of the Modern Drama.

It was said by Lord Byron, one of the most gifted of England's Bards,—Let time not carve a wrinkle on that fair brow. And time has not yet cast a wrinkle on the fair brow of the muse of Song, which all ages have acknowledged to be the most fascinating of those gifted sisters the muses, whom time has lent to mortals, and who had helped to elevate Man's Nature by refining the intellect and softening the heart, and, who have also aided in sometimes dispersing for a while, enkering and corroding care,—the rust of every day's life. (Cheers.)

Poetry may be divided into the Epic, Lyric, Epigram, Pastoral, Didactic, Descriptive, Satirical, Harmonic, and Burlesque. Of all Poetical Works, that of the Epic is the most dignified, and the most difficult of execution. The Epic Poem creates admiration; Tragedy forces from us tears; Comedy makes us laugh; and Pastorals produce gentle and calm sensations. And thus, it is with the other kinds according to their Nature.

Gentlemen, you have seen that clever picture in the London Charivari, which gave an illustration of the Gentleman, who went into a London West England Restaurant and called for a glass of water, and placing a Lily into the glass, sat gazing admiringly at it for a long hour, much to the disgust of the waiter, who would rather have seen that Gentleman order his dinner. The sketch was intended to be a hit against Aestheticism, which has recently been growing into a morbid sentiment. Now, Aestheticism is not Poetry. I have said Poetry commences, where matter of fact ends, and taking an illustration from the pages of one of the gentlest and most genial of those writers, who have essayed to write of the Songs, the loves and the lives of England's Poets, I might say that this is how Poetry and how Science would describe the same object.

If I were to ask the London waiter, referred to, who belongs to a class very practical, but not Poetical, what was the flower, which that Asthetical Gentleman was gazing on so intently, he would say—It was a Lily; the Gentleman, being a Botanist, also, would say that it belonged to the order of Hexandria Monogynia. If I turned to the Poets,—Spencer would call it—the Lady of the Garden, and here, we begin to have a Poetical sense of its fairness and grace. It is, says Ben Johnson, the plant and flower of light;—and here, we have a Poetical conception of this beautiful flower in all its glory and splendour. And thus, you see that the laughing tripping little Fairie of Song with her usual joyous expressions, with a smile so full of fun and merriment, calling it—the Lily of the Garden and the Plant and Flower of Light, gives us the very expressions, which are best suited to describe this marvellously pretty and elegant flower. She is always saying the right thing in the right place. She is always shedding a Ray of Sun shine on the most matter of fact and prosaic subjects.

I think, it was Wordsworth or Coleridge, who wrote, "An yellow crocus was to him, and it was nothing more." The Poets are Immortal. They have not lived in vain, who have written well in Song. Those, who, have done so, have, by so doing, raised Monuments more lasting than Brazen Statues, and higher than the Egyptian Pyramids, Monuments not destroyed by the wasting rains, nor by the fierce North Winds;—Monuments, which will last through a countless series of years, which will not rust, nor decay under time's effacing hand, nor shall their names, who thus wrote, be obliterated.

In the language of Shakespeare,—"Not Marble, nor the Gilded-Monuments of Princes shall outlive their powerful Rhyme." It is one of the Immortal privileges of genius, that through the wastes of time, its Songs should still be heard, while the Singer has long since passed away, or that he should stretch its hand through ages, and touch our eyelids with tears, or our lips with smiles and laughter. 123222

Although the Great Masters of Song, I have mentioned, have passed away, their written words and their written thoughts are still living. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, if I should refer to these great Poets, these gifted-men of the Past, if any of us should have to refer to them this evening, we should do it reverentially. Posterity is a trustee or depositary of their fame. And, we should be careful lest we, as one of those trustees, should not allow any thing to be said, which would take away from the trust reposed in us, as one of those, who have lived after them.

Talking of these Great Masters of Song, we feel, that we are treading on the thin crust of ashes under which repose the Spirits of the Mighty Dead. (Cheers.)

Sirs, if any of you should ever pass an hour in Poet's Corner under the venerable roof of Westminster Abbey, you would see there, aided with all the skill of the sculptor's chisel, the Marble Statues of the Poets, who have illustrated the glories of old England, from Shakespeare to Lord Macaulay, whom India has known, and who taught us how the Roman Heroes fought and died in the brave days of old.

There, too, would you see the Statues of Dryden, of Campbell, of Sir Walter Scott, but not, I regret, as far as I remember right, of Lord Byron, whose works are his own Lasting Monuments, of Addison, of Tom Moore, and many more whose fame the world will not let willingly die. Homer, in his Grand Epic, Spenser, in his Fairy Queen, Virgil, in his Æneid, Horace, in his Satires, Ovid, in his Art of Love, Shakespeare, in his Immortal Tragedies and Comedies, Milton, in his Paradise Lost and Regained, Byron, in his Childe Harold, Coleridge, in his Ancient Mariner, and other Imaginative Poems, Shelly, in his Dreamy Speculations and Poems, Keats, in his Rue of St. Agnes, and in his Saturn Delhorned, Campbell, in his Pleasures of Hope and of Memory, Dante, in his Inferno, with his Weird Dreams of Hell. Will the world ever forget them and their Songs? (Applause.)

And, here in India, also, we should not forget the names of our Anglo-Indian Poets—Herber, who wrote on Palestine, and felicitously described An Evening Walk in Bengal, and whose celebrated Missionary Hymn is still sung in the Infant Schools—Miss Emma Roberts, who described Oriental Scenes, with vividness and imagination, and who had written much, that is very graceful, about the Tajmahal, and the Glowing Sunsets of our Eastern Skies, and of Genevieve,—Caldar Camp- bell, who told us, How a True Poet is made,—Henry Toxens, the Author of Hartley Hall, who was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple, and, who gave up brilliant chances at the English Bar in England for a career in the East.

Then there were Richardson, known as D. L. R., and Mrs. Carshore, and Henry Meredith Parker, and Major Anderson, and the last, though not the least, Rozario, of this city, whose Poems were lately reviewed by Mr. Edwards in the pages of the Calcutta Quarterly Review.

A clever writer once said, that Poetry is like the Diamond, as it reflects the pure lights only, and have nothing to do with shadowns or darkness. If Poetry is the Diamond, the Poet is the Lapidary; the sparks that fly from the Diamond chisel are the flashes of humour and wit, and the finished gem scintillating and reflecting its borrowed hues of light, is the Poem. Truth, Nature, Fancy, Imagination, and the Feelings, are the Poets' appliances. Poetry, in the hands of the Master Singers, has unveiled the hidden beauties of Nature.

Imagination belongs to the Tragic Muse; most of the Greek plays of Euripides and Sophocles; Shakespeare's Macbeth and Lear; Dante's Inferno; and Milton's Paradise Lost, all belong to the Tragic Muse. They are Imaginative Dramas. Fancy belongs to the Comic Muse. Spencer's Fairie Queene, the Midsommer Night's Dream, the Merry Wives of Windsor, and the Rape of the Lock—all belong to Fancy or to Comedy. There is no greater instance of mirthful fancy, and light sparkling humour than that to be found in Shakespeare's description of Queen Mab's Chariot in Romeo and Juliet.

"Her waggon spokes made of long spinners legs. The cover, of the wings of grass hoppers"; "Her traces of the smallest spider's web." "Her collars of the Moon-shines watery beams." And talking of Romeo and Juliet, is it not a wondrous evidence of the power of genius, that centuries after the hand which wrote those plays has not mouldered into dust? There should be in this City, which was commenced and built long after Shakespeare had died, a Gentleman, who, in the recitals of his plays, has nightly drawn hundreds of all classes, to hang with breathless attention, on every word which had been written, long years ago, by the greatest Dramatic Poet of all Ages.

To the Medical Students, assembled in this hall, this evening, who are used to see Death frequently, and Life afflicted with all forms of maladies, I might say, that there is not a finer instance of Imaginative thought than that which is to be read in one of the Poems of Shelley.—Poems, which were always tinged with a certain dreamy speculativeness and melancholy, in which he tried to illustrate the Life of Man on Earth. That Life, which we all share in doubtfulness and pain, but, Shelley was sensitive and this is how he described Man and Life in one of his Poems. Man is like a dome of many coloured glass, staining the white radiance of Eternity. It is only the great men of thought who are immortal.

In conclusion, Gentlemen, let me thank you for your kindness on this, the Eighth Anniversary Meeting of your Society, for asking me to give an Address or rather a Speech, as I may call it, for, I have not been able to supply myself with any notes or papers. To call that what I have said an Address is scarcely correct. It is only a very short Speech, a few random words on a subject which we all appreciate. (Applause and continued Cheers). I have with me only a small piece of paper, on which I had just time to write and bring away one of Philo Indicus' Rhymes on Poetry. I think, this Society may know that I am Philo Indicus, and also those lines on Queen Mab's Chariot, written by Shakespeare,—lines, which I could not exactly remember:

Gentlemen, I again thank you and Colonel, H. Mattson, Consul-General of the United States of America, who came to India to see India's People, and I also thank you, for asking me to speak on a subject, which influences in all ages, in all countries, in all times,—past and present, and will influence as long as silver thoughts and golden speeches are left to us, and, there I am wrong in that quotation, just as much as the greatest wit of his day, said, that Great wits are allied to Madness. They are not. But, I must conclude and hope that your Society will have many more Anniversaries, and will try, as your Indefatigable Secretary has said, to infuse ideas and to fuse together the different Nationalities which I see gathered round this evening, in this large, and, I might add, this Scientific and Literary Hall. (Applause and continued Cheers).

After the Lecturer had finished his speech, the worthy Chairman proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister at Law, for his very able and interesting speech. The motion was seconded by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society. The Secretary said:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentleman,

We are indeed much indebted to Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law, for his very interesting lecture on Poetry, this evening. I think the most cordial thanks of the Society are justly due to the learned Lecturer, for his distinguished effort in his Speech, for the advancement of the Intellectual Condition of the Indian Youths, as also, for his very able, excellent, and instructive Address. I have, therefore, much pleasure in seconding the worthy Chairman's proposal, which I trust will be carried with acclamation. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered. At this, Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarkachuramani, (of Benares), rose up and said:—

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—It is with great delight that I offer my most cordial thanks to the learned lecturer, Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law, who has just now discussed the subject of Poetry in a way, which is altogether new amongst the Professors of India. Before an audience like this, it is my presumption after his lecture, to glance at a few particulars of Poetry. I ask then, what is the definition, the subjects, the objects, the language and the intention of Poetry?—The definition being, according to the Sanskrit Pandits, Kavyam Rasattakam Balam, and according to the Western Rhetoricians, it is vivid feelings and conceptions clothed in harmonious language, generally in Metre.

The subject of the Poetry being the grand, the terrible, and the beautiful object, it never deals with the mean—its principle is elevation and not depression or degradation. Its object is to magnify and to aggrandize, not to dwarf the great stature of Nature, not to reduce the spirit to the contemplation of mean objects, but it stands above mortal objects. The language of Poetry should not be Technical, Common or Colloquial, unless we are unavoidably required to do so. The intention of Poetry is to instruct and to reprove, to please, and to persuade.

Gentlemen, you know, of course, that there are various kinds of Poetry: viz. —the Pastoral, the Lyric, the Didactic, the Descriptive, the Epic, the Sonnets, and the Ballads, &c.

The origin and progress of Poetry, we must see on, when the organs and faculties of the Primitive men have developed to themselves, that it was their natural tendency to employ them in a more refined and regulated manner of speech. The Hebrews cultivated several Songs, as recorded in the Books of Moses and Judges. The Iliad and the Odyssey of Homer were composed at an early period of Grecian Literature.

Pindar, Anacreon, Aristophanes, Euripides, and Sophocles stood as Stars in the Grecian Poetical Sky. Likewise, Horace, Virgil, Tibullus, Lucan and Persius adorned Rome, introducing the Goddess of Moses into the Holy City of Romulas. Poets are generally poor. They care not the Luxuries of the world. They create new worlds, they charm the lions, and the tigers of the wilderness. They are generally seen ragged and deserted, as Sir Walter Scott says :—

"He begged his bread from door to door,"

"The way was long, the wind was cold,"

"The Minstrel was infirm and old, &c."

The Sons of Poetry, though poor and helpless, still hold their Mother Poetry as all in all,—as Go'dsmith says ;—

"And thou, sweet Poetry, thou loveliest maid, Still first to fly where Sensual Joys invade !"
"Deer charming Nymph, neglected and decried,
My shame in crowds, my solitary pride ;
Thou source of all my bliss, and all my woe,
That found'st me poor at first, and keep'st me so ;
Thou guide, by which the nobler arts excel,
Thou nurse of every virtue, fare thee well—
Farewell! and Oh! where'er thy voice be tried,
On Torno's cliffs, or Pambamarca's side,
Whether where equinoctial fervours glow,
Or, winter wraps the polar world in snow,
Still, let thy voice, prevailing over time,
Redress the rigours of the inclement clime ;
And slighted truth with thy persuasive strain,
Tench erring man to spurn the rage of gain "

Enter then, like the Saints, into the Paradise of Poetry created by those gods (Poets). There you shall see virtue, beauty, kindness and affection, all these goddesses invisible in this world, roving into the groves of Valmiki, Vyasa, Homer and Kalidas, &c. There you shall see a Miracle of miracles that Misery, Despair, and Ambition, who are considered as monsters of this world, they are kissing the hands of beauty, kindness, love, &c., producing joy in the hearts of those ragged, who got admission there. Enter then, taking nothing with you of this sinful world and see that those gods have created a world, where always peace resides.

On the Pandits' resuming his seat, Babu Brajendra Nath Gupta, and two other Gentlemen spoke a few words on the Subject, and expressed their high approbations of the very able and eloquent lecture, delivered by Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law.

The Chairman, who, on rising, was received with loud applause, then made the following speech :—

Gentlemen :—As Chairman of this Meeting, it is, perhaps, expected that I should say a few words.—In the first place, I thank the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society for having honoured me with the invitation to preside at their Anniversary Meeting.

I am quite a Stranger in this Strange Land. My home is on the other side of the Earth,—at the Antipode of Hindustan, and I come here with a great desire to see and learn,—not to teach, (Cheers). And, yet, I have made some observations, and being a plain, matter-of-fact man, I always speak what I mean, if I think it right to do so, even, if it does not agree with the views of those, who listen.

My learned friend, Dr. G. W. Cline, has spoken to you very ably on Poetry, and I have nothing to say against that beautiful Subject, nor certainly against the manner, in which he has treated it.—But, Dr. Cline and myself, I fear, are as great contrasts as could well be found. He belongs to the School of Poets, I am as far from it as he is near it, and it was a strange coincidence that brought us both on this platform. (Cheers).

The young man, opposite in the audience, (Babu Brajendra Nath Gupta), I think, has stated the subject of Poetry most eloquently, when he defined it as The Medicine of the Soul, and also told a good truth, when he said, that every Indian is born a Poet and a Philosopher. To this, I fully agree. But, Gentlemen, the people of India, it seems to me, need Medicine for their Bodies, as well as for their Souls, and they have had too much of the latter, and not near enough of the former.

There is too much Poetry in India, and too many Poets by far. You need men of a practical turn of mind,—men who will solve the great question of providing good homes for the people, good food, good clothing, and all the comforts, which other civilized Nations enjoy—Men who will turn your mighty Rivers into useful and healthy channels for Irrigation, Fertilization, and Sanitary purposes, who will build Canals, Rail-roads, and High-ways for transporting your produce, and erect Factories and Machinery for giving employment to your willing labourers.

I noticed a Motto, over one of the Letter-heads of your Society,—The Pen is Mightier than the Sword. That is a True Motto, and one we think a good deal of over in America, for, just as sure, as Mind is higher than Matter, so surely will the Practical Education of the Youths of India prove of far greater strength and power than Guns and Armaments,—than Wealth and Titles, yea, stronger even than Ancient custom and prejudices.

Young men! Educate yourself, not in dreamy Philosophy, but in the Practical School of Life, Remember, that while we have much to learn from your people, you have also much to learn from us, (Cheers); and when the best, which the Eastern Civilization possesses, is joined to the best of that, which belongs to the West,—and both go hand in hand, labouring for the amelioration of the suffering poor, the sick and the ignorant, and for progress, brotherhood and liberty—than, like that famous building in Agra, will there be produced the highest and the best Monument of Civilization that the world has ever known?—Every means that can be used to bring the two people together with a view of achieving some common advancement in the course of the true, and the good, and the beautiful, is a step towards that direction, and should be encouraged by all good men.

Again, I thank you, Gentlemen, for the honor of having allowed me to preside at the Eighth Anniversary Meeting of Your Society. Now I wish the Institution every success. (Cheers)

After the Chairman had resumed his seat, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, said :—

Gentlemen,—I rejoice at the success of this Meeting. The audience are extremely gratified with Dr. G. W. Cline's edifying speech. The Subject was well-chosen. Indeed, the learned Lecturer takes a deep interest in the Progress of Education in our country.

And now, Gentlemen, I must ask you to join with me in a proposal which, I feel sure, you will hail with pleasure, and that is to accord a hearty vote of thanks to the worthy Chairman for the very kind manner in which he has conducted the proceedings of this Meeting. This is not merely as a matter of form, but in a true spirit of gratefulness to Colonel H. Mattson, the Illustrious Consul-General of the United States of America. For, he has not only done us the great honor of presiding at this Eighth Anniversary Meeting of our Society, but, he has also rendered us a signal service by becoming one of its distinguished Honorary Members. Pressed as he is with Official duties, Colonel, H. Mattson has responded to our call to preside at our Eighth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, this afternoon, grudging neither time nor labour; and, we, therefore, feel much indebted to him.

With an earnest hope for our future success, I beg now to resume my seat. (Cheers).

The Motion was seconded by Babu Charu Chandra Mitra, and was received with acclamation.

The Chairman said :—I beg to thank you most heartily for the vote of thanks, which you have so kindly passed. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, and the Statesman, 30th January, the Indian Mirror, 1st February, and the Statesman, 9th February, 1882, respectively.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Theatre of the Hindu-school, College Square, on Friday, the 24th March, 1882, at 4-30 P.M. The Venerable Acharyya Pandit Bacharam Chatterjea, Minister of the Adi Brahma Samaj, was in the chair. Over one thousand Gentlemen were present, and the large hall was crowded almost to suffocation.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Adwita Charan Bose, Editor, Charu Varta, to deliver his lecture on :—

LOYALTY :—

The learned speaker dwelt upon his subject for more than an hour. He principally dwelt upon the Loyalty of the Indian People, and said that Loyalty was indigenous to the Soil. Every Indian was innately Loyal to his Sovereign. Disloyalty was unknown to the Bengali. The Bengali is taunted as the mild Hindu. He dislikes all that is out-rageous and revolting. He does not like to Revolutionize Society. He is a Conservative to the back-bone.

If we turn to the accounts given by the Mohamedan Conquerors of India, we find Idrisi, in his Geography, (written in the Eleventh Century), summing up their opinion of the Indians in the following words :—

"The Indians are naturally inclined to Justice, and never depart from it in their actions. Their good faith, honesty and fidelity to their engagements are well-known and they are so famous for these qualities, that people flock to their country from every side." (Cheers).

In the Sixteenth Century, Abdul Fazl, (the Prime-Minister of the Great Mogul Emperor Akbar), wrote the following lines about the Hindus, in his Ayin Akbari :—

"The Hindus are religious, affable, cheerful, lovers of justice, given to retirement, able in business, admirers of truth, grateful, and of unbounded Fidelity. Their soldiers know not what it is to fly from the Field of Battle." (Cheers).

Warren Hastings, thus speaks of the Hindus :—

"They are gentle and benevolent, more susceptible of gratitude for kindness shown them, and less prompted to vengeance for wrongs inflicted, than any people on the face of the earth : faithful, affectionate, submissive to legal authority." (Applause).

The Right Revd. Bishop Heber said :—

"The Hindus are brave, courteous, intelligent, most eager for knowledge and improvement ; sober, industrious, dutiful to parents, affectionate to their children, uniformly gentle and patient, and more easily affected by kindness and attention to their wants and feelings than any people I ever met with." (Cheers).

Elphinstone states :—

"The Hindus are mild and gentle people, more merciful to prisoners than any other Asiatics."

The villagers are everywhere amiable, affectionate to their families, kind to their neighbours, and towards all."

"Their superiority in purity of manners is not flattering to our self-esteem." (Cheers).

Sir Thomas Munro bears stronger testimony. He writes :—

"The Hindus are not inferior to the Nations of Europe, and if Civilisation is to become an article of trade between England and India, I am convinced that England will gain by the import cargo" (Applause).

Mount Stuart Elphinstone, C. S., Author of the History of India, says :—

"Englishmen, in India, have less opportunity than might be expected of forming opinions of the Native Character. Even in England, few know much of the people beyond their own class, and what they do know, they learn from Newspapers and Publications of a description, which does not exist in India." (Cheers).

A person, by being, Loyal, gains every thing. He loses nothing. He knows that he is not suspected. He has few enemies. He feels that his life and property are secured. He is liked and loved by those, who come in contact with him. He grows in peace, prosperity and happiness. Disloyalty is hateful. A Disloyal person can have no rest. It is not proper to suppose that the Bengalis are Disloyal. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman asked the audience to cement upon the lecture delivered. At this, Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarkachuramany, (of Benares), Mr. B. M. Gupta, Mr. N. C. Mitra and Mr. M. N. Rai spoke a few words on the Subject.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting for sometime, and thanked the lecturer for his able speech.

The Founder and Secretary to the Society having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting terminated at 7 P. M. (Vide, the Indian Daily News, 27th, the Statesman, 28th, and the Indian Mirror, 29th March, 1882).

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Theatre of the Hindu-School, College Square, on Friday, the 12th May, 1882, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of the Venerable Acharyya Pandit Bacharam Chatterjea, Minister of the Adi Brahma Samaj. The Meeting was densely crowded.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Pandit Kedar Nath Vidya Randa, (Physician to His Highness the Maharajah Bahadur of Benares, G. C. S. I., C. I. E.), to deliver his lecture on :—

Yoga System :—

The learned speaker spoke on his subject for more than two hours. He principally dwelt upon the culture of Yoga Vidyā in ancient India; its self-control and self-conscience; the development of Physical Power; recognizing God in Nature; the necessity of Kumbhak and the effect of it; exercise of attention and memory; practice of Yoga, which men were observing in every day's life; ignorance of one's inherent power; necessity of food and drink for practicing Yoga; the close relationship between body and mind; the power of external world over the internal one; close attention, and the following chief divisions of the Yoga; viz :—

(1) Dhyan Yoga, (2) Karma Yoga, (3) Hath Yoga, and (4) Raj Yoga.

Acquirement of Yoga by meditation and by observing Rites and Ceremonies; Self-reliance; Truthfulness; Mastery over Passions, and other various phases of Yoga Vidyā. (Cheers).

The lecture was heard with rapt attention by the audience, and the learned speaker was cheered many times.

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting for sometime, and expressed his high approbation of the lecture delivered. He pronounced it to be interesting and instructive. He also said, that the Yoga and its Merits result from powers, which were super-sensuous, and cannot be attained by ordinary means.

After the Chairman had taken his seat, Mr. Purna Chandra Mukerjea, Attorney-at-Law, offered, on behalf of the Society, a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried with acclamation.

The Meeting dispersed at 7-30 P. M. (Vide, the Statesman, and the Indian Daily News of the 15th, and the Indian Mirror of the 16th May, 1882.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal School, No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko, on Monday, the 9th October, 1882, at 5 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Benerjea, Principal, Government Normal School. The Meeting was largely attended.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Kali Prasanna Vidyaratna to deliver his lecture on :—

Who are the True Followers of the Late Rajah Ram Mohun Roy :—

The learned speaker spoke on his Subject for nearly two hours. He delivered a very interesting speech, which was heard by the audience with deep attention.

He said, that the True Followers of the Late Rajah Ram Mohun Roy were none else than those, who followed him in spirit and in truth. He, who gave up his existence for humanity, and yielded the last breath for the sake of man, must be held as the highest and the noblest of mankind. Of him, it could be said that he wore a crown of thorns with bleeding brows.

After the lecturer had concluded his speech, Dr. Sasi Bhushan Mukerjea proposed a vote of thanks to the learned speaker, which was seconded by Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarkachuramany of Benares.

The Chairman then asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered. At this, Mr. H. M. Chatterjea, Mr. N. L. Mitra, and a few other Gentlemen offered a few remarks on the subject.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting for nearly three quarters of an hour.

The Meeting broke up after 8 P. M., with a vote of thanks accorded to the chair. (Vide, the Indian Daily News, 9th, and the Statesman, 11th October, 1882).

Gentlemen, from these, you will find that our Society is pursuing a steady career of usefulness.

Gentlemen, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby tendered to His Highness the Nawab Sahib of Bahawalpur, G. C. S. I., and His Highness Tackoji Rao Holkar, G. C. S. I., C. I. E., Maharajah Sahib of Indore, for their making Liberal Contributions to the Society, on the 25th July and 25th November, 1882 respectively.

The cordial thanks of the Society are also given to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, for His Excellency's presenting a copy of His Excellency's Photograph on the 12th December, 1882.

On the 4th August, 1882, the Hon'ble Sir Charles Umpherston Aitchison, LL.D., D.C.L., K.C.S.I., C.I.E., Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjab, Member of the Governor-Generals Council, and an Illustrious Honorary Member of the Society, presented his valuable work Aitchison's Treaties, in seven volumes, 8vo., to the Society, for which the Society offers its best thanks, to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjab.

Gentlemen, it has always been my pleasing duty to acknowledge with cordial thanks the cheerful help and active sympathy, which I have received from the Illustrious Patrons and Members of the Society, and I re-iterate with particular emphasis the special obligation, which I owe to them.

To the Press, I am deeply indebted for the notice they take of our Meetings.

With our humble prayer to Him, who rules the affairs of men, that our Society may have a long career of usefulness and success. (Cheers.)

After Babu Shram Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer read the Accounts for the year, which were duly passed.

The Chairman then called upon Babu Barku Echari Bose to deliver his lecture on,—

The speaker dwelt upon his subject for more than an hour. He said, that Friendship, like Alexander the Great and Hefestian, could possibly endure for good. But a Friendship created upon the material purpose, did not last. And a Friend, who left a Friend in the background and went away, was no Friend, and must be renounced and given up.

He continued, that a Friend-in-Need, is a Friend-Indeed. This is a saying, the truth of which can seldom be denied. What is the good of a Friend, if he does not stand by your side at the time of your difficulty? True Friendship consists in love. A person must love you before he can be called your Friend. Where there is no love, there can be no Friendship. The bond of love is like a chain, which binds one individual with another. When a Friend is in distress, the person he loves must come forward, and help him.

A good man cannot allow his Friend to suffer without feeling for him, and trying to rescue him. A True Friend shares his fortune with the person he loves. If he finds him suffering from wants, he helps him with money. He places his Treasure at his disposal. If he is in want of a house, he provides him with one. If he is in want of clothes, he provides them. If he is in want of food, he shares his meal with him. He, who cannot make these sacrifices for an associate, can never be called your True Friend.

Friendship, like pure gold, cannot admit of mixture. You cannot say that, that person is your Friend, unless you love him with all your heart and with all your soul. True Friendship is a jewel above all price. The value of Friendship,—a True Friend only knows and appreciates. That is the reason why True Friendship is so rare in this world! Any thing that is good is rare. Any thing that is bad, can be had in plenty. You cannot cultivate Friendship with many persons, just as a Faithful wife cannot share her love with many persons. Equally, a Faithful husband cannot exchange his love with many Females.

Infidelity is not Friendship. Fidelity is essential to the formation of True Friendship. You can seldom call a person to be your Friend, unless you have absolute Faith and Trust in him (Cheers).

The Calcutta School :—

After the Lecturer had concluded his speech, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, said :—

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that a High Class English School has been founded in the town, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, since the 1st March, 1883, at the premises No. 50, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sova Bazar, under the designation of the Calcutta School, chiefly for the benefit of the Mofussil students on a low scale of fees, and with a Free Boarding Establishment for indigent boys. It has been managed efficiently with the help of experienced teachers, and it will soon be Affiliated to the Calcutta University up to the Entrance Standard. (Applause).

It consists of nine classes, viz :—Three in the upper, and Six in the lower, together with an Elementary or Infant class in the Vernacular Department.

Course Of Studies.

The studies of the First or Entrance-class embrace the usual subjects for the Entrance-Examination, as adopted by the Syndicate of the Calcutta University.

The studies of the other classes range according to the capacities of the pupils, and in a manner conforming in a greater degree with the method pursued by the Higher, Middle and Lower Classes of the Government Schools of this city, for the sake of preserving a perfect uniformity with them. The last or Elementary class is sub-divided into several sections, learning the rudiments of the English and the Vernacular Languages. (Cheers)

The teachers have devoted great attention to their respective duties, and displayed a lively-interest in the discharge of their several functions of discipline.

Gentlemen, now I have much pleasure in announcing to you, that His Highness the Hon'ble Sir Lakshmeswar Singh, G.C.I.E., Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhangah, and Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, His Highness the Hon'ble, Sir Ahsunnollah Khan, K. C. I. E., Nawab Sahib of Dacca, and Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, His Highness Rameswar Singh, Rajah Sahib of Rajnagar-Durbhangah, the Rajah Sahib of Talchar, and the Rajah Sahib of Khaira, who are Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, have very kindly made contributions to the Calcutta School, on the 20th September, 7th November and the 25th December, 1882, and 19th & 21st January 1883, respectively, for which I beg hereby to offer to each of them my best thanks. (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day had resumed his seat, the Chairman addressed the Meeting for sometime. He congratulated the Secretary to the Society for his labour and zeal, and closed the business of the evening by conveying the best thanks of the Meeting to the learned lecturer for his interesting treatment of the subject.

The Chairman, after referring to some of its merits and the zeal of the lecturer, expressed his satisfaction at the continuous progress and improvement of the Society, and wished the Society and the School, every success.

The Proceedings terminated after 7 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, on Saturday, the 16th June, 1883, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Kali Prasanna Roy, B. A. The hall was densely crowded.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Chandi Charn Singh to commence with his lecture on.—

Man's Duty towards himself :—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour. He said, that every man owes a duty to himself, and in the regular discharge of that duty lies True Greatness. A person, who thoroughly understands his duties and responsibilities, can cut a figure in the world. Whoever neglects them, cannot rise in the estimation of the world. However scanty our means may be, those means go on increasing, if we know how to discharge our duties to ourselves.

A man should be truthful and honest. These are important duties, which can enable us to gain the confidence of others. Unless they begin to repose their trust on us, we can seldom expect to improve our condition. Prosperity cannot be reached, unless a person is dutiful. A person must bend under the weight of misery and want, unless he can acquire sufficient means to enable him to live upon. We should be on our guard that we do not allow ourselves to be deceived by those around us.

The conscientious discharge of one's duty is not an easy matter. We should, therefore, endeavour to surmount the difficulties, which stand in our way, to become dutiful. Then we shall lead an easy life, be happy, and above want. (Cheers)

Our wives and children are dependent upon us for support. We should have the means to maintain them, without their being a burden to us. A person, who understands his duties, does not meet with difficulty in his passage through this world. It is, for this reason, that the wise insists upon their fellow-brethren to be dutiful. A person should know his duty, which he has to discharge to himself, before he can become a dutiful son, a dutiful husband, and a dutiful father.

Man's duty is to love himself and seek his perfection. We are taught by Nature that Charity begins at home. Indeed, after God, there is no one nearer to us than ourselves. We should, therefore, Love ourselves first of all,—then others.

Now, this Love of one's self consists in preserving one's life, and in performing one's duties. With regard to the first, it is necessary, that man should eat and drink moderately, in order to preserve his life. And, as eatables are not acquired without labour, hence, every one's duty is to work.

Again, it is essential that one should take Medicine when sick and infirm, in order to get cured and to regain health. As the means of preserving life,—is food, the indigent, in cases of extreme necessity, may fairly take the property of another, only with a view to maintain life. And in that case, the Proprietor cannot reasonably be irate for to preserve one's life is imperative.

Man is made after the Image of God. Hence, it is the duty of every individual, first of all, to possess a Knowledge of God, who is the beginning and end of every thing, and who, through His infinite bounty, has created us; and for us every visible thing.

Therefore, the imperative duty of every one is, to know the real Giver of all things—namely, who is the Author?—What has He done?—What are we?—What is the end and destiny of man? and, accordingly, to regulate his actions.

The next thing that is imperative for every one to know, is his own peculiar duty, for which he is called, or, to which he applies himself. In short, every one, according to his own profession, ought to know the Science and Arts of his peculiar calling.

I mean, that every one, according to his rank, condition, and position in life, ought to perfect himself, and learn what is necessary for him. For example, it would not suit a peasant and manual labourer to learn Mathematics or Metaphysics; nor a Country-woman to learn Drawing and Painting, or to play on the Piano. But she must learn that which is suited to her condition in life. Mental works, on the contrary, would render quite contemptible to the daughter, or the wife of a Nobleman. Learn,—what God has wished you to be, and the duties, which your condition-in-life imposes on you.

Every one ought to work, learn, and perfect himself, according to the position and office, one holds in Society. The duty of every one is to perfect his Will by embracing what is good, and by avoiding what is evil. The reason is that the Will is either the root of good fruit, if properly cultivated, or of bad fruits, if neglected. For, the Will, being an active faculty, will not remain idle.

From the heart, come forth Evil-thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornications, Thefts, False testimonies, and Blasphemies. So then, a Heart or Will is the fountain of good or bad actions. Hence, it is incumbent on us to improve it with the exercise of Morality, and to cultivate it by sowing the seeds of Virtue, and by keeping a guard over its desires.

Love, therefore, of what is really good, and hatred of what is really evil, if properly guided and directed, will make a person good, virtuous and happy. (Cheers).

To make home happy, we require to do acts of kindness towards each other. Love must be returned for love. Peace must dwell in the bosom.

Strife angry words, contention must be put aside. It is better to return good for evil—than evil for evil.

We should be kind and civil to our neighbours and strangers, as well as to parents, brothers, and sisters. Above all, we should have compassion on the poor and needy.

If God has given us wealth, let us help those, who need our assistance. We must, however, give with gentleness and without pride. Kind looks and kind words are more prized than Money. (Applause).

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting terminated at 6 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, on Wednesday, the 24th October, 1883, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Naraiyan Chandra Bhattacharyya, B.A. The hall was densely crowded.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Sasi Bhushan Bose to deliver his lecture on,—

The duty of Man towards his Neighbour :—

The lecturer spoke on his subject for more than an hour. He said, that we owe a duty to our neighbour as to ourselves. We should look upon his family and children as our own. When a neighbour is in distress, we should relieve him. When he suffers from disease, we should come to his help. When he is pinched with wants we should supply them. This is true neighbourly love. A person, whose feelings have not been blunted, always not only looks after the interests of his neighbours, but, also, those of the public. A generous heart sobs at the sufferings of other people. He is not satisfied until he relieves them.

When a country suffers from Famine, the generous-minded-public come to its rescue. They open subscriptions. They create funds, form Committees, the Members of which work very hard, with a view to afford Relief to those, who may be found famishing from want of food.

If the people of our country can do so much for the purpose of relieving the distress of their fellow-creatures in distant lands, how much more it is necessary then that we should afford relief to our neighbours, who are not alien to us in color, creed or race. This is the dictate of Reason and Conscience, and we should obey their command. If we fail to do so, we will become the subjects of derision, hatred and laughter. Our neighbours bear the same relation to us, as our brothers.

The Females of the locality, in which we live, are our sisters. Why then should we not have some respect for the men and women of the neighbourhood, as for our own brothers and sisters?—Why then should we not have the same regard for their feelings and wants, as for our own brothers and sisters?—Until we can learn to love both the two former, as we love the two latter, we cannot lay justly any claim to being rational creatures.

The beasts of the field, we see, come to the rescue of other dumb animals, when they find them to be lame or blind, they bring food, and give them to eat. They have no rest, until their apetite is fully satisfied. This is what they do when they find them to be hungry. When they see that they are thirsty, they bring them water for drink, and are not satisfied, until they find their thirst is quenched. This is the way in which the dumb animals show their feelings for their neighbouring fellow-creatures. We ought to imitate them, and follow their example, and cultivate neighbourly feeling and love.

The ground of our duties towards our neighbours is based on the equality of nature and origin. Hence, it is said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

Whatsoever you wish that other men should do to you, you do likewise to them. Now, you would like other men to love and respect you, that when you are in need, they might help you. Again, you would, by no means, like others, to injure you either in your person, reputation or property; therefore, it is your duty, also, on one hand, to love and respect others, and to help them, when they are in distress and want; and, on the other hand, not to harm any one either in person, property or reputation.

More-over, you would wish that others should speak to you the truth only; so, you should, likewise, speak but truth to your neighbour. You would not like that others should steal your property and defraud you in any way; well, do you the same,—do not rob nor defraud your neighbour. You would not like any one to beat or mutilate or kill you, well, you, too, do not beat mutilate or kill your fellow-creatures. You would not like that any one should take away the honor of your wife or daughter, well, neither do you act in like manner.

As, therefore, murder, adultery, and fornication, stealth, and robbery, bearing false witness, and similar crimes are opposed to the love of our neighbour, therefore, in the Ten Commandments of God it is said :—

Thou shalt not kill, nor commit Adultery, nor steal, nor bear false witness against thy neighbour. He, that loveth his neighbour, hath fulfilled the Law. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. The love of our neighbour worketh no evil. Love, therefore, is the fulfilling of the Law.

You should not wish for the wife of another man, nor the good of your neighbour. Pluck out the very root of sin from your heart, and the fruit of bad actions will thus be eradicated.

It is our duty to love our parents sincerely, to revere and obey them. To love them means, not only to have an affectionate feelings towards them, and wish them good, but to support them when they are in need in old age, or in distress. To revere means, to honour and respect them in our words, and in all our outward behaviour. To obey them means, to show our subjection to them in all that is agreeable to the Law of God, and the right dictates of Reason.

The duty of parents is to take care of their children, to rear them up properly, and teach them Sound Doctrines of Religion and Piety. And afterwards to give them proper education, according to their rank and condition and means, in order that their children might become useful to themselves, and to Society.

It is also the duty of parents to set a good example of Religion and Piety to their children, and to correct them when they deviate from the paths of Religion and good Morals.

After our parents, we have to owe and obey our superiors, spiritual as well as temporal. We have to obey our spiritual superiors, as they have charge of all that regards our advancement in Religion and Sound Morals.

The duty of Kings and Princes is to look after the well-being of those, who are under them, in order to secure the comforts and prosperity of their subjects. The reason is that they have been appointed by God, not for their own benefit, but for the benefit of others. They are for the edification or preservation, and not for the destruction of Society. Hence, they should not become tyrants and oppressors of the people, but, should be like fathers to their subjects, and should try to improve their prosperity by all the means in their power.

We have to love and obey our teachers, as they impart to us Knowledge. It is but fair that we should obey them in all that is not against God's Law or common sense.

In return, the masters and teachers are bound in duty to impart to their pupils sound doctrines and wholesome Knowledge, and sow in their minds seeds of Virtue and Piety, and to take care the pains towards the improvement of their pupils.

The duty of every laborer and servant is that he should toil consciously on the work for which he is employed and paid. It is his duty to work diligently, during the hours so engaged, and not, in any way, to trifle away the time, or the duty for which he is engaged.

The duty of employers and masters is to love their servants and workmen, and not to give more work than they can do, not to oppress and ill-treat them, not to retrench their hire or wages, unless, it is certain, they have purposely spoilt the work, or through gross negligence have not done as much as they were bound to do.

It is the duty of masters, therefore, to overlook sometimes the short-comings of their employees, especially, when they occur through accident, or mistake. They should bear in mind that their servants are also men like themselves.

If masters do not show mercy and kindness to their fellow-creatures, they can hardly expect mercy and kindness from God for their faults, frailties and short-comings.

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer. The Meeting separated at 6-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

Address by the Head Master :—

After the Secretary had resumed his seat, amidst cheers, the Chairman asked Babu Prem Chand Chowdhery, Head Master of the Calcutta School, to read his First Annual Report of the School :—

The Head Master said :—Your Highness and Gentlemen,—

This School has been founded by Babu Sham Lall Day, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, on Thursday, the 1st of March, 1883.

It, being an Institution not yet as quite a year old, has, as a matter of course, very little to tell in detail of any very great progress made by it, in so short a time, or to recount its achievements beyond the ordinary curriculum of business. It has, therefore, nothing more to present before the public for gratification of their curiosity, than a bare account of the causes which led to its Foundation, and a simple statement of the works done towards its advancement, during the course of this year.

The executive control of the School is vested in the Head Master. He is responsible for Discipline, &c. the progress of the pupils in their studies, and for their general good conduct.

Free-Students and Free-Boarding :—

A limited number of Free-students, who are really helpless, has been permitted to attend the School, without paying any Schooling fee, upon their producing satisfactory testimonies of good character.

The establishment of a Free-Boarding, in connection with the School, originally proposed by Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder-Secretary to the School, was adopted for providing limited number of its poor students, who are destitute of any help.

Scholarships :—

There are several Scholarships awarded to the successful students of the different classes in this School, under the designation of those of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and Major the Hon'ble Sir Evelyn Baring, R.A., K.C.S.I., C.I.E., (late Finance Minister of India, and Member of the Governor-General's Council, as well as an Honorary Member of the Calcutta Literary Society, in commemoration of the auspicious visit of the former to this city, in December, 1882, and the memorable services to the latter to the people of this country.

Besides these Scholarships, two ornamental Medals are also awarded to the most successful candidates at the Entrance-Examination of the Calcutta University. The one given by His Highness the Jaghirdar Sahib of Arni, and the other by His Highness the Rajah Sahib of Talchar.

In addition to these Medals and Scholarships, Prizes for General Proficiency, are also awarded to the meritorious students of the classes upon the results of their Annual Examination.

On the 28th June, 1883, the School was visited by Mr. A. C. Clarke, C. B., Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle, who expressed his warm sympathy with it, and recorded his opinion, as follows :—

Calcutta, 28th June, 1883,

Visited this day the Calcutta School, at No. 50, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, at the request of the Secretary, who wished the School certified to compete at the University Entrance-Examination.

The School is a private one, established in March last, and has 112 boys on the rolls, of whom I found 60 present. The Proprietor of the School has furnished the School fairly with forms tables, maps, &c.; the present hired-house, however, has very narrow cramped rooms.

The First-class consists of 3 boys, of whom only one was present. He migrated here from the 1st class of the Cooch Behar School. He wrote his English Dictation exceedingly well, and is an intelligent boy, but very backward in English History; he may possibly be fit to compete at the next Entrance-Examination.

The Second class consists of 3 boys, of whom only one was present, and he is not up to the Zillah School, Second class Standard.

The Third class contains 4 boys, of whom 2 were present, who read and parsed English very well for the Third class, but they gave their ages as 17 and 19 years.

The question of certifying the School, to compete at Entrance, depends mainly on whether the equipment of the School, (including thereon as the chief point the sufficiency of the teaching staff), is qualified for turning our Entrance Pupils.

The Head Master is an Ex-Zilla-School Head Master, and the teaching staff is superior to that in ordinary Mofussil Aided-Entrance-Schools.

I will consider further this certificate question.

C.B. Clarke,
Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle.

The Third Quarterly Examination of the pupils of the Calcutta School took place in the month of October 1883, and was conducted during eight days.

The Examiners were all satisfied with the results of their examination, and they all have given testimonials of their approbation by recording their respective following opinions in writing, thus:—

Certificates of the Examiners:—

This is to certify that being invited by Babu Sham Lal Day, Secretary, Calcutta School, to examine the progress of the pupils belonging to the 3rd Class of the said Institution, in their Third Quarterly Examination, in English and Historical branches of their studies, I readily undertook the task on the 25th September of the current year, and found the boys, on the whole, (as shown in my remarks on the Examination-papers), no way inferior to the students of similar schools of much longer standing than the short space of six months marking the foundation of the Institution.

Calcutta, 2nd October, 1883. Teacher, Hare School.

Upon examination of the Third and the Fourth classes of the Calcutta School, to which I was invited by its Founder, Babu Sham Lal Day, on the occasion of the Third Quarterly Examination of the School, held on the 26th September, 1883, I avail of this moment in expressing my full satisfaction at the rapid progress of the pupils in the Sanskrit and Bengali branches of their studies, which felt to my part to examine, and of judging from the part, I hope, the future will be attended with a proportionate success to the Institution.

Madhusudan Smritiratna,
Professor, Government Sanskrit College.

Certified that I have, in compliance with the desire of Babu Sham Lal Day, Secretary, Calcutta School, conducted an oral examination of the pupils of its Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth classes, in their Third Quarterly Examination, in English, on the 23rd September, 1883, and I found the verbal answers to almost all of my questions to be quite satisfactory to me on the whole, upon reflecting on the proficiency of the lads compared with the recent date of the Institution, I may reasonably cherish every hope of the future advancement of the School, by the unflagging zeal and unwearied labour of its Founder-Secretary.

Calcutta, 2nd October, 1883. Teacher, Hare School

Certified that from the General result of my examination of the pupils belonging to the Fifth, Eighth, and Ninth classes of the Calcutta School, in their third Quarterly Examination in the Bengali branch of their education, held on the 22nd and 24th September, respectively, of the current year, and from the high marks obtained by them, as shown in my examination paper with my remarks thereon, I have had full satisfaction of the rapid and at the same time sound progress of the boys in course of only six months, since the foundation of the Institution in March last. I must express also my high hope of the future success of the School from the early promises exhibited by it in so short a time, agreeably to the Adage:—A good year is known by its happy Spring, or, as the saying goes, Well begun is half done.

Calcutta, 2nd October, 1883. Pandit, Hare School.

I do hereby certify that I was called upon by Babu Sham Lal Day, Secretary and Founder of the Calcutta School, to examine the progress of the pupils belonging to the Fifth, Seventh and Eighth classes of his newly-founded-Institution, in their Third Quarterly Examination, in Bengali branch of their studies. I undertook the examination on the 24th September, 1883, and found the progress and readiness of the boys beyond my expectation. It no doubt reflects much credit both on the industry of the pupils and diligence of the teachers, and much more on the zeal of the Secretary, to exhibit this thriving state of the School, in so short a period of its establishment of Six Months only.

Calcutta, 2nd October, 1883. Pandit, Hindu-School.

In giving my certificate regarding the progress of the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth classes of the Calcutta School, in Mathematics, which I had to examine on Monday, the 24th September, 1883, at the request of Babu Sham Lal Day, its Founder, on the occasion of the 3rd Quarterly Examination, I must say that, with the exception of a very few cases, and those relating to newly-admitted boys of this School, I found it, on the whole, to be fair and very creditable on the average. I have, moreover, no hesitation to declare that the present promising state of this, newly-founded Institution presents a fair prognostication of its continued advancement and full success in future.

Calcutta, 1st October, 1883.
Mathoor Nath Chatterjea, L.C.E.,
Senior Mathematical Teacher, Oriental-Seminary.

I examined the boys of the Sixth class of the Calcutta School, at Sobha Bazar, in English, and I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the high efficiency of the Institution.

The boys, by the satisfactory result of their examination, gave clear proofs of the sound discipline and healthy mode of teaching with which the School is maintained.

I hope the School will go on improving from year to year.

Priya Nath Dutta,
Calcutta, 15th October, 1883. Teacher, Hare School.

I examined the boys of the Fifth class of the Calcutta School in History and Geography, of the 6th class in English Literature and History and Geography, of the 7th class in Geography, and of the 8th class in English Literature. More than half the students got about 70 percent marks. The School is well-conducted, and has a large staff of efficient teachers.

Calcutta, Gouri Sunker Dey, M.A., B.L.,
The 12th December, 1883. Professor, General Assembly's College.

I am glad to say that it had already sent up four candidates for competition at the last Calcutta University Entrance-Examination, the result of which is not yet out. (Cheers).

After the Head Master had finished his Report, the Chairman (His Highness) distributed the Prizes, (consisting of useful books), to the successful students of the Institution, for their General Proficiency:—

After the distribution was over, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the School, expressed his wish to introduce a novel practice of awarding some prizes also to the efficient teachers, who did their respective duties in training up the boys so remarkably well during the year. The new proposal, being approved of with acclamation of the whole audience present, a Time-piece to each of the teachers was awarded by him.

His Highness then awarded his Medal to the recitation boy (named Nalin Prakash Mookerjee, student of the Ninth class, who did his part so remarkably well in English), and another to the performers of the Gymnastic Party.

After the Prize Distribution was over, the President delivered the following speech:—

Gentlemen and Youngsters,—When Mr. Sham Lal Day, invited me to preside on this occasion, I intended, at first, owing to some circumstances, to decline his kind invitation; but from being so well-intimated with him I thought it would be rude to do so, and I was, therefore, obliged to accept it.

The occasion, indeed, is a very great and pleasant one, and would require an orator to do justice to it. I do not pretend to be an orator, on the contrary, I am far from it, and, therefore, I would request you, Gentlemen present, to be satisfied with the few simple thoughts with which I will endeavour to say something.

It is a source of great pleasure for all of us to see that schools of this nature are started everywhere, now-a-days, throughout the length and breadth of India. It is very common in the Mudras Presidency for Graduates and other educated people to start schools of this nature, as soon as they take their Degree, and, in this way, help the cause of education a great deal. The utility of such schools will be seen when we reflect a little upon the things which India is in need of for her prosperity. Among many requirements, the education of her teeming population is quite as necessary as any other thing. I am of opinion that Higher Education has just begun to be appreciated by most of us, and, therefore, I think it to be a fit time that it should be left to Private Enterprise, as well as Primary education that India requires.

Gentlemen, you know very well that the above subject is not a new one, as it has been greatly discussed by the Education Commission. Lord Ripon, whose name and deeds the future historians of India shall record in the pages of history in all their beauty and glory, has conferred many boons on India, and the Education-Commission is one of the greatest of them. No doubt, the results of the Education Commission will not be put into operation for another couple of years to come, but, when it comes, we shall see the usefulness of it. We shall then see that India has acquired unconsciously from a noble Viceroy, a gift which is only in the power of such Viceroys to confer. We shall then see schools springing up in the distant villages of India, and giving their education to the labouring classes of people as well as to the poverty-stricken villagers. It is then that we can say with one voice that India is seeming great advantage to the country.

Gentlemen, it is true that these things are distant, but great things do not come all on a sudden. They require preparation, and that preparation shall be undertaken by the founders of these Primary schools. Mr. Sham Lal Day, and, Gentlemen of that sort are doing very good work for India, but I know that they are not conscious of it. We know that many good actions are done unconsciously by their doers, but their effects will not go unheeded. Your posterity will reap the print of your acts.

I learn from Mr. Sham Lal Day, that the Institution has been started only in the beginning of March this year, and I am very much pleased to see that it has been doing such a good work within so short a time.

I hear that the School has already sent up four students for competition at the University Entrance-Examination, and this fact in itself speaks very highly of the School. I would like to hear, when the results of the Entrance-Examination are out, that these students have passed, but, in the meantime, I wish success to every one of them. The education of the boys is very pleasant, and I would like to express my appreciation of it by presenting a Medal to the most successful student (Nalin Prakash Mookerjee).

* Another good and new feature of this School is, that it has a good number of Free poor students with Free Boarding. It is a new thing to me, and I never heard the like of it in my part of the country. Those of us who are acquainted with the University Education of India and of England, can see a great difference between them. The Indian University is nothing but a Board of Examination. It gathers the students of many colleges and schools in one place on a certain day, and examines them by means of printed papers, and whoever is successful to the required number of score marks is proclaimed to be successful and there is an end of it. Whereas the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge are not only schools, but they are the homes of the students.

The advantages derived from this mode of education are so evident, that I need not dwell very much upon it. Amongst many other things, it creates a free intercourse among the students. Now, one word of advice to the students, and with it I will finish what I have to say. You young students,—I advise you to study well and to get good education, and I also advise you not to be mad after Government employments. (Hear, Hear). I would like you to study such noble branches, as Agriculture, Engineering, &c., in which, we, the Indians, are far more backward than any other Nation of the world (Applause).

I have heard with great pleasure the other parts of the Report, and am much pleased with it. I am particularly pleased to see that the teachers have been doing their work so satisfactorily, and I am sure that this School will become a great College in course of time, if teachers evince the same interest in the welfare of this Institution (Applause).

I am very glad to say that I have spent such a happy evening amongst you, and can assure you that I will look upon it with pleasure whenever I reflect upon the days, I have spent in Calcutta.

I again thank you for having given me the opportunity of being present here today. (Applause).

On His Highness' resuming the seat, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary of the Institution, said :—

YOUR HIGHNESS AND GENTLEMEN,—I rejoice at the success of this Meeting, and my hearty thanks are due to you for the kindness with which you have honored it by your presence; and the great kindness, which has led your Highness to preside on the occasion, confers an additional obligation on me and the Institution.

My best thanks are also due to the Gentlemen who inspected the School, as well as to those who conducted the Examinations of the boys during the year.

I have also to offer my most sincere thanks to its Patrons for the encouragement given by them towards the furtherance of the Institution.

With an earnest hope for its continued success, I beg now to resume my seat (Cheers).

The Assembly dispersed at 8 P. M., with a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, the Indian Mirror).

- (1) A Handy Book on the Eastern Question, being a very recent view on Turkey,
- (2) The Afghan Frontier,
- (3) A Visit to the United-States,
- (4) The Ethnology of India,

- (6) Report on the Administration of Bengal (1871-72.)

The cordial thanks of the Society are also hereby tendered to His Highness Aftab Chand Mahtab, Maharaj Adhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan, an illustrious Patron and Vice-President of the Society, for His Highness' presenting a set of Ramayan and the Mahabharat to the Institution on the 19th January, 1883.

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that the Calcutta School, (that was established under the auspices of this Society, on the 1st March, 1883), is progressing favorably. The First Annual Examination of the pupils of the School was conducted during eight days in the months of October and November, 1883, and the result was, on the whole, satisfactory. The Examiners were all satisfied with the result of their Examinations, and they all have given testimonials of their approbation by recording their respective opinions in writing.

The Society is very grateful to His Highness the Jaghirdar Sahib of Arni, for His Highness' kindly presiding at the First Distribution of Prizes to the pupils of the Calcutta School, held at No. 7, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sobha Bazar, on Friday, the 14th December, 1883, at 3 P. M., before a large gathering.

Gentlemen, I cannot better conclude this brief sketch of the last year's work than by affording a tribute of gratitude to the Patrons, Members and well-wishers of the Society, for their help in the furtherance of its useful objects, but for whose co-operation and support, it would have been next to impossible to do the good work the Society has been aiming itself diligently to achieve.

The best thanks of the Society are also tendered to those, who had shown their sympathy with and appreciation of the efforts of the Society.

To the Press, I am deeply indebted for the notice they take of our Meetings.

I may conclude by saying that it is my humble prayer to the Almighty that He may prosper the Society year after year (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year, which were duly passed and confirmed.

The Chairman then asked Babu Benad Vehari Chatterjee to deliver his lecture on Good Manners :—

The lecturer spoke on his subject for more than an hour. He said that Good Manners were very difficult to teach. Unless a person is well-bred, we seldom expect that he will behave as a Gentleman. Ill-bred persons are the very thorns of Society. If you happen to meet with an ill-bred person, you will know what ill-breeding is. He is rude and rough. He is wanting in Good-Manners, and it will not be long before you find him out.

A certain Dignity of Manners is absolutely necessary to form a Character, such as might be respected, for become respectable in the world.

Man has defined Good Manners to be the act of making those people easy, with whom we converse. Good Manners arise from Humility, Good Nature and Good sense. Ill manners from the opposite qualities. The former qualities tend to make people easy, and the latter to make them un-easy. So that, any person who is endowed with those qualities will learn Good Manners with little or no teaching.

On the contrary, Ill Manners arise from Pride, Ill-Nature and a want of Sense. One who has these defects in his character, will generally be rude and ill-mannered.

Pride assumes all the conversation to itself, and makes the company insignificant. Ill-Nature makes offensive reflections, which give pain to the hearers and folly speaks whatever comes uppermost, without making any distinction of place, person or occasion.

But the qualities opposite to these as naturally tend to make people easy. Humility seeks to lower it self, and give others the preference. Good Nature takes all occasions of lessening the faults of others, and avoiding whatever will give pain to any one present. Good sense will show us the proper time and occasion for making any remarks which may either be instructive or entertaining. The Importance of Good-Manners is much greater than most young persons are apt to conceive.

When we wish to employ a Physician, a Lawyer or a Tradesman, or a Servant, the first thing we regard is his character.

Young people ought to be doubly careful of their Character, as a false step in youth may sully their whole life.

A Good-Natured man, whatever faults he may have they will, for the most part, be treated with lenity. He will generally find an advocate in every human heart. His errors will be lamented rather than abhorred, and his virtues will be viewed in the fairest point of light.

At the conclusion of the lecture the Chairman rose and said, that it had given him much satisfaction to preside at this Tenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. He had been deeply interested in the lecture, and the best thanks of all present were due to the lecturer for his very able speech. Such lectures could not feel to be useful and instructive.

The Society is going on with its valuable work silently, and in an un-assuming manner, but that it is producing an effect, and will produce a greater result we can hardly doubt, and those who work upon the Society may take comfort in thinking that efforts will not be lost.

He then dwelt upon the Catholic Objects of the Institution and thanked the Founder and Secretary to the Society for his labour and zeal. He said, that the celebration of these Anniversaries, and the presence of so many distinguished visitors, add, as it were, a fresh stimulus to the Society, and that every one present at such gatherings, by the mere fact of his presence, deepens the stream of friendship. It was a satisfactory sign of the time that a young man Babu Sham Lal Day had taken so much trouble in promoting the Objects of the Society (Cheers).

Proceedings of a Meeting held, for the Distribution of Prizes to the Students of the Entrance-Class of the Calcutta School, (which were reserved on Friday, the 14th December, 1883), at the premises No. 7, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sobha Bazar, on Monday, the 14th April, 1884 at 5-30 P.M., under the presidency of the Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerjee, LL. D., Fellow and Examiner of the Calcutta University, Author of several Works, &c., &c., &c. There was a large gathering. Over One thousand Gentlemen were present on the occasion :—

The Distribution of Prizes to the students of the Entrance-Class of the Calcutta School, which were reserved at the last Meeting held on the 14th December, 1883, until the result of the Calcutta University Entrance-Examination were known), took place at No. 7, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sobha Bazar, on Monday, the 14th April, 1884, at 5-30 P. M., under the presidency of the Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerjee, Fellow of the University of Calcutta, &c. The Meeting was attended by a large concourse of people, most of whom were the guardians and relatives of the pupils, and well-wishers of the Institution. At the commencement, a Bengali song was sung by several boys of the School. The Head-Master of the Institution was then asked to open

The Head-Master said, Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

"That this Second Ceremony of the Distribution of Prizes is but a continuation or complement to the first which was held on Friday, the 14th December, 1883 and presided over by His Highness the Jaghirdar of Arni—in Madras, on the occasion of the Distribution of Prizes to the successful pupils of this School, after their First Annual Examination, held between the months of November and December, 1883. His Highness expressed his satisfaction at the result of the said Examination, and at the best management of the business of the said Meeting. He declared his high delight at the English and Bengali Recitations of several boys of the School, and the exhibition of Gymnastics, as well as the performance of the Concert-party. His Highness was so much pleased with all, that he promised, by way of encouragement, to confer year after year, an Ornamental Medal to the most successful candidates of the Institution, at the Calcutta University Entrance-Examination. The distribution of the Medal was, as a matter of course, delayed until the results of the Entrance-Examination could be known in February 1885 (now past).

The Examiners were all satisfied with the Results of their Examination, and they all have given testimonials of their approbations, by recording their respective opinions as follow :—

Certificates of the Examiners :—

I am very much satisfied with the results.

Calcutta, 10th December, 1884. MYSORE VENCUT ROW,

Calcutta, 15th December, 1884.

I am very much pleased with your School, and would like to express my gratification by presenting a Silver Medal, year after year, to the First successful student in the examination.

I am, Yours truly,

To BABU SHAM LALL DAY, A. STRINIVASSA ROW,
Founder-Secretary, Calcutta School. Jaghirdar of Arni.

I conducted the Annual Examination of the year 1883, of some of the classes of the Calcutta School, and was quite satisfied with the marks obtained by examinees. Of the boys, who composed the 7th class, half the number obtained first class marks; this is creditable indeed. But, the greater credit is due to the 5th and the 6th classes, the former having got all its boys put in the First division, and the latter two boys in the 1st, two in the 2nd, and only one in the 3rd.

Calcutta, 13th March, 1884.

SHAMA CHURN CHATTERJEA,
HEAD PANDIT, Calcutta Government Normal-School.

I had the honor, at the request of Babu Sham Lall Day, Secretary to the Calcutta School, to examine the 5th class boys in English, 7th class boys in English and Arithmetic, and the 8th class boys in Arithmetic, both Mental and Slate work. From the marks assigned in the different subjects to the examinees, it appears evident that most of them did answer very satisfactorily the questions put to them, and that great care was taken in training the youths. Generally, Ananta Chandra Mukerjia of the 8th class did capitally well in Mental Arithmetic, and deserves especial mention as a smart intelligent boy. I was, on the whole, quite satisfied with the result of the examination, considering the short time, ten months, the School has been in existence.

Calcutta, 14th March, 1884.

GOPAL CHANDRA BANERJEA,
HEAD MASTER, Calcutta Government Normal-School.

The Test Examination of the Calcutta School was partly conducted by myself. I set papers on Mathematics, History and Geography, and I am glad to say that two of the boys Ganga Prasanna Chackerberty and Tulsi Dass Dutt answered the questions in a very satisfactory manner. Two of the remaining students acquitted themselves fairly in the subjects in which I examined them, and had, in my opinion, a reasonable chance of passing the Entrance-Examination.

Calcutta, 14th March, 1884. HARA LALL RAI,
ASST. HEAD MASTER, Hindu-School.

I examined the Fourth Class in English, - the result was satisfactory.

Calcutta, 14th March, 1884.

RAM JADU BHATTACHARJEA,
SECOND TEACHER, Hindu-School.

The Examination of the 5th and 6th classes of the Calcutta School, in History and Geography, was very satisfactory.

Calcutta, 14th March, 1884. ABHOY CHARN PAUL, EXTRA-TEACHER, Hindu-School.

The boys of the 3rd and 4th classes of the Calcutta School, whom I examined in Mathematics, acquitted themselves very satisfactory.

Calcutta, 14th March, 1884. JADAB KRISHNA DASS, TEACHER, Hindu-School.

I examined the boys of the Entrance-Class of the Calcutta School in Sanskrit. The result of the Examination was satisfactory.

Calcutta, 14th March, 1884. BRAJA NATH GHOSAL,
HEAD PANDIT, Hindu-School.

The Examination in Bengali of the Sixth Class of the Calcutta School last year was satisfactory to me.

Calcutta, 25th March, 1884.

KAILAS CHANDRA MUKERJEA,
SENIOR PANDIT, Hindu-School.

I examined the First Class of the Calcutta School in English, and the result was, on the whole, satisfactory. Out of the six candidates examined, two acquitted themselves very creditably, two others obtained very near the pass mark. These four students were sent up to the last Entrance-Examination of the Calcutta University, and I am happy to learn that the first two passed in the Test successfully.

Calcutta, 4th April, 1884.

CHUNDY CHARN BANERJEA,
HEAD MASTER, Hindu-School.

The Certificates of the Examiners were heard with Applause.

I am glad to say that, out of the Four candidates that were sent up for competition at the last Calcutta University Entrance-Examination, two passed; viz :—Ganga Prasanna Chackerberty (a Free Boarder of the School), in the Second Division, and Tulsi Dass Dutt, in the Third. The former has, therefore, been entitled to His Highness the Jaghirdar Sahib of Arni's Medal, together with His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught Scholarship, for General Proficiency, awarded by Maharaj Kumar Rameswar Singh Bahadur, B.C.S., of Rajnagar-Darbhanga, and the latter has obtained a Medal presented by His Highness the Rajah Sahib of Talchar. These are the students that are now to be honored with the Medals, Certificates &c.

The First Quarterly Examination of the current year (1884), was held in the month of March, 1884, and the Result was, on the whole, satisfactory. (Cheers.)

After the Head Master had finished his Report, the Revd. Chairman distributed the Prizes to the Students of the School.

The Distribution of Prizes being over, the Revd. Chairman addressed for nearly an hour. He said, that he was much pleased at the singing of Divine Songs by the boys as a prelude to the Ceremony. This reminded him of the Mangalacharan, with which the Indo-Aryans always commenced their ceremonies. He wished all Schools would follow this example of invoking Divine aid before they undertook any work.

Referring to the multiplicity of Schools in Calcutta, he said, that he had noticed with great satisfaction the large number of Dispensaries, which, for a long time, have existed in every street and lane of the town, and he now finds Schools following on the heels of Dispensaries. In ancient Egypt, a King had established a Laboratory,—over which he had inscribed the words Psychic Attraction, or A Dispensary for Souls. What was inscribed on a Laboratory can, with equal propriety, be inscribed on a School—It may, therefore, be well said that Calcutta shows its appreciation of both Physical and Mental Exercises, by exhibiting side by side, Dispensaries and Schools for Maladies, both of body and soul. All these results were principally of popular and private enterprise. (Cheers.)

The next thing, noticed by the Revd. Chairman was, the mixture of Mahomedan and Hindu Students, learning side by side, not only English, but also their common defects, — Vernacular, (i.e., the Bengali). It is a mistake to suppose that you must have separate Schools for these important classes of Her Majesty's Subjects in Bengal. Here we see Mahomedans and Hindus can get on together, — and that would generally be throughout Bengal if invidious questions were not raised and countenanced. (Cheers.)

Regarding the success, with which only a few months' study in this School was crowned at the University Entrance-Examination, the Chairman said, it did equal credit to masters, pupils and above all, the Founder-Secretary of the School. (Cheers.)

With reference to the First Prize holder, Ganga Prasanna Chackerberty, the Revd. Chairman added, that according to the Report, which had just been read, this student had the honor, by his extraordinary progress, not only of winning a Medal then and there established by a Nobleman of another Presidency, who presided on the occasion of the previous Examination and was wonder-struck by the merit of the boy, but also of gaining a permanent Annual Medal from the same Nobleman for his School. This was a heroism in the arena of Education unheard of before.

After some further remarks, the Chairman concluded his speech by wishing continued success and prosperity to the Institution and happiness to all concerned.

The Proceedings terminated at 8 P. M., with offering hearty vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Statesman, the Indian Mirror, &c.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, (Bow Bazar Branch), No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 26th July, 1884, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nil-Kantha Chatterjea. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Jadu Nath Shah to deliver his lecture on

Early Marriage :—

The lecturer spoke on the Subject for more than an hour. He said that,—MARRIAGE may be defined as the act, ceremony, or process, by which the legal-relation-ship of husband and wife is constituted.—Early Marriage is the most dreadful. In India, Early Marriage is prevalent. Therefore, we meet with so many premature deaths.

It is an evil, which the sooner it is checked, the better. Our girls are married, when they are not fully developed, as in other countries in the world. It is generally said, in defence of this custom, that in a hot climate, like that of India, men and women ought to be married early, to prevent the evils of debauchery. How far this is true, it is impossible to say with any degree of certainty.

It is a positive fact that unless men and women lead married lives, licentiousness and the evils consequent thereupon, would pervade every rank of Society, and a Nation will degenerate to an extent, from which it would be difficult to extricate it.

We all know that our children are generally very delicate, because they are conceived in the womb of their mothers, when the latter are not sufficiently grown and matured to become fit for carrying on the work devolves upon them, at a rather prematurely early age.

Professors of Mid-wifery, specially officers, who have had experience of lying in Hospitals, complain of the diseases, which prevail amongst inmates thereof, as the result of Early Marriage is prevailed amongst the Natives of this country. They attribute the many infantile deaths, which occur in India to it.

The system prevails to such an extent, that sometimes matches are contracted, when the children are in the womb. When a girl conceives, the eldest members of the family sometimes give out that if a female child is born, she would be given in marriage to the son of such and such person. Who, again, is quite satisfied and approves of the arrangement proposed to him. This, indeed, is a most miserable state of thing.

Marriages, we know, are always contracted before the girls reach their teens. Sometimes they are married at the early age of Nine, and sometimes even Seven and what it is disgraceful to confess, now and then, before they complete Five years of age ! !

It were, indeed, to be wished that our Orthodox countrymen could see the evils, which arise from our system of EARLY MARRIAGES.

A child becomes a Husband, and a girl becomes a Mother. The Husband lives with a Child-wife, and the result is that both of them become sickly, weak, and always complain something or other. They complain now of head-ache, of indigestion, and what not !

It sometimes happens that our girls conceive at the early age of Eleven, and bring forth when they had hardly reached even the age of Twelve years !

The child-wife becomes a Mother, when she is not fit for the duties of a Wife. She gives birth to children. She contracts some disease or other in child-bed, because, the loss of blood weakens her. Is not this much to be deplored ?—The child that is born, generally becomes sickly and very weak, and hardly lives for a long time ! Sometimes the child dies as soon as it is ushered into the world, or the mother dies immediately after child-birth ! The children, born of child-mothers, seldom live !

How many fathers lose their daughters, who are snatched away from them, at an early age, when they prematurely conceive and give birth to children, at an extremely early age !

We should endeavour to act for ourselves, seeing that the evil custom is becoming sad havoc in the land !

Every educated man ought to feel for his own country. He should endeavour to remedy the defects and evils of our Social and Domestic Customs, and try to remove them.

Upon you, Youngmen, rest responsibility, to which you should endeavour to do justice, and if you fail to do so, you will have no body to blame,—but yourselves. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dispersed after 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Friday, the 5th September, 1884, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Joy Gopal Mukerjea, B. A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Rash Behari Dass to deliver his lecture on—

Education and Envy :—

The lecturer spoke on the Subject for an hour. He said that, when a person is properly educated, he cannot become Envious. We should educate our children, in order that they might distinguish right from wrong. Education means,—the training of the mind in proper direction. Unless a person educate himself, he can seldom command esteem of others. No Nation can become great, unless it learns to educate itself.

Greatness consists in the acquirement of Knowledge. No Knowledge can be acquired without Education. You can easily bond the twid. But, you cannot do so when it develops itself into a long tree. A boy should be educated, when he is young. Proper training should begin in Infancy. When a person grows, the clay of his mind becomes hard. It cannot receive any impression, much less retaining. The Mind of an Infant is soft. Its Memory is sharp. And its retentive power is good. Infancy, therefore, is the proper season for training.

Envy ought, in strict truth, to have no place whatever allowed it in the heart of Man ; for the goods of this present world are so vile and low, that they are beneath it ; and those of the future world are so vast and exalted, that they are above it.

Envy is represented, among Painters, by the figure of an ugly woman, clad in black and blue tarnished drapery, and crowded with serpents. Her right hand rests upon the head of a monster with many heads, and a serpent is biting her left breast, which is bare. Her age and ugliness signify the deformity of this vice ; and the discoloured drapery alludes to the vileness of it.

Envy corrupts the heart, sours the temper, deforms the visage, and enfeebles the body. Renders us indifferent to the pleasures,—we have at command, and desirous only of those things, which are beyond our reach !

The serpents, by which her head is surrounded, signify the evil thoughts, in which an Envious person always entertains of others. The viper biting her left breast, denotes the rage and torment that perpetually occupy the breasts of those, who envy the prosperity of their neighbours. The right hand, resting on the head of the Hydra, indicates the horrible deformity of this malignant disposition ; as Envy may be said to resemble that monster in its infectious quality.

The Poets relate, that when one head of the Hydra is cut off, its place is supplied by another ; and thus, the more the power of Virtue is exerted in suppressing Envy, the more is this vice enraged against its opponent.

A man that hath no Virtue in himself, ever enviously virtue in others. For, men's minds will either feed upon their own good, or upon other's evil.

A man, that is busy and inquisitive, is commonly Envious. Men of Noble Birth are noted to be envious towards New men, when they rise ; for the distance is altered.

An Ignorant man is generally envious. An envious person is a coward. He retains the dagger concealed in his breast. He uses it, when his enemy is not prepared to face him. We should never keep company with an envious man. He is subject to the worst of passions. Anger and Revenge dwells in his heart. He will betray you. He is perfidious. You cannot repose any trust in him. If you do so, you will find your mistake, when it is not too late. Education and Envy cannot live together. They cannot find a place in the mind of the same individual.

Deformed persons and eunuchs, as well as low men are generally envious. For, he that cannot possibly mend his own case, will do what he can to impair another's.

The same is the case of men, who rise after calamities and misfortunes. For, they are as men fallen out with the times, and think other men's harms—a redemption of their own sufferings.

Near kins, folks and fellows-in-office, and those that are bred together, are more apt to Envy their equals, when they are raised. For, it doth upbraid unto them their own fortunes.

Persons of eminent virtue, when they are advanced, are less Envid. For their fortune seemeth but due unto them; and no man Envieth the payment of a debt, but rewards and liberality rather. Again, Envy is ever-joined with the comparing of a Man's-Self, and where there is no comparison, — no Envy.

Persons of Noble Blood are less Envid in their rising. For, it seemeth but right done to their birth; besides, there seemeth not much added to their fortune. (Ch'ers.)

After the speaker had done, the Chairman spoke a few words. The Meeting broke up at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

Proceedings of a Meeting held, for the Second Annual Distribution Prizes to the Meritorious Pupils of the Calcutta School, (including its Branch), at the hall of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, No. 196 Bow Bazar Street, on Friday, the 24th July, 1885, at 3 P. M., under the presidency of the Revd. William Smith, M. A., Principal, General Assembly's College. There was a large gathering :—

The Second Annual Distribution of Prizes, (comprising a large number of readable books, Atlases, Silver Medals, Certificates and Scholarships), came off with great clat, on Friday afternoon, the 24th July, 1885, at the premises of the Calcutta School, (Bow Bazar Branch), No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, Calcutta, before a large gathering of European and Indian Gentlemen, who were duly invited to grace the ceremony with their kind presence.

The gathering was truly representative in its character. Professors and Teachers of different Colleges and Schools, Members of many Social, Political and Religious Institutions, and a vast number of parents and guardians of the students, together with many respectable Gentlemen, representing several important sections and classes of the Indian Community, gathered in the Hall to add importance to the ceremony of the afternoon.

The Meeting was presided over by the Revd. William Smith, M. A., Principal, General Assembly's College, and an illustrious Member of the Protestant Mission in India. The Revd. Chairman was attended by the Revd. James M. Hamilton, M. A., B. D., Professor of the same College and belonging to the same Mission.

The Hall of the Branch School, in which the interesting ceremony took place, was very gaily decorated with banners and evergreens. The yard, the arcada and the labyrinth of the building were also very beautifully adorned with ornamental plants and various kinds of flowers, and flags were also hoisted up on the top of the walls to welcome the guests of the evening. The play-ground of the pupils was also not lost sight of. It was well-adorned with a beautiful set of apparatus of Athletic performance.

On a round table, before the Chairman of the Meeting, lots of flower-bouquets, Patna Mangoes, Garlands of sweet flowers, and glasses of Rose-water, and Ice-cream, with utlar and essence on the left, were kept in rows near the Prize books, to make the ceremony a Fait Accompli.

The Proceedings were opened by the boys singing sweet songs. The boys then recited selected pieces from English and Vernacular Authors, and delivered extempore addresses in brief on, the Duty to Parents and Devotedness to God. The Chairman and the audience seemed quite satisfied with the preliminary Proceedings.

Address by the Secretary :—

After this, the Founder-Secretary of the School gave a brief account of the causes, which led to the foundation of the Bow Bazar Branch School, on the 23rd July, 1884, as also of its progress, during the Session. He said :—Revd. Chairman and Gentlemen.

The Bow Bazar Branch of the Calcutta School has just completed its First year of existence. It being an Institution, only a year old, has, as a matter of course, very little to tell in detail of any very great progress made by it in so short a time, or, to recount its achievements beyond the ordinary curriculum of business. It has, therefore, nothing more to present before the public for gratification of their curiosity than a bare account of the causes, which led to its foundation and a simple statement of the works done towards its advancement during the course of the year.

The Main School, (of which the Institution, under review, is a branch), was founded by my humble Self and under the auspices chiefly of the Calcutta Literary Society, on Thursday, the 1st day of March, 1883, and the Bow Bazar Branch began its existence, under the same auspices, since Thursday, the 23rd day of July, 1884.

The strong sympathy and the continued generous encouragement, which the Founder-Secretary had received from the Guardians of the pupils, as well as at the hands of the Gentlemen, who take lively interest in the progress of Education, had also led him to extend the sphere of his work and open the Branch School under review.

Neither of the Schools receive any aid from the Government. They are opened to boys of all creeds, colors, and castes, and one of the remarkable traits in the policy of their management is that, they always tolerate catholicity in Education and Religion.

Both the Main and the Branch Institutions, (organised after the Model of the best Higher Class English Schools in the town), are under the management of a strong staff of efficient and experienced teachers, many of whom are the Graduates and the Under-Graduates of the University of Calcutta, and under the direct supervision of the Founder-Secretary, assisted by a Gentleman of vast education and long standing experience in the Educational Department.

Both the Schools consist of Ten classes in each : viz :— Three in the higher, Six in the lower, and another in the Musical Department that has been established since the commencement of January, 1885, under the distinguished patronage of Rajah Sir Sourindra Mohun Tagore Bahadur, Kt., C.I.E., the world-renowned Musical Doctor, and a Scion of the illustrious Tagore Family of Calcutta.

The Drawing, being one of the important branches of human knowledge, is also not lost sight of. The services of Babu Digbejoy Neogy, Senior Scholar attached to the Calcutta Government School of Arts, has fortunately been secured by the Founder-Secretary of the School to the Drawing Section of the Two Schools, and many thanks are due to him for the warm interest he is evincing to introduce a Model System of Drawing in our Two Institutions.

The government of the two Schools is vested in the Founder-Secretary, aided by the Head Masters of the two Institutions.

Great credit is due to the Superintendents for their able management of the Two Schools, as well as to the Teachers for all that they have done, within so short a period towards the progress of the pupils of both the Institutions. From the good management, as also the satisfactory result of examination of the boys, it may fairly be hoped that, the Branch, under review, like its Main, will, in course of time, become one of the healthiest Indian Educational Institutions in Bengal. The teachers have, indeed, devoted great attention to their respective duties, and displayed a lively interest in the discharge of their several functions of discipline.

The Pundits have also spared no pains to make the Vernacular Departments a fait accompli, and more attention is likely to be devoted to it, to refute the charge that is now and often found home to be brought by some critics to the effect that Teaching of Vernacular Languages is much neglected in the Schools where the English is taught. But, it will not be a miss here to remark that the teachers of the Calcutta School, (both Main and Branch), are well-aware of the fact that, no Nation can attain to greatness without literature of its own.

Babu Radhika Prassanna Mukerjee, Assistant-Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle, visited the Bow Bazar Branch School, on the 27th October, 1884, and expressed his warm sympathy with it, and felt quite satisfied with the management. The following is an abstract copy of his written opinion regarding the School :—

Calcutta, 27th October, 1884.

I visited the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, at the request of the Secretary. The School was started in July or August last and has already attracted about 100 pupils. I examined the two Highest Classes in English and Mathematics and was pleased with the answers. I wish the School every success. I was pleased with the Recitation of English Poetry by some boys of the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th classes.

RADHIKA PRASANNA MUKERJEE, a
Assistant Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle.

A full account of the Proceedings of the First Prize-Distribution Ceremony of the Main School, which took place on the 14th December, 1883, under the presidency of His Highness the Jaghirdar Sahib of Arni, in Madras, will be found published in several local Newspapers of the town, as well as in the First Annual Report of the School.

The Annual Examination of the pupils of the Main and the Branch Institutions was held simultaneously in the middle of the month of April, 1885, and was conducted during the Ten days, under the direct supervision of the following Gentlemen :—

The Secretary to the School then announced that His Highness the Hon'ble Sir Lakshewar Singh Sahib, G.C.I.E., Maharajah Bahadur of Darbhanga, and His Highness the Hon'ble Sir Harrendra Kishore Singh, K.C.I.E., Maharajah Bahadur of Bettiah, Members of the Governor General's Legislative Council, His Highness Rameswar Singh, B.C.S., Rajah Bahadur of Rajnagar-Darbhanga, His Highness Sir Ahsumollah Khan, K.C.I.E., Nawab Sahib of Dacca, have graciously been pleased to contribute to the Calcutta School, for which the best thanks of the Institution are hereby given to them.

May the Almighty Disposer of Events grant them with long lives, prosperity and happiness (Applause).

Babu Sham Lall Day also announced the receipt of the following letters from the under-mentioned distinguished persons, who were un-avoidably absent from the Meeting that day :—

The following letter was received from the Revd. Father E. Lafont, S.J., C.I.E., Principal of the St. Xavier's College, Calcutta :—

My dear Sir,

I regret that, as you will have seen by the Daily papers, I have already an engagement for Friday next.

SOBHABAZAR,
The 18th July, 1885.

The following letter was received from Dr. Rajendra Lala Mitra, LL.D., C.I.E. :—

8, MANICKTOLA STREET,
16th July, 1885.

Dear Sir,

In reply to your letter I regret to state that, owing to ill health, I shall not be able to accept your invitation to be present at the Second Annual Distribution of Prizes of the Calcutta School, on Friday next.

Babu Sham Lall Day,
Calcutta.

I remain,
Yours Faithfully,
RAJENDRA LALA MITRA.

After the Secretary had resumed his seat, amidst cheers, the Revd. Chairman distributed the Prizes to the Successful Students, for their General Proficiency, at the last Annual Examination, held in the month of April, 1885 :—

After the distribution was over, the Founder-Secretary requested the Revd. Chairman to award certain Scholarships to several successful students of the School, for General Proficiency, at their Quarterly Examinations, held in the year 1884 and 1885. The distribution being over, Babu Sham Lal Day expressed his wish to award prizes also, to the efficient teachers of the two Schools, who did their respective duties in training up the boys so remarkably well during the year. The Revd. Chairman, accordingly, awarded a lot of selected useful books, from recent good Authors, to each of the teachers. The prizes were presented by the Founder-Secretary of the School.

After the Prize books had been distributed, the Revd. Chairman congratulated the Two Head Masters of the Calcutta School, on the very encouraging Report that had been read by the Founder Secretary of the School. He said that, in England and Scotland, there was, and not without good reason, a strong feeling against what are called private or adventure schools,—that is schools under Private Management, and that only came before the public with a reductive prospectus.

He was glad to be able to say that the Management of the Calcutta School, (both Main and Branch), had taken good care to give the public a guarantee that the works of the two Schools would annually be inspected by competent and well-known educationists. The parents, could, therefore, with confidence, send their children to this School.

Another gratifying feature in connection with the School, the Revd. Chairman added, was that amongst the teachers were to be found Graduates of the Calcutta University. For, too many were thronging into the already-crowded-profession of Law, and it would be a sign of a healthy feeling, if many more of our young men, at the close of their Academic Career, chose as their life-work—the teaching of their fellow-countrymen. The harvest truly is plentiful, the laborers are few. He also said that, he was surprised and much pleased at the graceful and skilful performance by the New Social Acrobatic Gymnastic Party of Datta-Para on the Horizontal Bar. (CHEERS.)

After some further remarks, the Revd. Chairman concluded his speech by praying continued success and prosperity of the Two Institutions, and happiness to all concerned.

The Proceedings terminated at 8 P. M., with offering a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, the "Statesman", the "Indian Mirror", &c.)

Proceedings of the Eleventh Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the hall of the Calcutta School, (Bow Bazar Branch), No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 22nd August, 1885, at 3-30 P. M., under the presidency of the Revd. James M. Hamilton, M.A., B.D., Professor, English Literature, General Assembly's College, Calcutta. The Meeting was densely crowded :—

The Eleventh Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Calcutta School, (Bow Bazar Branch), No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 22nd August, 1885, at 3-30 P. M. The chair was taken by the Revd. James M. Hamilton, M.A., B.D., Professor of English Literature, General Assembly's College, Calcutta. The Meeting was densely crowded.

Address by the Secretary :—

After the Revd. Chairman had taken his presidential seat, amidst shouts of applause, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, addressed the Meeting thus :—

Revd. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen :—

We are assembled here to-day to celebrate the Eleventh Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. I have no other particular business for this evening, besides giving you a brief account of the work done by the Institution, during the year, 1884.

The Secretary read the following letter that was then received from the Revd. K. S. Macdonald, M.A., B.D., Principal, Duff College :—

Calcutta, 22nd August, 1885.

Dear Sir,

It would be a great pleasure to me to be present at Mr. Smith's Lecture, but, I have to be at a Meeting of the University Senate at that hour.
Babu Sham Lal Day. K. S. MACDONALD.

The Society's work and attempt, at various directions, may be divided under several heads. The first and foremost of which was the Establishment of Another Higher Class English School, in the Southern Division of the Town, under its auspices, called the Calcutta School, (Bow Bazar Branch), at the premises No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Wednesday, the 23rd July, 1884, at the special request of several inhabitants of that locality (Cheera.)

This Branch School was also duly Affiliated to the Calcutta University, up to the Entrance Standard, and its First Annual Distribution of Prizes was held in this hall, under the presidency of the Revd. William Smith, M. A., Principal of the General Assembly's College, on Friday, the 24th July, 1885, at 3 P. M., before a large gathering, and, I have no doubt, most of you, have read the Proceedings of that eclat ceremony in local Newspapers. (Cheera.)

The Main School, at Sovabazar, established on Thursday, the 1st day of March, 1883, under its auspices, is also now very ably conducted by the efficient teaching staff.

The Second Annual Distribution of Prizes to the pupils of this School was also held, simultaneously with the First Annual Distribution of Prizes to the pupils of its Branch School, on Friday, the 24th July, 1885. The Proceedings of the Meeting has already been published in local papers.

The following letter was received from His Highness the Jaghirdar Sahib of Arni :—

Arni, 1st April, 1884.

My dear Sir,

I am very happy to inform you that myself and my Party reached Arni safely, on the 27th Ultimo.

I cannot forget the few days which I spent in your pleasant company.

I hope you will be kind enough to let me know your welfare every now and then.

Hoping that this will find you and family in the enjoyment of good health.

To Sham Lal Day, Esq.,
Founder-Secy.

Calcutta Literary Society.

Yours Affectionately,
A. Srinivasa Row,
The Jaghirdar of Arni.

It is specially gratifying to His Excellency to observe that among the distinguished Members of the Society are several Native ladies and he trusts that he may consider this fact as a significant indication of a growing desire among Native ladies for wider literary culture.

Many of the young reciters showed decided Dramatic ability and the Musical performance were characterised by great taste.

Gentlemen, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to His Highness the Jaghirdar Sahib of Arni, for His Highness' kindly presenting a copy of His Highness' Photo, on the 5th May, 1884

The Report has a painful fact to record in it :—the late-lamented demise of the Professor Henry Fawcett, M.P., one of the illustrious Patrons of the Society, and a distinguished friend of the people of India, has created a larger gap in the Society ! His loss is to be always remembered ! The office of the Society was closed on Monday, the 17th November, 1884, in honor of the Memory of the late illustrious deceased !

The best thanks of the Society are hereby tendered to those, who have shown sympathy with, and appreciation of the efforts of the Society, and, who, very kindly, took part at the Meetings, and expressed words of encouragement with the work of the Society.

To the Press, I am deeply indebted for the notice they take of our Meetings.

Now, as its Founder and Secretary, I feel it a pleasing duty on my part to tender the Society's most cordial thanks to all its Patrons, Members, Well-wishers, and Admirers.

I would not take up your time more, but simply to offer the best thanks of the Society to the Revd. James M. Hamilton, M.A., B.D., Professor, General Assembly's College, for his kindly presiding at our this Eleventh Anniversary Meeting. (Cheers.)

May God bless the Society for many years. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year, 1884, which were duly passed.

The Chairman then, in a few appropriate words, introduced the Rev. Phillip S. Smith, M. A., as one ever intent upon furthering the highest well-being of the youngmen of India, and asked him to deliver his lecture on—

Thoughts on Plato's Republic:—

The learned speaker rose amidst cheers and dwelt upon his Subject for more than an hour; and during that time he was applauded many times. The lecture was listened to with great attention and interest by the audience present, and his lecture was very impressive, as well as effective. He spoke as follows:—

I.—THE AGE OF PLATO:—

There may be some, in this audience, who have not had the opportunity of studying the History of Greece. For such, I would say a word or two of Introduction as to the Age of Plato,—the Age, in which he lived and wrote. But, there is something which I must say even before this Introduction, in that I have, since I came into this room, learned more than I knew before of the objects of the Calcutta Literary Society.

I have learned that the long list of distinguished Members, with high-sounding names, who cannot often, if ever, be present at your Meetings, nevertheless represents a large amount of real interest in the real object of the Association. Real solid help given in support of the Two large Schools, which owe their existence in this Society,—one in Sobha Bazar, and one here in Bow Bazar:—Schools, in which your Founder-Secretary devotes his whole time to superintendence, and in which, I am told, unusual care is taken to secure Moral Training to the boys. I sympathise very deeply with Mr. Sham Lal Day's life work. (Cheers).

(A) —RELATION TO SOCRATES:—

Passing now to the life and times of Plato, suffer me to remind you that Plato is very difficult to separate from Socrates in his writings. It is his peculiar glory to have written dialogues, in which Socrates is represented, as the chief teacher. But, difficult as it is to separate, Plato's own thought from the Socratic teaching, which it embodied, it is easy to separate his actual surroundings from those of his master, and these may help me to form an idea of his distinct personality.

(B) —RELATION TO POLITICS:—

Plato was born in B. C. 428, and died, B. C. 347. Socrates died, B. C. 399, when Plato was nearly Thirty years old. Therefore, Plato received his earlier impressions from Socrates; but, had plenty of time to mature an independent system in later life.

He lived, when the greatest greatness of Athens had passed away. His boyhood saw the ir-retrievable Sicilian Catastrophe of B. C. 413, and the overthrow of the Free Republic of Athens, in 411. His early Manhood, saw the defeat of Xenopolami, in 405; with the re-action towards Political Sanity which followed the restoration of the Republic, in 403, and the re-call from exile of the Historian Thucydides.

In 384, Demosthenes and Aristotle were born; so that, Plato saw, before he died, the struggles of the great orator for his dying country, and the growing genius of his own great successor in the Schools of Philosophy.

The supremacy passed from Athens to her rival Thebes, in 371. The First Philippic Oration of Demosthenes,—the protest against the menacing intrigue of the Macedonian Power, which was soon finally to swallow up, Athenian Independence came in 351. Plato was spared the sight of his country's fall. He died, as we said, in 347. But, there is one Episode in his life, which we must not omit.

About the year 360, he made Two Voyages to Sicily, where reigned two notorious tyrants, the Dionysii; their tyranny he was called upon to mitigate by the siren fascinations of that Philosophy, which painted the ideal Republic, of which we are to speak to-day. Failing to convert the tyrant souls to kindly thoughts of justice, Plato narrowly escaped with his life. But, it gives a tinge of deeper pathos to his noble ideal to know that he endeavoured, at no small risk, to put it into practice.

But, perhaps, the most important and interesting point in the age of Plato for us is, its complete contrast with Eastern modes of thought and feeling.

(C) —CONTRAST WITH THE EAST:—

(1) In Metaphysics:—

In the Threnophilist Magazine of August, 1885, in an article of very great Philosophic ability by your fellow-townsmen, Babu Mohini Mohun Chatterjee, whom I believe to be, what I heard Colonel Olcott call him, one of the brightest intellects of Bengal, there are some phrases, which may suggest the sort of tendency in Eastern Philosophy, to which I refer. The article is entitled, Esoteric Buddhism in Germany; an adequate criticism of it is beyond my present scope, and, perhaps, beyond my present power. We may, however, quote just these words "The Subject is Eternity and Great Void, since Time and Space are objective." So far we might agree in a sense; but, he goes on to say:—"The True Ego, the highest subjectivity is manifestly not an object." That is, it cannot be known, it only knows; and it knows not individual objects, but "the Great Objective."

Now from such Metaphysics as this, which render the Infinite subject un-knowable by us poor finite subjects, follows a despair of knowing Brahma, save by being lost in, or united with Him, or rather It. To put this in simpler language, we may here transcribe some words of Professor Gough in his Philosophy of the Upanishads, (Page 28), where after quoting one point, in which Plato resembles Oriental Philosophers, he continues thus:—

"In this place, Plato approached more nearly than in any other passage in his dialogues to the oriental tenets of the migration of the Soul from body to body, and the sole efficiency of supersensible thinking in dis-engaging the Soul from these successive lives of sense. For, Socrates in the Phaedon, it is Philosophy alone that can purify the Soul, detach it from the body, and lift it up into communion with the eternal and un-changing Archetypes.

But, the Platonic abstraction is a contemplation of the Eternal Ideas, the patterns after which the visible world was moulded; the universal verities discernible through the things of sense; not a Hindu meditation on formless being, on the characterless Self, nor a Buddhist meditation on the vacuity into which all things are resolvable; and the Platonic after-life of the Free Intelligence is a positive exercise of intellection, neither a Hindu absorption into the fountal essence, nor a Buddhist extinction into the Aboriginal nothingness of things."

There can, perhaps, be no greater contrast than between a Hindu Thinker of the Upanishads diving behind phenomena, to regard BRAHMA as a negation of every thing defined, (or finite), and a Platonic thinker diving into Phenomena to find the Divine Being, to find something definite, complex, yet changeless and free from the uncertainties of sensation—the Archetypal mind in which live the "Ideas" of all things; it is the world of thought, above and beyond the world of Sense; but not the world of "Eternal objectless cognition." (Nityam Nirvishayam jñanam. Cp. Gough, Page 41).

(2) IN MORAL PHILOSOPHY:—

Just as the Upanishads teach that "the Spiritual Reality that underlies all things in Metaphysics has perce no cognition of objects; it transcends the relation of subject and object; it lies beyond duality—its Omniscience, is (not what Europeans mean by the Divine Omniscience), but, its irradiation of all things (Sarvabhogakṛt,—by which it gives light to all things and to all the modification of the minds of sentient beings. (Gough, Page 41)—; so also, in the sphere of Morals, they seem to teach a negative doctrine, an escape from action and the fruits of action, a state in which both merit and demerit are past. The sage, though he kills people, really "Neither kills them nor is killed." For, he and they are not really distinct. It is true that any immoral consequences of this doctrine are guarded, and protested against by Hindu writers. But, the immense gap is at once evident between such a Moral Philosophy and that of the age of Plato, which was chiefly occupied in discussing what was just and good, and the reason of their being so, and how to become just and good. Plato grappled with the identical problems of right and wrong, that now occupy and divide Herbert Spencer and the Christian School.

II—Plato's connection with his predecessors and successors in Greece:—

(A) IN METAPHYSICS:—

All Greek Philosophers, like the Hindus, sought the One, not content with the Many. But, instead of seeking it behind the Many, they sought it in the Many. They were convinced that the Many was not illusion, but reality, precisely because, it was the One assuming many forms, (I am not speaking here of the Eleatics, to whom the Many was non-existent.)

Now this One was thought of by the Ionics, as a Material basis or Hyle of the world, their Hen was Aistheton; the matter of which, the world was made was one, though its Nature was variously asserted to be fire, water, atoms, &c., &c.

Plato made a great step onwards, when he substituted for this search for a material basis,—a search for a Unity, (Hen), which was episteton, thought, not aistheton, perceived. Not in resolving fire and earth into forms of water, not in seeking for the permanent element in things as we see them, lay Plato's strength. In spite of many changes, we call a chair,—A Chair, and it is not mere matter,—it is a Chair. And, what we mean by a Chair is something grasped by thought, by comparison of many chairs till we grasp their common likeness. It is a name, representing a thing, which has a meaning only to a thinking mind, which is something more than a shifting Phantasmagoria of Sensations,—light, sound, touch, form, colour, &c.

It was, but natural, that Plato should give to his "Idea" of a chair a supraphenomenal existence in an upper world. He felt he had here something so much higher and more permanent than mere sensation could give. It was a great step to detect in things the presence of thought, and to create a world of thoughts or Ideas. Do not laugh at Plato's Ideal bottles and beds. Remember, he had also his ideal justice and goodness. He was struggling to define all things, whether mean or noble, in forms of thought, and not of mere sense.

But, we must also recognise that Plato's great successor Aristotle made a still further step. He is, sometimes, called less Idealistic than Plato; but, as Professor Green, of Balliol, pointed out, he is really more Idealistic; for, he not only regarded the beds and tables of this world as shadows in matter of the realities of thought, the ideas; he, not only saw the footstems of Thought in Things, but, saw that Things were really Thoughts; they were the realities, but they were so, because, they involved the Presence of Thought. The mere Ideas or Forms are now relegated to a secondary sphere of existence, as deuterai oniai; the highest realities, the protai oniai, were felt to be the Things, in which Form and Matter, Idea and Sensation were combined, in which the Elements of Sensation were reduced to a perfect order of thought, and all was known, not merely perceived.

Aristotle did but leave a certain un-known substratum; an aisthete hyle, because, he felt there was something, which baffled his complete analysis in the simplest concrete thing. Mill also has to talk of the un-known cause of our Sensations. But, we feel now more clearly that some day all must be known. We shall know even as we are known, every element embodied in the concrete thing, every form, every Substratum of Attributes will become to us infinite or quality, and not mere tode or Thing.

(B) In Moral Philosophy :—

The connection of Plato with his predecessors and successors in Moral Philosophy is still more important to an understanding of his Republic.

It is an old story, how the Morality of the Greeks was at first un-conscious, how it expressed itself in the enthusiastic admirations of Pindar, in the prudential Maxims of the Seven Wise Men. How it became more Religious in the Idea of Divine Nemesis, which stands like a thoughtful shadow behind the Greek Drama, and gives its truest pathos to the otherwise merely sensational series of murders and incests and revengeful deeds contrasted with heroic suffering and faithful love.

How it sank into scepticism and suicide with the Sophists and Eristics, playing with words, and slaying their own noblest aspirations in the fascinating game. Then came the mighty genius of Socrates, who brought Philosophy,—as was said,—from heaven to earth, who threw her earnest light upon the mists of conventional Morality, who taught that Virtue was knowledge and might be known; and was one in essence, even as Christians hold—"Whoever shall keep the whole law and yet stumble in one point, he is become guilty of all." (St. James, 2, 10). And Socrates was followed by Plato, who sought to find what Justice was apart from all her consequences, her rewards, and punishments, who strove hard to rise above the miasma of utilitarianism into the clear air of the love of the Supreme Good.

III. Plato's dialogues as a whole :—

There is no time for us to discuss the various theories as to the order and relation-ship of the Platonic dialogues of Schleiermacher, of Hermann, and of Nettleship with his three-fold division into dialogues, Socratic, Platonic, and Mature. It is enough for our present purpose to remind you that the Republic, with its Ideal state, (whose need has already been anticipated in the Euthydemus) is, by common consent, regarded as one of the most un-doubted and the most mature of Plato's works the brightest circle in that triple crown constituted by the Republic, the Timæus, and the Laws.

IV. The Republic in detail :—

What is Justice?—Is it possible?—Is it beneficial or profitable (Ophelimon)? Such are the three Natural divisions, into which the Republic falls, including in the first, (Book, I-IV.), in the second, (Books V-VII.), and in the third. (Books VIII-X.).

(A) What is Justice? (Book I-IV).

The first pages of the Republic may be thrown by careful analysis into a series of definitions going far on into Book II. They are each by the subtle dialectic of Plato veiling Logic in the play of Imagination, until the process of argument becomes as intangible as the process of conviction becomes tangible and ir-resistible, modified again and again, until they are rejected,—and a new start is made with a new definition.

The First part of Book I. asks,—"What is Justice?" simply—and the result reached is that, it cannot be defined as to do "good to friends, evil to foes," or, "good to the good, evil to the evil," or, in any other definition by utilitarian results. The only result arrived at by Justice is the production of Justice; its essential character is Moral, and not Utilitarian.

But, the quest of a Moral definition is rudely interrupted by a new conventional one, interposed by the playful giant, Thrasymachus, who represents what I might call the Politics of a Cleon and the Morality of an Alcibiades, or, of a Modern Society Journal. He asserts that Justice is the interest of the stronger, whereas we must try and show that, at least, it is the interest of the just man. It is not the Utilitarianism of brute force, it is at least the Utilitarianism of the refined Moral Philosopher,—not of Prince Bismarck, but, of John Stuart Mill. Of this Plato convinces his hearers by showing them that in reality and, in spite of all appearances, the Just Man is really and finally the Strong Man, so that the two interests coincide. As we should say, Justice is truly the survival of the fittest in the long run. Honesty is the best policy.

Book II. But, we have not yet reached a Moral definition. Glaucon points out that, it still remains an open question whether Justice is sought as a means to other things, or, as an end in itself, if we may use an Aristotelian phrase by anticipation.

The common opinion is plainly that, it is only sought as a means to other ends. And here comes in by illustration that charming story of Gyges which, I will read to you from Professor Jowett's Translation. (Book II. 359 B.-360 D). Here is shewn how readily a man flies to all in-justice, if only secured by the Magic Ring from its Evil Results.

Socrates once more asserts as strongly against the Magic Ring, as before against the playful giant, that Justice is desirable in itself alone. Challenged to prove this, he proceeds 368-399 B.) to construct an Ideal state, so that in it Justice may be better seen than in the Ideal individual.

We have now to trace three separate revolts,—made on the grounds of a narrow Utilitarianism, as though Utilitarianism meant only the happiness of a particular class, and not the greatest happiness of the greatest number—against the Self-denial implied in the Ideal state, Self-denial incurred on the way to happiness in a happy state.

The First revolt (Book II. Page 372) is an amusing one. The city has been painted in the simplest colors—with a Spartan asceticism, and a rusticity as of the Garden of Eden. And so, it is stigmatised as a "City of Swine."

Plato yields so far as to introduce the complexities and vices of civilisation, division of labor, war, &c. He proceeds to purge this new diseased state on the lines of Virne, but, the Robespierrian incorruptibility is resented by a Second Revolt, when it is found that the very rulers and guardians of the state, who have toiled and labored for its good, are not to be allowed large salaries or private property. The Soul of Plato's hearer ankers, as it were, after salaried Lieutenant-Governors and Secretaries of Departments. He revolts (Book IV. 419-423 A.) He says it is unjust to require so much Self-denial. Confused and thrown back, the searchers for Justice begin anew, with lighted torches. Sweeping aside the other virtues, employing a humorous Method of Residues, it is found that when Temperance, Courage, and Wisdom have been localised, described, and passed by, no place is found for Justice, save in the condition of the Soul, which harmonises and comprehends all these three. It is the Health of the Soul, the happy condition, when each part of the Soul attends to its own business, of ruling, or, of being ruled. (Book IV. 443 B.)

B. Is Justice Possible? (Book V-VII) :—

The Third Revolt does not occur until the definition of Justice is succeeded by the enquiry into the possibility of a Just State.

Here come the well-known Three Wares, which almost swamp the ship of Plato's state—the equality of women with men, the community of wives, the necessity and the difficulty of obtaining and duly educating the Philosophers, who are the only possible Rulers. The Sixth Book is more or less taken up with an account of the Second Education of the Rulers. They had already (Book II. 374 sqq. and Book III.) been taught the folly of the old Mythology, been taught that God could not commit adultery or lie or deceive, and they had received a high artistic and gymnastic education. They must now "go the longer road," become Philosophers, by seeing the universal Ideas, even the Supreme Idea of Good, which is almost Plato's God. It is impossible to follow out here the elaborate distinctions of sensation and thoughts by which (Book VI 504 A to 508 A, the Idea is reached.

It is enough for me to remind you of that great allegory of the Cave, in the beginning of the Seventh Book. There the rulers, alone freed from the bondage, which confines their fellows in the cave to the contemplation of shadows cast on the wall by Puppets moved in front of a fire, alone raised to the contemplation of the Puppets themselves, nay, of the earth and sky and sea, are bidden to return to the house of bondage, to teach the ignorant masses what are the realities of truth and justice, for which they must forsake the shadows of power and pleasure.

It is too much. A third revolt follows:—(Book VII. 519 E to 529 C.). But, Plato is stern. The rulers owe this to the state, which has educated them. Each class must work for the good of all. Disdaining all objections, this third wave is now bravely breasted, and the rest of the Seventh Book, occupied, by the detail of the final education of the Ruler-Philosophers. We must hurry on.

C.—Is Justice Profitable! (Ophalimon.) Books VIII to X:—Deeply interesting as it is, this concluding portion, of the Republic is, Philosophically, less important, and we must perforce, say no more than that in a series of profound Political Apocalypses, the graduated scale of unjust and corrupt states Timocratic, Oligarchic, Democratic, and Tyrannic is exhibited. No more eloquent Philosophy of Grecian History could be written, and it contains much also of Moral Philosophy. But, it helps us little to understand what Justice is, only to picture it vividly in that monarchic state ruled by the Philosophers, in which, after patient waiting, we see that Justice must produce happiness, when tried on a large scale, and under proper conditions.

It is a glorious picture; but, it is essentially a Political, not a Moral, still less a Spiritual Ideal. Even, when in the splendid burst of eloquence, which is called the Vision of Er, the Rewards of Justice and the pains of injustice, in a future life, are portrayed, even when the Transmigration of Life is chosen, not by any Law of Karma, but by a free choice of that life, which the Soul is fitted by its character to select, we feel that this is but utilitarianism projecting its shadow into the next life. (Book X. 617-18.)

V.—Summary of the Republic:—

We have seen two main questions pursued.

(a) What is Justice?—imperfectly answered:—

(b) Will the just man be happy?—This is elaborately answered by a concrete picture of Justice (Book IX 576. C.), contrasted with pictures of injustice, which fills out in detail the abstract idea of Justice formed, and the priori assertion of its profitableness made in (Book IV. 443 B. VI.) Criticism of the Republic, where it was defined as the Health of the Soul.

It only remains for me to lament that, with all its splendour Plato's Republic fails to grasp that essential Glory of Justice for its own sake, which is only possible for one who, in the Love of God, recognises the principle, the joy, and the justification of Justice. In the dim light of the vision of the "Idea of Good," in Book VI., he treads on the confines of Spiritual Illumination. But, it is only for a moment. His Soul soon falls to the lower plane of earthly thought.

Unable to conceive of Justice, save as made expedient by suitable surroundings, in a just state, glorified, rewarded, crowned, he falls into precisely the Social Conception of Virtue made easy, of an organisation in perfect harmony with its environment, which marks the closing pages of that work (the "Data of Ethics"), which represents the Mature Conception of Herbert Spencer, who, from the vision of Christ crucified, has fallen back upon precisely the same plane of thought, as that which was reached by the noblest of pre-Christian thinkers.

I will simply conclude with some quotations from Herbert Spencer, and from a great modern Man of Science, Mr. James Hinton, who, in his "Mystery of Pain," has fathomed the object of that pain, that Self-sacrifice, which seems to Mr. Spencer the great blot, while it is in truth the spot of intensest light, in God's Universe.

VI.—(Herbert Spencer "Data of Ethics," Page 279):—The coexistence "of perfect" man, and an "imperfect Society is impossible."

Given then the perfect Society, what will be the perfect man? (P. 255.)

Its ultimate form, then, altruism will be the achievement of gratification through sympathy with those gratifications of others, which are mainly produced by their activities of all kinds successfully carried on, sympathetic gratification, which costs the receiver nothing, but, in a gratis addition to his egoistic gratifications."

"While pain prevails widely, it is undesirable that, each should participate much in the consciousness of others; but, with an increasing predominance of pleasure, participation, in their consciousness, becomes a gain of pleasure to all." All pain quâ pain is wrong (P. 261). By all means, avoid the cross, it is a mere transition state.—Contrast Hinton's "Mystery of our Pain." (P. 16). Our experience is the working out of a change in Man, or, to speak in clearer and more familiar terms, it is carrying out of Man's redemption. The pain, which exhibits the highest good, we can, in our present state, "attain the pain," that is, of martyrdom and sacrifice. (Compare P. 82. It is evidently an entirely different) thing to say that, Sacrifice is good, and to say, pain is good. The true affinities of sacrifice are with pleasure, or with rapture even. It is only by evil want within that sacrifice can be otherwise than glad."

We can end with no noble words. Plato himself saw the glory of Self-denial:—I only want you to feel that by voluntary Self-sacrifice you will approach nearer to God in a day than by ages of the forest meditations of a Yogi; you will have done more to lift the veil which lies between you and God. (Cheers.)

The Reverend Lecturer spoke on the Subject for more than an hour and a half, and he was frequently applauded. The lecture was very impressive and effective, and it was listened to by the audience with great attention and interest.

After the speaker had finished his speech, the Revd. Chairman closed the proceedings of the evening with a few appropriate and prudent remarks, which afforded much satisfaction to those who were present. The Revd. Chairman said:—

Gentlemen,—No doubt your interest in the great work of Plato will have been heightened by the able lecture, to which we have just had the pleasure of listening. You will have remarked that the three grand central thoughts of the Author are the State, the Chief Virtues, and the Cares. These are the Subjects of the 4th, the 5th and the 7th Books of the Republic, and to them, especially, I would direct the attention of those, who have not yet studied the works as a whole.

Plato strikes the key-note to his master-piece, in a separate little story, which is well-worth-remembering. He tells how a friend of Socrates once discoursed to the sage of a golden age in the History of Athens, long gone by. The city was then the proud possessor of a race of heroes, who were as wise as they were valiant, and the very gods vied with each other in showering blessings on the land.

At this very time, there flourished farlout in the western seas a kingdom named Atlantis,—the mightiest, the world has seen. It was ruled by ten kings of Neptune's line, and while its chariots were numbered by thousands, its war-horses were numbered by hundreds of thousands. The Ten kings went forth to war at the head of their trained bands, and soon the whole of Africa, and the greater part of Europe lay at their feet. They realised the Importance of Athens, and finally directed their whole strength against the little city with intent to crush it. But, the Athenians rose in their might and repelled the invaders. Unhappily, however, an Earthquake occurred in the very hour of Victory, and swallowed up both conquerors and conquered. Atlantis, too, in all its glory, sank beneath the waves, so that now the Western Ocean rolls in triumph over the sand-banks, which are all that remain to mark the site of the once powerful kingdom.

And, what enabled Athens to overcome the brute force of the West?—It was the Wisdom of her sons. Let Wisdom, therefore, in the person of the Guardians Guide the State,—let Courage, the virtue of the soldiers, be full of noble daring, and let temperance be the crowning characteristic of the people. So in every man let us see the state in miniature. The Reason will manifest Wisdom. Courage will appear in the flights of the higher Passions, and the Desires will obey the Rein of Temperance.

Where then will Justice be?—To go a-hunting for it would be as if one were to search with a candle for that which he holds in his hand. For, is not the Man, who is wise and brave and temperate, also just?—Does he not do his own business well?—and let others alone to attend to theirs, and is not that the very Essence of Justice?—What we have been seeking for,—is simply the Virtue, which includes all the Virtues, and when a man has that,—he is happy.

In this way, we see the advantage of studying the state, as being simply man "written large." And, cannot help thinking that a state is at its best when it acts as if it were one Man. ENGLAND did so in the time of Cromwell, and became more than ever before a Power in Europe. ENGLAND is doing so now in the matter of purity of Morals, and the consuming fire of its horror-stricken conscience as if that of an individual, will speedily and effectively cauterise the noxious thing. You will have no difficulty in finding parallel examples in the history of your own country. The story of the Cate is a Picture of us all. We all sit for long with our eyes peering into the darkness and our backs to the SUNLIGHT OF TRUTH. Not many ever venture out into the broad light of day, most are content to ransack odd corners of the universe with the purblind eyes of a politician. Few look out upon the whole with the broad open gaze of the philosopher. (Cheers.)

One word, in conclusion, on the position which Plato claims for women. He would have them to be on a footing of equality with men. Now I feel very strongly that a country is in a bad way when it does not give to woman her due place and influence. Woman is, by Nature, truer, purer and nobler than man. But, deprived of that training, which would foster her powers; she sinks rapidly in the Moral scale, and each succeeding generation is likely to be inferior to the one before. She then lives merely to please her husband, and if he be bad, she becomes still worse, and drags him lower still.

In more propitious circumstances, on the other hand, a good education, and the confidence and Self-respect gained by the exercise of an independent power, will enable her to be what she really ought, viz :—the Elevator of Man; the Salt of Society, keeping it fresh and sweet; and hereby indirectly the Moral strength of a state.

It now remains for me simply to convey to the Revd. Mr. Smith your unanimous vote of thanks for his valuable lecture. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 5-30 P. M., with the customary votes of thanks accorded to the Chair, and the Reverend lecturer. (Vide, the Indian Mirror, &c.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, No 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 5th September, 1885, at 4-30, P.M., under the presidency of Babu Jogendra Nath Lahiri, B.A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Pramatha Nath Bose to deliver his lecture on—

Economy :—

The Speaker dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which, he said that, without Economy, no body can prosper in the world. So, we should first observe Economy in our expenses, before we can hope, to hoard up sufficient Money for our living in old age, when we are disabled to earn our livelihood.

Lord Chesterfield wrote :—

“A foul squanders away, without credit or advantage to himself, more than a Man of Sense spends with both. The latter employs his Money, as he does his time, and never spends a Rupce, of the one nor a minute of the other, but, in something that is either useful or rationally pleasing to himself or others. The former buys whatever he does not want, and does not pay for what he does want. His servants and tradesmen conspire with his own indolence to cheat him; and, in a very short time, he is astonished, in the midst of all these ridiculous superfluities, to find himself in want of all the real comforts and necessities of life.”

A Spendthrift is a person, who cannot render any service with country, much less to his family and friends. When extravagance takes the place of Economy, it leads to insolvency, and at last ruin. We should learn to cut our coat according to our cloth. So long as we cannot do so, we can seldom be called Economical. We should never live exceed our means. Because, by so doing, we will bring a disaster and misfortune on ourselves.

As far as you can, possibly, pay Ready Money for every thing you buy, and avoid bills. Pay that Money, too, yourself, and not through the hands of any servant, who always either stipulates poundage, or requires a present for his good word, as they call it. Where you have bills, pay them regularly every month, and with your own hand.

Never, from a mistaken Economy, buy a thing you do not want, because, it is cheap; keep an account, in a Bank, of all that you receive, and of all that you pay. For, no man, who knows what he receives, and what he pays, ever runs out.

I do not mean that you should keep an account of Annas and pies, that you may spend in petty expenses; they are un-worthy of the time, best remember, in Economy, as in every other part of life, to have the proper attention to proper objects, and the proper contempt for little ones. Every body should save a portion of his income, after meeting his daily necessary expenses. A penny saved is a penny got. This is an old Adage, which, those who are disposed to be Economical, can alone appreciate. True Economy is a great virtue. (Cheers.)

After the Speaker had resumed his seat, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 6 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, No., 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Monday, the 9th November, 1885, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Bhuth Nath De, B.A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Sarada Prasad Bose to deliver his lecture on—

The Dignity of Manners :—

The lecturer spoke on the Subject for upwards of an hour. He said that, a person, who has no Dignity of Manners, is not respected. Without cultivation, you can seldom expect to acquire Dignity of Manners.

The Politeness comes from the heart, and this being good, the rest will soon follow.

Honesty is not honesty, if it come not from within. Manner is a cloak of character. The first rule for Manner is Self-respect. Without this, a man is not only weak and bad, but unfit for Society. The want of it shows itself in two most disagreeable forms; viz :—(1) Adulation and (2) Acknowledgment. In any case, Adulation is bad, for it is dangerous, not only to the servile, but to those to whom it is addressed. Acknowledgment may often arise from shyness, but, more often is the fruit of a want of Self-respect. Both are to be sedulously avoided.

Self-respect is the acknowledgment of Manhood, of the good Soul. God has given you to take care of the part He has given you to play in life. Self-esteem is an arrogance of superiority in these points. In the young, it takes the form of conceit; in the older, of stateliness; and in the woman, of Vanity.

The Manner, in short, which a Man must aspire to, is one, which will give ease, and not embarrassment, to others. He should preserve a certain Dignity, but, yet be pliant. He should be open and frank; look you honestly in the face, speak out confidently, yet calmly; modestly, yet firmly; not be bluff or blunt, but, yet be free and simple.

In fact, let a Man be Natural, let him be in Society what he is anywhere; but, if he find his Natural Manner too rough, too loud, too curt, or too brutal, let him learn to tame it and calm it down.

But, Manners has various functions for various circumstances. Towards our elders, and superiors, we should often show our respect, not servile deference. Towards Women, gentleness; towards Juniors, tenderness; towards Inferiors, a simple Dignity, without condescension.

Solomon has said, there is a time to weep, and a time to laugh. There is not in fact sufficient reverence for the fair and the old.

A certain Dignity of Manners is essentially necessary to make even the most valuable characters, either respected or respectable in the world.

A man's fortune is frequently decided for ever by his first address. If it is pleasing, people are hurried involuntarily into a persuasion that he has a merit, which possibly he has not. As on the other hand, if it is ungraceful, they are immediately prejudiced against him; and unwilling to allow him the merit, which, it may be, he has.

An educated man is a dignified man. If you go to him, you will find him seated in his room, trying to do good to others. You will at once attract your attention, and draw your esteem. He is always grave. He is never fickle. He never talks too much. Nevertheless, he is not mute. He will speak to you when occasion requires. He will not be vain or proud, nor will he show his want of respect for any body, who goes to him. He is calm and collected. He is never abusive. He seldom loses his temper.

A person cannot acquire Dignity of Manners, unless he cultivates his intellect, and keeps the company of those educated men, who consider it to be their duty to maintain their Dignity in the various transactions of life. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting separated after 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, 196, Bow Bazar Street, on Thursday, the 3rd December, 1885, at 4-30 P.M. Babu Upendra Nath Chatterjee, B.A., was in the chair. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Nabin Krishna Bandyopadhyaya, to begin with his lecture on—

The Employment of Time :—

The Speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour. He said, Gentlemen,—how little do we reflect on the use and value of time! It is in every body's mouth, but in few people's practice. Young people are apt to think they have so much time before them, that they may squander what they please of it, and yet, have enough left; as great fortunes have frequently seduced people to a ruinous profusion.

Time is precious, life short, and, consequently, not a single moment should be lost. All sensible men know how to make the most of time, and put out their whole sum either to interest or pleasure. They are never idle, but continually employed either in amusements or study. It is a universal Maxim, that Idleness is the Mother of Vice. It is, however, certain, that Laziness is the inheritance of fools, and nothing can be so despicable as a sluggard.

Cato, the Censor, a wise and virtuous Roman, used to say,—"there were but three actions of his life that he regretted; viz:—

(1) Having revealed a Secret to his wife.

(2) That he had once gone by sea, when he might have gone by land.

(3) Having passed one day without doing anything." I, therefore, recommend to you to take care of Minutes; for Hours will take care of themselves.

Be doing something or other all day long; and, do not neglect half-hours and quarters of hours, which, at the year's end, amount to a great sum.

Never burden your mind with more than one thing at a time. Whatever business you have, do it the first moment you can. Never by halves, but, finish it without interruption, if possible.

Fix one certain hour and day in the week for your Accounts, and keep them together in their proper order. By which means, they will require very little time, and therefore you can never be much cheated.

Whatever letters and papers you have, keep docket and tie them up in their respective classes, so that, you may instantly have recourse to any one.

Business can never be done without Method. It raises the spirits for pleasures.

If, by accident, two or three hours are sometimes wanting for some useful purpose, borrow them from your sleep. Six, or, utmost Seven hours sleep in, for a constancy, as much as you or any body can want. More is only laziness and dozing, and is both unwholesome and stupifying.

If, by chance, your business or your pleasure should keep you up till four or five o'clock in the morning, rise exactly at your usual time, that you may not lose the precious morning hours, and that the want of sleep may force you to go to bed earlier the next night.

Know the true value of time. Snatch, seize, and enjoy moment of it. No idleness, no laziness, no procrastination. Never put off till tomorrow, what you can do today.

Employ your time usefully. Learn to estimate the value of time. A person, who does not know the value of time, can seldom become a great man. If you wish to educate yourself, you should first realise the Importance of time. Because, unless, you do so, you cannot shine at School.

A person, who neglects his studies, cannot acquire Knowledge. A boy, who attends his School regularly, pays attention to his lessons, and due homage to his teachers, can alone be expected to become a useful member of Society in after-life, and in course of time, he becomes an Ornament to the Institution, to which he is sent for Instruction.

He soon becomes Ornament to the Society, to which he belongs. He becomes the pride of his family and friends. Those, who employ him, are pleased with his services. They always endeavour to promote his interest, because, they are satisfied with him. This is due to the fact that he gives close attention to his work, having learnt to employ his time usefully, from his very child-hood.

To advise the ignorant, relieve the needy, comfort the afflicted, are duties that fall in our way almost every day of our lives.

A man has frequent opportunities of mitigating the fierceness of a party; of doing justice to the character of a deserving man; of softening the envious, quieting the angry, and, rectifying the prejudiced, which are all of their employments suited to a reasonable nature, and bring great satisfaction to the person, who can busy himself in them with discretion.

The man, who lives under an habitual sense of the Divine Presence, keeps up a perpetual cheerfulness of temper, and enjoys every moment the satisfaction of thinking himself in company with his dearest and best of friends. The time never lies heavy upon him. It is impossible for him to be alone. His thoughts and passions are the most busied at such hours, when those of other men are the most in-active. He is no sooner steps out of the world than his heart burns with Devotion, swells with hope, and triumphs in the consciousness of that Presence, which everywhere surrounds him; or, on the contrary, pours out its fears, its sorrows, its apprehensions, to the great Supporter of its existence.

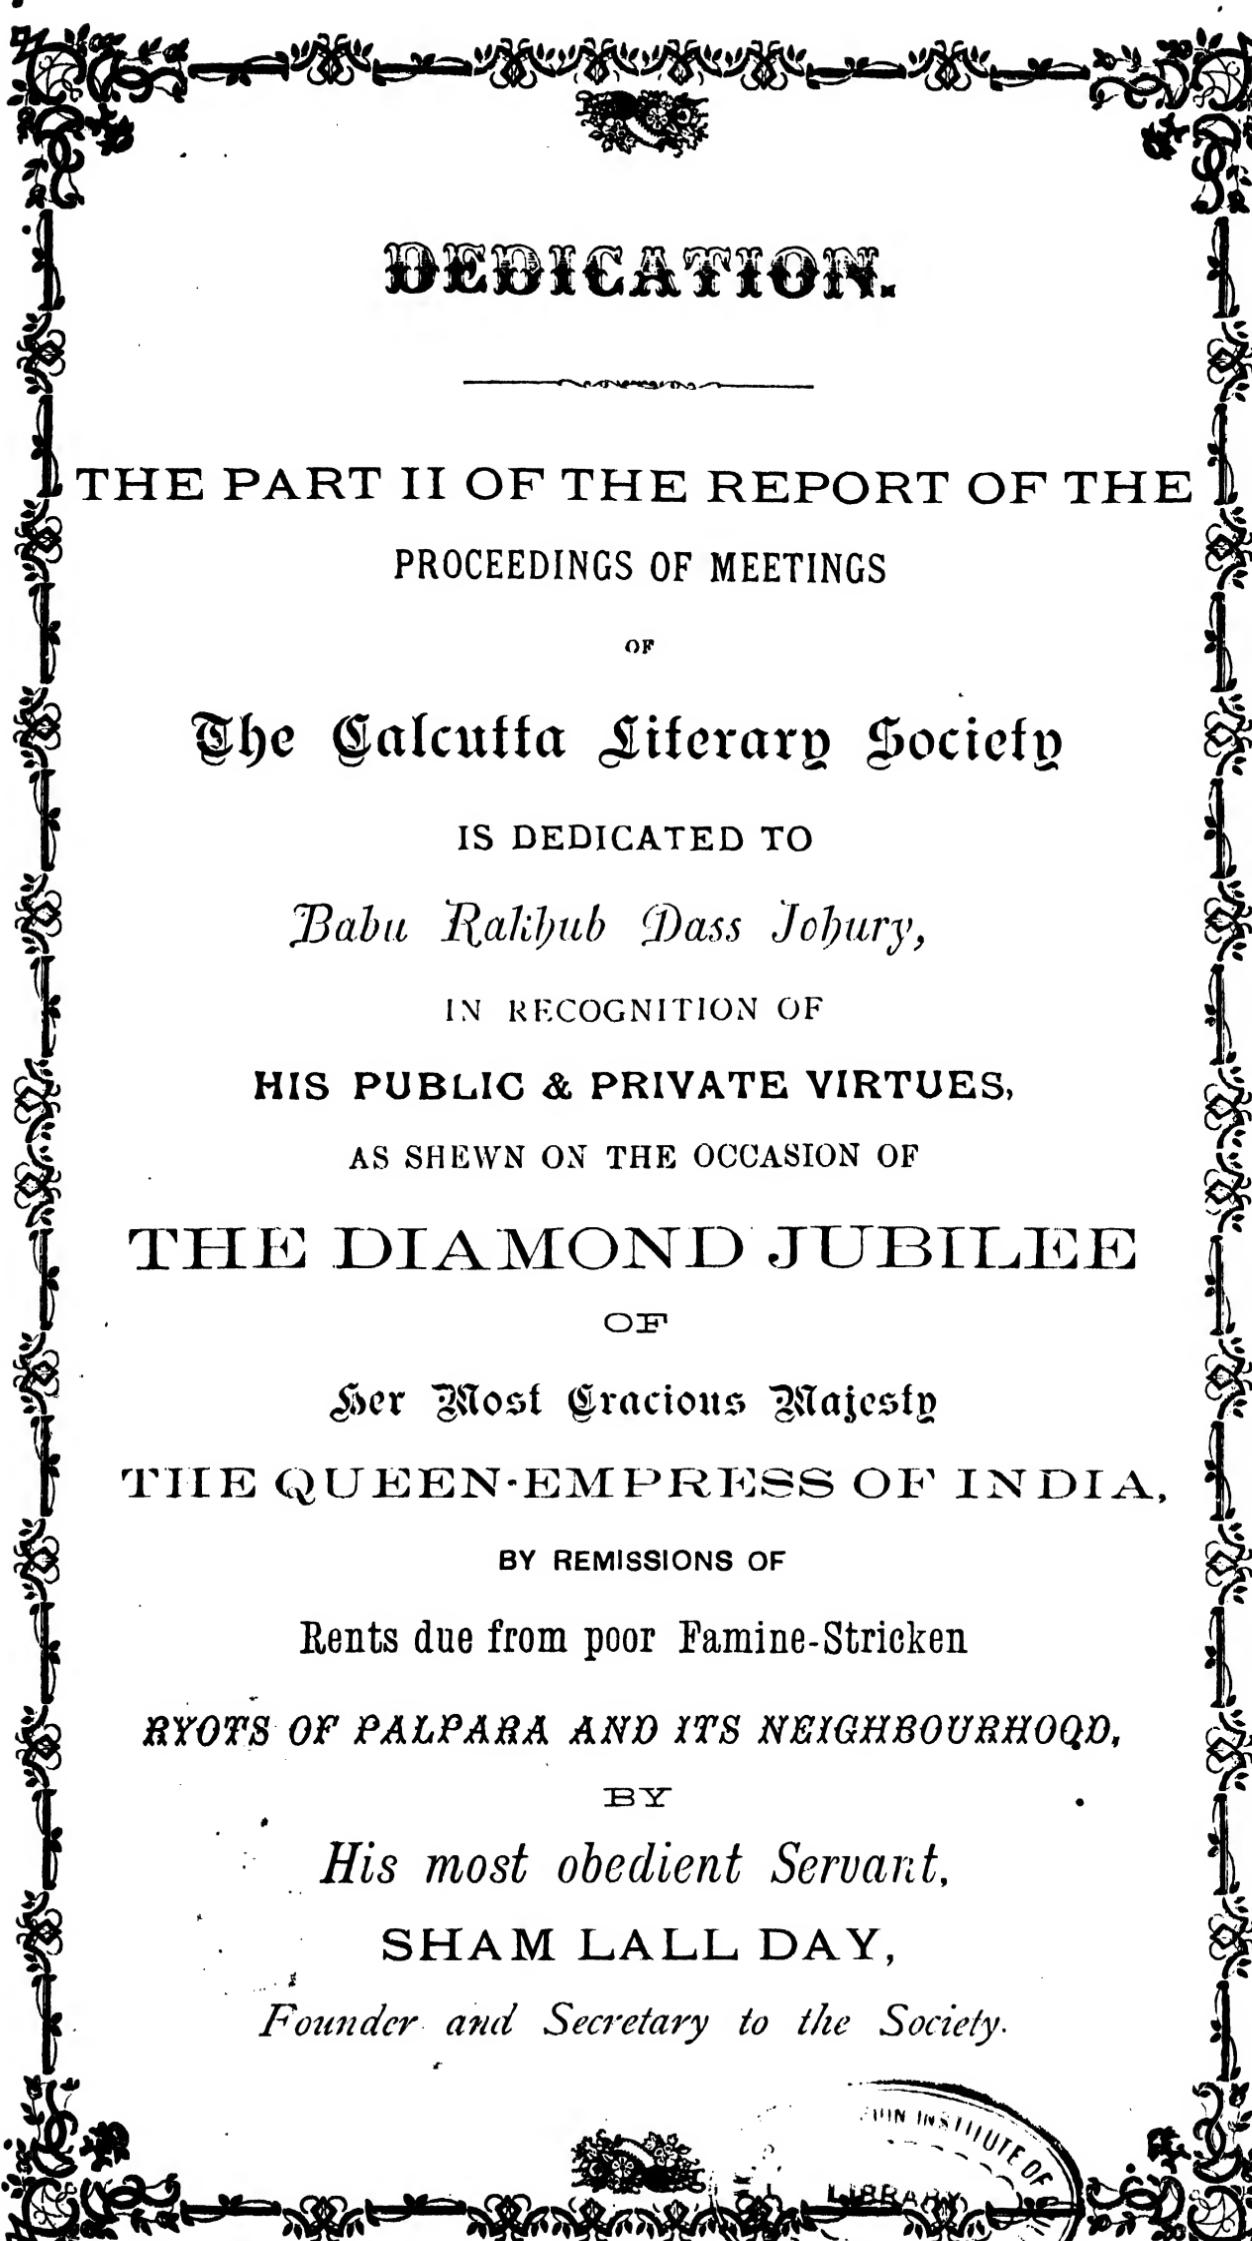

A person, who does not appreciate the value of time, neglects his work, as he was in the habit of neglecting his studies, while at school. A bad habit, when once contracted, can never be got rid of easily. We should take good care, therefore, when training our children to teach them to learn the value of time. We should all remember that time flies. It minds no body, it is always on its wings. When once gone, no gold can turn it back again.

A child, that is five years old in the beginning of this year, will become six years old, after the expiration of twelve months. No money can purchase time, when once gone. We should not, therefore, waste it in vain. We should not throw it away. No repentance can bring it back. We might repent for days, months, and years, and, when we grow grey-headed, we can never become young.

An infant grows into boyhood. A boy grows into manhood. A man becomes grey-headed, as time goes on, as year after year roll over him, and work their time. We should, therefore, bear this fact in mind. We should not lose sight of it, that when we have got into the habit of neglecting our duties, we can never learn to employ our time usefully, and, that by doing so, we can never expect to gain the regard of other people, and, under such circumstances, we must lead a miserable life. Therefore, I repeatedly press upon you, Youngmen, to learn to Employ your time usefully. (Cheers.)

After the Lecturer had taken his seat, amidst Cheers, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer. The Meeting terminated at 7 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

I am glad to announce to you that the following distinguished personages have signified their willingness to become Members of the Society, during the session, 1885 ; Viz :—

- His Highness Asaf Jah Musaffar-ul-Mamalik, Nizam-ul-Mulk, Nizam-ud-Dawlah Nawab Mir Sir Mahbub Ali Khan, Faiz Jangh, G.C.S.I., Nizam Sahib of Hyderabad, ... 1-6-85.

- Rajah Ran Bahadur Singh, Sahib of Tikari, ... 21-5-85.

Gentlemen, I am extremely sorry to announce to you that the Society has lost two of its prominent and distinguished Patrons and Members. I mean, His Highness the late Raj Roup Koor, Maharajah Sahib of Tikari, and His Highness the late Asaf Jah Musaffar, Maharaj-Adhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan. The latter was also the Vice-President of the Society. We have to mourn over these two untimely deaths.

The late Maharaj-Adhiraj of Burdwan was one of the oldest Members of the Society, and during His Highness's lifetime he was always found at the head of the Society and took the most important decisions of the Society. Questions of the Society were always referred to him, and he was not only the Head-Lord of the Society, but, in fact, a good friend and ally. The presence of his Highness in the Society was a great blessing, which I think will be missed.

Gentlemen, I am glad to say that a distinguished Patron, Mr. ... has been elected to the Society, and we are sure that his presence will be a great blessing to the Society.

The Office of the Society was closed in honor of the memory of the late illustrious Maharaj-Adhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan and the late Maharaj Sahib of Tikari.

Gentlemen, it is with great pleasure that I beg to announce to you that the Calcutta School and the Bow Bazar Branch, that were established under the auspices of this Society, on the 1st March, 1882 and 24th July, 1882, respectively, are progressing favorably. The Examiners were all satisfied with the results of their Examination, and they all have given testimonials of their approbation by recording their respective opinions in writing.

Gentlemen, at the special request of our distinguished Millionaire, Rajah Sir Sonarendra Mahan Tagore Bahadur, Kt., C.I.E., Medical Doctor, &c., a Music Class was opened at the premises of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, since Saturday, the 10th January, 1885, under his kind patronage. The thanks of the Society are hereby given to the Rajah Bahadur for this.

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that, a Middle Class English School was also opened on the 20th November, 1885, at Haraganj Road, Salkes, (Howrah), under the auspices of this Society, under the designation of the Calcutta School, Salkes Branch.

The grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to His Highness the Nizam Sahib of Hyderabad-Dewan, G.C.S.I., an illustrious Patron of the Society, for His Highness's making Contribution to the Society, on the 30-6-85. His Highness expressed words of encouragement and sympathy with the work and efforts of the Society.

In conclusion, I beg to tender my best thanks to the Patrons and Members of the Society, and also to the press, in particular, for their active co-operation in furthering the objects of the Society.

Now, I pray to God that He may bless the Society in its laudable undertakings, year after year. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year, which were also duly passed.

The following Elections were then made for the next five years :—

The proposal was carried by acclamation.

After the Elections were made, the Chairman introduced Babu Nagendra Nath Chatterjee to the Meeting, and asked him to deliver his lecture on—

The Life of Julius Caesar :—

The speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, although a General, Caesar possessed a true knowledge of Literature, which was manifested in the Commentaries. Of a few Generals, whom the world produced, Caesar, perhaps, was entitled to the highest position, not only as a General, but also as a man of intelligence and literary powers.

Julius Caesar descended from an old Roman family, known to 100 B.C. He was married at an early age to Cornelia, the daughter of Cinna,— the great statesman of the Roman Republic.

He was one of the greatest speakers at Rome. Caesar was probably the greatest man of antiquity. Never was a man so much loved and so much feared. He was a great statesman, a great General, a great statesman, a great General, a great statesman, a great General.

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

As a General, he was endowed with the rarest Military gifts. He had a keen eye of discrimination and great presence of mind. He did not lurch into Military life, till the age of forty, in spite of which, he proved himself to be a most able General.

In addition to his Military fame, General made no very less grand a figure in the literary world. He wrote several works, which have been much praised for purity of language and clearness of style.

His memorable career was brought to an end by the violent hands of Britons, in the year 44 B.C.

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman delivered a neat little speech. He thanked the lecturer for his interesting speech, and hoped that, the Society would always be in a satisfactory condition, and wished it success, not only in the present year, but, for many years to come. (Cheers.)

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, then, said, Gentlemen, before this Meeting disperses, I would, on behalf of the Members of the Society, take this opportunity to offer our most sincere thanks to the Chairman, for his kindly presiding here this afternoon.

The motion was carried with acclamation.

After this, the Meeting broke up at 7 P. M.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, on Tuesday, the 6th April, 1886, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Hari Chandra Sanyal, B.A. The Meeting was very largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Nagendra Nath Chatterjee to deliver his lecture on—

Man's Duty towards God :—

The lecturer dwelt on the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, Man is placed between God and his fellow-creatures.

He must naturally have some duties to perform towards God. As God has created man, and has placed him in this world, that he might love his Creator, thank Him, and by serving Him faithfully in the exercise of the acts of His free-will, be worthy and deserving of enjoying hereafter an eternal life.

Since God is the origin of every good, and we have received everything through His bounty and goodness, it is, but, natural that, we should love God with all our heart, with all our Soul, and with our whole mind.

To serve God, means—to serve Him, both by internal and external acts. Internal acts are those, by which we admire the existence and majesty of God; and, by the contemplation of the beauty of this visible world, we are led to love the invisible and in-comprehensible King, and His infinite perfections.

External acts are those, by which not only our mind, but, our body also, unites with the Soul in serving and praising God.

For instance, by offering to God our works of labours; by raising a temple in His name; by bowing our heads to His Majesty in adoration; by praying and offering thanksgiving, and by singing His praise. The reason is that, as our Soul is created by God, so also is our body, consequently, the body must pay that homage and tribute of gratitude to the Creator. (Cheers.)

There is another reason, why we should externally worship God. Namely, as hatred and love are intensified by external acts, words, and gestures, so, in like manner, our love and adoration are increased in intensity, by exterior acts. (Cheers.)

As man is composed of body and Soul, so, he should worship with body and Soul. We must observe that, whenever necessary, and in times of urgency and need, we invoke the holy name of God as a witness to our acts and deeds, and make vows that, if Almighty God, would be pleased to grant this or that favor, we would offer in thanksgiving and to His praise this or that thing. God is everywhere, and He sees our actions. (Cheers.)

The lecturer continued that, every man has a duty to perform toward his Creator. God should be our all in all; He not only created us, but, supports us, and carries us through all our difficulties, with which we are surrounded on all sides.

God is our only help-mate. He alone can extricate us from want. He alone can keep us to the path of duty. He alone can enable us to judge right from wrong. He alone can give us the necessary strength to do what is right, and to avoid what is wrong. He alone can give us all that we want. His door is always open to us. If we go to Him, He will not drive us away. (Cheers.)

If we go to a neighbour, he will think that, we want something from him, and he, therefore, shuns us. Even our best friends will forsake us in the time of our need, misery, and agony.

When we lie in the bed of disease, God never forsakes us, though, our best friends may do so. Our wives and children might be annoyed with us, when we suffer from prolonged sickness, but, God sends us all the comforts, which we need at such direful moment of our lives. (Cheers.)

When we are hungry, God, supplies us with food. When we are thirsty, He gives us drink. He is never vexed with all that, He has to do for us. He is never tired, although, He works for us all the day and the whole night. He never feels weary, though we repeatedly ask for favors in His hands. (CHEERS.)

He made the Sun shine. He made the Moon to cheer us, with her mild rays. He directs the clouds to give us rain. He made the trees to grow, and to yield us fruits in seasons. He made the fields to yield corn, so that, we might reap them in harvest season. Can we be wanting in our duty towards such a merciful God?—No—Never.

To be dutiful, is to be obedient to His Will. If we can say, Oh God, Thy Will be done. Resign ourselves and all to Him, we will then never be miserable, or in want. (CHEERS.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the Lecturer for the great interest he takes in the welfare of the Society, and for his instructive and interesting address.

The Meeting came to a close at 6 P. M., with votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned lecturer.

A very largely attended public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 9th August, 1886, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nanda Dulal Pyne, B.A.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Grish Chandra Chowdhery to commence with his lecture on—

Vanity :—

The learned Speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, a proud man is full of vanity. So, be extremely on your guard against Vanity. It is to be imagined, by how many different ways Vanity defeats its own purposes. You must never seem to affect the character, in which you have a mind to shine. Be inwardly firm and steady. Know your own value, whatever it may be, and act upon that principle. But, take great care to let no body discover that, you do know your own value. Whatever real merit you have, other people will discover, and the people always magnify their own discoveries, as they lessen those of others.

He always thinks much of himself, and very little of others. In his own estimation, he considers himself to be great, though he is but a puny human being, entirely dependent upon others for his support.

Wise people consider all is vanity. There is nothing real in this world. What we think of, is vain. We might dream of riches, of power, but, all vanish away, when we awake. We cannot realise much, though we dream of many things. What we cannot realise, is neither real, nor substantial. (Cheers.)

A person, who has received a good education, and is well-bred, is never vain. He not vain, for you must recollect that, you are nothing. Until, you can get a footing in this world by the display of your reason and intellectual faculty, the people must naturally think little of you.

A vain person never leaves his foot-prints on the sands of time. He is always proud. Every body hates him. No body likes his company. When he makes his appearance in public, every body laughs at him, derides him, and he is never comfortable and happy. He always feels unhappy. He entertains many fond wishes, which pass away like day-dreams, and are never realised.

A person, who hopes for too much, gets little. This is always the case with the vain and the proud. He meets with disappointment at every step of his life. He is always sad and dejected. You can find out when you see him that, he is brooding on something visionary. (Cheers.)

Like Achanachar's vision, every thing passes before his mental eyes, and he thinks that, he can catch it. He does so, and he is deceived. He finds out his deception, when it is too late, and he cannot then help it. He curses Start, under which he was born. He curses his friends, his neighbours, and sometimes even his father and mother. This is all that a vain person does, and he gains nothing at the end, but, on the contrary, he loses every thing. He, at last, loses the little wealth, which his father might have left him. He loses the friendship of his neighbours and relatives.

My advice is, therefore, to you, Gentlemen, never be vain and never be proud. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting separated at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimitola Street, on Friday, the 5th November, 1886, at 4.30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Loke Nath Nandi, B.A.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Mana Mahan Dass to deliver his lecture on—

Contemplation :—

The speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, Man is a contemplative being. The essence of the spirit, which is commonly called the Human Soul, makes it contemplative.

Rational contemplation both profitable and delightful. Contemplating the heavenly bodies raises our minds to adore the power and glory of the Deity. Viewing the earth with its various animals, excites us to admire His wisdom and benevolence, and the profusion of beautiful and salutary vegetables shows His super-abundant goodness and condescension.

Directing and fixing the intellectual eye upon suitable objects, attended with proper reflections, is productive of the greatest advantages, as well as the most refined delights.

By accustoming our minds to this employment, there is not an object in Nature, but, must forcibly excite our admiration and gratitude to our heavenly Maker.

Who can survey the stary heaven, glowing with living sapphires - the Sun flaming in the forehead of the morning sky, or the Moon rising in unclouded majesty, and not cry out with the holy Psalmist.

The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handi-work! When we look around us, and survey the earth, on which we live, the various animals with which it is peopled, and the profusion of vegetables, with which it is clothed and adorned, we are lost in astonishment, and are ready to exclaim, in rapture, Great God! How sublime, how beautiful, how varied are Thy works!—Not the smallest blade of grass that trembles in the air, but, loudly proclaims its Great Creator. The radiated daisy, the lovely violet, the blooming rose, the stately elm, and the majestic oak, all declare with a united voice,—the hand that made us is Divine.

It is absurd to lose the beauties of Nature, by always living in populous cities.

Now that we live in this world, not only for ourselves, but, also, for our family and children, we are obliged to be contemplative. To contemplate upon things, as we see them. We look upon the Sun, the Moon, the Stars and the Sky. We begin to contemplate, as to who has ushered them into existence! It is the Nature of man that he is contemplative.

The Soul could not exist, unless, it occupied itself now and then with contemplation. We contemplate, as to what we should do, and what we should avoid from doing. That is called the contemplative part of our Nature. God has made it so. We cannot act against His Will.

A person, by being contemplative, is often led to dream now and then. Almaschar had his vision, as portrayed in the Arabian Night's Thoughts, that was not contemplation. He dreamt of wild things, which could never be realised. He thought that, he was one day to become the Governor of the world, to be possessed of vast wealth and fortune, which no body else possessed. That was rightly called a mere dream, and not contemplation.

If we contemplate upon the changes, which Nature works with the decline of the times and of the age, in which we live, if we contemplate the things of this world—that surely is not contemplation, pure and simple. When we direct our thoughts to the Great Creator of the Universe—to the Father of all, to the Disposer of events, as we find them, that is contemplation, which fulfills the best desire of the Soul.

It is God's Will that we should not only contemplate the changes of the seasons, upon the flowers and the fruits, which, the change of our climate, produces for our comfort and happiness, but, also, we should contemplate the root of all those, who, at His command, brought the whole world into existence from nothing, who said unto Chaos that, out of Thee shall come out the beautiful world, with all its races of men, animals, fruits and flowers, with all their varieties, and at His word, all that we see around us, came into existence. When we contemplate all this, our Soul is enraptured, and lost in meditation. (Cheers.)

After the learned speaker had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

Proceedings of the Thirteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimitola Street, on Monday, the 10th January, 1887, at 4 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee. The Meeting was largely attended.

The Thirteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimitola Street, on Monday, the 10th January, 1887, at 4 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee.

On the Chairman's taking his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, said :—

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

To Their Highnesses the Nizam Sahib of Hyderabad-Deccan, G.C.S.I., and Jangh Bahadur Khan, C.I.E., Rajah Sahib of Nannara, who are illustrious Members of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their making contributions to the Society, on the 8th March and 29th September, 1886, respectively.

The grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to His Highness the Geakwar Sahib of Barada, G. C. S. I., an illustrious Patron of the Society, for His Highness' Liberal Contribution made to the Society, on the 4th December, 1886. His Highness very kindly expressed his sympathy with the work and efforts of the Institution.

Gentlemen, The cordial thanks of the Society are also tendered to His Highness Sir Bhagvat Singhji, G. C. S. I., Thaker Sahib of Gondol State, for His Highness' voluntarily presenting to the Society, on the 24th May, 1886, the following two works of His Highness; viz:—

- (1) Journal of the visit to England in 1883,
- (2) Proceedings of the Installation Ceremony of His Highness Sir Bhagvat Singhji, G. C. S. I., Thaker Sahib of Gondol State, on the 25th August, 1884.

Gentlemen, it is with great pleasure that, I beg to announce to you that, the Calcutta School and its Bow Bazar Branch, that were established under the auspices of this Society, on the 1st March, 1883, and on the 24th July, 1884, respectively, are progressing favorably.

The Examiners were all satisfied with the results of the Annual Examination, and they all have given testimonials of their approbation by recording their respective opinions in writing.

Many thanks are due to the Gentlemen, who inspected the Schools last year, as also to those, who conducted the Annual Examination of the boys.

There is but one remark of great importance to be added in this place. It is very gratifying to find that the School have already been fortunate enough in securing the sympathies of many illustrious Noblemen and Gentlemen.

Gentlemen, I am also glad to inform you that, on the 5th April, 1886, another Middle Class English School, under the designation of the Calcutta School, Kansaripara Branch, was opened, at the premises, No. 81, Baranasi Ghose's Street, Calcutta, under the auspices of this Society.

In the middle of June, 1886, the Calcutta School (Main) was removed from No. 50, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sova Bazar, to a large, three storied and well ventilated new spacious building, No. 24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta.

The Office of the Calcutta Literary Society was also removed to that fine building, since June, 1886.

Gentlemen, the best thanks of the Society are hereby tendered to those, who have shown sympathy with, and appreciation of the effort of the Society, and who, very kindly, took part at the Meetings, and expressed words of encouragement with the work of the Society.

In conclusion, allow me to take this opportunity of expressing my deep sense of gratitude to the Patrons and Members of the Society, and to the Press, in particular, for the kind interest they take in the welfare of this Literary Institution.

Now may God bless the Society with every success. (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts of the Society, for the year 1886, which were also passed.

The Chairman, then asked Babu Mahendra Nath Bose to deliver his lecture on—

Primitive Aryans:—

The speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, as regards the Aryans of the Primitive Aes, men were quite in the dark. He referred to his hearers to the pages of Mr. Lubbock's Pre-Historic Times and Taylor's Works, respectively.

He said that, there was a man, who enlightened many a man as regards the antiquities of Ancient India, but, that man was lost, and the loss was ir-repairable—meaning, the late Dr. Rajendra Lala Mitra, C. I. E.,—we shall not look upon his life again. Perhaps, he could enlighten Dr. Sir W. W. Hunter, K. C. S. I., himself, as regards the geniuses of the Primitive Aryans, respectively.

He continued that, the Aryans of the Primitive Age were a different class of people from what we now find them to be. They differed in their mode of living. They differed in food, in dress, and in drink, and were we now to meet with an Aryan of the olden times, we would not find his prototype in the present Aryan Race.

The old Aryan was a person of Spiritual type. His Spirituality was of the greatest importance to him. He always subordinated his animal cravings to his Spiritual Nature. It was this, that made the Primitive Aryans great, as they were great in wisdom, learning and knowledge, great in self-sacrifice, and in every thing, that makes humanity a fit subject of study by those, who wish to exhibit man in his Spiritual Nature to the world.

The development of the Soul was the one great aim of the Primitive Aryan. He likened his Soul unto a lava burning with fire, by the power of which, every low desire might be burnt and destroyed, and find no existence in the human breast.

India is the only country, even in her present degraded condition, where the Spirit, finds its solace in all that is heavenly and graceful,—in all that is inward,—and not external, where Spirituality still hovers in the atmosphere, and where the external surroundings still stimulate the Soul to soar upwards, and do not fetter it with the objects of this world.

Leaving its lofty Spirituality aside, there was still, another aspect of the Soul, the study of which will astonish the world; Viz.:—its Religious aspect, its many virtues, its un-bending rectitude, and the loftiness of its animated desire. Out of this Spiritual development, the domestic life of the Primitive Aryans was moulded into proper shape and form.

It was one perpetual source of comfort and ease to all the members of the family, who live together under one common roof, and out of which grew the Old Joint-Hindu-Family-System,—the admiration of the world. But, which is, at present, a source of constant trouble and discord, under the influence of the present civilization. It was its Spirituality, which made India great, and which we ought to study at the present time. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then made a very eloquent speech. He said that, the Report, which was read by the Secretary, has furnished information regarding the Society and its two Schools, and he need not, therefore, repeat them, in detail, with which it had to deal. The Calcutta Literary Society has been doing useful work, so far as lies in its power, and he, therefore, tendered his cordial thanks to the Secretary, for his taking so much trouble for the Society.

He expressed his admiration for the thorough manner, in which the Society had been conducted. He said that, he knew the Secretary for several years indeed, since the foundation of the Society, in 1875, and he could bear ample testimony to the fact that, he did not work for a name. He thanked the gentlemen for their attendance, and he thought they had good reasons to compliment the indefatigable Secretary to the Society, for the highest testimony to the good work, which he was doing.

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

May the giver of all good bless the Society for many years yet to come. (Cheers.)

The Meeting terminated at 6-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

A large number of gentlemen assembled at the hall of the Calcutta School, 24, Nimtola Street, on Saturday, the 5th February, 1887, at 4-30 P. M., to hear the lecture of Babu Mahesh Chandra Bandyapadhyaya on—the Meeting was held under the presidency of Babu Mahendra Nath Dass, B.A.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to begin.

The learned speaker dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, Generosity is doing something more than we are obliged to do. The moment a person foregoes his right in favor of another, and grants him more than he can demand, that moment he becomes generous.

Generosity produces Generosity. A truly generous man looks for no return for his generosity, and, therefore, he is not disappointed, if he bestows his favours upon an unworthy object. Men do not often care to be outdone in generosity.

Man should always possess a generous-heart, and be forgiving, if he expects others to forgive him for his trespasses.

Generosity can only dwell in a magnanimous heart. It is true generosity that enables him to be forgiving. A generous man always possesses a large heart where he finds room for other people to sit beside him. (Cheers).

He conducts himself in such a way, as to attract notice, and to become a tool in the hands of others to show his generosity to his fellow-men. You can ill-treat him, he will forgive you, nay, treat you so well that you will be ashamed, at the end, of your past conduct.

We should be generous, not only to our families, but, to our neighbours and fellow-men also,—without distinction of Caste, Colour, Creed, or Nationality. (Cheers).

After the speaker had finished his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No 24, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 14th March, 1887, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Lalit Kumar Bose, B. A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Parash Nath De to deliver his lecture on—

The Advantages of Education :—

The lecturer dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, Education means, training of young men. Education has its advantages and disadvantages. A person who is ill-educated, will do immense harm to Society. Ill-educated men cannot know themselves. They cannot seek the good of others. They feel always miserable at the happiness of others. They think, as if they are doing a thing, that they should not do. They will never try to promote the good of other people. An ill-educated person is, therefore, worse than an ignorant man. The latter will be content with what he has, and, what he acquires at the bidding of other people.

A well-Educated person is an acquisition to Society. His company is always sought for. He will never tell you that, he was too busy to give his attention to your services. He will always be ready to obey your call. He will always be at your service. He will never tell you that, he is unable to attend to your wishes.

The Education, that is imparted in our Schools is defective, in various ways. If the quality of that Education is not improved, it will hardly produce many good men, amongst us. Good education is like a jewel, that will brighten and adorn even the most deformed person. Good education will help a person to learn good breeding, and good manners. Unless, a person is well-bred, he cannot be said to have shared the benefits of good education. (Cheers).

After the speaker had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dispersed at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimtola Street, on Friday, the 15th April, 1887, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nitya Gopal Sarkar, B. A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Gakul Chandra Dhar to deliver his lecture on—

Travelling :—

The Speaker dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour. He said that, travelling was of very great importance to every body, who wished to know for himself what was going on around him. A knowledge of the habits and customs of other peoples is essentially necessary, to enable a man to make himself thoroughly experienced in the ways of the world.

A person might educate himself, might acquire knowledge, and grow in wisdom, but, all that must go for nothing, until, he acquires the experience of the world. But, the latter cannot be acquired without travel.

A person, who sticks to his home, can seldom be expected to impart practical instruction to his fellow-brethren.

A lover of home likes solitude. He shuns the company of others, and cannot, therefore, expect to possess, all that is necessary to make him a master of himself. As Pope said, the proper study of mankind, is man. If you wish to know others, you should travel from one end of the country to the other, in order to see with your own eyes, what other Nations think of you. Until, you know that, you cannot possibly become humble and penitent by comparing your condition with that of others.

The state of Society differs in different countries. Other Nations are different from ourselves. You cannot know them, unless, you quit home, and subject yourself to all the inconveniences, which travel must entail upon you.

This is the reason why Europeans travel to most distant lands. Wherever they go, they not only try to utilise the resources of other people, but, to take advantage of all that is good in them.

The Bengali generally likes his own home. He is, therefore, despised. If you wish to avoid of being despised, you should leave home, and begin to travel, and benefit by the example of enterprising Races.

Travel, in the younger person, is a part of education,—in the elder, a part of experience. Young men should travel under some tutor of great experience. The things to be seen and observed are the Courts of Princes, the Courts of Justice, the walls and fortifications of cities and towns, and, the havens and harbour, antiquities and ruins, libraries, colleges and lecture-rooms, where any exist, in short, whatsoever is memorable in the places, where they go. After all of which, the tutors, or pupils, ought to make diligent enquiry.

Let the traveller carry with him some card, or book, describing the country, where he travelleth, which will be a good key to his enquiry.

Let him also keep a diary. Let him not stay long in one city or town, more or less, as the place deserveth,—but not long

Let him procure recommendation to some persons of quality, residing in the place whither he removeth, that he may use his favor in those things, he desireth to see or know. Thus, he may abridge his travel with much profit.

As for the acquaintance, which is to be sought in travel, that which is most of all profitable, is acquaintances, with the Secretaries, and employed men of Ambassadors. For, so in travelling in one country, he shall suck the experience of many.

Let him also see and visit eminent persons of all kinds, which are of great name abroad, that he may be able to tell how the life agreeth with the fame.

When a traveller returneth home, let him not leave the countries, where he hath travelled altogether behind him; but, maintain a correspondence by letters with those of his acquaintance, which are of most worth. Let his travel appear rather in his discourse, than in his apparel or gesture.

To derive any advantage from travelling, it is not sufficient to pass through different countries. We ought to know how to travel. We ought to make a proper use of our eyes, and turn them towards the most important objects.

Many gain less information from travelling than from books. Those travel, without guide, can discern nothing. Others do not improve, because, they do not take pains to acquire information.

There is a great difference between travelling to see a country, and travelling to see the inhabitants. Travel confirms the natural bent of the mind and will either make a man good or bad. For, when a man returns from his travels, his character is generally fixed for life.

To travel for travelling's sake, is only to wander about like a Vagabond. To travel for improvement, is even too vague an object for mere improvement, without having some particular object in view, amounts to nothing.

Visiting Foreign countries and surveying the various productions of Nature make a man perfect himself. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had concluded his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting terminated at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No 24, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 16th December, 1889, at 2 P. M., under the presidency of Pandit Kali Prasanna Vidyaratna. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Pandit Bene Madhab Tarkalankar to deliver his lecture on—

The Life and Teachings of Kalidas :—

The learned Pandit dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour and a half, in the course of which he said that, Kalidas was the Prince of Sanskrit Poets, and gave to the audience certain very interesting traits in the Great Poet's Character, and giving his opinions upon the masterly works, which the Poet had bequeathed as Legacies to us. He briefly touched on the peculiar merits of the Poet such as, his inimitable powers of Natural description, a Figurative style of writing, his Researches of Imagery, and the ease and mastery, with which he rose from the delineation of common place objects to that of things transcendental.

Kalidas, when young, was not a Poet. His early culture was not above mediocre. He was an ignorant. When a boy, he was cutting the branch of a tree, on which he was seated. A Gentleman pointed out this to him, saying that, if you cut the branch at the opposite end, you will fall down. When you have finished your cutting, you will find out your mistake, and you will break your bones. This made the Poet conscious of what he was about. The Poet was a Born-Poet. He began to cultivate letters, and, in course of time, great as was his genius, it shone to transcendent lustre. And the learning, he displayed in after-life, was the result of that cultivation, which made him great. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, Babu KedarNath Chowdhery, B.A., Head Master, Calcutta School, dwelt at some length upon the excellencies of the great Sanskrit Hindu-Poet Kalidas.

The Meeting came to a close at 4-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vile, the Statesman, the Indian Mirror, &c., of the time.)

Proceedings of the Fourteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Friday, the 24th January, 1890, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Mathura Nath Chatterjea, L.C.E., of Uttarpara. The Meeting was fairly attended.

The Fourteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Friday, the 24th January, 1890, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Mathura Nath Chatterjea, L. C. E., of Uttarpara. The Meeting was fairly attended.

Address by the Secretary :—

On the Chairman's resuming his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society said :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

This is the Fourteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society,—which means that, the Institution, since its inauguration in 1875, under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, has been in working existence for the last Thirteen years. (Cheers.)

We meet here to-day, to celebrate the Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, which now enters upon the Fourteenth year of its existence.

This Anniversary Meeting was unavoidably delayed owing to the Secretary to the Society being busily engaged in connection with the painful work of closing the Three Branches of the Calcutta School, that were established under the auspices of this Society in 1884, 1885 and 1886, respectively; Viz :—

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

The Bow Bazar Branch of the Calcutta School, that was established on the 23rd July, 1884, in Bow Bazar Street, was amalgamated with the Main School, which was then removed to No. 45, Beneatola Lane, College Square, East.

The Salkea Branch of the Calcutta School, that was established on the 20th November, 1885, at Haraganj Road, Salkea.—Howrah was amalgamated with the School in the neighbourhood, owing to a strong representation made by its proprietors,—the object of the Society, being to impart Education to the boys, in localities, where no School existed for the purpose.

The Kansaraipara Branch of the Calcutta School, that was established on the 5th April, 1886, was closed, in consequence of one of the Pandits of that locality opening a new rival school, on his own responsibility, close to it, and specially, the sale of the premises, where our School was located to a party, who having made his residence there, declined to rent the premises any more for School purpose, and as no suitable place was then available for the location of our Institution.

The Secretary to the Society, was also busily engaged in squaring the Accounts of the aforesaid Three Branches of the Calcutta School, which entailed much time, labour, and trouble.

The Thirteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 10th January, 1887, at 4 P. M., when Babu Mahendra Nath Bose delivered a lecture on the Primitive Aryans, before a large gathering, and under the presidency of Babu Gopal Chandra Benerjea.

Besides the Thirteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following Four lectures were delivered.

- (1) On Generosity, by Babu Mahesh Chandra Bandyapadhy, under the presidency of Babu Mahendra Nath Dass, B. A., at the hall of Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimtola Street, on Saturday, the 5th February, 1887, at 4-30 P. M.,
- (2) On the Advantages of a good Education, by Babu Paresh Nath De, under the presidency of Babu Lalit Kumar Bose, B. A., at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 24, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 14th March, 1887, at 4-30 P. M.

Gentlemen, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to the Hon'ble Sir Harrendra Kisore Singh, K. C. I. E., Maharajah Bahadur of Reftiah, and a distinguished Member of the Society, for His Highness' contributions to our School, on the 7th June, 1887, 23rd March, 1888, and 20th June, 1889, respectively.

On the 14th June, 1887, His Highness Rameswar Singh, Rajah Bahadur of Rajnagar Darbhanga, also contributed to the School, for which the Society tenders its best thanks to His Highness.

The cordial thanks of the Society are also tendered to His Highness Jangh Bahadur Khan, C. I. E., Rajah Sahib of Nanparah, for His Highness' contribution to the Society, on the 14th January, 1887.

Gentlemen, I cannot better conclude this brief sketch of the Society's work than by offering my gratitude to the Prtrons and Members of the Society, and to the Press, in particular, who have helped the Society in the furtherance of its useful objects.

May the Almighty King of Kings, who rules over the Universe, grant the Society a long life. (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Report, which was confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts of the Society for the years 1887, 1888, and 1889, respectively, which were also duly passed.

The Chairman then asked Babu Kanai Lall Day to deliver his lecture on the—Importance of Technical Education in India :—

The speaker dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour. He clearly explained the benefits and usefulness of Technical Education in India.

He said that, we can give Indian youths any amount of education, we like, such as is imparted in our Colleges and Schools, but, at last, we will find them fitted for Service and some Profession only.

At present, the Education that is given to them fits them for employment, either under Government, or, in Mercantile Firms. In exceptional cases, however, when our youths, after completing their education, study Law, Medicine, or Engineering, they become Solicitors, Pleaders, Medical-Practitioners or Engineers. These are the only professions which are special favorites with our young men.

After taking Service, or, entering into the Professions, mentioned above, they become naturally fond of ennui. They give up all the studies. After working for the day, and returning home in the evening, most of them, (with honorable exceptions), amuse them-selves in eating and drinking, or, playing the cards, or, the chess. This is the reason why our country is so unfortunate, and why they cannot undertake to develop our resources.

It is the object of Technical Education to impart to them instructions in Agriculture, Tillage, Manufacture, &c. Our educated men, at present, do not know either to repair a Clock or a Watch, or, how to superintend the men, employed in such works. They, therefore, cannot set themselves up as Watch or Clock Makers, as Messrs Hamilton & Co, Messrs Coppe and Kelvey, and other Europea-

Firms. Moreover, they do not know how to till the Soil, or, to produce Indigo, Jute, &c., or, to superintend the men, employed in them.

It is the object of Technical Education to impart to them Practical Instructions, on these and other congrate subjects, so as to create a taste for Agriculture and Manufacture amongst them, by which, the resources of India might be developed, and the people might learn to give up service, and the professions, as not sufficient to provide employment for all our Indian Youths.

We are deficient in that Spirit of Enterprise, which Technical Education alone can foster, and which has made England, France, Germany and America great and rich, and rescued the people from indigence and poverty, and made them rich. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered. At this, Mr. A. M. Vicar dwelt at some length on the Subject. He concluded by saying that, the Subject was one, that spoke for itself.

The Chairman then spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer. He also congratulated Babu Sham Lall Day for his labour and zeal, and for his good services in connection with the Society, as Secretary, since its foundation in 1875. He wished the Institution every success.

The Meeting dispersed at 7 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Statesman, and the Indian Mirror, 28th January, 1890.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta School, No. 45, Beneatola Lane, College Square, East, on Monday, the 24th March, 1890, at 4 30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Sasi Bhushan Banerjea. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Ram Dass Sen to deliver his lecture on —

Kindness :—

The lecturer spoke on his Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, of all other virtues, kindness in the heart is the best. When a person is in distress, a kind man, feels for him. He can have no rest, until, he relieves him. A kind man has a sweetness and softness of temper, which we seldom find in others. His heart is moulded in soft clay. You will never find him cruel, or hard-hearted. He will cry when he sees other people cry. This peculiar Nature distinguishes him from the rest of his fellow-men.

A kind man is a living-jewell incomparable, and priceless. The world is cold. A kind man is warm. I mean, he possesses a warm heart. A kind man lives as much for himself, as for others. This peculiar trait in his character, you can seldom find in other men. A kind man is liked by God. Because, God is kind, and He likes that all His creatures should partake of His Divine Nature. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

Proceedings of the Fifteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Monday, the 19th January, 1891, at 4.30 p. m., under the presidency of General Samuel Merrill, Consul-General of the United States of America. The Meeting was largely attended.

The Fifteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Monday, the 19th January, 1891, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of General Samuel Merrill, Consul-General of the United States of America. The Meeting was largely attended.

Address by the Secretary :—

After the Chairman had taken his seat, amidst shouts of applause, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, said :—
Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

The Calcutta Literary Society has, by the blessing of the Almighty God, completed the Fourteenth year of its existence. It was established in the year Eighteen hundred and Seventy-five, and since then, every year has added to its prosperity. Its object was to hold Friendly gatherings of both communities, and to discuss Social, Literary, and Scientific subjects.

Two of the illustrious predecessors of our distinguished Chairman,—General Samuel Merrill, Consul-General of the United States of America, took special interest in the welfare of the Society, and very kindly presided at its Sixth and Eighth Anniversary Meetings, held at the Theatre of the Hindu-School, College Square, on Saturday, the 28th February, 1880, and at the Theatre of the Medical College, College Street, on Saturday, the 28th January, 1881, respectively.—I refer to Major-General A. C. Litchfield and Colonel H. Mattson, Ex-Consul-Generals of the United States of America, who are also distinguished Honorary Members of this Institution. (Cheers.)

The Fourteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Friday, the 24th January, 1890, at 4.30 P. M., when Babu Kanai Lal Day delivered a lecture on the Importance of Technical Education in India, under the presidency of Babu Mathuria Nath Chatterjea, L. C. Esq. of Uttarpara.

Besides the Fourteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following lecture was delivered during the year, under review :—

(1) On Kindness by Babu Ram Das Sen, under the presidency of Babu Sasi Bhushan Banerjee, at the hall of the Calcutta School, No 45, Beneatola Lane, College Square, East, on Monday, 24th March, 1890, at 4-30 P.M.

For the dissemination of knowledge, the Society founded Four High Class Educational Institutions, at four different parts of the town and suburbs ; Viz :—

- (1) No 50, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sabha-Bazar,
(2) No 196, Bow Bazar Street,
(3) Haraganj Road, Salha-Howrah,
(4) No 81, Baranasi Ghose's Street, Kansariapara, chiefly for the benefit of Mofussil Students, on moderate fees, with a Free-Boarding Establishment for indigent boys.

The Main School continued for upwards of Seven years, (i.e.) from 1883 to 1890, and was closed in the middle of last year, through unavoidable circumstances. At that time, it was proposed to open a Thoroughfare; viz. — the Harrison Road. The owner of the School premises, which was situated at No. 45, Beneatola Lane, College Square, East, (i.e.), close, to the Harrison Road, at once raised the rent of the premises. To this, the Society demurred, thinking that the School had done its work, and as there were several Schools in the locality, it resolved to close it.

Opinions of the Examiners, regarding the last Annual Examination of the Calcutta School, held at the School premises No 45, Beneatola Lane, College Square, East; Viz:—

On examination of the students of the Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh classes of the Calcutta School, in General Subjects, I have been much pleased with the answers of the Examinees. I wish the School every success.
Calcutta, 8th February, 1890. Guru Dass Sarma.

I examined the boys of the Third, Fourth and Ninth classes of the Calcutta School, in General Subjects, and the results were very satisfactory. I have been much pleased with the answers of the boys.

Calcutta, 9th February, 1890.

I examined the Second class boys of the Calcutta School, in English, and those of the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh classes in History and Geography, and I have much pleasure to state that the results were satisfactory.

Abhaya Charn Paul, B A.,
Calcutta, 9th February, 1890. Teacher, Hindu-School.

I examined the boys of the Third and Fourth classes of the Calcutta School, in History and Geography and English, respectively. The results were, on the whole, fair.

Calcutta, 10th February, 1890. Subal Krishna Das,
Teacher, Hindu-School.

I examined the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh classes of the Calcutta School, in English, and the Ninth class, in English and Arithmetic, and I have much pleasure to say that, many of the boys answered the questions put to them satisfactorily.

Calcutta, 11th February, 1890.

Bhola Nath Bose,
Teacher, Hare-School.

I have examined the boys of the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh classes of the Calcutta School, in Mathematics. The boys did well in Examination.

Calcutta 11th Febrary, 1890.

I examined the Second and Third classes of the Calcutta School, in Mathematics, and was highly pleased with the answers.

All the boys passed in that subject. The teachers of the Institution are efficient and painstaking.

Calcutta. 12th February, 1890.

The Society has to record with deep regret its sense of loss, at the untimely demise, in August, 1890, of Dr. G. W. Cline, Barrister-at-Law, who was its Vice-President for a few years. In him, the Society has lost a true friend, and an ardent well-wisher!

The grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to the Authorities of the Albert Hall, for their lending us the use of the hall for the Meetings of the Society, and to the Editors of local Newspapers, for their kindly publishing gratuitously the Proceedings of Meetings of the Society.

Gentlemen, before taking my seat, I must take this opportunity to thank the Patrons and Members of this Society, who have, by their sympathy and co-operation, contributed to its success. May God bless the Society with a long life. (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year, which were also passed.*

The Chairman then asked Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarka Churamany, (of Benares), to deliver his lecture on the—Past and Present Condition of India :—

The learned lecturer spoke very ably on the Subject for upwards of an hour, in the course which he said that, he could not view the Present Condition of India, without expressing his extreme regret at their Past Condition. There was great delay in the ancient Language and Literature of the people. In ancient time, there were numerous tolls in the country, for the study of Sanskrit. In the tolls, one or more, Pandits resided, and the pupils had not only board and lodging, free of charge, but, had also knowledge imparted to them.

In our Colleges and Schools, there is hardly any study of Sanskrit,—worth the name. It is true that the Vernaculars are taught in them. But, what we want is that, the Sanskrit,—the Mother of all Languages—our ancient Latin should revive. Government ought to take special measures to encourage the study of the Sanskrit, otherwise, it will fall fast into decay.

A knowledge of the English is necessary to obtain employment in Government and Mercantile Offices. Therefore, every body now devotes his time and energy to the study of that Foreign Language. But, the study of the Sanskrit is ignored, as it is of no use for practical purposes of life.

But, is there any reason that, the study of Sanskrit should be neglected?—Sanskrit is the store-house of our ancient Literature, where the duties of men are clearly laid down.

It is our duty, therefore, to resort to the study of the Sanskrit Language. If we have any respect for the Language and Literature of our fore-fathers,—of our ancient Munis and Rishis, we should learn the Sanskrit Language. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman delivered a long and instructive Speech. He praised the learned Pandit, and blessed the Society from the core of his heart.

The Meeting then came to a close at 7-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Statesman, and the Indian Mirror, 23rd January, 1891.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta Government Normal-School, No68, Nimtole Street, on Saturday, the 2nd May, 1891, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Jagadishar Mukerjee. The Meeting was densely crowded, as a Yogi and a Yogini delivered interesting speeches to the great satisfaction of the audience.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman said that, this Meeting did not require a Chairman, as it was understood that the lecturers would themselves address the crowded audience, who were assembled round the spacious hall that evening. He thought, it was superfluous to introduce the fair lecturers to the Meeting, as they were already fully known to the public at large.

The Chairman then first asked the Yogi (a young boy over twenty years of age), to deliver his lecture on—

The True Meaning of Hinduism, and, after him, his wife, the Yogini—(a girl of about Fifteen Summers), to deliver her lecture on :—

The Devotion to Husband.

The Yogi first rose, and made a long speech. He said that, in the short experience of his life, he had recourse to various sects, but, he did not find a least of peace in any of them, before he became a Yogi. He consulted Sri Ramkrishna Paramhansa, on the expediency of his method, and was advised that, he could lead the life of a Yogi, with a wife as his help-mate, provided, he could obtain a perfect mastery over his animal passions; for, in the practice of the Yoga, intercourse with the wife is strictly prohibited, in the Hindu-Shastras.

The Yogi said that, he married the girl, and that was all. He distinctly stated that, he was an Urdhureta,—meaning that, he could succeed in destroying sexual appetite which is one of the worst appetites, in man. He laid a great stress upon the superiority of the Soul over the body, and upon the influence of those evil temptations, that prey on the body, and polluted the purity of the Soul.

Religious observances would be of no avail, if there was not the earnest work of real-life. He continued that, the infinite is an incomprehensible enigma to ordinary mortals, and if, by sticking to the Karma, prescribed in the Hindu-Shastras, a man can rise higher and higher in the Moral scale, he would, in the fullness of time, be able to approach the Deity, with a hallowed conscience.

The Lecturer concluded by saying that, though he, was a Yogi, he did not refrain from making some remarks on the Age of Consent agitation, then going on. He advocated Early Marriage, though he expressed his regret that the Law has, somehow or other, interfered in this matter. His remarks on the unity of faith were not such, as would suit the improved palate of the Nineteenth Century. (Cheers.)

The Yogi, having finished his Speech, called upon his wife to speak a few words on the Devotion to Husband.

The Yogini apologised that her voice was too low to be distinctly heard. She, however, spoke for a few minutes on the Subject, which greatly pleased the audience.

The Chairman then asked the audience to comment upon the lectures delivered. At this, Mr. K. L. Day and a Yogi made some remarks, suitable on the occasion, to the lectures delivered.

The Chairman then made a nice speech, he thanked the lecturers for their lectures.

The Meeting broke up at 6-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, the Indian Mirror, 10th May, 1891.)

Proceedings of the Sixteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Monday, the 25th January, 1892, at 4-30 p.m., under the presidency of Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. A., B.L., Pleader Judge's Court, Alipur. The Meeting was fairly attended.

The Society had the honor of awarding the distinguished Authors a Certificate, and a Gold Medal (value about three hundred Rupees), placed before you on the table, in return for their voluntary gifts. (Cheers.)

The Fifteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Monday, the 19th January, 1891, at 4-30 P. M., when Pandit Jagendra Nath Tarka-Churamany of Benares delivered a lecture on the Past and Present Condition of India, under the presidency of General Samuel Merrill, Consul-General of the United States of America.

Besides the Fifteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following two lectures were delivered during the year 1891; Viz :—

(1) On the True Meaning of Hinduism by Bhishankar Jatiendra Chandra,

(2) On Devotion to husband by his girl-wife Yogini Bhabakinkari, before a crowded house, and under the presidency of Babu Jagadishar Mukerjee, at the hall of the Government Normal School, No. 68, Nimitola Street, on Saturday, the 2nd May, 1891, at 4-30 P. M.

Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in announcing it to you that the following gentlemen have become Members of the Society during the year 1891; Viz :—

Names :—	Dates :—
Ogborn Mayor, Esq., ...	10-11-91
Sri Basu Deva Rajah Mani Rajah Deo, Rajah Sahib of Mandasa, ...	18-3-91

Vidya-Bhaskar Pandit Lal Chandra, M. R. A. S., (London). ...	17-1-91

The Society has to record with deep regret the demise of Mr. Manackjee Rustumjee,—the popular Consul for Persia, during the year! He was one of the illustrious Honorary Members, who joined the Society, since 26th May, 1879.

I have also the mournful duty of announcing to you the premature demise of my friend Hara Nath Rai Chowdhery, Rajah Bahadur of Dubalhati, who was also one of the distinguished Members of the Society, since 30th March, 1882.

Although, the Society does not record a large amount of work done during the year, yet, it has silently and quietly, and I may say without any fuss, been promoting the harmony between the Rulers and the Ruled.

Gentlemen, I would be wanting in my duty, if I did not embrace the present opportunity of publicly thanking the Patrons, the Members and well-wishers of the Society, who have, by their sympathy and active co-operation, contributed to its success.

Now, I pray to God that He may grant us strength to further the interests of the Society. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts of the Society, for the year 1891, which were also passed.

The Chairman then brought the Meeting to a close with an eloquent and impressive Speech on—

The Importance of our Society :—

He spoke for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, from the Report, just read to you by my esteemed friend, Babu Sham Lall Day, who has founded this Literary Society, and acting as its Secretary, since the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, we have learnt that the Society was making good progress.

This is the Sixteenth year of its existence. During the past year, Two General Meetings were held, at which three lectures were delivered on important Subjects.

It is a matter of sincere congratulation, as the list of distinguished Members showed, that the Society has already attracted considerable notice.

To the most illustrious Indian Chiefs, and other gentlemen of Rank and Position, both Europeans and Indians, who have become Honorary Members of this Society, I hereby offer my best thanks. I believe, few Societies can boast of having such a large and distinguished list of Members, as the Calcutta Literary Society. (Cheers.)

The Fifteenth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was very kindly presided by General Samuel Merrill, Consul-General of the United States of America. This is a good sign. (Cheers.)

Not only Indian Chiefs and respectable Hindu and Mahamedan gentlemen have become Members of this Society, but, European and Foreign gentlemen of high rank, and the last not the least our American fellow-brethren have extended to us the right hand of fellow-ship. The latter have always evinced a deep interest in the welfare of the Society.

The present Consul-General of America, and two of his illustrious predecessors presided at Three Anniversary Meetings of the Society, held in 1880, 1891, and 1882, respectively, and thereby encouraged its Members with their advice from the chair.

It is a matter of great satisfaction that, the Americans should evince such an interest for the Society. We ought to reciprocate that feelings that bond, which unites all the Races, who inhabit in this world, alien in caste, color, race or creed. (Cheers.)

The Americans, we all know, are a progressive people. They are making rapid strides in the scale of civilization. During the course of a few years, they have made such progress, so as to become the admiration of the world. (Cheers.)

I hope and trust that this Society will always enjoy the confidence and support of those, who take a lively interest in the administration of its affairs. (Cheers)

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide the Statesman, and the Indian Mirror, 26th January, 1892.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, upper Chitpur Road, on Wednesday, the 27th July, 1892, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Upendra Chandra Mukerjee. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Janaki Nath Sen to deliver his lecture on:—

God is Eternal:—

The learned lecturer dwelt on the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, we all know that nothing in the world is eternal. Every thing has a beginning and an end. God existed when there was nothing. He brought every thing out of nothing. God still exists, and He will continue to exist, when every thing ceases to exist.

Every thing is destructive in this earth. The child, that is born to day, will duly grow, and at last die. The plant, which yields beautiful fruits, will wither. God is indestructible. He is eternal. Nothing in the world can be compared with Him.

The notion of Eternity is that, which had existed always, and will also exist. God has no beginning and no end. To express this abstract idea, the example of a circle, will suffice to give us a nearer approach to comprehend eternity.

In a circle or wheel, it appears that, there are no parts—it is all in all—and from every side equal, so is the idea of eternity.

Eternity from every side is equal, not shewing from whence it commenced, or whither it ends. Hence, it is called together whole and perfect.

There is a Providence which controls all, presides over all, and takes care not only of the world in general, but of each individual in particular: nothing escapes his penetration and God knows our most secret actions and intentions.

There is no difference in person or condition before God, His Providence watches over all mankind. (Cheers.)

After the Speaker had finished his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting terminated at 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

Its object was to hold friendly gatherings of both communities, and to discuss Social, Literary and Scientific Subjects, the Society has been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform. (Cheers.)

I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Institution. The printed proceedings of its various Meetings bear testimony to them.

On God is Eternal by Babu Janaki Nath Sen, under the presidency of Babu Upendra Nath Mukerjee, at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, No. 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Wednesday, the 27th July, 1892, at 4-30 p.m.

Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in announcing to you that the following distinguished personages have become Honorary Members of the Society, during the year 1892; viz:—

Names:—

General Samuel Merril, Consul-General of the United States of America,	8-1-1892.
Monsr. J. Jouslin, Consul-General for France, and Vice Consul for Portugal,	4-1-1892.
H. Helyers, Esq., Consul for Belgium,	4-1-1892.
J. C. T. Reelfs, Esq., Consul for Netherlands,	9-1-1892.

(THE NAMES WERE HEARD WITH APPLAUSE.)

It is with profound sorrow that I have to announce the death of one of the oldest and illustrious patrons of the Society, the Right Hon'ble Sir George Campbell, G.C.S.I., D.C.L., M.P., who used to take a lively interest in its welfare, since the year 1880!

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that on the 25th August, 1892, the Hon'ble Sir Harrendra Kishore Singh, K.C.I.E., Maharajah Sahib of Bettiah, Member of the Governor-General's Council, and an illustrious Patron of the Society, sent His Highness' arrears contribution to our school for the year 1890, for which the best thanks of the Society are hereby given to His Highness.

I have now, in conclusion, to offer the Society's most cordial thanks to its Patrons and Members for their sympathy and co-operation.

May the Society have prolonged career of usefulness is my firm prayer to the Almighty God. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year 1892, which were

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

The following Elections were then made for the next five years :—

- (1) Proposed by Kumar Radha Prasad Roy-Bahadur of Posta, seconded by Rai Grish Chandra Dass Bahadur, and resolved :— That Babu Mahendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M.A., B.L., be re-elected, President of the Society.
- (2) Proposed by Babu Bhuban Mahun Dutt, Zemindar, seconded by Babu Gopal Chandra Bose and resolved :— That Dr. Jagendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M.A., D.D., be re-elected Vice-President of the Society.
- (3) Proposed by Babu Sarat Chandra Paul, seconded by Babu Udai Chandra Bose, B.L., and resolved :— That the following gentlemen be the Councillors of the Society, viz :—
Babu Radha Nath Day
Babu Radha Raman Mitra.
Babu Grish Chandra Sen,
the President or the Vice-President and the Founder Secretary to the Society.

The proposal was carried by acclamation.

After the Elections were made, the Revd Chairman introduced the Revd. E. F. Browne, M.A., Professor of the Bishop's College, to the Meeting, and asked him to commence his lecture on—

Eyes and no Eyes :—

The Revd. lecturer, who on rising, was received with cheers, dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour. He said that mere reading of wise books does not make any one wise. One man walks through the world with his eyes open, another with his eyes shut.

Upon this difference depends all the superiority of knowledge, which one man acquires over another.

Sailors, who had been in all the quarters of the world, could only tell you of the tipling houses, and the price and quantity of the liquor.

Benjamin Franklin was a famous American Politician and Philosopher, born in 1706, could not cross the English Channel, without making observations useful to mankind. While many a vacant thoughtless youth is whirled through Europe without gaining a single idea worth crossing the street for, the observing eye and inquiring mind find matter of improvement and delight in every ramble. One continues to use his eyes, and the other learns that eyes were given to him to use. (Cheers.)

God has given us eyes to use them. His book, which is Universe, and the reading of God's book, which is Science, can do us nothing but good, and teach us nothing but truth and wisdom. God did not put this wonderful world about our young souls to tempt, or to mislead them. (Cheers.)

After the Revd. lecturer had finished his lecture, a Bengali song was sung. The Revd. Chairman then delivered a nice little speech, which greatly charmed the audience, and he blessed the Society. He said that the grinding competition among educated young men for a bare living was one of the things, which destroyed the power of seeing the beauty and grandeur in Nature and Man, which the Revd. lecturer spoke of and said, what the great poets specially saw.

The Meeting separated at 6.45 p.m., with the usual vote of thanks to the Revd. Chairman and the Revd. lecturer.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year 1893, which were also passed.

The Chairman then asked Pandit Janaki Nath Bhagbat Bhaskar of Benares to deliver his lecture on :—

Wisdom :—

The learned Pandit dwelt on the Subject for nearly two hours. In the course of his remarks, he very ably thrust home into the minds of the audience the nothingness of human life, and clearly proved by occasional apt quotations from Sanskrit works, that real happiness consists, not in hankering after worldly prospects, which are sure to end after a time, but, in every man's thorough knowledge of his own Self. This is called true wisdom. A man should know himself first before he can be called wise. A wise man can seldom do a wrong act. His wisdom will stand in the way, and prevent him from perpetrating it.

An ignorant man can never acquire wisdom. You should acquire knowledge before you can hope to be wise. True wisdom cannot be gained without the acquisition of knowledge. A wise man enjoys the confidence of others. His neighbours like him: They consult with him in their difficulties. They act according to his advice. His help is always sought for.

A wise man is always generous and kind-hearted. He never grumbles to help others. He always makes many sacrifices. He does not mind to devote his time to the service of others. He attends to them without a murmur. He regards the works of others as his own. His services are always in demand. They are never at a discount. He will never tell you any thing that will do you harm. All that he does, must tend to your good and happiness. Divide with reason between Self-love and Society, and be true to thyself, and not false to others. This is what the wise man does, and why he is consulted (Cheers.)

After the speaker had finished his speech, a Bengali song was sung. The Chairman then made a nice speech. The Meeting broke up at 7-15 p.m., with votes of thanks to the Chair and the lecturer.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Emerald Theatre, Beadon Street, on the 18th February, 1894, at 8-30 A.M., under the presidency of Babu Mahendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M.A., B.L. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Brahma Brata Samadhaye Saraswati of Benares to deliver his lecture on—

Human Happiness and Misery :—

The lecture was highly interesting and instructive. The Pandit substantiated all his propositions by quotations from the Hindu Shastras. His manner of delivery was exceedingly good, and he dwelt upon all the means of real happiness, according to the Hindu Shastras.

He said that every man was responsible for his conditions in life. If you find that a man is miserable, you can rest assured that this is owing to his own fault. No person in this world can be pronounced happy before he dies. This is a proverb, which is often quoted, but seldom fully understood. It is essential, therefore, that we should really understand our own position, before we can pronounce others to be responsible for our misdeeds.

The word happy is a relative term. That is, when we call a man happy, we mean that he is happier than some others with whom we compare him; than the generality of others; or, than he himself was in some other situation. Happiness depends upon the prudent constitution of the habits.

The art in which the Secret of human happiness in a great measure consists, is to set the habits in such a manner, that every change may be a change for the better. The habits themselves are much the same; for whatever is made habitual becomes smooth, and easy, and nearly indifferent.

The man who has learned to live alone, feels his spirits enlivened whenever he enters into company, and takes his leave without regret; another, who has long been accustomed to a crowd, or continual succession of company, experiences in company no elevation of spirits, nor any greater satisfaction than what the man of a retired life finds in his chimney-carer. Happiness consists in health.

Happiness enters most freely into the mind, which is the most tranquil in its desires. The first necessary ingredient in human happiness is bodily health. Riches are mere baubles, which too commonly make us truly miserable. But, by limiting our desires, and resolving, with a good heart, to create for ourselves all the qualification we can—to look always on the best side of things, and turn, as it were, evil into good—we shall find that our happiness less greatly within ourselves, and is utterly independent either of wealth or station.

In sickness, we think much of the pain and discomfort, we undergo, but forget the pleasure we derived from the care and attention of those, who kindly administers to our wants, and soothes us during our suffering.

If misery be the effect of virtue, it ought to be revered. If of ill fortune, it ought to be pitied. And if of vice, not to be insulted. Because, it is, perhaps, itself a punishment adequate to the crime, by which it was produced.

The misery of man proceeds not from any single crush of overwhelming evil, but from small vexations continually repeated.

Physical evil may be endured with patience, since it is the cause of moral good. Patience itself is our virtue by which we are prepared for that state in which evil shall be no more.

You should recollect that when a person has several wants to supply, he can seldom be happy. We create our own wants, and, therefore, cannot supply them. We curse the day, when we were born. To be economical in our desires is, what is most wanted. To make us comfortable, and be above wants, that is just the things. We should try to place ourselves above want. If we have few wants, they can easily be supplied. Few can understand and realise unto themselves the intentions and wishes of our Creator and Master. The generous shepherd, who lords over us, and regulates all our actions and desires, can be propitiated only by sweet words and good actions. (Cheers.)

If we wish to go to our Maker, who is in heaven, we must learn to be obedient to His will, and be guided in all our actions by the dictates of reason and conscience. A consciousness of having done our duty enables us to be cheerful, and enjoy life as one of the greatest blessings of our Maker.

We should not lord over the creation. We should know that we are puny beings, without knowledge or power. All that we have, belongs to God. We had nothing. We are nothing. When we can realise this state of things, then we can be pronounced really happy and not otherwise (Cheers.)

After the learned Pandit had finished his speech, a few Bengali songs were sung. The Chairman then commented upon the lecture at some length.

Babu Avinash Chandra Dhar, B.L., Vakil High Court, having proposed a vote of thanks to the Chair, which was received with acclamation, the Meeting dissolved at 11 A.M., after several Bengali songs been sung.

(Vide, the Amrita Bazar Patrika 19th, the Statesman and the Indian Mirror, 20th February, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Training Academy, 30, Cornwallis' Street, on Saturday, the 24th February, 1894, at 4 p.m., under the presidency of Babu Ram Doyal Mazumdar, M.A., Principal, Aryya Mission College. The Meeting was densely crowded.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Lal Behari Banerjee, B.A., B.L., to deliver his lecture on—

The Power of Knowledge :—

The lecturer dwelt upon the Subject for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, Knowledge is power. Without Knowledge, no country or Nation can make any progress towards civilization. A civilized Nation must first cultivate education. A country can seldom be expected to be civilized without education. Education is the only means by which a people can acquire knowledge. (Cheers.)

The following are the general methods for acquiring knowledge; Viz :—

- (1) Profound learning is acquired by means of three great instruments; viz :—Genius, Memory and Study.
- (2) Genius is improved by Exercise.
- (3) Memory too becomes stronger by Practice.
- (4) By intemperance and luxury they both are weakened. By health both are strengthened and increased. By sloth and long intermission, they are enervated. But by frequent use, they become quick, and are ever ready to call.
- (5) While reading, be strictly attentive. When you listen, lose not what is spoken. Let not your mind wander to other subjects, but, restrict its energies to the one,—the only one you have before it.
- (6) Know that in attention to what you read or hear is tantalizing.

- (7) Be not ashamed to ask, whatever it may be, of which you are ignorant. Blush not to be taught by any person, however inferior he may be in rank, position, learning or age. For the greatest men have not been ashamed of this. Blush rather for your un-willingness to learn than for your ignorance of learning.
- (8) Boast not of knowing what you are ignorant of. On the contrary, apply for it to those, who are supposed to know it.
- (9) If you wish to appear learned, endeavour to be so. And in like manner, if you wish to be good, you should show goodness to others in your acts and behaviour.
- (10) In fine, whatever you wish to appear, strive to be in reality, else, your wishes will be profitless and vain.
- (11) Time impairs what is false, yet it strengthens what is true.
- (12) Deception is but of short duration.
- (13) Follow your master, rather than show an inclination to outrun him, yield to him, rather than oppose him.
- (14) Love Him, and look up to Him as to a parent. Give credit to His observations, and esteem them to be correct.
- (15) Be but once reproved for error, and never commit a fault a second, or a third time. Be improved by gentle reprehension.
- (16) Endeavour to remember in what you once have erred, lest from negligence, you again do wrong.
- (17) Every one is apt to err. But, it is the slothful that alone perseveres in error.
- (18) Bear in mind, that there is no sense through which we imbibe kn owledge more speedily than through that of hearing.
- (19) Nothing is easier, and more useful than to listen attentively what you are told in speech or writing.
- (20) Show not an inclination to listen to what is trifling, ridiculous, or absurd, rather than to what is prudent, praiseworthy or grave.
- (21) Both the ridiculous and the praiseworthy demand equal attention. But, in the advantages resulting from them there is great disparity indeed.
- (22) You should not endeavour to answer too much, but, let your answers be to the purpose and in proper time.
- (23) Turn not your eyes above from what is shameful, but your ears also. Remember the old saying, Evilcommunications corrupt good manners.
- (24) Wherever you may be, listen attentively to every thing that is said.
- (25) From the wise, you may learn what will improve you.
- (26) From the foolish, you may know how to be more guarded.
- (27) Adopt what is approved by the wise.
- (28) Shun that, which is loaded by the foolish.
- (29) Treasure in your mind every observation commended either for its wit or its decorum.
- (30) Any remark you may meet with while reading, or in conversation, and that you think excellent or useful, put down in a Memorandum-book, which you should keep with you for the purpose. This will enable you to refresh your Memory, when a similar remark or expression you may require.
- (31) Be not satisfied with understanding the words alone of what you read, but, enter fully into the Spirit, and the meaning of the author.
- (32) After you have been reading, or heard what has been read, repeat it to your companions—to one in one language, to another in another, as far as your capabilities will allow you. Be sure to the utmost of your power, to use the same elegant expressions, and adopt the same turn of thought employed by your author. This will not only render your Memory particularly retentive, but, give you like-wise a great command of words.

- (33) If you wish to speak well and fluently, no exercise is better than frequently to compose.
- (34) Write, re-write, and frequently make extracts. Never read without a pencil in your hand; and suffer not a day to pass without composing a letter to some friend, and such a one that he may answer it. Show your letter to your tutor, and profit by his observations.
- (35) Never let your Memory be at rest.
- (36) There is no faculty that likes so much to be employed as the Memory, nor is there one that improves more by exercise.
- (37) Every day entrust to it some one thing or other.
- (38) The more you commit to the care of Memory, the more faithfully will it retain every thing. The less you trust it with, so much the more will its retentive power become relaxed.
- (39) Indulge your Memory with a little respite, after you have learned anything by heart. But, sometime after, forget not to demand of it that, which you have deposited.
- (40) Whatever you wish to learn by heart, read over several times, with the greatest attention, just before you retire to rest. In the morning, call your Memory to account for that which you over-night committed to its custody.
- (41) Beware of intoxication. Be ever careful of your bodily health.
- (42) Wine is the death of Memory.
- (43) Suffer not a day to pass without reading, hearing, or writing something, that may either add to your acquirements, improve your judgment, or strengthen your love of virtue.
- (44) When about to retire to your bed, read, or have read to you something worthy to be remembered; so that, your wakeful moments may be diverted, and your dreams even rendered useful as well as agreeable.
- (45) With our lives, the Study of Wisdom ought to live. It can only end with life itself.
- (46) No pleasure can be found superior to that of extensive Knowledge; and nothing is there more beneficial than proficiency in Virtue.
- (47) Study enhances prosperity, and alleviates adversity. It restrains the heedless impetuosity of youth, and lightens the burdens of old age. It accompanies, and even protects us. It assists and delights us too, both when we are at home and when we are abroad, in public and private, in solitude and in the busy scenes of life.

How to Improve Knowledge and Art:—

THE faculty of Speech enables men to communicate their Ideas to each other. So, the Art of Printing enables them to transmit their acquired Knowledge from generation to generation, and from age to age. Every year has progressed in Knowledge and in power with every passing year, and Science has been perpetually extending her dominion over Nature, animate and in-animate.

Nations abounding in wealth in comforts, and in luxuries, and peopled by civilized millions, occupy tracts of earth where, of old, the beasts of prey alone abode.

In studying Natural Philosophy, the young reader will, at every step, feel his love and his admiration of the Great and Eternal, Creator of all things extended, enlivened, and strengthened, and thus, in improving his mind, he will greatly benefit his heart also.

A Knowledge of Literature and Science is absolutely necessary to enable a people to become great in the estimation of the world. It is the influence of Knowledge that has made the English people so great, prosperous and happy, and the Americans what they are. The latter are inventing Machinery, which forms the admiration of the world. The clocks and watches, imported from America, are not only but, they keep time correct to a minute. (Oh

Our countrymen should, therefore, use their best endeavours to acquire Knowledge. The Instruction, which is imparted in the schools, ought to enable them to see things with the eye of Reason and to judge for themselves, and to adapt them to their use.

He continued saying, how this power existed and worked in the sphere of politics and literature, and also in the ordinary affairs of human life. He described how civilization gradually advanced with the progress of Knowledge, and how in ancient India, Greece and Rome, it was the outcome of Knowledge. He finished by saying that the power of Knowledge was immense in the sphere of Morality, and that there was an intimate connection between the two. (Cheers)

After the lecturer had concluded his Speech, the Chairman invited the audience to discuss on the lecture delivered.

At this, Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, of Sinhi, spoke at some length on the Subject. He was heard with rapt attention.

The Chairman then made a nice little Speech. He said that this Subject might be judged from the following three different points of view; viz:—

- (1) Scientifically.
- (2) Psychologically.
- (3) Metaphysically.

He said that, if we considered our position, we should see that we stood in the midst of powers, both physical and mental. We had to bring under control the powers of elements. Our Scientific Knowledge enabled us to exercise influence over the external world by means of Railways, Telegraphs, &c. We were able to make our lives happy by overcoming the forces of Nature.

Again, if we looked into the mental world, we there found that we stood in the midst of internal enemies,—our passions and desires—to conquer which required a greater amount of power. It was Knowledge that gave us the power.

On the Chairman's resuming his seat, a Bengali Song was sung.

The Meeting broke at 6-30 P.M., after the usual vote of thanks accorded to the Chair.

(Vide, the Statesman, 27th and the Indian Mirror 28th February, 1894.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Bharati Institute, No. 65, Beadon Street, on Saturday, the 3rd March, 1894, at 4-15 P.M., under the presidency of Dr. Jagendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M.A., D.L., Law Examiner of the Calcutta University, and the President of the Society. The Meeting was largely attended.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the President called upon Babu Nalin Kanta Sen, B.A., to deliver his lecture on—

The Method in which English is taught in the schools of this country:—

The lecturer dwelt upon the Subject for nearly half an hour, and the audience was much pleased.

He said that the Instruction imparted in our schools was deficient in Moral training. In former days, the Old Hindu College was known to educate the boys in such a way that, whilst they commenced to entertain a hatred for the Religion of their forefathers, nothing in lieu of that Religion was given to them upon which they might take their stand and lead a Religious life. The odium was not only confined to Government Schools and Colleges, it extended even to Private Schools, founded by the Indians.

It was, indeed, not just that neither the managers of the Government Schools nor of Private Institutions cared much for the Moral training of our boys. The system was defective, and would not be tolerated in any other country. The authorities ought to have attention to the Moral education of the students in their charge. Therefore, the Method of Instruction pursued was found fault with and those who give so, had reason and justice on their side.

The Missionary Schools, however, tried their best to supply the deficiency. They had for their text the Bible. The Padri Sahib was liked by the parents of youths. The Method of Instruction pursued in Government Colleges and Private Schools ought to be changed, and attention paid to the Moral Instruction of our boys. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had done, the President of the Society asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Babus Prasanna Kumar Dutt and Balaji Chand Dass spoke a few words on the Subject.

The President then concluded the discussion by touching upon most of the important points.

The Meeting separated at 5-45 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 5th and the Indian Mirror, 6th March, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Arjya Mission College, No. 801, Muktarum Bibi's Street, on Saturday, the 10th March, 1894, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Dr. Suruth Chandra Bose, M.A., M.B. The Meeting was densely crowded.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman introduced Babu Durga Das Sarkar, M.A., to the Meeting and asked him to deliver his lecture on—

The Improvement of Character:—

The Speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour. He defined Character as the sum total of one's Moral propensities. Noble character is the result of the development of one's faculties. Good character is the Glorious life. Pure character is the source of Virtue. It is formed by imitation of a perfect ideal. Persistence and perseverance are essentially necessary for the formation of it. Man is his own Sinner. He is solely responsible for his own deeds. His works should, therefore, conform to the dictates of conscience, reason and faith. It is always difficult to form one's Character. It is essential that we should learn to study the Character of our neighbours, before we associate with them. We should try to form our Character in all that is good and noble. (Cheers.)

It is not at all difficult to show that proper teaching tends to make men more industrious, as well as more averse to criminal pursuits.

Sound information will teach the poor that Labour is a condition of the existence of the great majority of mankind.

Educated people with small income invariably marry at a late period—while the utterly ignorant and penniless invariably marry very early, and thus burthen Society with a numerous progeny, for whom they are themselves unable to provide, and who must, therefore, in some form or other, be maintained by the public.

Formation of character:—

We are what we are made by the objects that surround us. To expect that a man, who sees other objects, and who leads a life different from mine, should have the same ideas that I have, would be to require contradictions.

A Nation can never become great, unless its Character is shaped in the mould of other peoples, who owe their glory to the formation of their Character. We hear that this person has a good Character. He is generally liked. His company is always sought for, so that by imitating him, one can give up his evil habits.

When a person once loses his Character, it can seldom be regained. He becomes notorious in the face of the public. The people say that he is a person of bad Character. No body wishes to associate with him, because, he is low in the estimation of the public. If you wish to know a person's Character, you should try to find out his associates. The adage, which says, Tell me with whom you live, and I will tell you who you are, holds good. In every case, you can make out a person's Character by his companion.

A rogue can only keep the company of a rogue. A drunkard loves a drunkard. But a good and honest man only likes the company of good and honest men. If you wish to maintain a good Character in the world, you should be honest and truthful in your dealings. Honesty and truthfulness, sincerity and affability are essential to the formation of a Character. We are all imitative beings. We adopt the habits of those, with whom we live and move, with whom we come into contact in our daily avocations. (Cheers.)

You should, therefore, endeavour to be always careful in the selection of your companions. When you once associate with bad men, your Character will be lost, and it will never be regained. The beaut ideal of Character you should always keep in view, so that you might maintain a good Character, in the eyes of your relatives, friends and neighbours. As good Character is pure like gold, so, you should always keep it pure. (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman invited the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Babu Ram Doyal Mukundar, M. A., Principal, Aryya Mission College, spoke very eloquently on the Subject for nearly half an hour. His chief point was that without practice in our daily life, we cannot form our Character.

After him Pandit Panchanand Bhattacharyya, the Acharyya of the College, remarked that without resolution and devotion pure and good Character cannot be found. Mere words are of no use. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then made a few observations on the Subject. The Meeting came to a close at 6-45 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Statesman, 14th, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 15th, and the Indian Mirror, 20th March, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Keshab Academy, Beadon Street, on Saturday, the 17th March, 1894, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Sasi Bhushan Sen, B. A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Mahendra Nath Vidya Nidhi, (Sanskrit Examiner, Calcutta University), to commence his lecture on:—

The Life and teachings of the late renowned Poet Raj Krishna Rai,

Who passed away from us on the 11th March, 1894!

The learned Pandit dwelt on the Subject for upwards of an hour and a half, in the course of which he said that, Raj Krishna Rai was a good man, a loyal citizen, and a sincere lover of his country. Among other virtues, he possessed humanity, mildness, candour, and a self-sacrificing spirit in a very high degree. He was inoffensive and free from ostentation and arrogance. He was known to his friends chiefly as a Poet, but, he was also a historian, a biographer, a critic, and an antiquarian.

He did now and then contribute articles to various Bengali Periodicals, and was also famous as an antiquarian and a translator.

Among the Poems written by him, the best is the Pruthad Chaitra, a Drama, acted at the Royal Bengal Theatre. The popularity of this play is evident from the fact that it even now draws a bumper house.

Its success was, however, the cause of his ruin. For he immediately started a new theatre, called the Vina Theatrical Company, in which he produced his own plays. The Female parts were represented by boys. Unfortunately this did not suit the taste of our countrymen, so the Vina Theatre proved a failure! and Raj Krishna Rai was deeply involved in debt!

Then he accepted service as a playwright of the Star Theatre and continued to do so till the last days of his life.

The Lecturer concluded by saying that if we make allowance for the shortcomings of human nature, we will not find his like in the present generation of literary men. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting was then brought to a close at 6-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, and the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 19th March, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Emerald Theatre, Beadon Street, on Saturday, the 31st March, 1894, at 4-45 P.M., under the presidency of Pandit Kailas Chandra Bhattacharyya, M.A., Editor, Som Prakash, Professor, Duff College, &c., &c., &c. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman introduced Pandit Ambica Charan Vidya Rtna to the Meeting, and asked him to deliver his lecture on—

The duties of Human Life:—

The learned Pandit discussed very fluently on the Subject for upwards of two hours. He quoted many apt and authoritative Shlokas from the Scriptures, Smritis, Puranas and Tantras. He said that the duties of man were too multitudinous to be dealt with in the course of a single lecture. Those duties were very important in themselves. Upon them depended the prosperity and peace of a family.

Where the head of a family neglected to observe the duties imposed on him, there was nothing but dissension prevailing in the house. No body likes that the members of a family should dislike each other. But where the patriarch neglected to do what he ought to have done by each individual member, the result was nothing but pleasant, and each individual member thought too much of himself, and trifled with their superiors.

Thus, brother fell with brother, and sister fell with sister. Age was not respected. The children trifled with their fathers and mothers. Disobedience became the rule, and obedience the exception. There was neither peace nor happiness. There was perpetual discontent and discord. All this was owing to the fact that the several members, which go to compose a family, did not understand their duties and responsibilities. They cared not to study them. Neither they knew how to discharge the duties and obligations which they were required to fulfil, and which they were bound to discharge in such a manner, as would create nothing but friendly feelings amongst them, and promote domestic peace, affability and happiness. (Cheers.)

After the Speaker had done, the Chairman invited the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered. At this three gentlemen spoke a few words.

Two Bengali Songs were then sung. The Chairman then rose amidst cheers and addressed the Meeting for sometime. He said that he would not take much time in dealing with the Subject, which had already been dealt with so minutely by the Speaker. He said that every one must have faith in Religion and follow heartily the precepts laid down in the Hindu Shastras. One's own Religion is the best one, and at any hazard, one should stick to that.

With votes of thanks to the Chair, the Meeting separated at 8 P.M.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 3rd April, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Government Normal School, Nimtola Street, on Saturday, the 7th April, 1894, at 4-45 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Hem Chandra Mukerjee, M.A., B.L. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman introduced Pandit Nilkantha Goswami Tattvanidhi to the Meeting, and asked him to deliver his lecture on—

What is our Human Spirit and what am I ?

The learned Pandit dwelt upon his Subject for nearly two hours and a half, during which he was frequently applauded. He said that the human Soul is a part and parcel of the Almighty Spirit, and that I or Ego, is not the human body with its senses, or the mind. Ego is, really, a part and parcel of the Great Spirit, which pervades the whole universe.

Our Soul is not any part of our body, either internal or external, which constitutes the Senses, which are effected by external objects, for we have an intimate experience that our thinking subjectum ego.

I is the same that hears through the ears, and sees through the eyes, although eyes and ears are quite distinct in themselves.

Hence, it is that when we hear an agreeable musical concert, we distinguish the following three things; viz.:-

- (1) The Subjectum, that feels,
- (2) The Medium, through which it feels,
- (3) The Object which is felt.

The Subjectum that feels, is our Soul, and which is delighted by that harmony. The Medium through which it feels, are the ears, which receiving the external modulations, convey them to the Soul, and lastly, the object which it felt is the melody, either instrumental or vocal.

Again, in cases, even when we have lost any of our senses, our thinking Subjectum or I remains the same. (i.e.) you may pluck out my eyes, and I will remain the same. I will hear men speak and know that my eyes are taken away.

Again, you may main the nose, yet I or the Subjectum remains the same, I may be quite blind and deaf, still I remain the same, think and speak and feel. Therefore, the Subjectum that feels and thinks is neither any sense of the body, nor any combination of it.

By Spirit, I mean, a Being which is endowed with the faculty of feeling, knowing and willing. The faculty of Will is also in our Soul. Our Soul is not only simple, but, is also Spiritual, namely, is endowed with self-acting and moving power. Moreover, the Soul is called Understanding as far as it has only the intention of ideas.

Again, the faculty of our Soul, which re-calls past sensations obtained by the organ of our Senses, is called Imagination. The Soul is Immortal.

There is no reason why our Soul, even when separated from the body, will not continue contemplating on those very ideas, which it had acquired when it was united to the body.

He continued that the Soul of Man was invisible to the naked eye. No body has seen it, and no one could, therefore, say what it was. But still, we all know that the Soul exists. That without it, the body could not live, move, and have its Being. It is generally said that the Soul flies from the body when a person is dead. Some say, it goes to the next world. Others say that it has returned to its father, the Great God, the Creator of the Universe.

We all live in Spirit. There are people, who declare that the Soul is a part and parcel of the Spirit of God, which pervades the universe. The Soul acts, it guides the body, the limbs, and without it our limbs cannot move. The body is destructible. But the Soul is indestructible. It is, therefore, called Immortal.

The Immortality of the Soul cannot admit of a moment's question. We all know that the Soul of Man is immutable. It cannot be changed, though its faculties can be developed. They might improve and work Wonders. We say that we have Reason and Conscience. But, who is the Maker of those faculties?—It is the Soul which possesses them. If you separated the Soul from the body, those faculties would go with the Soul and not remain any where in the world.

It is the Soul of Man that wills. It is the Will that acts. Without will, there can be no action. A person wishes to eat, the Soul directs the Will to have its course, and the result is that the hands move, in order that we might have something to eat. The Soul cannot be compared to any worldly object. All the things that we see are Material. The Soul only is Immaterial. (Cheers)

After the learned Speaker had finished his Speech, the Chairman observed, in a few words, that the theory of Self, as expounded by the associational School of Philosophers in Europe, did not seem to be convincing.

The Meeting terminated at 8 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair and the lecturer.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Saturday, the 4th April, 1894, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Pandit Dhirananda Kabya Nidhi of the Bangabasi office. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Shyamal Dhone Dutt, Zemindar, and Attorney-at-Law, to deliver his lecture on—

Aryya Religion :—

The lecturer dwelt on the Subject for nearly an hour. In the course of which he said that the Vedas are the foundation of the Hindu Religion, and that they contain Religious and Moral Precepts inculcated by Brahma for the guidance of mankind. They have no beginning, no end, and the Aryya Religion founded upon them is the most sublime in the world.

He continued that Aryya Religion had for its object the worship of God, and God alone. One without a second. Our Aryan brethren called Him Brahma, and worshipped Him as such. The Vedas contain instruction, as to the way how the Aryya Religion was to be cultivated and followed. The Rules contained in them are very rigid. It is always difficult to observe them strictly. For, in that case, we ought to lead an abstemious life. We should learn to be un-selfish. We should give up all worldly desires. We should sacrifice ambition in the altar of faith. We should learn to live without food and drink for days. When we have something for our food, we should partake the same with others. We should not satisfy our hunger, when we see other people starving for want of food. We should have for our food only vegetables and fruits.

We should give up the habit of eating flesh altogether. We should give up the use of intoxicating drinks and drugs. These are the tenets contained in the Vedas, which we should observe, though they are very rigid in themselves, and entail great hardships on those, who wish to follow the Aryya Religion. Though the Aryya Religion,—the Religion of the Vedas, teaches us to worship God in Spirit, yet, there are different ways laid down in other Religions, as to the way by which to approach heaven.

The Puranas inculcate the worship of Idols, on the ground that by seeing the Image of God, the ignorant people can form an idea of the presence of God. There are different ways laid down for the guidance of man, by which to approach God, in different countries and at different times.

Pujans, as I have already said, inculcate the worship of Idols, such as the Images of Durga, Siva, Kali, Luchmi, Sri Krishna, Radhica and others.

The Vishnabs follow Chaitanya. The Christians look upon Christ as their Saviour. The Mahmedans have their Mahamet. The Sikhs have their Gurus. Thus different religions have different ways of worship, but they all tend to the worship of God. (Cheers)

After the learned Speaker had finished his Speech, the Chairman dwelt at some length on the Subject. The Meeting then dissolved at 6.30 p. m., with the customary votes of thanks to the Chair, and the lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, and the Indian Mirror, 17th April, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on the 22nd April, 1894, at 7 A. M., under the presidency of Babu Tarini Dass Banerjee, M. A., B. L., Attorney at Law. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman introduced Pandit Ram Chandra Nyaratna to the Meeting, and asked him to deliver his lecture on —

• The Philosophy of Human Life. :—

The Pandit dwelt on the Subject for more than an hour and a half, in the course of which he said that, the chief aim of man should be to attain Salvation and to subordinate earthly concerns to that prime end, and instanced the examples of Munis and Rishis of old, who devoted their lives to the worship of God, and exhorted our young men to follow them.

He continued that, the chief aim of our life should be to attain God. We might acquire knowledge. We might become wise. We might cut a conspicuous figure in Society. We might gain reputation, and our name may be known far and wide. We can acquire wealth. We can become rich, and become possessors of immense fortunes. But by all these, we cannot hope to be saved! (Cheers)

If we become ir-religious, all our learning, our wealth and our influence will not lead us to the gates of Heaven. If we wish to be saved, we should cultivate Religion from our young age. A boy, when he is young, should be taught to pay due respect to his parents and teachers. He should also be taught to learn the necessity of leading a religious life. He should never be taught to lead an immoral life, and never to associate with lascivious fellows.

Immorality and Ir-religion are the bane of human life. When a person is once enurrupted with the poison of immorality, he can seldom be expected to be conscientious in the performance of his duties. He can seldom be expected to learn to pay due respects to his superiors. He can seldom be taught the utility of following what is good for him, and calculated to further the interests of his family and friends.

He can never be expected to appreciate the Philosophy of Human Life. True Philosophy has for its basis, awe and regard for Almighty God,—a belief that we live in this world not for ourselves, but, for our fellow-men, and for performing a duty, which we owe to God, as our Father and Creator. We owe our existence to Him. We cannot live without Him. We depend for our daily food upon Him. We cannot enjoy true peace and happiness without Him.

All the things of this world, which we enjoy, are His. We should, therefore, learn to establish our faith and reliance upon Him,—and Him alone. We should have Him for our guide, counsellor and friend. If we wish to lead a happy and peaceful life, we should subordinate our will to His will, so that, we might have no reason to repent hereafter.

We should devote ourselves to Him, and say unto Him, O God! Thy will be done on earth, as it is in Heaven (Cheers)

After the learned Pandit had concluded his Speech, an interesting discussion followed on the Subject. The Chairman then addressed the Meeting for sometime. He said that the Philosophy of the human mind will fill the Soul with charity, and keep the sacred flame always alive and always bright. This equable and complaisant feeling, by him, who understands it, will seldom be interrupted, for a moment.

The assembly dispersed at 9.30 p. m., with votes of thanks to the Chair and the lecturer.

(Vide, the Statesman, the Indian Daily News, and the Indian Mirror, 21th April, 1894.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Mahakali Institution, (late Metropolitan Institution, Balakshana Branch), No. 115, Grey Street, on Friday, the 27th April, 1894, at 4 p. m., under the presidency of Babu Avinash Chandra Dhar, B. A. B. L., Vakil, High Court. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Jnan Chandra Bysak to deliver his lecture on —

Universal Education :—

The lecturer dwelt on the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, the advantages of adopting one universal language for the whole world, for the purpose of facilitating commerce and mutual dealings between one nation and another, and the means how such a language can be formed. The lecture was altogether of a novel character. He suggested that words may be coined to represent the ideas of mankind in a Scientific method by the convention of the civilized nations of the world from sounds, etc. He also dwelt at some length on the origin of language.

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman made a few remarks. He pointed out the impracticability of the formation of such a language, although he admitted that its introduction would be a great blessing to the world.

The Meeting dissolved at 6.30 p. m., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 29th April, 1894.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Central College, 71, Cornwallis Street, on Wednesday, the 9th May, 1894, at 4.30 p. m., under the presidency of Babu Jagendra Nath Chakraborty, B. L., Pleader, Presidency Magistrate's Court. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Bhuban Krishna Mitra, Zemindar, to deliver his lecture on —

The Present Condition of Hindu Society :—

The lecturer dwelt upon the Subject for upwards of an hour, in the course of which he said that, the present state of Hindu Society was deplorable, and that it was due to want of discipline and morality among the people of this country.

He continued to say that in former times, Hindu Society was subject to strict discipline. No body could go against it. Every body was entirely under its sway. There was a regular panic in a family, when any member thereof acted against the rules of Hindu Society. No body could dare to touch meat or wine. If he did so, he would lose his Caste. No doubt, this was a wholesome rule, considered from one point of view, though it might sound strange, if one were not to relax the Rules of Hindu Society.

Laziness in Hindu Social life is the very root of all our short-comings. Those short-comings are due to want of strict discipline, the observance of which exercise a wholesome cheque upon those, who are disposed to act against the Rules of a Society, which they dared not quit.

If you wish to violate the Rules of a Society, in which you live, that would be doing an act for which every reasonable person would find fault with you. If you do not like the Society of certain persons, you should shun them; you should not continue to live with them and infringe the Rules, which govern them. That is not right indeed. It is the present laziness of Hindu Society, which has made it what it is at the present time.

It is immoral that a person would like to eat of the plate, which he detests. You should, (if you are to be consistent with yourself), conform to the Rules of those, with whom you wish to associate. If you despise them, you should dis-associate with them. That is nothing but proper. The Society that keeps in its bosom, persons, who do not like its observances, its rites and its ceremonies, acts not only against himself, but, against Reason and common sense. It is the latter which enables a person to distinguish right from wrong, and to gather corn from chaff.

I have already mentioned to you, Gentlemen, that the present state of Hindu Society is deplorable! It will continue to be so as long as it is not consistent with itself.

After the lecturer had concluded his Speech, and after some discussions took place on the Subject, the Chairman made a few remarks. He concluded by saying that the best way of ameliorating the present state of Hindu Society was to adopt some uniform standard of Morality. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dispersed at 6-15 P.M., after a vote of thanks to the Chair.

Vide, the Indian Daily News, 11th, and the Indian Mirror, 13th May, 1894.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Arya Boursling Institution, No 37, Sova Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 12th May, 1894, at 4 30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Jatindra Lal Mitra B.A., B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Kali Prasanna Vidya Ratna to deliver his lecture on:—

University Education :—

The Pandit dwelt on the Subject for more than an hour and a half. He clearly explained the real meaning of Siksha or education, and compared it with that of the present day. The learned Lecturer found fault with the present mode of fixing the University Standards. He pointed out various defects in the present system of Education, and the way in which the poor students are examined. He also showed the degraded and degenerated condition of Hindu Society. And the necessity of its Reform. (Cheers.)

After the Lecturer had resumed his seat, the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Babu Jatindra Mahan Gupta and Surendra Mahan Gupta spoke for sometime on the Subject.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting for more than an hour. He acknowledged the difference between the present and the ancient system of education and the effects produced on the minds of young men. He said that the University does not certainly give our Indian Youths that amount of Moral and Substantial Culture which we desire.

He continued, that there were three great schools to educate mankind. Viz :—

(1) The Home is the first school, where boys are primarily educated by their parents,

(2) the University is the second school,

(3) Society is the third.

He remarked with deep regret, that now-a-days our boys were very improperly educated in their first school. Hindu parents seldom look to the Moral and Religious Progress of their boys. All that they want is to have their boys educated according to the present standard, and to make them pass the University Examinations. They seldom think for a moment that no amount of University Education can make a two-legged creature, a man unless his Moral and Internal Nature is fully developed. It is the fault of the parents and the guardians and not of the University, that our Indian Youths are daily growing so deficient in Moral Culture.

If Moral Education is instilled into the minds of young boys from their very infancy by their parents and guardians, he was almost sure that they would never go astray in their after life. He said that the University was not bound to give the Hindus that amount of Moral Education which they desire. Such the expectation, if not foolish is certainly not reasonable.

The Chairman, in conclusion, pointed out that to remedy the evil, an appeal should be made to the parents and guardians of students and to the proprietors of Private Institutions. It is from them, and not from the University, that the Hindus are to get the desired benefit. Failing this, the only course left is, to kneel down and with folded arms to pray to that Almighty Being, who alone can lift the poor Hindus up from the fathomless pit of degradation, degeneration and infamy. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 7-15 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair and to the learned Lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 15th May, 1894.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Government Aided Arya Prithuk Institution, No. 16, Darpa Naraiyan Tagore's Street, on Friday, the 18th May, 1894, at 3 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Akhil Pati Sarkar, B. A. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Adhar Nath Chatterjee to deliver his lecture on :—

The Duties of Parents and Children towards each other :—

The Speaker dwelt on the Subject, for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that the duties of Hindu parents were manifold. The most important of which was to educate them properly. By proper education, he meant, the harmonious development of their Moral, Physical and Intellectual Faculties. It is not all that they should supply their ordinary wants, and send them to a school.

They should equally try to inculcate Moral and Religious Principles on the unsophisticated mind of the young. Children should always love and respect their parents, for they are their best friends. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered. At this, Babu Naraiyan Chandra Haldar said that no one could deny the extreme importance of educating children. It was the most sacred duty of parents to educate their children. He not only confirmed his remarks to School Education, but dwelt forcibly the importance of Spiritual and Moral Education.

He also said that it was the ultimate aim of all educationists to know and reach the Almighty God. The Hindus, at the present day, neglect to impart to their children a Liberal, Religious and Moral Education in their boyhood. The result of which has been that children grow up to be unprincipled and are generally seen to pay little regard to the Religion of their parents.

The Chairman then rose, amidst cheers and, after complimenting the lecturer, observed that the chief duty of children consisted in obeying and respecting their parents. He quoted many Shlokas from the Shastras to show that if the parents be satisfied, the Gods are pleased, and cited instances from the Mahabharat and Ramayan, and the lives of many other men to prove that all great men invariably held their parents in deep respect.

He said that the duties of parents towards their children are most sacred and responsible. The mother's duties are of a more important and delicate nature than those of the father. As children naturally have more connection with their mother than with their father, it is she, who has the most important share in moulding their character. (Cheers.)

He continued, Home is the best seminary for Moral Education, and their future welfare depends to a great extent on what their Home and School Education has been. Young children have pure minds, which are best capable of receiving impressions. Moral and Religious Principles are, therefore, best imparted at this time, and these principles are retained in all their freshness till old age. (Cheers.)

He also remarked that parents should be living examples to their children, that their lives should be such that children might take them as Models for imitation. He regretted the want of good mothers and the general neglect of parents in properly educating their children, and to this cause he attributed the Moral and Physical degeneracy of the Indians of the present day.

The Meeting dissolved at 5 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, Statesman, 20th May, 1894.)

On the Hon'ble Chairman's taking his seat, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, addressed the Meeting thus:—

Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur and Gentlemen :—

I take this opportunity of publicly thanking your Highness for having honored the Society with your presence, this afternoon, and for your Highness's accepting the Chair at the Nineteenth Anniversary of the Calcutta Literary Society, to which I have the honor of being its Founder and Secretary since its foundation in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, and for your taking great interest in the prosperity of the Institution. (Cheers.)

Before commencing the usual proceedings of the Meeting, allow me, on behalf of the Society, to give expression to our heart-felt sorrow caused by the untimely demise of one of our oldest, respected and illustrious patrons, His Highness the late Maharajah Colonel Sir Chama Rajendra Woodyar Bahadur, G.C.S.I., Ruler of Mysore !!!

This melancholy event happened in Calcutta on the morning of the 28th December, 1894, and which deprived the Society of one of its best and sincerest well-wishers !

On hearing this un-expected melancholy and heart-burning news, the Office of the Society remained close for three days, as a mark of respect to the sacred memory of the late-lamented distinguished Chief.

A letter of condolence was duly forwarded to the bereaved Royal Family of Mysore, on the 29th December, 1894, to which the following reply was received:

Government of Mysore, Mysore,

7th January, 1895.

I am to acknowledge the receipt of your very kind letter of sympathy of 29th December last and to convey to you the thanks of the Royal Family for the same.

I beg to remain,

To
Sham Lal Day, Esq., Your Most Obedt. Servt.,

The Society is now in the Twentieth year of its existence. Besides creating a taste for intellectual culture, by means of discourses on Literary, Social and Scientific subjects, the Society aims at a Social union between Europeans and Indians—by bringing the Rulers in contact with the Ruled. The Society has been able to show already a marked progress during the year under review.

Having such noble objects in view, the Society, which had a small beginning, soon rose into importance, and within the last Nineteen years of its foundation developed into a flourishing Association, under the patronage of distinguished gentlemen, both European and Indian. (Cheers.)

During the Session, many and various were the Subjects that occupied the attention of the Society. From its printed Report, it will be found that the Society is pursuing a steady career of usefulness.

There were Fourteen public gatherings of the Society during 1894, held at the hall of the different Educational Institutions of the City of Palaces, at which the distinguished Graduate Members and Pandits took active parts in the proceedings. (Cheers.)

To the Patrons, Honorary, Foreign, Resident, Non-Resident, and Corresponding Members of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their un-abated interest in the Society's welfare, and thanks are hereby given both to the press for publishing the proceedings of the Society and to the gentlemen who lent their halls for the Meetings. (Cheers.)

It is fervently hoped that by the blessing of the Almighty Disposer of Events, our Society will go on improving year after year, and have a long life to fulfill the ends and objects for which it was intended. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Treasurer submitted the Accounts for the year 1894, which were also passed.

The Hon'ble Chairman then called upon Babu Ram Dayal Mazumdar, M. A., Principal, Arya Mission College, to deliver his lecture on—Social Disorder and its Remedy :—

The learned lecturer dwelt upon the Subject for upwards of an hour, in the course of which he said that English Education has revolutionized Hindu Society, and that a war was being fought by educated Indian youths against the prejudices and superstitions of their forefathers! Such state of things was not undesirable. For, if our youths were to give up the Religion of their ancestors, without a fit substitute being found for it, the result would be disastrous in the extreme.

A Nation, without a Religion, however well-educated, can seldom be expected to advance in all that is calculated to promote peace and prosperity. It is true that Brahmaism is making rapid strides in the land, but every educated Indian is not a Brahma. It was much to be desired that the worship of the One true God had spread far and wide. (Cheers.)

Conversion to Christianity had ceased to a large extent, indeed, by the influence of the Brahmo Samaj. But, it is not desirable that educated Indian youths, whose faith in the Religion of their ancestors had been shaken, should become Converts to Christianity, and forsake the houses of their parents, and leave them destitute and helpless, instead of becoming a support to them in old age.

It is but right that either our educated youths should stick to the Hindu Religion as it is, or become Theists. Otherwise, immorality and irreligion will run rampant in the land, and produce their evil effects on Society. If there be a Social change, that would be for the better. But, who is to regulate the construction of Society on a new and firm basis?—Without Religion, there would be Social Disorders. The tie of Religion is one that keeps Society together, without permitting its members to go astray. For that is an evil which it is very essential to avoid. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Hon'ble Chairman invited the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, the Venerable Acharyya Pandit Panchanand Bhattacharyya, who, on rising, was greeted with great applause, said that they should, first of all, know what is Dharma, before they would expect themselves to be virtuous and then one. They should find that Sanatan Dharma should once again flourish in this their mother land, and the idols innumerable in number, should be abolished.

They should find out a proper man as Guru, who should distinctly teach them Dharma and Karma. They should then consider themselves to be really virtuous, when they would find good in all things. When they would depend, upon everything for the will of one Sakti, then they should be able to be one, and that would be the proper remedy for Social confusion. (Cheers.)

After him, Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal addressed the Meeting, very eloquently. Babu Durga Dass Sirkar, M.A., then spoke on the Subject rather sarcastically for the great confusion in Hindu Society at the present day.

The Hon'ble Chairman, then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting, and a neat Speech was heard by the audience with rapt attention and hearty cheers.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur said :—

"Gentlemen, I must thank you heartily, for the honor you have done by inviting me to preside on this auspicious occasion. It is an honour, and a source of pleasure to me to have the opportunity to be in your midst this evening. (Cheers.)

"Though divided by barriers of caste and creed, and separated by distance, I am proud to feel that we belong to the same Nationality of Hindus; and a discourse of its Social Disorders should be interesting to us all. (Cheers.)

"I am glad to find that the attention of our Educated young men is now turning to grapple with the momentous problems of the day. The present disordered state of Society is due to the fact that without aspiration, and without religion, we are being tossed about by every breath of wind. (Cheers.)

"Unless we have one aim in life, no amount of Social Reform can do us any good. But, I must warn you, my dear countrymen, not to think any Social arrangement,—a Disorder which is not prevalent in other societies.

"Society is but a convention based upon certain general principles; and any reform, intended to be made, should be based on the same general principles; otherwise, one hasty step now taken is sure to undermine the whole system. A close study of the general principles by the leaders of Society is what we require at the present moment. And the true remedy of our existing Social Disorders lies in the practical application of this study. (Cheers.)

"Remedy, and not imitation, is what we want. The welfare of Society, and not the advantage of particular individuals, should be in our hearts. And thus with humble Spirit, and remembering the impartial dispensation of Providence, we should go on working; and we are sure to be successful at the end. With these few remarks and after wishing the Society prosperity, and thanking the lecturer, I beg now to resume my seat." (Cheers.)

A vote of thanks was then proposed by Babu Durga Dass Sirkar, M.A., and seconded by Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, with a few well-chosen words, which was carried with universal and deafening applause.

In the midst of hearty cheers, the Meeting dissolved at 8 P.M.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Statesman, and the Indian Daily News of the 13th, also the Indian Mirror of the 14th and the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 16th February, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the new hall of the Training Academy, No. 66-13, Simla Street, on the 17th February, 1895, at 4.45 P.M., under the patronage of the Hon'ble Dr. Justice Guru Dass Banerjee, M.A., D.L., one of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court, Babu Shyamal Dhono Dutt, Z-mindar and Attorney-at-Law, presided. The Meeting was densely crowded.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Hari Deva Sastri, M.A., Professor, Bishop's College, to deliver his lecture on—

Our Duties in this world :—

The learned Pandit dwelt very ably upon the Subject for upwards of an hour. He briefly pointed out the different varieties of Social, Moral, Physical and Constitutional Duties and Responsibilities of man. He said that, as long as we live in this world, we have to discharge a duty, not only to ourselves, but also to our fellow-beings and the dumb-animals. It is time that we show every regard to the sufferings of human beings, when we find them to be in want or distress.

It is true that we are not satisfied until we adopt measures to have them removed. When we hear that famine or epidemic is raging in distant countries, we at once raise our voice, and call upon the Government to help them. Our newspapers teem with articles representing cases of suffering, which is decimating the country from one end to the other. We not only ask the Government, but, we also ask the people to come forward fully prepared to meet the enemies boldly in the face.

We arm ourselves, and go about begging for help from others, and send the contributions to the local committees, which are formed to afford the famishing or deceased people,—help in the way of food or medicine, which they stand greatly in need of, under the circumstances in which they are placed.

Our duties should not only be confined to human beings, but, they should also be extended to the dumb animals. Because, they have life as we have, they suffer for want of food when they feel hungry. They suffer when they are suffering from disease. This is the reason which has led some of the most humane of our fellow-brethren in this city, to form themselves into a Society, which they call the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The Object of the above Society is very good in itself. It has Agents all over the town to watch and see that no glandered horse or bull is harnessed to a coach or cart, in order to carry a load of human beings, or articles of food all over the town. This is as it should be. (Cheers.)

But, how after it so happens that no step is taken against a dumb animal being driven when suffering from disease, which it is the duty of the Society to prevent.

How often wicked people escape even the most vigilant observation, but, we cannot charge the Agents for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with neglect of duty. Our duties to the world are very solemn, and we owe it to ourselves, that we should discharge them with great care and attention, so that, we may not be found fault with in this respect. (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had concluded his Speech, the Hon'ble Dr. Justice Gurn Dass Banerjee, who on rising, was received with cheers, addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour, and made several praiseworthy comments upon the lecture delivered.

He said that the Subject has so carefully and smartly been dealt with by the learned lecturer, that there remained nothing new to add to the point. His vast Sanskrit erudition has given him the noblest ingress into the minutest details, and the manner of his oration has done ample justice to it. Therefore, he would only try to sum up barely the gist of the learned speaker and say that the four stages of a man's life, viz.:—

- (1) Boyhood,
- (2) Youth,
- (3) Manhood,
- (4) Old age,—have their respective duties. Each of which, though not related to the other, is essentially new, and independent in itself. (Cheers.)

The first consists in learning; and this should be completed before one attains youth,—the period for work. Youth is a time for action and work; based on ignorance, it is only a misuse of energy. To put this in another form is to repeat in the words of Mr. Smiles:—He, who at twenty knows nothing, at thirty does nothing, and at fifty has nothing.

“শৈশবেতত্ত্ব বিদ্যানাং যৌবনে বিধেঃবিদ্যা।
বর্দ্ধকে সুনিবৃত্তিনাং বাগেনাতত্ত্বভাজন।”

(i.e.) One should learn and act at his boyhood, and mind business at youth, and thus lead a Religious life like Munis and Rishis at old age, and at last expire after duly performing his Religious vocation, &c. (Cheers.)

After him, the Chairman made a short Speech. The proceedings of the evening then came to a close at 7 p.m., after the customary vote of thanks to the Chair and the lecturer, and three cheers for the Hon'ble Dr. Justice Gurn Dass Banerjee.

(Vide, the Englishman, and the Indian Daily News, 19th, also the Indian Mirror, 21st February, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Cotton Boarding Institution, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, on Friday, the 22nd February, 1895, at 4.30 p.m., under the presidency of Babu Shyam Lal Laha, M.A., B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Janaki Nath Bhagbat-Bhushan to deliver his lecture on—

The duties of our Students:—

The learned Pandit spoke on the Subject for more than an hour. He quoted innumerable Slokas from the Hindu Shastras, in support of his counsel to students in this country, and he was appreciated by the audience.

He said that the students of this country have, after finishing their education, not only to discharge duties to themselves, but, also to their parents and their country. They should be humble, and learn good manners, and be obedient to their parents, who always have the best interests of their children at heart. They should try to serve their country to the best of their ability, by becoming useful members of Society. (Cheers.)

A young man, who only uses his best endeavours to earn his livelihood, and apply all his income to his personal comforts, and those of his families, can seldom be expected to promote the interests of his country. Our young men should endeavour to establish schools for the education of their countrymen, wherein instruction can be imparted at moderate rates, so that the masses might reap at least a small share of the benefits, which education is expected to impart to them. They should subscribe to public institutions, charities and funds, and support them by all that lies in their power. (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had concluded his Speech, Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal spoke for sometime in favor of the lecture delivered.

The Chairman then summed up and made a few pertinent remarks on the same.

The Meeting broke up at 6.30 p.m., with votes of thanks to the Chair and to the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Indian Daily News, and the Indian Mirror, 23rd February, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Ripon College, No. 60, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 28th February, 1895, at 4.30 p.m., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Baba Khem Singh Vedi, C.I.E., Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, and High Priest of the Sikh Nation, Panjab and Rawalpindi. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman called upon Babu Narendra Nath Dutt to deliver his lecture on—

Female Education:—

The lecturer dwelt on his Subject for nearly half an hour. He advocated the education of the Hindu-Girls, who should first be taught in the Vernaculars, in order that they might learn practical lessons on things, their duties and responsibilities. Our females are deficient in education. They are enveloped in ignorance and darkness. This is, indeed, a miserable state of thing. The sooner it is remedied, the better.

Our females, like the females of other countries, ought to be properly educated. They should be sent to School when young. Their parents ought not to raise any objection to this. It is true that we have few schools, for girls, but, those we have ought to be turned to profitable account.

We have Zenana Mission Schools in several localities, conducted by Christian Missionaries. We have the Victoria College, founded by the late Babu Keshub Chandra Sen. We have the Mahakali Patsala, founded by Maharani Mataji Tapaswini. We have the Bethune College, founded and maintained by our benign Government. To these, we ought to send our girls for instruction. They ought to be resorted to in large numbers. If we educate our girls in them, we will do an immense service to our country.

The disadvantages, under which we labor in our domestic arrangements, are owing to want of Female Education. If we had educated girls for our wives and mothers, our homes would then become a source of perpetual happiness. Our females would be able to teach our boys, and thus their education will begin at a very early age. (Cheers.)

All this will be to our advantage. They will tend to our benefit. It is, therefore, desirable that we should direct our attention to Female Education. No country can progress without educating its females. They have a mind, and why it should not be cultured. They are possessed of intellectual faculties, which should be cultivated and developed. They would become fit companions of men. Thus they would learn their duties and responsibilities, as wives and mothers, and behave accordingly. Our homes would then become abodes of peace and comfort, and domestic felicity will prevail in the family. Is not this desirable?—Yes.

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, said that, so far as India was concerned, Hindu girls, first of all, should be taught in Female Schools.

On his resuming his seat, the Hon'ble Chairman, who on rising, was received with cheers, said that, he was very glad to preside on this occasion, and expressed his appreciation of the services rendered by the Calcutta Literary Society. He said that although the Sikhs and the Bengalis were separated by long distance, he saw every reason that there should exist mutual sympathy, confidence and good will between the two races, in as much as they were children of one and the same Creator. (Cheers.)

With reference to Female Education, the Hon'ble Chairman perfectly concurred with the views, expressed by the preceding two speakers, and in conclusion said, that he should always be very happy to do any thing that lay in his power to further the objects of the Society. Wishing every success to the prosperity of the Association, he resumed his seat in the midst of deafening cheers.

After the Hon'ble Chairman had resumed his seat, Mr. A. Anderson proposed, on behalf of the Society, a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair, which was carried by acclamation.

The Meeting separated at 5 45 P.M.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Statesman, the Indian Daily News, and the Indian Mirror, 2nd March, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held in the hall of the Arya Boarding Institution, No. 37, Sova Bazar Street, on Tuesday, the 5th March, 1895, at 4-40 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Gangadhar Rao Madhav Chitnavis Bahadur, C.I.E., Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Babu Lal Behari Banerjee, B.A., B.L., to deliver his lecture on—

The Benefits of Extensive Commerce :—

The lecturer dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, an extension of Commerce enables a country to obtain what it could seldom produce itself. It increases the productive powers of the world, and enables people to improve by comparison. Its Moral and Intellectual Effects were briefly dwelt with by the lecturer, and he concluded by saying that, Commerce, by establishing personal interests all over the world, has rendered war obsolete.

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, the Hon'ble Chairman rose amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting thus :—

"Gentlemen,—The Subject of to-day's lecture has so ably been dealt with by the learned lecturer, that I need hardly add any thing more to it. Let me only remind you, Gentlemen, that it is Commerce mainly, which has made the English Nation the greatest in the world, and it is Commerce alone to which we, the Indians, should look up for our prosperity. (Cheers.)

"It would be much better if we were to imbibe their instincts for trade rather than their outward habits and customs. There is another thing which, Gentlemen, I may urge, in this connection, though not directly bearing upon the Subject under discussion, namely, that there are in the English Government, which owed its existence here to Commerce, many good things which you might really admire, and which we might find it to our benefit to make our own.

"I think, it is not fair to criticize in a hostile manner whatever the Government might be doing for us. We should wait and see the result before we criticize it. We really owe much to the British Government.

"Gentlemen, I need not say anything more, but I must thank you for having given me an opportunity when I could frankly acknowledge what you, Bengali Babus, have done for us in our Province.

"We, in the Central Provinces, owe our education to the British Government to the efforts of the early Missionaries and the Bengali Professors, whose influx into our Province was due to that Government, and the resources of easy communication that is placed within our reach. We thus owe a good deal to Bengal. It was a Bengal Official, Sir A. P. MacDonald, who proved to be one of our best and most sympathetic rulers. It was a Bengali gentleman who gave us our first lessons in the matter of Local Self-Government by taking upon himself to do the duties of an Honorary Secretary to our Local Municipality, when the Local Self-Government was first introduced, in that province. (Cheers.)

"Permit me, therefore, to take this opportunity of acknowledging many good things we owe to Bengal."

With these few remarks, and, after thanking the lecturer for his very able Speech, and, wishing the Society every success, the Hon'ble Chairman resumed his seat, amidst shouts of applause.

The Founder-Secretary of the Society having proposed a vote of thanks to the Chair, which was carried with acclamation, the Meeting broke up at 6 P.M.

(Vide the Statesman, the Indian Daily News, 6th ; the Indian Mirror, 7th and 14th March, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Friday, the 8th March, 1895, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Pandit Kailas Chandra Bhattacharyya, M.A., Editor, Sam Prakash, and Professor, Duff College. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Bhuban Krishna Mitra, Zemindar, to deliver his lecture on—

The Causes of Premature Death and Decay in India :—

The lecturer dwelt upon his Subject for nearly three quarters of an hour, in the course of which he said that the following four are the principal causes of the premature death and decay in India ; Viz. :—

- (1) Adulteration of food,
- (2) Want of zeal in Religion,
- (3) Renouncement of ancient manners and customs,
- (4) The prevalence of Foreign Medicines.

(1) Adulteration of food, which we take daily, means the adulteration of our system with deadly poison. If the food, which we take, is not healthy, we soon become sick.

The Government has been obliged to pass an act, making adulteration of food penal. Our milkmen phukao the cow when they draw milk, in order that they might get a larger quantity, and thereby make large profits from the sale thereof.

Now then, if our children drink Phukao milk from their infancy, they soon grow weak, and not sufficiently strong to bear the wear and tear of life, which they have to face, when they grow into manhood.

The Police, however, is on the alert. The Magistrates fine those milk-men, who are brought before them daily for infringing the Law.

(2) This is an evil which, English Education imparted in our Colleges and Schools, has created by taking away from one youth the belief, which they formerly entertained towards the religion of their ancestors. The Schools conducted by Missionary Gentlemen teach the Bible and inculcate Christianity.

By this, they create hatred in the minds of our young men against Idolatry and Superstition. We all know that Hindu Idols are made of straw and clay. There is no reason whatever why so much animosity should be shown against the teaching of the Hindu Shastras in Colleges and Schools, which are intended for the education of our young men.

(3) This is a further evil which English Education has created in the minds of our young men. They are leaving the habits and customs of their forefathers, which prove very injurious to them. The climate of India is not like that of England. They differ materially from one another.

What suits the Indians, cannot suit the Natives of other countries. If, therefore, we adopt English manners, habits and customs, we soon become weak, and our system will become deteriorated.

We cannot digest the same food, as the Englishman. In a hot country like India, the same clothes will not suit us, as those of Englishmen. We are in the habit of exposing ourselves to the Sun. We are in the habit of rubbing our body with mustard oil, which protects us from damp and cold.

Englishmen are in the habit of washing themselves with soap. We cannot take meat, as we cannot digest animal food. Our young men, when divested of prejudice, begin to take meat, and the result is that they contract diseases, which indigestion produces, grow old untimely, and die premature death.

(4) The use of English Medicine entirely upsets our system. Nature produces drugs in this country, of which Native Medicines are made, and which entirely suit us. If, therefore, we give up the use of Native drugs, we bring our own destruction. This is our own fault, and this is the reason why the use of quinine is being discontinued. It has entirely ruined our system. This is a fact which cannot be denied, and, therefore, we are betaking ourselves to the use of Native drugs and Medicines. The Native physician, who was seldom called, a few years ago, is now being largely resorted to. (Cheers)

We know not when all this will end! I can assure you, Gentlemen, that the more and more we go back to the customs of our forefathers, the better it will be for us. Of course, giving up all that is injurious to us, and not promiscuously giving up all that is good for ourselves. We should learn to separate the corn from the chaff, that will be for our own good. This is all that I can tell you, and I hope you will profit by your past experience. (Cheers)

The Hindus should try to get rid of these evils with head and heart, and resume their ancient system of living. Otherwise, they would surely be not able to improve their present degraded condition.

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, a gentleman rose and spoke a few words on the Subject.

The Chairman then dilated upon the lecture at some length, and was fully in accord with the lecturer.

The Meeting terminated at 6-30 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Indian Daily News, 9th, and the Statesman, 10th March, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Keshub Academy, No. 65, Beadon Street, on Friday, the 15th March, 1895, at 4-45 p.m., under the presidency of Babu Surendra Nath Banerjee, B.A. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Ram Chandra Nya Ratna, Councillor to His Highness the Rajah of Nattore, to deliver his lecture on—

Aryan Culture :—

The learned Pandit dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour. He said that the Hindus have greatly fallen off in culture, which is mainly due to the neglect of the Rules laid down by the ancient Rishis. The Aryan Rishis made Rules for the preservation of health, and also wrote a number of Religious books in order to guide the Hindus in the path of Religion and Virtue. He continued that Hindu Religion was inseparably connected with Society, and that it was as much our duty to look after the welfare of the one, as the improvement in Religion of the other. (Cheers.)

On the termination of his lecture, the Chairman called upon the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Mr. Prafulla Kumar Chatterjee, M.A., said that, though unprepared to address the Meeting, he fully endorsed the opinion of the lecturer. He, also, held the view that the degeneration of the Hindus was mainly due to their neglecting to abide by the excellent rules laid down in the Dharma Shastras.

The Chairman then delivered a neat little Speech. The Meeting dissolved at 8 p.m., after the usual votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned Speaker.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 18th, and the Indian Mirror, 19th March, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, No. 13, Mirzapur Street, on Friday, the 22nd March, 1895, at 5-30 p.m., under the presidency of Baba Samar Singh Sadi, High Priest of the Sikh Temple of Patna. The Meeting was densely crowded.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Mr. H. E. A. Cotton, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his lecture on—

The Views of England on India :—

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour. He said that the notions of the English people about the Indians were scanty, and were based on insufficient grounds. It was desirable that both Europeans and the people of this country should have free intercourse in the affairs of Social life, so that, there might be a friendly relation between the two communities. England is saturated with the capital of which India stands in need. England abounds with the Scientific information and the practical ingenuity, in which India is remarkably deficient. England, too, possesses, in an eminent degree that Spirit of enterprise, the want of which is one of the most striking characteristics of the larger portion of the inhabitants of the East.

Speaking for himself, the lecturer said, that he was a candid friend of the people of this country and wished that the present unfortunate friction between Anglo Indians and Indians were at an end.

After the lecturer had concluded his speech, the Chairman invited the audience to commend upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Babu Narendra Nath Dutt proposed a vote of thanks, on behalf of the Society, to the learned lecturer. In doing so, he said, that Mr. Cotton was one of their sincere friends, and a staunch supporter of the Simultaneous Examination-Questions. This proposal was seconded by Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, who, in the course of his speech, referred to Indian Philosophy and Literature.

The Chairman then spoke in support of the motion and blessed the Society.

The Meeting broke up at 7 p.m., after the customary vote of thanks accorded to the Chair.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 21st March, and the Englishman, 25th March, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the New Indian School, No. 160, Cornwallis' Street, on Monday, the 1st April, 1895, at 4.45 p.m., under the presidency of Dr. Jagendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M.A., D.L., President of the Society and Law Examiner of the Calcutta University. The Meeting was densely crowded.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the President called upon Babu Durga Dass Sirkar, M.A., to deliver his lecture on—

The British Rule in India :—

The learned speaker dwelt upon his subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, India had profited much by the transference of Her Government from the hands of the Mahomedans. The door of learning was opened to all, while it was accessible to a limited class only in former times.

During the Mahomedan Rule, the Brachmins only cultivated Sanskrit, and the sons of Kaistas were educated in Persian and Arabic. Mathematics was not known. Modern Science was not even dreamt of. The British Rule in India, for a century, had entirely changed the lines of thought of the people. Old ideas and traditions were swept away by the progress of Western Science. The educated Indian youth was Europeanized in thought, dress and habit. Free Trade was introduced in the country, and India was a loser by the transaction. Native Arts and Industries fell into disuse, and suffered much. These losses seemed to be insignificant, when compared with the Moral degeneration, and Religious apathy, which crept unconsciously into the Hindu Community.

He advised, in conclusion, not to imitate the Rulers of the land in their outward dress, habits, and mode of living, but, to imitate them closely in their spirit of patriotism, zeal, and energy. Their Moral courage and the Unity of purpose, and Love of justice should always be kept before our eyes. (Cheers)

Learning to die a premature death by strong drinks, and embracing materialism, in imitation of the Western World, our education, however dazzling it might appear outwardly, would surely lead us to the door of misery.

After the Speaker had resumed his seat, the President addressed the Meeting and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 2nd, and the Indian Mirror, 4th April, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Tuesday, the 2nd April, 1895, at 5.30 p.m., under the presidency of Babu Chandra Nath Bose, M.A., B.L., Oriental Translator, Government of Bengal. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Bepin Chandra Pal to deliver his lecture on—

The Ancient Ideal in Modern Life :—

The Speaker spoke on his subject for more than an hour. He particularly dwelt upon the Hindu Ideal of God; the relation between Soul and God, and declared renunciation to be the highest means for the attainment of Salvation. He quoted several passages from Upanishad, and other Sacred Sanskrit books. He also showed the relation between Hinduism and Christianity on several important points.

In conclusion, he referred to the Social disturbances in Europe and told that these could only be remedied by the faithful adoption of Hindu Spiritual Ideal. He dilated, at considerable length, on the relation between God and Soul; Mind and Soul; Hindu conception of Soul and God and, and Christian ideas of them.

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, the Chairman addressed the Meeting, mainly touching the points mentioned by the learned lecturer. He was very glad that a new wave has set in our Society, and asked the Hindu audience to take advantage of it, and go on in the world, keeping before them the Sacred Hindu Ancient Ideal.

The Meeting dissolved at 7.15 p.m., after votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 4th, and the Indian Mirror, 5th April, 1895.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Patriotic Institution, No. 13, Amherst Street, on Monday, the 18th November, 1895, at 3.30 p.m., under the presidency of Maharaj Kumar Lal Bir Mahendra Singh Bahadur, Maharaj Sahib of Barpali. The building was tastefully decorated, and the Meeting was densely crowded.

The Maharaj Kumar Bahadur, accompanied by his relatives, tutor, Babu Surja Kumar Mitra, and staff, entered the hall and occupied the presidential Chair amidst shouts of joy.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Noble Chairman asked the Venerable Acharyya, Nagendra Nath Bahaduri, to deliver his lecture on—

The Importance of Moral Education in Indian Schools :—

The learned lecturer dwelt eloquently on the Subject for more than an hour, and was frequently applauded.

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Maharaj-Kumar Bahadur addressed the Meeting thus:—“Gentlemen, I should thank you for the honour you have done me by inviting me to preside on this auspicious occasion. To be in your midst to-day is a pleasure which I shall not forget for a long time. I shall go back to my Native country with several pleasant remembrances and to-day's conference will be one of them. (Cheers.)

“Now to turn to the subject of to-day's discourse, the Importance of Moral Education in Schools of this country, cannot be over-rated. If Physical and Intellectual education is a necessity, Moral education is doubly so. Even I shall go so far as to assert that Moral education is of primary importance. And then comes your Physical and Intellectual. Be any one a physical giant, or an intellectual leviathan, he is nothing without Moral greatness. In your way to Moral improvement, you should first of all be truthful. Words come out of you before the experience of the world begins. The first thing should be nourished in an honest and befitting way. (Cheers.)

“Be truthful, and your Moral improvement will be based on a sound footing. It is natural that you should be truthful. It is un-natural that any one would tell lies. It is a double offence. First of all, we have no right to give any one a false idea of things, and secondly, we would be sinning, if we alter the true relation of things. (Cheers.)

they are necessary to give us a true appreciation of kindness, a deep abhorrence for the cruelty. I can say that we have no right to be otherwise than to be just and kind to others. We revolt against human nature to be attacking others with engines of oppression.

"In everything, we need self-control. From the dawn of our life, we should be initiated and taught in the elementary process of self-control, the essence of Moral development. We should keep the conscience supreme over the frailties of other predominant faculties.

"In our home, in school, and in society, we should learn the controlling of our-selves in the widest sense of the term. In one word, we should be morally great in order that our physical and intellectual attainments would shine at all. So boys should, from the time when their mind is plastic, learn to improve morally and then only their true improvement comes with in the range of realisation.

"Gentlemen, I sincerely thank you once again for your kindly voting me to the chair this evening.

With these few remarks, and after wishing the Society prosperity and thanking the lecturer, I beg now to resume my seat. (Cheers.)

The Meeting broke up at 5-30 p.m., after a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair.

Our best thanks are hereby given to the Principals of Colleges and Head Masters of Schools for their kindly lending their halls for the purpose of holding our Meetings, and to the Editors of the local daily papers for their kind insertion of our proceedings of Meetings in the columns of their respective journals from time to time. (Cheers.)

In conclusion, I fervently hope that, by the blessing of the Almighty, our Society may go on prospering in its career of usefulness year by year. (Cheers.)

After Bibu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked the first lecturer Bibu Lalit Mahan Ghosal of Sinthi, Comptroller to deliver his lecture on—

What has the British Government done for India:—

The lecturer dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour. He went on in detail as to what the British Government has done intellectually, morally, and physically to India.

Fifty years ago, the country was submerged in the mire of darkness and ignorance, and within this period the British Government has been able to manifest its wonderful skill in all directions, and had striven hard to ameliorate the condition of the people of India. (Cheers.)

They have disseminated, in all the country round, English education, which is accessible to almost all classes of people. The result of this wide-spread English education was that it had added something to their nationality, and it had directed the energy of their countrymen to the Oriental Researches. These and other blessings they had received at the hands of their Rulers.

He next turned his attention to the Administration, that was in vogue during the period of the Muslim supremacy in India. English education had opened their eyes, it had created something like the Spirit of Nationality, and had, above all given them an opportunity to stand on a common fraternal platform with the other heterogeneous mass of the country.

He then drew his attention to the physical aspect of the question, and briefly described the various public works founded by the British Government during its administration.

In conclusion, the lecturer emphasized that all the retiring Nations of the past, who had, at one time, risen in the scale of supremacy, have all gone—and gone for ever, with the exception of a very few only. He said that time might pass on, but the boon conferred by the British Government will ever be cherished in the memory of the Indians for eternity. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech the Hon'ble Chairman asked the second lecturer, Bibu Avinas Chandra Rai to speak on the Subject, Mr. A. C. Rai then dwelt on the Subject for more than an hour. He said that, it gave him very great pleasure to appear before the Meeting and to speak on a subject, which, in his opinion, was very complicated in itself, and he was not equal to the task of saying anything authoritatively, as to what the British Government had done for India. But, he thought that since he feels what the British Government has done for the country, he is happy that he should be able to express his own independent views on the subject, very briefly. India or Hindoostan has always had a very magnificent mark in the history of nations, and no one will doubt for a moment that it is a great country. (Cheers.)

India is the country where Buddhism flourished—the country whence Buddhist Apostles were sent to preach the religion of Buddha in Japan, China and other countries—the country where the origin of civilization was fostered—the country where the best of kings lived and ruled—the country whence the highest and sublimest philosophical theories were spread all over the world—the country which produced such gifted sages as Sita, Dnyananti and Akshya—the country which can well boast of having given birth to such a heroic king as Sri Ram Chandra—the country where the people reached ideal perfection in all matters—the country which produced ideal kings and ideal teachers. (Cheers.)

He continued that we have all come from the Indo-Aryan Family of the human race, whose forefathers had ruled the country for many centuries. Afterwards, the Muslims came over to India and ravaged the country, wresting from the ruling nation their supremacy. After a period of about six hundred years, the country was placed in the hands of the English.

The learned lecturer then went on to enumerate the various administrative changes and improvements that were introduced in different departments under their Government.

Six noble names, viz.—(1) Clive, (2) Wellesley, (3) Dalhousie, (4) Canning, (5) Bentinck, (6) Ripon, stand conspicuous in the history of British India, in connection with the most important administrative reforms in different directions; viz:—

- (1) Clive strengthened the Empire,
- (2) Wellesley consolidated it,
- (3) Dalhousie introduced many Public Works, such as Railways Irrigation, &c., which have greatly benefitted the country,
- (4) Canning restored order, when every thing was out of joint,
- (5) Lord William Bentinck gave the benefit of Liberal and Mass Education,
- (6) Ripon gave the franchise of Local Self-Govt.

But, there were extortions in the earlier part of British Rule. The unanimity, with which those extortions were condemned, produced the desired effect. The people gradually obtained their Magna Charta.

The cry of the country was no taxation without Representation, and hence came the system of Election, in the public bodies, like District Boards, Municipal Corporations, &c., &c. Then, again, representative men, like the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, &c, found place to speak for the dumb millions—a concession which was absolutely wanting during the rule of the Mahomedans.

The lecturer showed how the status of the nobility and the gentry was improved and made secure. But, he regretted that the condition of the poor ryots was not at all looked after.

He then came to the legal aspect of the question. He showed that the English had done admirably well in this direction. Some of the Codes and Acts were the best of their kind. For instance, the Indian Penal Code, which, he said, was the best Code of Penal Laws in the world, and criminals are dealt with in this country fairly.

The lecturer was really sorry to say that the Government had not succeeded so well in the Police Department. Instead of being the Ma, Bap of the people, the Police underlings are looked upon with great horror.

He then turned his attention to many reforms that have been introduced for the material comforts of the people, such as Telegraph, Railways, &c. The introduction of English education, which was greatly due to the late Rajah Ram Mahan Ray, in the time of Lord William Bentinck, has done immense good to the country.

As an outcome of this, the people are entering in every department of the State.—They even conduct Railways, and Steam-Engines. India is rising gradually from lethargy into activity. The British Government has a sacred mission to fulfil.

In conclusion, the lecturer strongly protested against the alleged assertion of some ignorant class of people to the effect that the British Government is doing nothing, but, draining the resources of the country. He referred to the Coal and Cotton Industries. The Indians knew not then how to utilise them.

The speaker then drew the attention of the audience to Japan. Thirty years ago, it was semi-barbarous, and it now aspires to be a great country. Japan has, of late, become powerful, because, it is exerting to keep pace with the progress of other great countries.

He emphasised the fact that, India cannot be regenerated, unless there is a National Union. Materialism of the West and the Philosophy of the East should go hand in hand. (Cheers.)

After the speaker had finished his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman, who, on rising, was received with cheers, addressed the Meeting thus:—

"Gentlemen, as I am suffering from cough and cold, I do not like to detain you any longer, and especially I was not aware that I shall have to preside on this occasion. But, so far as I could say, that the British Government has conferred various boons and benefits on the people of India, and, I hope that we should all remain loyal to the British Government. We should also support, with all heart, the measures of that Government. I would sincerely thank the gentlemen, who have addressed the Meeting, and I hope you will join with me in thanking them. With these few remarks, and after wishing the Society prosperity, I beg now to resume my seat." (Cheers)

A vote of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman was then proposed by Mr. L. Ghosal, and seconded by Mr. B. K. Mitra, and was unanimously carried. The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 7th, the Englishman, the Statesman, and the Hindu Patriot, 8th, and the Indian Mirror, 9th January, 1896.)

A well-attended public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Patriotic Institution, No. 63, Amherst street, on the 26th January, 1896, at 5. P. M.,

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Venerable Acharyya Nagendra Nath Bhaduri expounded

A few Slokas of the Thirteenth Chapter of the Bhagbat Gita:—

The speaker commenced that, in his public life of more than twenty-five years, he has frequently been requested to answer a question:—Prove the Existence of God.

In answer to them, he first referred to Hamilton's Metaphysics, that Deity understood would be no Deity at all. There must be something mysterious in Him.

We can understand physical things with the help of our physical senses, but, how could we understand that, which is, beyond the scope of the physical senses? We would require something hyper-physical to prove that hyper-physical Deity.—What is that thing?

It is Bhakty or devotion. If an European wanted to see America, and at the same time, determined not to cross the Atlantic Ocean, would it not be absurd for him to see America and then believe in its existence? So, if a man do not rely on the words of the Sages, and act accordingly, how may the Divine Being be understood by him?

Secondly, as a pupil cannot understand his teacher thoroughly, and, if he can, the teacher is no longer a teacher. So, if the Mysterious God is thoroughly understood by any body, he is no longer a God. There must be something in Him, which keeps man distinct from God.

To strengthen the argument, the Venerable lecturer cited some Vedic Hymns, explaining that our senses are not only combined to physical things, but, they owe their very existence to something—that self-illuminating Being, the Light of all lights, whom no light can enlighten. In order to have this difficult subject still more simplified, the lecturer concluded with some apt illustrations. (Cheers)

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 28th, and the Indian Mirror, 29th January, 1896.)

A very crowded Meeting was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Patriotic Institution, No 63, Amherst Street, on Monday, the 3rd February, 1896, at 4-30 P. M., under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society. Mr. N. N. Ghose, Barrister-at-law, Editor, Indian Nation, Fellow of the Calcutta University, Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner, &c., &c, presided. The hall was crowded to suffocation, and many gentlemen could not obtain admission. The Meeting was altogether a grand success.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Colonel H. S. Olcott, Founder-President, Theosophical Society of India, to deliver his first lecture to the Society on,—

The Fate of the Hindu Children :—

The renowned speaker, who on rising, was received with cheers, dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour. He said that many eminent educationists and influential gentlemen of the town were present. The learned lecturer opened his lecture by praising the pure and lofty Doctrines of the Bhagbat Gita. Countless Americans carry copies of this renowned treatise in their pockets, and read admirable Slokas from it, whenever they find opportunities. They get those Slokas by heart, reproduce them, and ponder over them. All the lofty moral ideas and all the philosophical doctrines of the various schools of the world are to be found in the Sanskrit literature.

The Hindu parents ought to see that their sons are instructed in those Doctrines, rather than in those of Foreign countries. Hindu girls ought to be educated in the same manner, as Sita and Gargi were in the days of yore. Sound Moral training is the most important part of education, and so, special attention should be paid to impart such training from the beginning. Parents and guardians, who were present, were earnestly urged to do so.

Colonel Olcott was highly pleased with the lofty object of the Patriotic Institution, and recommended the public to send their children to schools like this. (Cheers.)

After the speaker had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke of few words on the subject and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 5-30 p. m., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 28th, and the Indian Mirror, 5th February, 1896.)

A large number of respectable gentlemen were assembled at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Tuesday, the 4th February, 1896, at 5-30 p.m., to hear the Second Lecture of Colonel H. S. Olcott, Founder-President of the Theosophical Society of India. The Meeting was held under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, and under the distinguished president-ship of Dr. Hubbe Schleiden of Germany.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, and confirmed, the Chairman asked the distinguished lecturer to begin with his Second lecture to the Society on—

Un-selfishness :—

But, at the special request of the audience, it was changed to

Mesmerism and Mesmeric Healings :—

So, Colonel H. S. Olcott commenced his speech, and proposed to touch the leading principles of the first subject, and then the second, which idea was enthusiastically applauded. He spoke for nearly two hours.

He said that Man's spiritual advancement, in general, depended on Un-selfishness. It is the first and the most necessary element, which a man ought to resort to. He cited several passages from the Bhagbat Gita, which contain the essence of the Hindu Religion, and was one of the most precious literary jewels of the human race. He explained at length how we should try to subjugate our idea of Self. "Wise is the man, whose action is free from desire."

He then compared the Gita with the Visudhi-Marga of the Buddhist Scripture, and concluded, after very interesting and highly philosophical discussion, that both these wonderful religious books contain the same essential doctrines. He then gave many illustrations, after which he compared the un-selfishness of Yudhisthira, in not agreeing to part with his dog, when ascending to heaven, with the type of un-selfishness depicted by Pope in his Essay on Man.

The natural division into four classes, the labouring, trading, fighting and literary, as seen in the Bhagbat Gita, was primarily intended to promote moral and religious evolution, and aid man by natural evolution, to arrive at what is called emancipation. He then dwelt on—

Mesmerism :

He said that this is a branch of un-selfishness, when it has for its main object, the healing of the sick, and doing good to others. Every one has that talent in him, but its functional power is a matter of training. Those, that wish to know the key to it, ought to understand first that every man has in his body, another body exactly alike, which can travel a distance during sleep.

Between the two is a flow of electric or vital force. Every man has a luminous cloud around his body, extending to about one cubic distance. The atmosphere around is composed of layers, sensitive and insensitive. A certain amount of the vital force, that passes into space around, through the finger and extremities, and make this into electric aura. This constitutes a sensitive relationship between the body and external objects. The strong will have a major, and the weak a minor quantity of this force.

This was illustrated by a note-worthy and highly attractive incident about a Mesmerised medium in France. The old ideas of customs and usages, prevalent in India—(forbidding different persons to partake of the same dish, women to mix with men, lower orders to have close relation with the higher), have a good deal of truth in them. Interchange of the electric aura is possible. Strong with the weak, and old with the young, will have a very great influence upon one another, when the magnetic aura around their lives comes in mutual contact.

He then defined the nature of diseases. Paralysis will mean that there is a stoppage of the circuit of vital force, cessation of circulation or obstruction in its way is the cause. Remedy is fiction, to remove the obstruction and restore the current. Natural remedy is to apply from outside our personal vital influence, by taking hold of the paralysed part with our hands, concentrating our will, causing an electric circuit, allowing the vital fluid to flow and thus generally removing the obstruction—the cause of the disease.

The breath is also highly magnetic. Concentration of the mind is an essential element. Numerous diseases were cured in Ceylon and many in Calcutta before the public, at the residence of Maharajah Sir Jatendra Mahan Tagore Bahadur, K.C.S.I., by the lecturer, some years ago. So we see Mesmerism is one of the best means of attaining the true ends of un-selfishness, by doing good to others, even at the sacrifice of our own life-force, without expecting any reward, but only the good of mankind. A thief can be detected through Mesmeric influence, by making him confess the crime. Instances were given that this personal magnetic influence is different in different persons, it may be shown in various ways.

One interesting incident of the same is given here. A bed of garden ground was prepared, and different persons of the same family sowed some seeds from the same packet by their hands on different marked portions of it. The magnetism of the different hands varied, so that, the seeds of the different patches grew differently. Influence of the evil eye, at the first glance, in certain persons and certain states of their mind, is a fact not to be disputed. Those, who live in the same atmosphere, are more alike than strangers; what affects one, affects all. (Cheers.)

After the speaker had concluded his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 7-30 p.m., with cordial votes of thanks to the Chair and to the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 6th, the Hindu-Patriot, 7th, and the Indian Mirror, 8th February, 1896.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Ripon College, No 60, Mirzapur Street, on Wednesday, the 5th February, 1896, at 5 p.m., under the presidency of the Venerable Acharyya Nagendra Nath Bhaduri.

The hall was densely crowded. Upwards of Fifteen hundred gentlemen of all ranks and nationality were present to hear the Third lecture of the illustrious guest in the evening,—Colonel H. S. Olcott, Founder-President of the Theosophical Society of India.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the venerable lecturer to deliver his Third lecture to the Society on—

The Existence of the Soul :—

Colonel H. S. Olcott dwelt on his subject for more than an hour, during which, he was frequently applauded. He said that the Soul, although closely related to the body, does not cease to exist, when the body does so. It is a separate entity—a noumenon, which does not perish. It is subject to the laws of Karma. There is no need of trying to prove the existence of the Soul by Reasoning; mere reference to certain Spiritual phenomena will prove a death-blow to materialism.

We have heard of many persons, whose souls or Sukhma Sarirs have passed out of their bodies, and have talked with others, who are living thousands of miles off. How will Materialism account for this?

No, it can not. So, there must be something besides the body, which is a different substance, although closely connected with it. Whether you call it a Force, Spiritual vibration, Soul or Sukhma Sarira, it is a thing in itself, not dependent for its existence upon the body. The learned lecturer then expressed his deep affection for the Indian youths, and told them that they had no cause to be ashamed of their country and religion. (Cheers.)

After the speaker had finished his speech, the Chairman addressed the assembly in a few forcible, eloquent, impressive and sympathetic words. His speech attracted the attention of the audience, and he was frequently applauded.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 p.m., with votes of thanks to the Chair and to the learned lecturer.

(Vide the Indian Daily News, 7th, and the Indian Mirror, 9th February, 1896.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held, with great eclat, at the Emerald Theatre, Beadon Street, on Saturday, the 21st March, 1896, at 4-30 p.m., in the presence of the Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu, Rai Bahadur, B. L., C. I. E., Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council.

Mr. Narendra Nath Sen, Attorney-at-Law, Editor, Indian Mirror and Honorary Presidency Magistrate, was voted the Chair. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Swami Nityanandji Saraswati to deliver his lecture on,—

The Duties of the Aryans :—

The Swami spoke very eloquently on the subject for more than an hour. He pointed out how the present system of education was defective, and how it was necessary for us to conduct a system of teaching in a thoroughly national way. He said that man has four sides; Viz :—

- (1) The Body.
- (2) The Mind.
- (3) The Heart.
- (4) The Soul.

To be a perfect man, one should develop all his faculties—Physical, Mental, Moral and Spiritual.

Without a sound body, no improvement, in any sphere, is possible. Aryan teachers have, accordingly, laid stress on a sound body, as the first requisite to the attainment of Spiritual excellence—Religion, being with them, the all absorbing interest.

In this connection, the lecturer condemned the system of Early Marriage, as highly injurious to Physical growth. He deplored the want of Moral and Religious training of our young men, and observed that a system of education, founded on National lines, (i.e.), the lines of Hindu Shastras, is indispensable for our National advancement. He concluded by exhorting the audience to lead the pious lives of their fore-fathers, and to follow the teachings, inculcated in the Vedas, so as to act and prove worthy fathers. (Cheers.)

After the learned speaker had finished his speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting in a few impressive words, and thanked the lecturer. He expressed his complete agreement with the views of the lecturer, and spoke highly of the Brahmacharyya's advanced ways of thinking.

Mr. S. C. Biswas, B.A., B.L., of the Alipur Bar, in proposing a vote of thanks to the learned lecturer, applauded his self-sacrificing zeal, in coming all the way from the Panjab, to teach them their duties and to give an impetus to their National life.

With a cordial vote of thanks to the Chair, the Meeting dissolved at 6-30 p.m.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 22nd March, 1896.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held, with great eclat, at the hall of Aryya Mission College, 80, Mukhtaram Babu's Street, on the 22nd March, 1896, at 5 p.m., in the presence of the Hon'ble Rao Balwant Rao Bhuskuti Sabib, Panjab Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council.

The Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu, Rai Bahadur, B.L., C.I.E., Madras Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, was unanimously voted to the Chair. The Meeting was densely crowded by Pandits of different countries and the elite of the Indian community.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Babu Hem Chandra Rai, M.A., B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, to deliver his lecture on—

The Social Problems of the Day :—

The learned lecturer dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour, and he was frequently applauded. He touched upon almost all the Social evils of the day, and he very ably pointed out how they would be remedied. The lecture was altogether a very impressive and, at the same time, instructive one. The lecturer said :—

Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen,

He thought it was a very distinguished honor to be allowed to address a sitting of the Calcutta Literary Society,—specially one, presided over by such a distinguished gentleman, as the Hon'ble M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu, Avargal, Rai Bahadur, Member of the Governor-General's Council, at this large and respectable gathering. He would, therefore, only introduce a few topics of discussion, appertaining to the well-being of our Society, and not stand long between the Hon'ble Chairman and the audience, which would be more benefitted by the eloquent and instructive words from the Chair.

It was, he remarked, impossible to allude to questions of Social evils and their reforms, without giving rise to bitter controversies, which, he hoped, would be sedulously avoided by every sensible man of our Society.

In reviewing the modern history of our country and of our people, one was struck by the prevalence and predominance of political discussions, and the almost universal indifference to the consideration of topics, which concerned our Social economy, and influenced our individual and domestic existence.

It was not surprising. For, a human nature had an inborn craving for power,—power that is material and earthly. Therefore, there was a marked tendency, a feverish excitement in the political life of India. The domain of Social problems was colder and quieter, and there was not much room for popular enthusiasm in this direction. Hence, political agitation had monopolised in national activity.

But, as in the political world, so, in the domain of our Social existence, there were new forces at work, which were up-setting the original fabric and revolutionising the Social economy. The onward march of Western materialism had imparted a shock to the high Spiritual and Moral conception of our ancestors, which secured for them a high and an exalted rank in the scale of nations.

The present Social problem seems to be the proper re-adjustment of our Social economy, its suitable adaptation to the present circumstances and environments with a view to enable us to cope successfully with the Western Nation, which threatened to dominate over our National existence and absorb our individuality.

Emersed in the lofty ideals of Spiritual existence, taught to despise the gross material conceptions, we learnt to soar high in the region of contemplative philosophy, from the transcendental height of which, we looked down upon the grosser existence and aimed at a life, in which the cravings of flesh and blood were subdued by the higher aspirations of the inner Spirit. Suddenly, we found ourselves face to face with the most material of the material nations of the West, and in the conflict between the two antagonistic forces, those which made India what she was in her palmy days gave way to the positive science and the practical knowledge of the West. That fact, being there, the stern reality of our National discomfiture staring us in the face, the problem resolved itself into one of investigating into the causes of our degradation, the loss of our former National greatness, and the nature of the changes, that might be introduced into our Social fabric with a view to our gradual elevation. (Cheers.)

The lecturer then said that the old order changeth, giving place to new, was the adage, and even the most conservative would acknowledge the necessity of changes and reforms in political and social matters.

Indeed, the history of our religion and society was one of continued progress and periodical adjustment of usages and customs to that altered environments, and in response to the needs and requirements of successive ages. To adhere to what is old, because, it was an absurd and untenable position.

He then enumerated certain changes that were imperceptibly taking place in Society,—one of which was the great influx of students to the Catubuta Medical College. Then, as to the causes of our present degraded condition, he said, that it was due to the fact that the oriental mind was more speculative than practical, more fanciful than active, in producing tangible results. In order, therefore, to restore our national greatness, prominence should be given to training the mind of the young native generation in India, to habits of practical thought, practical energy and observation, and to an habitual mistrust in all speculation, which is not capable of being verified in positive facts. (Cheers.)

Amidst the stern realities of the work-a-day would complete absorption in abstruse and mystic studies can do nothing, but, positive mischief, and has, therefore, to be replaced by systems of positive scientific studies, which alone could cope with our present national poverty. This poverty, he said, was due to the wasteful extravagance of an alien rule, to over-taxation consequent on the adoption of a policy of reckless expenditure and also to certain Social evils—the most important of which were the Joint Family System, extravagant marriage expenses, and the marriage of our boys and girls at an immature age.

As to the first, he said, that such a system was suited to a primitive age, but, it was scarcely suited to the manifold and complicated requirements of an advanced era. It only kept so much spirit of enterprise, activity and independence in abeyance, it had a tendency to weaken and impair the national vigour, which, otherwise, would have occasion for its display and production.

As to the extravagant marriage expenses, there was no difference of opinion regarding the evil nature of the custom, and so, it was to be put down with a strong hand, without leaving it to the work of time.

But, he strongly deprecated legislative interference in these matters. Then, it was certain that marriages at tender years increased the burdens and liabilities of our young men, under the heavy weight of which, their youthful energy was smothered down, and to this was due the want of diverse outlets for the youthful intelligence of our rising generation.

Then he referred to the rapid rise of Japan. In the victory of Japan over China, one reads the triumph of intelligent adaptability to the changed environments and altered surroundings over the immobility and blind adherence to things old. Thus, the go-ahead-ism of Japan made the aversion to innovations of China yield before it. So, he recommended our youngmen to undertake a journey to Japan, before completing their education, to learn the secrets of her marvellous progress. But to this, there was a social check which, with due reverence, to the precepts of our ancient sages, we must, as practical men, overcome and face the situation.

He then alluded to the great disparity between the condition of our males and that of our females, which, he said, should promptly be made up as the woman's cause is the man's, according to the greatest of England's modern poets. But, conventional assemblies and discussions and resolutions were not the proper procedure to go to work in matters of Social Reform. There was, he said, no more effective measure than education, and under its humanising influence, our social infirmities would gradually be purged off. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had concluded his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman addressed the assembly in a neat little speech, which was heard by the audience with rapt attention. He said that the proposed reforms should be characterized by a spirit of compromise.

A vote of thanks was then proposed, with an eloquent speech by Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, which was carried with great applause.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vote, the Indian Daily News, 23rd, the Anurita Bazar Patrika, 24th, and the Indian Mirror, 26th March, 1896.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Aryya Mission College, 80-1, Mukhtaram Babu's Street, on Tuesday, the 24th March, 1896, at 5-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Hari Dass Dutt. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Bepin Behari Chatterjee to deliver his lecture on—

Sankhya Philosophy:—

The lecturer dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour. He said that according to Kapila Rishi, Nature (or Prakriti), and Soul (or Purus) are eternal and self-existent. From Nature (or Prakriti) is produced the Intellect or Mahat Tatya (i.e.) the substance or essence, by which the Soul obtains a knowledge of external things. It is material, but of the subtlest from of the matter, and all emanates from Prakriti. From Mahat Tatya is produced Ahankar or consciousness. From consciousness again is produced Mind or Mana. Five subtle elements, viz:—Visibility or Rup, Taste or Rasa, Odour or Gandhya, Tangibility or Sparsa and Sound or Sabda. Five grosser elements, viz:—Ether, Air, Fire, Water and Earth (i.e.) Khipta-teja marud-ban. Pancha Gyanendria, viz:—Eyes, Ears, Nose, Tongue and Skin. Pancha Karmandria, viz:—Hands, Feet, Voice, Annus, and Organs of generation. So, we see that altogether there are twenty-five substances, which Kapila Rishi assumes in his system of Philosophy.

Soul or Purus produces nothing, but, is linked with Nature or Prakriti—All Souls are portions of the universal Soul (i.e.) Purna Atma, as well as they are separate existence. It will be evident from the above, that according to Maharsi Kapila, every thing except Soul or Purus, is derived from Nature (i.e.) Primitive Elements, and is material.

Not only the elements, the senses, the organs of action, but the mind, consciousness, and intellect are the products of matter, what European Philosophers would call them Mind stuff.

Maharsi Kapila differs from the modern materialistic and agnostic school of philosophy, as represented by Spencer, in asserting that there is a Soul, which is independent of matter, eternal, though for a time, linked with matter. The five senses (i.e.) Pancha Gyanendriani simply observe (i.e.) passively receive impressions, what European Philosophers call sensation from the external world. The five organs of action, Pancha Karmandriani act according to their respective functions. (Cheers)

Mana or mind is only a sense of organ [Sankhya Karika 27]; it is the sensarium commune; it simply arranges the impressions and presents them to Ego or consciousness (Ahankar). Ego is self-consciousness [Sankhya Karika, 24]. It individualizes those impressions as Mana, &c. Intellect or Mahat Tatya discriminates and forms them into Ideas. Here we have evolution—stages of progress, from the lower or grosser senses to the mind or mana; from mind to consciousness; from consciousness to intellect; from intellect to Soul, which obtains a true knowledge of all external things. Sri Krishna says, "Indriani Parannahu [Gita, Chapter III. verse 42]. Organs turn them into actual precepts; consciousness or Ahankar individualizes them as Mana; Intellect or Budhi changes these individualized precepts into conceptions and judgments.

Here we have finer shades of distinction, which can seldom be found in European Philosophy. Maharsi Kapila declares that the subtle elements and the gross elements proceed from Consciousness or Ahankar, thereby he anticipates the philosophy of Berkely, Hume, and Mill—that objects are but permanent possibilities of sensation, and agrees with Emanuel Kant, that we have no knowledge of the external world, except in and through our sensations. We know only phenomena. Noumena, we know nothing says Kant. But, our ancient Rishis—they knew the Noumena or things, (i.e.), the Para Brahma by knowledge and meditation.

Kapila recognises three kinds of evidence; Viz:—Perception or Prakriti, Influence or Anuman, and Testimony. The system of Schopenhauer, Van Heartman is but a reproduction of the philosophic system of Maharsi Kapila, in its Materialistic part. In this respect, the human intellect has traversed the same ground that it occupied some five thousand or more probably unknown ages.

Kant recognised fully the existence of a Soul in man—the absolute ego of Fichte—distinct from mortal and immortal. But, the later European Philosophers can see in man only a highly developed physical digesting locomotive organism. The study of Psychology is vain, says Schopenhauer, for there is no Psyche or Soul.

But, Kapila system does not end with mere nature or the physical aspect of man, but, there is a dualism—Purus or Soul is different from all material things, and is a part of the universal Soul or Purna Brahma, whom we can know by Tattwa Gyan or meditation. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-45 p. m., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 27th March, 1896.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Oriental Seminary, 336, Upper Chitpur Road, on Wednesday, the 25th March, 1896, at 5 p. m., under the presidency of Babu Chandra Bhushan Moitra, M. A. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Janaki Nath Bhagbat Bhushan to deliver his lecture on,

The Caste system in India:—

The learned Pandit dwelt upon his subject for more than two hours, and he was frequently applauded. His speech was heard by the audience with rapt attention.

He very ably pointed out how this system sprang up in Hindu Society. How it has been beneficial to our countrymen, and how it has helped them to work out the way to Salvation. The Venerable Rishis or Sages of India, who gave up all sorts of carnal pleasures, and devoted their energies, their thoughts, and even their lives to the welfare of their fellow-creatures, encouraged this system, finding that division of labour, brings each class of people towards the improvement, and prevents those Social Disorders, which, from time to time, have proved pernicious to the advancement of arts, sciences and religion.

This system is prevalent among all communities of the world, though not in a similar shape. He urged the audience not to shake off the chains, which their forefathers had forced them to wear, but, to stick to them. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 7-30 p. m., with votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 8th April, 1896.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Saraswat Institution, No. 222, Cornwallis' Street, on Wednesday, the 8th April, 1896, at 5-30 p. m. The Meeting was largely attended.

On the motion of Babu Bereswar Banerjee, M. A., Professor of English Literature, Metropolitan College, seconded by Babu Durga Dass Sirkar, M. A., the Venerable Acharyya, Nagendra Nath Bhaduri was voted to the chair.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Nilkantha Mazumdar, M. A., Professor, of English Literature, Presidency College and Prem Chand Roy Chand Scholar, to deliver his lecture on—

Some Stray Thoughts on Sankhya Philosophy:—

The learned lecturer dwelt upon the subject for upwards of two hours. He gave a brief outline of the system of Sankhya Philosophy, in a few well-chosen words. He said that the Sanskrit system of Philosophy consisted of Six schools, which might be divided into three groups. Each group containing two schools. The Sankhya and Patanjal forming the first group. The Sankhya treated of the Science and Patanjal of the Art, (i.e.), the practical part. He clearly explained the method of creation, as given in the Sankhya system, and firmly asserted that it was a mistake to believe the Sankhya system to be a godless one.

The manner in which he understood the system was a little different from the manner in which the Hindus had accepted it, and he also showed clearly that the Sankhya system was in advance of the Western schools of philosophy, in this, that the Western schools did not proceed further beyond the gross matter, while the Sankhya system treated of things finer and far beyond the gross materials, of which this earth is a manifestation.

He said that though the Europeans call our system an absurd one, yet, we had good reason to believe that it was not so, and that our wise ancestors were not such fools as to believe in an absurd system.

He continued that all the evils and miseries had for their origin, the gross matter of which our body consisted and not the Soul, which, as something pure, simple, eternal and all good, could not be as such as the source of miseries and evils. The reason, for which we suffer from them, is of our own creation, namely, that we ourselves call them our own, the conjunction between the gross matter and the fine Soul being the reason of that.

Now, as a piece of pure glass (Sphatic) is rendered red by the reflection of a China rose (Jaba flower), when it is brought in contact with it, so is our Soul rendered miserable and unhappy, only by reason of its conjunction with gross matter. But, as the piece of a glass nevertheless retains all the purity it had before intact, so does our Soul retain all its purity intact. (Cheers.)

The moment, you take away the China rose, the piece of glass (Sphatic) becomes as pure as before, so, does our Soul become when its conjunction with gross matter is taken off. Now, that could be done only through wisdom and knowledge, and that was, therefore, the means of Salvation of our Soul.

Now, with view to acquire this knowledge and wisdom, some practical process should be gone through, which are explained in the Patanjal,—the practical part of Sankhya system, if he was allowed to call it so. (Cheers.)

After the learned Professor had resumed his seat, amidst cheers, the Chairman spoke a few words. He thanked the Professor for the masterly way, in which he had dealt with the subject, which was difficult to be dealt with in English language.

The Meeting dissolved at 7.15 P.M., with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 17th April, 1896.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Cotton Boarding Institution, No. 12, Mirsapur Street, on Thursday, the 9th April, 1896, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Bireswar Banerjee, M.A., Professor of English Literature, Metropolitan College. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Brajendra Lal Mitra, M.A., to deliver his lecture on—

English Literature—and its Influence upon the Indians :—

The lecturer dwelt upon his subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, English literature was one of the most wonderful of the literatures of the world. The English language will be the medium of communication of the greater part of the population of the world.

When the Arjans came to India from Central Asia, they were highly civilized nation. They wrote books on almost all the branches of learning.

But, during the Mahamedan rule, the Hindus forgot the sublime doctrines of their Religion, and their Sacred books were burned by the Mahamedans. Even at the beginning of the English Rule, the condition of the Hindus was little better. But, the spread of English education has ameliorated the condition of our fellow-countrymen. (Cheers.)

We have now learnt to respect and follow our own Religion. By means of the English language, the different sects of the Hindus have now begun to communicate their Ideas. Some hold that English literature is not sufficient to educate us. This is a mistake. The English language is sufficient to educate men. Moreover, since the English are our rulers there are many other advantages, besides education, in learning English. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, Pandit Paresch Nath Vilgabhushan and Mr. Durga Nath Sircar, M.A., spoke for sometime on the subject.

The Chairman then made a nice speech and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer.

DEAR SIR,

Will you kindly express to the gentlemen, you represent, my warmest thanks for their message of condolence, in reference to the death of my honoured father, Nawab Sir Abdul Gunny, K.C.S.I.

I feel that whilst I have lost a wise and affectionate father, many have lost a faithful friend, and the State a loyal subject; and it is, in my great sorrow, some consolation to know from the numerous messages I have received, from private friends, from public bodies, and from officers of the State, that in every capacity his virtues and ability have won him not only the regard, but, the affection of all who came in contact with him. I cannot hope in any way to leave up to his example, but, as he was my guide whilst he lived so now I shall strive, as far as lies in my power, to follow in his foot-steps.

To Babu Sham Lal Day, } I remain,
Secy., Calcutta Literary Socy } Yours faithfully,
AHSUNNOLLAH KHAN.

The Office of the Society was closed for one day, in honor of the memory of the late illustrious deceased!

His Highness Sir Krishna Pertap Sahi, K.C.I.E., Maharajah Sahib of Hutwah,
Poornendra Deb Rai, Rajah Bahadur of Bansbareah.

Letters of condolence were duly forwarded to the bereaved families of the deceased!

Before I resume my seat, I will be wanting in my duty if I fail to take this opportunity to tender my most cordial and grateful thanks to the Patrons, the Members and the well-wishers of the Society, who have, by their sympathy and active co-operation, furthered materially the success of the Institution. (Cheers)

Our best thanks are also due to the Principals of colleges, and the Head-Masters of schools for kindly lending their halls for the purpose of holding our Meetings, and to the Editors of several local daily papers, for kindly inserting the proceedings of the Meetings in the columns of their respective Journals, from time to time. (Cheers.)

My special thanks are also due to you, Sir, as the Chairman of the Meeting, for your kind condescension in coming over here, neither grudging your labour nor time, and encouraging us by taking the Chair this after-noon, in creating a taste for literary pursuits. (Cheers.)

As the Society was in-augurated by the humble individual, who now stands before you, it is with considerable satisfaction and pride that I find that, it has now weathered many a storm, and has continued to exist for the last Twenty years, by the grace of God,—a fact on which we may all congratulate ourselves. (Cheers.)

Now, I pray to the Almighty Disposer of Events for a long and continued prosperous career of its usefulness. (Cheers.)

With these few words, Gentlemen, I beg now to resume my seat. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Mr. Juan Chandra Rai, B.A., B.L., to deliver his lecture on—

The Life of the late Mr. Mana Mahan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law:—

The speaker spoke on the subject for nearly half an hour. He said that the late Mr. Ghose was well-known throughout the country. But, he, (the speaker), knew him from his childhood, as he was a friend of his father.

The speaker then related many anecdotes of Mr. Ghose's life, showing his generosity and kindness. As an Advocate, he always displayed the greatest tact and prudence, which made him a most successful lawyer in the country. He was also a sincere patriot and had the welfare of his country at heart.

He was moderate and reasonable in his demands, and his conduct, as a politician, commanded the respect of his opponents. In his last days, he took great interest in the question of the Separation of Executive and Judicial Functions. (Cheers)

He was a model son, a loving husband and father, and a kind and sympathetic brother. His life ought to be an example to the rising generation of the country, who will profit by following his foot-steps. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, the Hon'ble Chairman rose amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting with a nice little speech. He said that he did not intend to make a speech. Mr. Ghose was more familiar with the Calcutta people, and they knew more about him, than he could tell. He had already spoken about him at a Meeting in Madras, and he had great pleasure in thanking the speaker for his remarks. (Cheers.)

A vote of thanks to the Chair was then proposed by Mr. Durga Dass Sircar, M.A., on behalf of the Society, and seconded, in an eloquent speech, by Mr. L. Ghosal, and was carried with acclamation.

With a few sympathetic words from the Chair, the Meeting separated at 5-30 P.M.

(Vide, the Englishman and the Indian Daily News, 5th January, and the Indian Mirror, and the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 6th January, 1897.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Royal Bengal Theatre, Beadon Street, on Friday, the 8th January, 1897, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Wy. P. Ananda Charlu, Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B.L. C. I. E. Madras Representative of the Viceroys' Legislative Council, &c., &c., &c.

There was a large gathering of Members and visitors, amongst those present were, the Hon'ble Mr. Rabiuntula Mahammed Sayani, Bombay Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, Kumar Nitya Nanda Sinha Bahadur of Taranagar, Roy Yatindra Nath Chowdhery Bahadur, M.A., B.L., Zemindar of Taki, Mr. Ali Mahammed Bhimji, Babu Janaki Nath Bose, and others.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman called upon Mr. Juan Chandra Rai, B.A., B.L., to deliver his lecture on—

National Regeneration :—

The speaker spoke on the subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that the life of a Nation can be considered under the following three aspects: Viz :—

- (1) Social,
- (2) Economical,
- (3) Political.

India is now in a state of transition; and although a good deal of progress has been made in recent times, yet, if the Indians want to be a great Nation, they should improve socially and economically.

They should also revive the National Religion. He was grateful to men, like Sir William Wedderburn, and Mr. Caine, for the interest they took in Indian affairs, but the true regeneration of India will be effected by improving the Indian villages, and not by party fights in the House of Commons.

Educate your people and teach them the virtues of self-reliance, and all social reforms will follow as a matter of course. (Cheers)

After the lecturer had finished, the Hon'ble Chairman made a little nice speech. He said that the speaker had exhausted the subject. He agreed with him that progress should be continuous. (Cheers)

The Indian National Congress was the grandest example of the new life, that has been put into the Nation by Western Education. But, this is not enough. Commerce, Education, and Religion should also be improved. He trusted that the growth of patriotic spirit will raise the country to a high pitch of civilisation. (Cheers)

The Meeting separated at 6.30 P.M., with the usual votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Englishman, 9th, the Indian Mirror, 10th, & the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 21st Jan'y., 1897)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 24th March, 1897, at 5 P.M., under the distinguished presidentship of the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn, K.C.S.I., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

The Meeting was largely attended, and among the distinguished gentlemen present on the occasion were the Hon'ble Pandit Bishambhar Nath, Bombay Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council; Dr. Nishi Kanta Chattarpadhya, M.A. Ph. D., Rai Pasupati Nath Bose, Bahadur, Zemindar; Mr. Man Mahan Dhar, B.A.; Mr. K. M. Gupta; Mr. Durga Prasanna Mitra and others.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Mr. Juan Chandra Rai, B.A., B.L., to deliver his third lecture to the Society on—

The Problem of Poverty :—

The speaker dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour. He said that the Problem of Indian Poverty was a most important question, that ought to engage the attention of thoughtful Indians at the present moment. All the social questions sink into insignificance, before this economic question.

The wealth of a Nation depended upon agriculture and manufacture. Indian agriculture was antiquated and modern methods should be introduced, as far as circumstances permitted.

Recently, Dr. Voelcker, a German expert, was brought out to India by the Government, and he has drawn up a Report, but, no action has been taken as yet upon the matter. Indian manufacture was once very flourishing, but, times have changed and Western competition has driven our artisans from the workshop to the cultivation of the fields.

The lecturer then urged the Government to adopt a policy of protection, for the benefit of our infant industries, and curtail the Civil and Military expenditure, so that, taxation might be reduced, and relief given to the masses. (Cheers)

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, the Hon'ble Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered.

At this, Dr. Nishi Kanta Chattarpadhya, M.A., Ph. D. and Mr. Man Mahan Dhar, B.A., spoke a few words on the subject.

The Hon'ble Chairman, Sir John Woodburn, K.C.S.I., then rose amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. His Honor was heard with rapid attention. He thanked the lecturer for his very able speech, but, stated that it was impossible to impose protective duties, or to curtail Military expenditure. The Government of India is the cheapest Government existing, and, is doing much to improve the material condition of the people. (Cheers)

After the Hon'ble Chairman had resumed his seat, the Hon'ble Pandit Bishambhar Nath, in a few well-chosen words, proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman, he was seconded by Rai Pasupati Nath Bose, Zemindar, and the proposal was carried by acclamation.

The Meeting separated late in the evening.

My Dear Sir,
Your letter of the 26th ultimo informed me of the sad demise of your worthy father Babu Radha Nath Day. I am very sorry to hear the same and heartily sympathise with you in the bereavement you had in the shape of your father's death. God is all supreme and we cannot do any thing for his actions. From the description you give me of him, I am of opinion that he is a tip of piety, or, else who will have the fortune of death on the Banks of the holy River Bhagirathi. Our Society also lost in him a valuable and worthy councillor and patron. * *

From Kumar Dakshineswar Malia Bahadur of Searsole Raj:—

Searsole Rajbati,

Dear Sir, The 28th October, 1897

* Although I sincerely sympathize you in your afflictions, which are indeed very great, I am happy to hear that he (your father) has breathed his last on the banks of the holy River Ganges. You could not have given better and stronger proofs of filial affection and duty than by doing him the last service of enabling him to expire on the banks of the Bhagirathi. I feel the full force of your sorrow and griefs having been my parents already. All other losses can be partially or wholly repaired, but, that of parents ever remained ir-reparable. However, I offer you my condolences under your bereavement, and hope you will be reconciled with the world in a short time to come.

To Babu Sham Lall Day, Yours Sincerely,
Calcutta. Dakshineswar Malia

Babu Sham Lall Day,

I am exceedingly sorry to hear that your respected father Babu Radha Nath Day has died only a few days ago, for which I trust the Literary Society ought to make some memory for the old venerable gentleman, who has very kindly taken care for the improvement of your Society.

Hoping you are in enjoyment of good health.
To Babu Sham Lall Day, Yours Sincerely,
21, Nintola Street. Benod Behari Mullick

Lahore, the 29th October, 1897.

My Dear Sir,

I am deeply touched to hear of the melancholy news of the demise of your good father, * * and will publish the sad news in the Khalsa Akhar, Khalsa Gazette, and the Khalsa Bahadar, with which I am more or less connected.

We all know the un-certainty of the world ; the only certain thing in it, is Death. Yet, we, mortals, seldom realise the truth of this doctrine. Parents, no doubt, are the dearest relations, and their loss must necessarily be most keenly felt. God-loving men, however, prefer to resign all things to His will, and declare, as did the Christ, Thy will be done. (Says Guru Tegh Bahadur, the 9th Guru of the Sikhs :— * * *

"(Regret, if any unusual thing happens. Nothing is stable in this world, death is the common fate of all beings)." You must, therefore, bear patiently the loss of your father. He is not dead in the true meaning of the word—He is still living and shall ever live in the presence of the most High. Of course, you will not see him with your material eyes, and thus feel pain in your heart.

I quite sympathise with you in your present bereavement, and pray that the Almighty Father may grant you peace of mind, sufficient to bear the present loss.

With sincere condolence,

To Sham Lal Day, Esq,
Secy, Cal. Lit. Society.

Yours truly,
Jawalier Singh.

Vizianagram,
3rd November, 1897.

My Dear Sir,

* * I am extremely sorry to learn the demise of your old and venerable father aged about 80 years. He must be considered a Dhanya for many reasons. He lived almost the time mentioned in our Shastras, as he is a Sahasra-Yuga Jeevi, who will have no second birth. Like the ancient Maha-Rishis, he breathed his last on the Banks of the holy River Phagirathi, in the presence of his son, which is also considered to be equal to that of Benares. He has enjoyed the world so well and established his name as a respectable citizen of the City of Palaces in the whole World. I am sure, according to our Vedas and Shastras he will have perfect Moksha. May God, the Almighty, bless his soul with that eternal happiness, contemplated by the venerable Sages of India.

In the month of April last, I had the same ill fate. My father, aged 75, an Agnihotri, died in my Native place in the Godavery District. He was a pensioned Tahsildar, and lived a very pious life from his childhood. But, my old mother, aged about 70, is still living and we are very sorry for her. The decree of God is unalterable, and we are to obey it under any circumstances. As misfortunes never come singly, I lost my only Patron in the death of His late Highness the Maharajah of Vizianagram, within a couple of months after it. When compared with mine yours is not to be cared very much. There is nothing within the power of man to avoid such contingencies. The only thing that we can do is to submit and pray to God to save us from future anxieties and give us courage in the present bereavement. As you yourself know the nature of the world, I need not dwell on the subject very much.

* * * Trusting you will be in correspondence with me now and then.

To
Sham Lal Day, Esq.,
24, Nimbola Street,
Calcutta.

I remain,
Sir,
Yours Sincerely,
G. Sri Rama Murthi.

55, Olive Street,
Calcutta, 4th November, 1897.

Dear Sir,

I extremely regret to go through your letter of the 27th ultimo, breaking the melancholy news of your father's death. Of course, here every body is helpless and man has to content with the decree of the Lord. I do not offer you words of comfort, but leave you to him, the healer of all wounds.

To Babu Sham Lal Day,
Secy., Cal. Lit. Society.

Your truly,
Damodar Das Barman.

From Babu Khetter Mahan Bose, Tutor to His Highness the Maharajah Sahib of Independent Hill Tipperah:

Agartala, 28th October, 1897.

My Dear Sham Lal Babu,

* * Nothing can exceed the grief I am feeling on account of the death of your worthy father, which took place on the 18th Instant. I know how much a dutiful son like yourself should feel for the loss of him, who had taken all sorts of care and trouble to bring you up from the cradle to the present age and time, which now become heavy laden with grief and anxiety for you. I cannot, in adequate terms, use the language which may be better suited for an outlet of grief, so that my out-pourings may be expressive of a genuine share of condolence for the loss of your father. Accept, therefore, my sincerest condolence and grief for the departed.

To Babu Sham Lal Day,
Secy., Cal. Lit. Socy.

Yours Sincerely,
Khetter Mohan Bose.

From the Indian Mirror, 21st, October, 1897 :—

"We extremely regret to learn the sad death of Babu Radha Nath Day, Senior Member of the well-known firm of Day & Co., and the President and Councillor for many years of the Calcutta Literary Society, which was founded by Babu Sham Lal Day, in 1875.

The elderly generation of students know the usefulness of the book-selling firm styled Day & Co., established over a century, (1795). Many valuable school-books were published by Day & Co. Besides, the books indented from Europe, were always sold cheap for the convenience of students of this country.

Rabin Radha Nath Day was the first Indian, on this side of India, who made direct indents for looks from foreign countries.

He was born in May 1819, and died full of years, on the banks of the holy river Bhagirathi, on Monday last, the 18th October, 1897, after 9.30 A.M.

He has left behind him four sons and a daughter and good many grand-children and great-grand-children. He was a self-made man, and was much respected in this city.

On hearing this melancholy news, the office of the Calcutta Library Society has entirely been closed for three days, in honor of the memory of the deceased.

After the Secretary had finished his Report, which was duly approved, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Mr.
Juan Chandra Rai, B. L., to deliver his lecture on—

The Development of National Literature:—

The learned speaker spoke very eloquently on the Subject for nearly half an hour. He pointed out that Literature was a prominent factor, in contribute to the greatness of a Nation, and illustrated his remarks by quoting many examples. He took a survey of the various departments of literature.

The lecturer continued saying that National greatness depended a great deal upon the Development of National Literature. Literature was an important factor in the formation of National Character.

The deep Spiritual Character of the Hindu people, was due to the high teachings of Ramayan and Mahabharata. England first rose to greatness under Elizabeth, and the writings of Spenser and Shakespere formed the Character of the English people.

Literature also marked the progress of Civilisation of a Nation. Greece and Rome have perished, but, the writings of Homer and Vergils still remained to enlighten other people by their teachings. It was, therefore, highly important that our Vernacular Literature should be raised to a high standard.

Much progress has been made in recent years, especially in the departments of Poetry and Fiction, but, the fields of History, Biography and Science have hardly been cultivated.

The Speaker urged the audience to try to enrich the Vernacular Literature, as it was the only means of raising the intellectual character of the masses. (Cheers.)

After the Speaker had finished his speech, Mr. Ram Doyal Mazumdar, M. A., spoke a few words on the subject, and he was followed by Mr. Devendra Nath Sen, M.A., B. L., who also made a nice little speech.

The Chairman, (who on rising was received with cheers), then addressed the Meeting and blessed the Society. The Rajah Bahadur thanked the Society for the honor it had done him, in inviting him to preside on the occasion of their Twenty-second Anniversary Meeting, as the similar honor showed to him two years ago. He was much gratified, the Society was progressing favorably year after year. (Cheers.)

Address by the Secretary :—

The Chairman, on taking his seat amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, said :—

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN,

The Council of the Calcutta Literary Society begs leave to submit the Twenty-Third Annual Report of the Society's, operations, for the year ending 31st December, 1898.

The Twenty-Second Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Aryya Mission College, 80-1, Muktarani Babu's Street, on Monday, the 10th January, 1898, at 4 30 P.M., when Babu Jnan Chandra Rai, B.A., B.L., delivered a lecture on the Development of National Character, under the presidency of His Highness the Hon'ble Ranjit Sinha, Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur. The Meeting was largely attended.

The lecture lasted for about an hour, and as it was getting dark, few other speakers could address the Meeting. Babu Ram Doyal Mozumdar, M.A., Principal, Aryya Mission College, and Babu Devendra Nath Sen, M.A., B.L., however, made nice little speeches. The Hon'ble Chairman then addressed the Meeting for sometime, and observed that he was glad to see that the Society was prospering. His Highness hoped that it will go on progressing year after year.

At the conclusion of His Highness' speech, the Meeting dissolved late in the evening, with a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair, moved by Rai Yatiendra Nath Chowdhery Bahadur, M.A., B.L., Zemindar of Taki, which was carried by acclamation.

The year just closed was with us, as with most other people, a very inauspicious year! Though the Anniversary was held on the 10th January, 1898, yet, it was not long before, the Plague broke out, and we, therefore, could not arrange for further lectures, as the people were much frightened, and leaving the town then in large numbers.

In the month of April, 1898, the Plague commenced to decimate the city, and it was, therefore, very difficult to persuade educated young men to come forward, and edify the Society, as in previous years, with lectures. The Plague broke out in its virulence in the month of April, and continued to commit sad havoc for several months.

In this connection, we think it our duty to mention that the wisdom of the policy, pursued by the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn's Government, will not soon be forgotten by the people of this country.

Firstly.—As soon as it was known that the Van brought out for conveying Plague Patients, as in Bombay, to the Isolation Hospital was disliked, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor directed it to be superseded by ticca garies and palkies.

Secondly.—Separate Wards for Plague Patients were directed to be opened in the Medical College, Mayo and Campbell Hospitals, respectively, as the people dreaded the Manicktola Isolation Hospital.

Thirdly.—A Notification appeared, under the signature of Mr. Risley, President, Plague Commission, that no one was to be forcibly Inoculated against his will.

Fourthly.—Private Hospitals were permitted to be opened in Gentlemen's compounds, or, on the tops of their houses for treatment of Plague Patients.

Fifthly.—Vigilance Committees were directed to be formed, and Hospitals opened by private subscriptions in the Twenty-five Wards of the town.

All these tended to assuage the public mind, and for this, the thanks of the Calcutta Literary Society are specially due to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

It is with profound sorrow I have to announce that the Calcutta Literary Society has lost one of its oldest Patrons, and three well-wishers, who were snatched away by the cruel hand of death!!

His Highness the Hon'ble Sir Lakshmeswar Singh, G.C.I.E., Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhangah's connection with the Society commenced in the year 1880. He rendered immense services to the Society, for which our best thanks are due to the late Maharajah Bahadur. On receipt of the intelligence of his demise, the office of the Society was closed then for three days, in honor of the memory of the late illustrious deceased, and a letter of condolence was sent to His Highness' beloved brother, Rajah Rameswar Singh Bahadur of Rajnagar-Durbhangah, on the 18th December, 1898, to which the following reply, by Telegram, was received, on the 19th Idem, from the present Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur :—

Telegram, No. 1262. Dated, 2nd January, 1899.
To the Secretary, From Calcutta Literary Society. Private Secretary.
Lord Curzon desire me to thank you for your Telegram.

I have now a cheerful duty to perform in announcing to you that the following Gentlemen have signified their willingness to become Members of the Society during the year 1898; viz. :—

- (1) Maharajah Suryya Kanta Acharyya Chowdehry Bahadur, as Patron of the Society.
- (2) The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur (now Rajah) Pandit Suraj Kaul, C.I.E., F.U.C., Panjab Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council.
- (3) Pandit Bhagwan Singh Sahib.
- (4) Babu Pasupati Nath Bose.

The Society whilst regretting that it could not induce Gentlemen to come forward and deliver lectures on important literary and social problems, as in previous years, on account of the Plague, and the Calcutta Municipal Bill, which entirely engaged the public mind, congratulates itself on the cessation of the Plague, and the withdrawal by the Government of Bengal of the Plague Notification.

The Society under one of its Rules, is pledged not to deal with Political questions. It cannot, therefore, express any opinion on the Calcutta Municipal Bill, the discussion on which, it hopes, will shortly terminate amicably between the Government and the Rate-payers.

In conclusion, the Society begs to record its most cordial and grateful thanks to its Patrons, Members, and friends for the valuable aid which they have rendered to it during the year 1898.

As the Society was inaugurated by the humble individual, who now stands before you, it is with considerable satisfaction and pride that I find that it has now weathered many a storm, and has continued to exist for the last Twenty-three years by the grace of God, a fact on which we may all well congratulate ourselves; and I now pray to the Almighty Disposer of Events for a long and continued prosperous career of its usefulness (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Report, the Chairman moved that it be adopted. The proposal was carried by acclamation. The Chairman then asked Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his lecture on the Present Day Problems.

The learned lecturer spoke on the subject for about an hour. He said that he would have thought it a great honor to be called upon to deliver a lecture at the Twenty-third Anniversary Meeting of so influential an Institution, as the Calcutta Literary Society. He could not help wondering how in a country like India, where ideas seldom take root, and almost never bear fruits any Institution, could live to such an age. For this, he had no doubt that they had to thank much Babu Sham Lal Day, the indefatigable Secretary and Founder of this Society, for his sustained enthusiasm and perseverance, in spite of all discouragements. Such Institutions were always useful, and particularly so in this age of transition.

Clearness of thought and clearness of vision were the two things most necessary for the solution of the difficulties, which awaited us in this generation. Such centres of discussion, as this Society would greatly tend to bring about the desired result. More of these kinds of Institutions, the better for the country. For men, in a period of transition, were like soldiers on a battle-field, who must both march and think in every step.

He went on to say that he had alluded to the present as a state of transition. It was not possible within the short time, at his disposal, to go deeply into the various problems, which crowded upon his mind. He would only allude to some of the most important ones.

It might be generally said that almost everything required re-consideration and re-construction at our hands. For, the spirit of change, which had come over us, would be satisfied of nothing short of a revolution. He only hoped that this revolution might be wrought with more hands and unflattering steps.

But, looking at our lives as it is to day, he could not help bestowing some reflections on it. Turn your eyes in whatever direction you will, barrenness seemed to be the only thing that stared you in the face. For, it was under the influence of Western Ideas, some significant movements, and some great ideas had sprung into existence. But how do they fare?—What reliance can you put on them?—Is there any abiding interest shewn in any one of them?

It is not merely in the matter of politics and religion, the want of thought and want of courage are to be seen, but in all departments of our lives. An utter fruitlessness and un-mistakeable failure characterized our lives in our various undertakings. Perhaps, no where is this to be seen in more marked character, than in the lives of our educated young men.

Some body had said that the fate and fortune of a Nation is identical with fate and fortune of its young men of thirty. If that is so, what hope for our race, and what destiny awaits us?—For do we not know that the lives of our young men, like our lives in other things, are also marked by sad overpowering failures.

Young men, so full of promise, so brilliantly talented, so deeply inspired with the highest ideas, confronted with the noblest of resolutions at once the heirs of all that the best and noblest in Europe and Asia. Young men, who owed us a new world, young men, who should have filled our generations with great thoughts, with great actions, and with great speech, where have they gone?—What have become of them?

I am reminded of a very significant Poem, like Robert Burns, called Warring. Warring was a young man. He was to stand at the head of an era, so full of genius, so full of like, and so full of variegated sympathies.

People wonder,—what he would be;—and they will watch him with eager expectation.—He had established an empire for himself, and that fair brow of his, was crowned with a diamond. So his friends wondered, and so his friends hoped, till at last one day while sailing down the river, the Poet observed a number of Italian hawkers come on boat to hot things, and amongst them he fancied, one face he recognized. He awoke him in ancient memories. When, on a sudden, with a rush of tumultuous feelings, he recognized his face to warrings.

I take it that the time of explanation leaves the want of harmony between our intellectual convictions and our actual conduct, and almost invariably breaks down every body who seeks to harmonize the truth. And yet, without this harmony, without the just prepotionate correspondence between these two, life can never gain in solid order and success.

The education, which we receive, separates us almost as a jump from the Society, in which we are born. We have to steer our course between the intellectual convictions derived from one's civilization, and the duties derived from another civilization.

We have not the courage, nor clearness of sight to carve out a path far south more completely answering to our needs, and the result is that all things end in a general shipwreck of our lives, and in the end, we lead the public opinion of the dead.

Large ordinances of our ancestors have no true meaning for us to give form and feature to our otherwise featureless and characterless lives. The problem of problems for generations is the problem of manhood. It is difficult to say how this is to be achieved. We should want courage, we should want clear thought, we should want unequivocal action for that. It would not do merely to apologise for our lives. Nor was it sufficient by getting through it with uninformed ideas and half-beaked conduct. We must be men and can be men only when a high and excellent seriousness purveyed an informal life. I do not care whether we worship stars and stones. I do not care whether Earth Marriage were allowed to continue in the land. I do not care whether the seclusion of women is clung to. I do not care whether the English rule the land, provided I am satisfied that these things were allowed to exist or not after most careful and searching thought. It will not do to believe in one thing, and do another. Let us have truth and above all truths. The three things needful then, are courage, clearness of thought, and seriousness of purpose.

After the speaker had finished his excellent speech, the Chairman proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was carried by acclamation. He then asked if any gentleman amongst those present had any thing to say upon the subject of the lecture.

As the night had advanced, and no one was willing to speak, the Chairman brought the proceedings of the evening to a close by an eloquent and instructive address, which lasted for about half an hour. His address was heard with rapt attention.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, having proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the chair, which was seconded by Babu Gobin Chand Dhur, Zemindar, and carried by acclamation, the Chairman declared the Meeting dissolved.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Indian Daily News, the Hindu Patriot, 6th; the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7th; and the Indian Mirror, 10th January, 1899.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the General Assembly's College, Cornwallis' Square, on Tuesday, the 19th January, 1899, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Shyam Lal Laha, M.A., B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his second lecture on the Study of History.

The Speaker spoke on the subject for about an hour. His lecture was full of anecdotes and remarks, which were suggestive, and the audience was much pleased to hear him.

He said, that History, as you all know, is a record of a Nation's past and present deeds, not only of valor in the battle-field, but of the measures adopted from time to time to promote the cause of good Government, and the prosperity and happiness of the people. It is, for this reason, that the history of Ancient Greece and Rome possesses such interest and affords ample room for study and instruction to those, who resort thereto. The deeds of valor, which gained the Roman people such marks of distinction, as a race cannot fail to stimulate those, who read them to similar deeds of courage, when the occasion for them presents itself.

The ancient spartans were famed far and wide for all that contributed to raise a Nation in the estimation of the world, and to the pinnacle of true greatness. Our own country affords ample rooms for study. The Aryans are distinguished from other people for their achievements in the field and in the studio. The Mahabharat, or the History of India, contains accounts of the battle fought in the wilds of Kurukhetra, and the exploits of Bhima and Arjuna which cannot but raise a Nation in the estimation of war-like races.

The truthfulness of Maharajah Yudhishthera is a house-hold word which every man and woman in India knows how to value. The self-sacrifice of Sri Ram Chandra and devotion to his father in forsaking his home and going to the wilderness for fourteen years to enable him to keep the promise, which his father had at an evil moment pledged to Sri Ram Chandra's step-mother that he must send Sri Ram Chandra to wilderness, and give the throne of his Empire to her own son Bharat, in preference to the claims of his eldest step-brother.

These and other records of greatness cannot fail to excite feelings of sympathy and self-sacrifice in the minds of those, who are fond of making Ancient History their objects of study, and giving their time and attention to its pages.

History not only presents to the mind's view the ways and means of attaining intellectual greatness, but also of moulding a high moral character. I, therefore, cannot but urge upon you, Youngmen, to devote your time to the study of History. You must not neglect this particular branch of study in the school-room, because, it taxes your memory to the utmost, and you have to work hard at the time of your Annual Examinations. I know, Youngmen, that you are fond of reading Novels. The Sanskrit, the Mathematics and History are eyesores to you. But, if you neglect these three branches of study, you must fail to acquire that greatness, which enables young men to move onward in the path of progress, prosperity and happiness.

After the learned lecturer had concluded his speech, the Chairman said that as the lecturer had fully exhausted the subject, he had very little to add.

Babu Lal Behary Banerjee, B.A., B.L., then having proposed votes of thanks to the Chair, and the learned lecturer, which were seconded by Babu Bhuban Krishna Mitra, Zemindar, and carried by acclamation, the Meeting terminated at dusk.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, the Hindu Patriot, 12th; the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 13th; and the Indian Mirror, 15th January, 1899 respectively.)

A very interesting ceremony of the Society, was held, with great clat, at the compound of the M. L. Jubilee Institution, 89, Harrison Road, on Monday, the 30th January, 1899, at 3 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B.L., C.I.E., Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, to congratulate the Hon'ble Ranjit Sinha, Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur, on his appointment to a seat in the Bengal Legislative Council.

The Meeting was densely crowded by respectable Gentlemen of the Metropolis. The building was beautifully decorated with garlands of flowers, flags, and nosegays, which imparted a charm to the distinguished audience.

The Hon'ble Chairman and the Hon'ble Rajah Ranjit Sinha Bahadur entered the hall and occupied their respective seats amidst universal outburst of applause.

The proceedings of the afternoon commenced with the reading of the minutes of the last Meeting by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed.

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, to read the Address of Congratulation, prepared by the Calcutta Literary Society, for presentation to the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur, on his appointment as a Member of the Legislative Council of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

As desired, Mr. Biswas addressed as follows :—

Hon'ble Chairman, Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur, Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, and Gentlemen,—We are assembled here, this afternoon, to congratulate the Hon'ble Ranjit Sinha, Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur, and also ourselves in his recent elevation to the Bengal Legislative Council. I have been asked to read, on behalf of the distinguished Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, the Congratulatory Address, which I hold in my hand. I have accepted the pleasant duty with much satisfaction. In our illustrious guest, we have got an enlightend Nobleman, representing an ancient historic family.

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

Wealth, it is said, has, not only its responsibilities, but duties also. Be it said to his credit, the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur has fully realized the responsibilities of His Highness' exalted rank, and the duties of his high life. He has cheerfully and un-grudgingly devoted his time and energy to public services. As a Municipal Chairman and an Honorary Magistrate, he gave satisfaction to all parties concerned. I hope and trust that in his new capacity, he will prove not only loyal to the Crown, but what is far more important to his conscience, the divine monitor within.

It is not for me to tell the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur how to acquit himself in the new and exalted sphere of work, to which he has been called, but it may be permitted to us to hope that with ample opportunities, which he has and shall have for doing good as a citizen, as a Nobleman, and as a Councillor, the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur will be able to render important and manifold services to the land of his birth. (Cheers).

The following Address of Congratulation was then read by Mr. Biswas :—

To

THE HON'BLE RANJIT SINHA BAHABUR,
Rajah Sahib of Nashipur, Member of the Legislative Council
of

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,
&c., &c., &c.

HON'BLE RAJAH BAHADUR,

We the undersigned Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, beg most respectfully to approach you this evening, with this cordial Address of Congratulation, expressing our deep and sincere satisfaction at your taking seat in the Bengal Legislative Council, in place of the late-lamented and distinguished Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhangah.

Permit us to state, that you have always shown great sympathy in the cause of our Society and acted as our Chairman on the occasion of the Twentieth and the Twenty-Second Anniversary Meetings, and thereby rendered, by your practical suggestions, great help in furthering the interest of our Society, in a way which really deserves our heart-felt gratitude. We venture to state that the true greatness of our Nation does not consist merely in its commercial and agricultural development, which, of course, are necessary in themselves, but also, we beg leave to observe in developing, as our Society aims, friendly relations, as best as we can, between the Rulers and the Ruled, and in filling the minds of our countrymen, with sound and rational principles by harmoniously combining both the Eastern and Western thoughts and culture that are necessary for the healthy growth of our national life.

Being a scion of an old and historic family, which dates its ancestry from the dawn of the British supremacy in India, and proprietor of a vast and extensive Zemindary, we have great pleasure to note, that you devoted your time and energy to securing the good of your country, that you acted in various public capacities as a Municipal Chairman, and a first class Honorary Magistrate in your own district and that by your disinterested services, you have secured the high opinions of all the sections of our community and of the local authorities.

The prominent position, which you now occupy in Society, has made you eminently fit to represent the numerous grievances of the community to which you belong. We fervently hope that like your illustrious and public-spirited predecessor in office, the late-lamented Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhangah, whose sudden and untimely demise has caused an irreparable loss to our community, and has deprived this Society of a liberal-minded Patron and friend, you would spare no pains, not only to further the interest of your community, but sincerely endeavour to ameliorate the condition of your countrymen, and help the Government with practical suggestions and wise counsels, which may here-after prove beneficial to the people of this country. We heartily congratulate you upon the great honor Government has conferred upon you, and wish you every success in your new position.

Accept, please, these humble respects and hearty congratulations. We fervently pray to God, who shapes our destiny, that He may shower His choicest blessings on you, and grant you a long and prosperous life, to enable you to serve your country in a manner befitting the high position you now hold.

The Calcutta Literary Society, SHAM LALL DAY,
24, NIMTOLE STREET, Founder-Secretary,
Calcutta, 30th January, 1899. Cal. Lit. Society.

The Address, which was printed in parchment on gold, and enclosed in a beautiful velvet casket, was then handed over to the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur by the Hon'ble Chairman.

The Hon'ble Chairman in presenting the Address, spoke as follows :—

Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen :—It has always been a pleasure to take part in a function such as this. In this particular instance, it is doubly pleasing in that I have to join in doing honor to one, whom I already count among my friends, though, when I promised to preside, I did not know my relation with him. In thus coming forward to labor for the people, my friend proves that the gulf that long lay separated from the landed aristocracy on the one hand and the people on the other, is becoming narrower and narrower.

If, instead of being one of the few exceptions in the class, as enjoying his status, he would move others with his ambition to work for the people and fraternise with them, and if, instead of gloating on wealth and taking pride in an isolation, looks down, from his assured altitude, on the people below as so many pilgrims, he would be rendering, a real service to the community at large. With the satisfaction I now feel, is, however, mingled the melancholy thought of his immediate illustrious predecessor, the late Maharajah Sir Lakshmeswar Singh Bahadur, G. C. I. E., of Durbhangah, yet I trust that this contact between the departed great man and the friend to my left, will serve as a motive to him to imitate that model.

To the late Maharajah's eminence, goodness and the desire to be useful to others, formed as principal elements whereas my friend adds an advantage which was denied to his lamented predecessor—the advantage of a vigorous youth; for, in later years, the late Maharajah of Durbhangah was poorly in health, so much so that in something less than a year before, he told me that he had just come off the jaws, of death—death that nevertheless waited only to swallow its prey in a spirit of relentlessness, I would particularly recommend to my friend the extreme simplicity of the late Maharajah—an attribute which adorned him more fittingly than all other advantages he so eminently possessed—an attribute which made him to be the first to telegraph congratulation to me on my first election to the Viceregal Legislative Council, though I was known to him only by name.

I mention this anecdote as illustrating his generous impulses rather than any particular merit of my own. In thus dwelling on that great and noble exemplar, I do not imply that my honored friend of this evening has given proof of behaving otherwise to men humbler than he is. I only wish to emphasise that feature as universally loveable, for, in this imperfect world, one cannot be too often reminded of what is good, useful and endearing.

The advantage of wealth and status to which he is born is, besides, best utilised by his using them for the benefit of others, who do not possess that advantage.

There is another point in his favor, which I wish to notice. While we plebians have first to achieve a position to command the ear of others, and then attempt to do what lies in our power, men like my friend, already possess that altitude which corresponds to what Walter Baghot has called the dignified part—an altitude from which he and his like can afford to speak with a title to be heard of in these days, when who says it has a greater value than what he said.

Thus it is a good sign that members of the aristocracy, instead of lolling on the lap of luxury or sitting on chests in which affluence remains locked up, bestir themselves, and come among the people, throwing aside the self-importance, and mix with them and work for them, in a spirit of brotherliness—a function to abdicate which they have no excuse whatever.

I hope and trust that by this time next year my friend will show to others, as he has evidently done to the Members of this Society, that he is a loveable and useful Member of our community. If my limited knowledge of him and such observations as I could make warrant me to hazard an opinion, I might well anticipate that the judgment would be in his favor.

Now, I conclude with the saying that my friend fully deserves all that is said of him in the Address just presented to him? (Cheers).

The Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur, who on rising was received with cheers, accepted the Address of the Society, and replied as follows:—

Hon'ble Rai Bahadur and Gentlemen,

Permit me to express my heart-felt gratitude for the kind and congratulatory Address, which you have just now presented to me, on my appointment as a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council.

It really gives me great pleasure to notice that the object of your Society is to develop friendly feelings between the Rulers and the Ruled, and I have my full sympathy with the noble object of your Society. I firmly believe that no practical good to the country can be done unless we can establish such cordial relations.

Gentlemen, I think it will not be possible for me to fill up the gap caused by the death of the Premier Nobleman of Bengal, I mean,—the late lamented and public-spirited Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhanga!

It shall always be my best endeavour to further the cause of my countrymen, and I shall try as much as I can to follow the path of my illustrious predecessor in office, and shall always try to lay my suggestions honestly and independently.

To you, Rai Bahadur, I am greatly indebted for the kind sentiments, you have expressed on my behalf, and I thank you from the very core of my heart for the troubles you have taken in presiding on this occasion.

Allow me, Members of the Calcutta Literary Society and other Gentlemen here present, to thank you again for your kind wishes, and in return I wish you all happiness and prosperity. (Cheers.)

On the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur's replying to the Address, the Hon'ble Chairman made a few more remarks to the following effect; He said:—

Reference is made in the Address to the fact that the Rajah Bahadur has made it a point to promote friendly relations between the Rulers and the Ruled. I am very pleased to hear it. But I should have been more pleased to see, in the audience before me, some proof of the members of the ruling class, attending and rejoicing in the honor done to him. Perhaps, their absence is due to the inconvenient hour and place that have been fixed; or perhaps, the Secretary to the Literary Society not having circulated his invitation widely enough. I trust that the proof will be forthcoming on other similar occasions, which, I feel sure, must occur, sufficiently often, in connection with the Rajah Bahadur during his tenure of the seat in the Bengal Legislative Council.

Certain words of the Rajah Bahadur, in acknowledging the Address presented to him, are likely to be misconstrued, as though he would straightway substitute private effort for agitation, once for all. If you remember that he has promised to discharge the trust, with independence and honesty, you will see how different is his meaning. His meaning undoubtedly is that, where private effort, without loss of manliness and self-respect, will advance justice or lead to a remedy of hardship, their agitation may be and ever must be avoided. I am at one with him there. So, I believe, are all of you.

I go further and assert that persuasion must, in such instance, be first tried if an honest open door exists or is visible. This has the sanction of the historic and traditional teaching of our fore-fathers, under the name of Soma, to which the very first place is assigned in describing how one should go about in gaining one's object. But the Rajah Bahadur does not say, any more than our ancestors did, that when Soma fails or sees no opening, we should retire from the field of effort. So long as private effort succeeds on the merits of the case in which it is exerted, and not merely as a favor from personal regard to the intercessor, the line of conduct is objectionable. But if the concession is made as a matter of favour, then there is too much room to fear favour done will require favours in return and it may, not unfrequently, lead to sacrifice public duty to satisfy private obligations thereby incurred. It has too much the risk of demoralising the giver as well as the taker. If this danger is borne in mind and private effort is put forth, without (as I have said) loss of self-respect and without imperilling public obligations, he must be a mad man, who would resort to agitation.

When one friend points out to another friend where there is a grievance, and the latter remedies it on the ground that the grievance exists, and not because a friend has to be obliged, there is fair play and no favor. A motto to be true is, therefore, fair play or fair fight. I have not the least doubt that such is my friend's meaning, though owing to his rather aphoristic method of giving expression to it, it was not absolutely clear (Cheers).

After the Hon'ble Chairman had taken his seat, the ceremony came to a close at 5 p.m., with votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman, and the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur, proposed by Mr. J. N. Roy, Barriester-at-Law, and seconded by Pandit Hari Deva Shastri, Professor, Bishop's College, which were carried by acclamation. (Vide, the Englishman, 1st February; the Indian Daily News, 2nd February; the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 31st January and 8th February; the Hindu Patriot, 31st January and 4th February; and the Indian Mirror, 1st and 12th February, 1899, respectively).

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Ry. P. Annada Charlu Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B. L., C. I. E., Madras Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, asked Professor M. N. Chatterjea, M.B.A.S., (London), to deliver his lecture on India's Call to Her sons.

The learned Professor spoke on his subject for half an hour. He said that English literature would be found teeming with passages giving an idea of what the call of a country to her sons means. He briefly referred to many well-known passages to corroborate his statement. He went on to show how immediately after the Aryan dispersion from Central Asia, the growth of Hindu civilization in India was simply marvellous. He exhorted the audience to take a careful view of the past, look to the present, and then to form a conception as to the duty of the people of this country.

He maintained that Sanskrit literature occupied a unique place in the history of the world's literature. He compared Kali Dasa with Shakespere, Moliere, Goethe, Valmiki, and Vedavyasa with Homer and Dante; and showed how the priceless gems of India have shown dazzlingly through the bewildering haze of centuries and ages. In language, Sanskrit proved purer than Greek, far more musical and attractive than Latin.

He maintained that Veda Mantrams, when chanted by a trained tongue, would prove sweeter than any beautiful price of music, and a longue trained to chant Veda Mantrams would make English naturally sweet. Further, he asked, why should not we have so many Max Mullers and Monier Williams in India? why should we not go to the distant corners of the Globe, and tell Nations something of the glory of our language, literature and Philosophy? Should we not be ashamed of our being idle, when foreigners come to give us lessons in language, literature and Philosophy?

He addressed the audience in many such stirring passages before coming to prove that in ancient India the development of Scientific ideas was almost undoubtedly great. Among many other instances he cited the case of Ether and the treatment of consumption. He said that at a Meeting of the Royal Society of London, a year or so ago, the Nature of Ether was determined. The Hindu Aryans know that which formed the conclusion of that most learned Society's paper.

He concluded by saying that the first duty of every true educated Indian should be to join hands with those that are engaged in making re-searches in language, literature and history of the country. It is we who should tell the world what the glory of our literature was. We should not be contented with the past. We must know that history reproduces itself. We must see that this becomes us in the case of India. We should try to prove worthy of our Great Ancestors in Science and Literature.

After the lecturer had concluded his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman said that although in this city, unlike Madras, it was customary to discuss the lecture delivered publicly, he would not think it proper to do so in this instance. He continued that though the lecture was brief, it was more highly finished than one of a far greater length. He said that every word of the lecturer went to the heart of the audience. He hoped that like gas and electricity such lectures would spread in this city far and wide.

The lecturer very rightly said that the leaders of the people ought to feel of their carelessness as regards the true interest of the country, by dwelling on their predominant conduct in a most eloquent manner or of what value is the contemplation of the greatness of our forefathers, if a sense of shame does not overtake us at the thought that we are to-day their unworthy representatives and, as a result, we do not bestir ourselves.

If the lecture, so full of patriotic pride at what we had been, has the effect of producing an equal amount of preliminary shame in us, and the consequent effort to mend our ways, the lecturer will, I am sure, consider himself amply rewarded (Cheers).

After the Hon'ble Chairman had taken his seat, Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, proposed votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman, and the Hon'ble Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur, which were seconded by Pandit Hari Dev Shastri, Professor, Bishop's College, and carried by acclamation. The Meeting then came to a close. (Vide the Englishman, the Indian Mirror, 1st February; the Indian Daily News, 2nd February; the Amrita Bazar Patrika and the Hindu Patriot, 31st January 1899, respectively).

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on the 5th February, 1899, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Mr. Cecil Bendall, M. A., (Cambridge), M. B. A. S., Professor of Sanskrit, University College, London.

There was a large gathering of Members and visitors, amongst those present were, Mr. Cecil Bendall, M. A. (Cambridge); Mrs. Cecil Bendall; Dr. T. Block; Rai Sarat Chandra Dass Bahadur, C. I. E.; Mahamahapatnya Pandit Hara Prasad Shastri, M. A., Professor, Presidency College; Babu Chander Nath Bose, M. A., B. L., Oriental Translator, Government of Bengal; Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur; Babu Hari Mohun Mukerjee, Sub-Editor, Bangabasi; Pandit Vishnu Charn Bhattacharyya; Babu Annanda Prasanna Bhattacharyya, M. A., Pandit Bepin Behari Bhattacharyya; Pandit Tara Kumar Kabiratna, and other distinguished Gentlemen.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Hari Deva Shastri, Professor, Bishop's College, to deliver his extempore lecture, in Sanskrit, on the Improvement of Sanskrit Education in Bengal.

The learned Pandit very eloquently spoke on the subject for about an hour. He handled it in such a masterly way, as greatly pleased the audience, and he was cheered many times. He emphatically pointed out the Importance of Sanskrit Education which was greatly neglected by his countrymen. He exhorted them to educate the rising generation in Sanskrit, so that they might become the means of communicating the store of information and knowledge, which the Sanskrit Literature of old contained to their ignorant fellow-brethren in the Vernacular, such as will prove very edifying and interesting. In the course of his speech, he referred commendably to Mahakali Patsala, and Mrs. Annie Beasant's efforts to establish schools and Colleges on strict Hindu principles.

Sanskrit language is valuable only because it opens the door to a deeper religious knowledge. It is, therefore, eminently a religious literature. And are we taught to vindicate this religious literature in our schools and colleges?—Far from it; we are rather taught to hate it. We are taught that Hinduism is a mass of irrational superstitions believed in by the ancient barbarians, who called themselves Munis and Rishis, and by the fools who allowed themselves to be imposed upon by these barbarians.

We read English books, written by Englishmen saturated with English ideas of life and Society, containing references, not to the truths enunciated in the Vedas, the Purans, the Dharma Shastras, but the Christian truths of the Bible. We imbibe a love for the west, and learn to hate the East! What wonder is it then that, after leaving schools and Colleges, we turn away from the Sanskrit language and literature, and devote ourselves to the worship of the English language and English literature only!

Not only that we hate those who are learned in Sanskrit lore, but we also call these Pandits a set of fools, and refuse to show them any respect at all—far less to revere them. These Pandits at last curse their own lot, and in their anxiety to save their sons from the same fate, hasten to send them to English Schools, as early as possible, encouraging them to saturate their minds with Western thoughts and ideas of this, and the next life. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had done, the Chairman delivered a speech, in which he pointed out how Original Researches might be conducted in India.

Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. L. of the Alipur Bar, in an eloquent speech, proposed a vote of thanks to the learned Chairman, which was seconded by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, and carried by acclamation.

The Chairman thanked Mr. Biswas for having spoken of him in such eloquent and flattering terms. He then declared the Meeting dissolved.

(Vide, the Amrita Bazar Patrika and the Hindu Patriot, 6th; the Englishman, the Statesman and the Indian Mirror, 7th February, 1899, respectively).

As announced in the Indian Mirror, the Hindu Patriot, &c. of the 23rd February, a Public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narayanji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, (which was lent by Rajah Sheo Bux Bogla Bahadur), on Thursday, the 23rd February, 1899, at 6-30 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Benada Rai P. Ananda Charlu Arargal Bahadur, B.L., C.I.E., Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council.

The hall was most beautifully set off with chandeliers and carpets. Upwards of four hundred distinguished gentlemen honored the Meeting with their presence. Amongst them were, Kumar Hera Lal Bogla Bahadur, Babu Damodar Dass Burman, Mahamahapadhyaya Pandit Govinda Shastri, Professor, Government Sanskrit College, Pandit Bene Madhav Shastri, Pandit Luchmi Narayan, Pandit Gobinda Narain Misra, Babu Shyam Lal Misra, Babu Radha Kissen Takriwala and others.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman, in a few well-chosen words, introduced His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka, to the Meeting, and requested him to deliver his first lecture to the Society on

The Existence of the Almighty God.

The learned Swamiji dwelt on the subject for upwards of two hours, during which he was frequently applauded. He commenced by saying that the Existence of the Almighty God is proved by the following four ways, viz :—

- (1) That without Him, no power can exist in this world. The water we drink, the air we breathe, the heat of the Sun which enables trees to grow, the fruits and flowers to fructify, and the rain that fosters their growth, all demonstrate the infinite powers and Existence of the Great God.
- (2) The Intellectual power we possess, the Reason with which we have been endowed, enable us all to see our short-comings, to judge of our frailties and to rectify them. It is the Intellectual power of man, which has placed him over the brute creation, to lord over the lower animals.
- (3) The objects of our love,—our wives and Children, are all linked with endearment to each other. But that love has been implanted in our heart by God, who is the greatest object of love, and hence we worship Him.

- (4) Our passions,—the objects of our love, our fears, lest we lose them, our anger at the sight of things we hate, all these owe their Existence to the Almighty God.

The Venerable Sankaracharya, in his extempore eloquent address, illustrated by references, which arrested the special attention of the audience, who greatly admired his cleverness. The large quotations from the Shastras, with which he enunciated the several points of his learned discourse, formed the special attraction of the intellectual treat with which those present were entertained.

As the night had advanced, it being about 9 P. M., and as the large assembly had gathered from the other side of the River Ganges, it was thought expedient to bring the Meeting to a close.

The Meeting separated at 9 P.M., after votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned Sankaracharya.

(Vide, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 25th February, the Indian Mirror, 2nd, and the Hindu Patriot, 3rd March, 1899, respectively).

As previously announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narayanji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, on Friday, the 24th February, 1899, at 7 P. M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Upwards of four hundred respectable gentlemen were present. Amongst them were, Pandit Shankar Nath (of Bhowanipur), Pandit Sheo Behari Lal, Pandit Madhav Ram, Pandit Bene Prasad Tewari, Pandit Bhimji Gavindji and others.

On the motion of Pandit Bishnu Ram Jha, seconded by Pandit Prabhu Doyal Panday, Pandit Prithiraj, Professor of the Veda, Government Sanskrit College, Calcutta, was voted to the chair.

After the Chairman had taken his seat, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed. The Chairman then asked the Sub-Editor, Hindi Bangabasi, to explain the proceedings, just read by the Secretary, in Hindi.

This being done, the Chairman recited a hymn in Sanskrit, and urged the audience to hear the instructive lecture of His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka. The Venerable lecturer then delivered his second lecture to the Society on Veda,—the Word of God.

The Venerable Swamiji delivered his lecture for more than two hours, during which he was frequently applauded. He said that the Veda treated on the Existence of the Almighty. God created the Veda first of all. He next created the world. From the breath of God, emanated the Rig, Yajur, Shyam and Atharva Vedas. As God is infinite, so is the Veda. The fire, the air and the Sun,—Viswamitra, Vasistha, Brahmarsa, Debarsa and Rajarsa Rishis were all created by Him.

The Veda is divided into several branches. It owes its origin to inspiration. The Veda is the mother of all our domestic acts, rites, ceremonies and customs. By a knowledge of the Veda and the performance of rites and ceremonies, in accordance therewith, Munis, Rishis and Yogis came to a knowledge of the present, past and future. By acting in obedience to the injunctions contained in the Veda, several Rishis, like Manu,—the great Author of Manu Samhita, ruled over the destiny of the world for successive generations.

Where there is truth, there is falsehood; where there is light, there is darkness; where there is virtue, there is vice; where there is religion, there is irreligion; where there is good work, there is bad work also. Nights follow days and days follow weeks; weeks follow months and months follow years ; years follow centuries ;—seasons follow seasons, and so on.

First, the creation of the Veda, then the creation of man. The war of the Asuras, the difference of one man with another arises from the exchange of hot words. Every one wishes to act according to his own inclination. Every one wishes to be a Guru, after taking lessons from him. Ordinary men are fond of quarreling with the followers of the Vedanta. The study of Veda is very difficult. If you wish to act strictly in accordance with the Veda, you will have to live separate, and to observe abstemiousness. With the help of Brahmacharyya, the passions will be subdued. For years, you will have to study, before a knowledge of the Veda dawns upon the mind.

In the Veda is to be found the tenets for the worship of God, Guru, father and mother. Therefore, the Veda has many opponents. Infidels try to make enemies of the Veda by acting in accordance with their own free will. They implore the people not to study the Veda. They also say that there are three authors of the Veda : viz. :—(1) the hypocrite, (2) the cunning, and (3) the Rakshasus. They say, that the object of studying the Veda, is to earn a livelihood. They say that so long as you live in this world, you should enjoy its pleasures. They ask what is the good of observing the distinctions of caste ? In this and many other ways, they are trying to effect the down fall of the followers of Vedanta.

When the Veda left India, it was domineered by infidels. Sankara then became incarnate, fought with them, drove them away, and re-established the Vedic Religion. Asuras and Infidels always quarrel with the followers of Vedanta. Sometimes, the Veda stands at stake by the influence of infidelity. By the teachings of its followers, the Veda again shines in all its sublimity, just as truth is, for a while, clouded by the influence of untruth, but afterwards it shines in all its effulgence. The Veda is superior to all other religions. All the rituals of the world are embraced in the Veda. The Veda has been sent to us by God. The Veda is, therefore, His reason and His command. The Maharsis, by a study of the Veda, have composed special works by deductions from its special fountain-heads. By following the teachings of the Veda, you can attain religion, wealth and salvation (Cheers).

The Meeting dissolved at 9-30 P. M., after votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned Sankaracharya. (Vide, the Indian Mirror, 5th March, 1899).

As previously announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narayanji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, on Saturday, the 25th February, 1899, at 4-30 P. M., under the patronage and presence of Rajah Sheo Bux Bogla Bahadur, late Sheriff of Calcutta.

The Meeting was largely attended. Amongst those present were, Rajah Sheo Bux Bogla Bahadur, Pandit Prithi Raj, Pandit Gobinda Narain Misra, Pandit Basti Ram Jah, Pandit Bishambhar Nath Khetri, Pandit Basu Dava Tripathi and others.

On the motion of Babu Gobin Chand Dhar, seconded by Pandit Basu Deva Tripathi, Mahamahapadhyaya Pandit Gobinda Shastri, Professor, Calcutta Government Sanskrit College, was voted to the chair.

The Chairman, having taken his seat, amidst cheers, made the following speech :—

Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen, when His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka is himself present here, no one was needed to preside at his lecture. But as you have very kindly asked me to preside, I do so with great pride and pleasure. Now, before the Swamiji's lecture commences, he may be permitted to speak a few words regarding His Holiness the Jagat Guru Sankaracharya Swami Maharaj of Dwarka.

He said that when Budhism prevailed in India, the Vaidik Religion degenerated and converted the Hindus into Budhism. Siva then incarnated himself and came into the world—as Sankar Avatar. He became incarnate by Sita Dur, who gave birth of him. He had three eyes, a mark of the Chandrama on his forehead, and the color of his body was as white as milk. Brahma was also born at this time.

After five years, Sankar took his holy thread. He first went to Benares to study in the Tolla, and after finishing his education there, he went direct to Ajodhya, and became a disciple of Goura Padacharyya Rishi. The Muni gave Sankar a Work, which contained the thousand names of Sri Vishnu, and asked him to expound the tenets of this Great Work.

After his exposition, Goura Padacharyya Rishi was quite astonished at his erudition. He told Sankar, you are the real incarnation of Siva, else, how could it be possible for you to explain such a Great Work so easily ? Sankar, in reply to this, said :—Never mind, I intend to be your disciple. At this, the Rishi initiated him in the teachings of the Sannyas Shastras.

Next day, the Rishi went himself to Sankar's mother, and told her that the learned Jagat Guru for whom she had prayed for years so hard, was, at last, born of her. But such a child does not live long in this world ! He will only live for Sixteen years !! Hearing this, Sankar's mother began to cry. The Rishi then assured Sankar's mother, that her child would live for a further period of Sixteen years, provided he becomes a Sannyasi.

After defeating the Budhists, Sankar established the Sarada Pithasram at Dwarka, and appointed Masilal Misra to be Acharyya of the holy shrine. The latter was then called Sureswaracharyya. Those, who ascend in the Gudee of this holy shrine, are, therefore, called Sankaracharyyas.

The Swamiji, before them, was the present occupier of the same Gudee at Dwarka. The former Sankaracharyyas never took the trouble of coming out of Dwarka to preach their religious teachings to men. India, therefore, was divided into several religious sects. Infidelity rode rampant in the land, and the people have commenced to disregard the teachings of the Veda. On seeing this state of things going on, the present Sankaracharyya Swamiji, after having travelled throughout India, and preaching his religious teachings (precepts) from place to place, has at last to our great fortune, come to Calcutta on a short visit. His sole object is, therefore, to induce the Hindus here to act up to the injunctions of the Veda (Cheers).

The Chairman then asked Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, to read the proceedings of the last Meeting. The Secretary having done so, the Chairman moved its adoption. The proposal was carried by acclamation. The Chairman then requested His Highness Paramhansa Jagat Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka, to deliver his third discourse to the society, on

The Veda and its division into Upanisads.

The venerable Swamiji spoke on his subject for nearly two hours, during which time he was frequently applauded. He said that Mahadev Suchitananda was ruling over this world. Maheswar has no beginning, no end. There was no distinction between God and the Veda. As the Hindus believed in the work of Valmiki Rishi, they believed the Veda a hundred times more. Veda is the Word of God. There are two Tenets in the Veda, viz. :—Prabitti and Nebritti. The Aryan Brahmins at first lived in India like Vasista and Vamdev. It has been said that we should be guided by our religious teachings.

The chapters on the lives of Urbasi, Harish Chandra, &c., will be found in the Veda. The people cited those works as the writings of men. But that, was never the case. They were the products of Rishis and Munis, who derived their inspiration direct from God.

The Veda contained accounts of things—the present, the past and the future. Even at the present day, by a proper study of the Veda, the people could acquire a knowledge of the present, past and future, like ancient Yogis. If you regard the teachings of the Veda, you should respect the Deities also, as they are described in the Veda, as possessed of great virtues.

The Sun, which has existed for thousands of years, giving light and rays to the world, still exists, and is still imparting light and ray. So the four castes (especially the Brahmins), ought to have every respect for the Veda, the Vedanta, the Shastras and the Puranas. The Veda contained all the secrets of life, which we do not know up to the present day. If we submit ourselves entirely to its teachings, they will be divulged to us. At the creation of the world, the Veda came into existence, according to the free will of God. Whatever is to happen in the world, is to be found in the Veda. As man expresses his thoughts by words, and acts accordingly, so God, through the Veda, commands the world to act in accordance with its injunction. God said Voo, the world came into existence. He uttered Vooah, other worlds came into existence. And as soon as He uttered Osi-ri-gum, the creation came into existence, and so on. In a word, whatever God said, came into existence accordingly. (Cheers).

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Meeting dispersed at 7-15 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair, and the learned Sankaracharyya. (Vide, the Indian Mirror, 10th March, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narainji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, on the 26th February, 1899, at 7 P.M.

Upwards of four hundred respectable gentlemen were present; amongst them were Kumar Hera Lal Bogla Bahadur, Pandit Asha Ram Misra, Pandit Manick Ram Shambedi, Pandit Yoti Dev Shankar, Pandit Sib Doyal, and a large number of Marwaris and Bhatia Merchants of the town.

Babu Gobin Chand Dhar, Chairman, Hindu-Family Annuity Fund, in proposing that Rajah Sheo Bux Bogla Bahadur, late Sheriff of Calcutta, do take the chair, said, that the best thanks of the Calcutta Literary Society were due to the Rajah Bahadur, for having lent it the use of this spacious hall, for the purpose of holding these sacred Meetings of the Society. It is a matter of great satisfaction to him to propose that the Rajah Bahadur do preside at that Meeting, and he has no doubt that the Rajah Bahadur will respond to his invitation. Pandit Shyam Sundar Misra seconded the proposal.

The Rajah Bahadur having taken his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, Founder and Secretary to the Society read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed. The Chairman then requested His Holiness Paramhansa Jagadguru Sri Sankaracharyya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka, to deliver his fourth lecture to the Society on the 156 Parts into which the Upanisads were divided.

The venerable Swamiji discoursed on his subject for nearly two hours. He said, that some people declared that the Veda was written five or six thousand years ago. Professor Max Muller, in one of his works, writes that the Veda is only five thousand years old. But this is not possible. Because, the Wars of Kurus and Pandavas took place only five thousand years ago.

In the Treta Yuga Manu composed his well-known Sanhita, in which he also distinctly stated that the Veda has no beginning. Manu was descended from Suryya Bansa, and, therefore, his descendants were all Khatryas. After a lapse of three hundred and seventy-two generations, Sri Ram Chandra was born in this world. From this, could it be inferred how many thousands of years ago Manu-Sanhita was written?

The Swamiji then continued what should he say of the age of the Veda? Is it then possible that the Veda was written only five thousand years ago? When Treta, Dwapar, and five thousand years of the present Kali Yuga have already passed away? The Veda preceded Volanta. If you wish to know the fore-fathers of a family, you should first go to the descendants of the family to ascertain the truth. So, to ascertain the Antiquity of the Veda, you should know first the Antiquity of the Vedanga, as the latter derived its origin from the Veda.

As the body consists of face, eyes, ears, hands, legs, &c., so the Veda consists of Vedanga. As the Sun shines in his glory, so does the Veda. All knowledge and all language owe their origin to the Veda. The Sanskrit is known to be the mother of all languages. Rajah Vartrihar, after ruling for years, has written in his works that Sanskrit is superior to all other languages. You will find the semblance of all languages in the Veda. Rajah Vikramaditya affords an illustration of the Antiquity of the Veda.

By the power of Yoga, he foresaw three Sanskrit proverbs in the Adyuta Sanhita. The Veda is superior to all other works. The Tenets of the Upanisads are to be found in the Veda. Dwara, the son of Shah Jehan, in his Arabic translation of the fifty-two Upanisads, stated that the root of all knowledge is the Veda. By studying the Veda, we obtain a knowledge of the inutility of secular objects. So, there is no doubt that Veda is the Word of God.

The Veda is divided into four parts, viz:—(1) Rig (2) Yayur, (3) Shyam and (4) the Atharva.

These are again subdivided into (1) Mantra Vag (2) Brahmin Vag (3) Arannya Vag, and (4) the Upanisads. The Rig Veda has twenty-one, Yayur Veda one hundred and nine, Shyam Veda, one thousand, and the Atharva Veda fifty branches.

Varadwaj Rishi, after studying the Veda for three hundred years, could not master it. Brahma, therefore, said to him, that if the age could be increased by every hundred years for several centuries, then he would be able to complete the study of the Veda. But, by the power of Yoga and Devotion he will be able to form a clear idea of the Veda.

Varadwaj Rishi saw three mountains. Brahma said to him, that the three mountains, that he saw before him, were, Rig, Yayur and Shyam Vedas. If he took the dust from the feet of these three mountains, he would be able to understand the substance of the Veda. By the power of Yoga, Varadwaj Rishi obeyed the command of Brahma, and thereby became known as Veda Vetha.

Almost all the branches of the Rig Veda have been destroyed. Only Serakul and Asha Nayan remain to the present day. Yayur Veda has only few branches surviving; viz:—Madhyam Dini. Shyam Veda has only one branch; viz:—Koithola, Atharva Veda has only one branch; viz:—Pepuladi. It would, therefore, take a long time to speak of all the excellencies of the Veda. Therefore, I confine myself to the chief points. The people at present entertain a great apprehension of the Puranas and Legends. But Veda Vyas and other Rishis declared that the Puranas owed their origin to the Veda. As people are unable to acquire a knowledge of the Veda in the present Kali Yuga, so the Puranas and other simple works have been substituted in its stead.

The Brahmins, the Khatryas and the Vaisas only had the exclusive privilege of studying the Veda.

But the public could ask that if the Veda was the Word of God, then why should one class of people was prohibited from studying it?

As the night had advanced, the reason will be explained to you tomorrow-evening.

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Meeting terminated at 9 p.m., with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned Sankaracharya.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 17th, and the Indian Mirror, 19th March, 1899, respectively).

As previously announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narayanji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, on Monday, the 27th February, 1899, at 7-30 p. m. The Meeting was fairly attended.

On the motion of Kumar Hera Lal Bogla Bahadur, seconded by Pundit Basudeva Tripathi of the Bangabasi Office, Babu Gobin Chand Dhar, Chairman, Hindu-Family Annuity Fund, was voted to the chair.

The Chairman, on taking his seat, amidst cheers, made the following speech :—

Swamiji and Gentlemen. I beg to thank you cordially for the honor you have done by asking me to preside at this Public Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. Where His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka, is himself present—one who has been electrifying the public by his learned discourses for the last four days—it is not likely that you can expect much from me in the shape of an address. Because in venturing to give one, I would simply be wasting your time. I must, therefore, content myself by telling you that the Head of the Shrine of Dwarka deserves our most cordial thanks for taking the trouble to come all the way to Calcutta to edify us with his learned discourses, on subjects of such vast magnitude and importance, as those who have listened to him can testify.

The subject, on which he spoke on the first day, was the Existence of the Almighty God—This is a subject which the greatest thinkers of the age might discourse upon, but he will find that his way is beset with much difficulty. The Swamiji dwelt upon the Existence of the Almighty God in such fluent and easy language, as commended itself to the comprehension of every body. Even the most ignorant might have derived a great benefit from hearing it. The learned will admit that they heard also some thing new from him,—such as was not known to them before.

As for myself, I can say that it has been seldom, or perhaps never, been my lot to hear such learned discourses upon such abstruse subjects for the last five decade of years, during which I have attended several public Meetings. If we can realize the presence of God, if we can see that the Omnipresent exists in our midst, we cannot help leading better lives, and endeavouring to the best of our power, to avoid committing sins. Whilst the Swamiji was speaking, we were so much entranced, that we could not help thinking that the Almighty God was present in this very hall.

On the second day, the Swamiji took for the subject of his lecture on Veda,—the Word of God. He continued the subject for the last three days, and endeavoured to exhaust it in a manner which could alone be expected from one gifted-like himself. The Swamiji is gifted with high intellectual power. He has cultivated them so well, and they have developed to such a high extent, that he spoke on this most difficult subject with such ease and clearness, as if he were conversing with a little child.

The way in which he expounded the subject, and solved the mysteries in which it was enveloped, that one could not help knowing more regarding the Veda, and its teachings. He dwelt on the Antiquity of the Veda, referring to facts and figures, such as could not have failed to convince those, who had heard him of the great Antiquity of the Veda, and of the truth of its teachings, as well as the longevity of those who wrote them; viz. :—the Munis and Rishis of old, who spent the best portions of their lives in devotion, prayer and the study of the Shastras.

I should not detain you long, for, by so doing, I will deprive you for the time of the rich treat, with which we will be entertained by the learned Swamiji. As for myself, my heart yearns to listen to him. Now may I ask my friend Babu Sham Lal Day, the worthy and indefatigable Secretary and Founder of this Literary Society, to read the proceedings of the last Meeting.

The Secretary having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman requested His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka, to proceed with his fifth discourse to the Society on

The Classes, who are entitled to read the Veda.

The Swamiji said, that as the audience was not so large that evening as it was before, he wished the audience to question him, or, to make any remarks on the subjects of his former lectures.

On finding that no one was daring to speak, the Swamiji observed that, perhaps, the trouble and inconvenience to which people were put in coming all the way from the other side of the River to Howrah, must account for the fair audience to which he had referred.

Hearing this, one of the audience said, that if the Swamiji had given lectures on amusing topics, the hall would have been over-crowded. As most people have, now-a-days, no eagerness, and therefore, no willingness to hear the Veda expounded to them. The subject is too abstruse and difficult.

The Swamiji, in reply, said, that he could deliver lectures on the subjects referred to by the speaker, but such lectures would not be beneficial to them. What tended to the benefit of the public demanded attention. That which bring misery in the end, can never be acceptable by the wise. Those, who wished to seek pleasures, might go to public places of amusements and theatres where they can easily get ample pleasures. But by doing so, they would surely have to repent much afterwards.

He added, here you have come to listen religious precepts.—When we have to expound Slokas, we should do so in decent language, without flattering any body. Several young men seek pleasures. They like to hear new things. But here we must abide by the Teachings of the Veda. Therefore, I have come forward to expound to you what the Veda teaches. So, if you act in accordance with the Teachings contained in the Veda, they will greatly benefit you in the end. However, as so many gentlemen have come here, and the audience is increasing, I should not delay further to proceed with my fifth lecture to the Society on The Classes, who are entitled to read the Veda.

Who has the right to study the Veda?—Every body wishes to enjoy the good things of the world. Above all other works the Veda is the best. You asked me why should one class of people was excluded from the study of the Veda, when the world is the World of God, and the creations are His? Why the Brahmins, the Kshatriyas and the Vaisyas are the only classes who alone have the privilege of studying the Veda? If the privilege is confined to these classes only, then that would be doing a partial act. Are not all human beings created by the same Almighty God?—Why they would, therefore, be deprived of the privilege of studying the Veda? Our brethren of the West are aware that by simply reading their translations, we derive our scanty knowledge of the Veda.

Why should the Brahmins prevent us from studying the Veda?—Have they a Monopoly of such study?—Do we not owe our existence to God?—Is God partially fond of the Brahmins?—Does God despise the other classes? No.

Then why they are debarred from the study of the Veda?—Will the Brahmins not allow them to read the Veda?

Really the people can entertain apprehensions on the questions raised.—But, I will show the reasons why they are debarred from the study of the Veda.

Reasonable men should, when they do a thing, also think why they should not do it. For the benefit of those who entertain any doubts on the point, I would speak of a legend which would remove all doubts.

Take the case of a chaste and an un-chaste woman. As a chaste woman is fond of her consort, and a husband is fond of his virtuous wife, so the Veda has attractions for those, who long for it.

You can say that the Brahmins alone have laid down this Maxim; or, else, why are there no distinctions among the birds of prey and the beasts of forests?—They can go every where, and they do not lose caste. So, if a woman goes to a stranger, why should she become an out-caste, and not remain virtuous?

In their opinion, as that woman does not lose caste, in the same way they can read the Veda. Those who do not permit their wives to appear before a stranger, must have laid down the rule that any caste, other than the three castes mentioned, should not be allowed to read the Veda. Those who entertain this opinion, are opposed to civilization, and progress. Members of a civilized community chastise and expel such persons from Society.

The Brahmins alone have the privilege of studying the Veda, in accordance with the Rules laid down therein. Those, who have pure blood in their veins, can read the Veda. Those who are born of mixed-parentage, must be debarred from the study of the Veda. Those who are not of pure extraction, and, therefore, have not the right of performing the Ceremonial Rites of their fore-fathers, cannot have the right of studying the Veda. They should confine themselves to the study of works on Natural, Mental and Moral Philosophy. The Brahmins, the Rajarsis, and the Vaisas can alone have the privilege of studying the Veda. However, if a person steals or takes away a thing that is not his own, by force, he can have it, but not according to the rules of civilized life.

The Germans think they are descended from the Rishis, and wish to study the Veda. They say, that the Brahmins of India have now lost their original powers. The Germans, therefore, wish to take the place of the Brahmins. The Germans have no Ceremonial Rites,—such as the offering of Pinda to their fore-fathers, still they are studying the Veda by force. If you take a thing by force, or, if you are forced to give it, or, if you are forced to do a thing in writing against your will, the person who forces you to do so, does a wrong act.

Formerly, Religion had full sway over the minds of men. Therefore, nothing could be done against the injunctions. But at the present time, a person can do any thing he likes. Free will dominates over all. But the old never disregard the teachings of the Veda. (Cheers).

The Sun, the Moon and the Stars, the Seas, the Seasons, the birds and the beasts each perform the work, assigned to them by Nature. The Sea can drown the world at a moment, but it never does so. But how many persons by infringing the Rules laid down in the Hindu-Shastras are anxious to study the Veda?—And how many of the Brahmins are teaching the Veda for the sake of ten or twenty Rupees!!!

The Brahmins have only the right of studying the Veda. By Brahmins are meant the Sacerdotal class, the Khatryas and the Vaisas. To the rest of the people, the Puranas and other works might afford sufficient matter for study and instruction. The people of the West might study the Puranas, the Legends and other works.

The Venerable Swamiji said, that after treating on the rights of the Sudras to study the Veda, he will proceed to-morrow to give his discourse on Karma Kanda, or the Efficacy of Rituals. (Cheers.)

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman, in bringing the Proceedings to a close, said that, indeed, it was a matter of regret that the audience was not so very large, as before. But, it should be remembered that the people had to come from a great way off across the River to Howrah, after the toils of a hard day's labour. Then, again, the subject was an abstruse one. The learned Swamiji spoke either in Sanskrit or in Hindi, for which the Bengalis, who have received English Education, and who largely attend such Meetings, have no taste. When a lecture is announced to be delivered in English, and the subject is a popular, and not an abstruse one, the students of Senior classes of English schools, and grown-up men who have received a thorough English education, muster strong in such Meetings.

The Venerable Swamiji before us is the Swamiji of the Holy Temple of Dwarka. He is the head of a large Religious Sect,—the followers of the Veda. For, his erudition, the distinguished Professors of the Sanskrit College entertain very high respect. They generally come to hear him. Mahamahapadhyaya Pandit Gavinda Shastri, Pandit Prithi Raj, Professors, Calcutta Government Sanskrit-College, presided here before. When the Swamiji becomes more acquainted, and his popularity grows with his reputation far and wide,—this hall, where we have to night a scanty audience, will be over-crowded again.

I have a request to make; that those present here now, will be good enough to ask their fellow-brethren to come here to listen to the learned discourse of the Venerable Swamiji, and I can assure them that, those who can grasp all that he says will not be slow to flock in large numbers. (Cheers.)

I propose a hearty vote of thanks to the learned Sankaracharyya.

The vote was carried by acclamation, and the Meeting closed just as the Gun fired, (i.e.), at 9-3 P.M.

(Vide, the Supplement of the Indian Mirror, 23rd March, 1899.)

As previously announced in the local papers, a Public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narainji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, on Tuesday, the 23rd February, 1899, at 7-30 P.M. The Meeting was largely attended.

On the motion of Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, seconded by Pandit Shyam Sundara Misra, Pandit Siva Nath Dobay was voted to the chair.

The Proceedings of the Meeting commenced with the reading of the Proceedings of the last Meeting by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which, after being duly confirmed, the Chairman requested His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat Gurn Sri Sankaracharyya Raj Rameswar Sankararam Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka to deliver his Sixth lecture to the Society on—

Why the Sudras were excluded from studying the Veda ?

The venerable Swamiji dwelt upon the Subject for about two hours. In the course of which he said, that those, who have not taken the Holy Thread, have not the right of studying the Veda. The Puranas, and Tantras are for the Sudras and the Females, and the Veda, for the Brahmins, and, therefore, the latter can alone read the Veda. Although the Khatryas and the Vaisas are entitled to study the Veda, yet, they can seldom find time to read the work, on account of their Worldly Affairs. The Brahmins have no Worldly Work to do, and so the Khatryas and the Vaisas supply them with food and all other necessary articles to live, in order to enable them to study the Veda, with ease.

By reading the Puranas and the Tantras, the Sudras and the Females can perform Religious Acts. This is amply illustrated in the Veda. Those, who are entitled, can alone read the Veda. The Rishis, after acquainting themselves with the present, the past, and the future, by studying the Veda, have written several works on Puranas and Tantras for the benefit of the Sudras. The Rules contained in them, no body can violate. Those who violate them act very wrongly. As the ordinary people wish to become kings, but, they can never fulfil their desire, and, as those born in low caste, cannot marry in high caste, so the out-caste cannot have a right to read the Veda. As the horses, the elephants and the trees have caste among them, so, men have also high and low caste among them.

Those who are not Brahmins, Khatryas, Vaisas and Sudras are called out-castes. For this reason, they have no right to read the Veda. Ample proofs of this can be found in the works of Calpa-sutra. But they can obtain knowledge by the study of the Puranas and the Tantras. However, sufficient proofs can be found, regarding the Veda, Vedanga, Puranas and Tantras, that they are not mere stories, as some ignorant people think.

The Puranas contain the Rules for the performance of Rites, Ceremonies, Srads, Worship of Idols, and Pilgrims. Those who revere the Puranas, act in accordance with the Rules prescribed therein. But, those, who have no respect for the Puranas, act according to their own free-will.

After making the necessary remarks on the Puranas, the Swamiji said, that he would proceed to describe the Efficacy of Rituals at his next lecture, to be held on the 5th March, 1899.

The Meeting dissolved at 9-30 P. M., after votes of thanks to the chair, and the learned Swamiji. (Vide, the Indian Mirror, 1st April, 1899).

A Public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Sri Sri Satya Narainji's Temple, No. 11, Cullen Place, Howrah, on the 5th March, 1899, at 5 P. M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Amongst those present were, Mahamahapadhyaya Pandit Gavinda Shastri, Professor, Government Sanskrit College, Pandit Gavinda Naraiyan Misra; Pandit Hera Nandan; Pandit Bene Ram; Pandit Satya Naraiyan; Pandit Bene Madhav Shastri; Pandit Ajadhyaya Persad Khotri; Babu Hera Lal; Babu Gopal Dass Vinjah; Babu Doyal Moarji; Babu Murarja Ladhan; Babu Gakul Dass Hansraj; Babu Naraiyan Dass Doyal; Babu Madhav Dwarka Nath; Babu Kali Dass Premjah; Babu Bhimji Gavindji; Babu Topan Madhowjah; Babu Murja Hari Dass; Babu Ganga Naraiyan Narsingha; Babu Lakshman Dass Dharney; Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar; Babu Akhoy Kumar Sil, and a large number of Bhatia Gentlemen from Borra Bazar, Calcutta, Pandit Gavinda Naraiyan Misra, in proposing that the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen, Attorney-at-Law, Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, Editor, Indian Mirror, Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner of Calcutta, &c. &c. do preside, said :—

Jugat-Guru Sankaracharyya, and Gentlemen,

It was fortunate for Bengal, that His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat-Guru Sri Sankaracharyya Raj Rajsvar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka, has honored Calcutta with his auspicious visit,—after travelling through many countries in India.

He has been inculcating Religious Precepts here, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society. His chief object was that the Vedic Religion be promulgated. It was very true that, unless people learn to act in accordance with the Tenets of the Veda, they could never be happy. For this, we, the Hindus, could not keep pace with the progress of the times. The Jugat-Guru has been giving lectures here for the last six days. He was a great Sanskrit Scholar. If all the lectures were delivered in the Sanskrit language, he could expound its teachings to the learned Pandits here. But, the common people could not understand them. Therefore, he was delivering his lectures in Hindi.

Although the Jugat-Guru was not well-versed in Hindi, he delivered his speeches in such an easy way, that it was comprehensible to the mass of the people. The Vedic Religion was a very difficult subject to lecture upon. It was incomprehensible to the ordinary mind. I hope, that our Hon'ble Chairman, this evening, who was the most ardent lover of good works, would exhort his fellow-brethren to study the Veda.

Now he saw that, the Veda was at a great discount. Although they could find a Vedic Scholar here and there, yet, he was not well-qualified to teach the Veda. Now, there were several young men, who were acting in opposition to the teachings of the Veda, for that reason, India was at a fix, and not progressing. There was great difference between the present and the past teachings of the Veda, as in days of yore, the enemies of the Veda attacked it, and destroyed the distinction of Caste.

Except the people of Benares and Kanauj, all the people were converted. They gave up the study of the Veda. At this juncture, God himself became Incarnate, and Sankaracharyya was born. He studied the Sanskrit at Benares, and after defeating its enemies by the help of Shastras, he re-established the Vedic Religion.

At present, our youngmen are in the habit of ridiculing the Veda. Seeing this state of things going on, the present Sankaracharyya of Dwarka, after giving Vedic Precepts throughout India for the last twelve years, had, at last, come to their midst. But to their great misfortune, they did not find the Precepts of the Vedic Religion promulgated in Bengal at that time. But they hoped that if men in the position of the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen should condescend and join in the movement, the promulgation of the Vedic Religion would not then be a novel idea.

He begs now to propose, with great pleasure, that the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen do preside at their Meeting that afternoon. He was seconded by Pandit Jamna Dass, B. L., Vakil, High Court, and carried by acclamation.

The Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen on taking his seat, amidst loud cheers, addressed the Meeting thus :—

Jugat-Guru Sankaracharyya and Gentlemen,—I beg to thank you most cordially from the bottom of my heart for the honor you have done in asking me to preside at this Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. I consider it to be my good fortune to do so. His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat-Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka never came to Calcutta before. This is the first time he has done so.

We, the children of Bengal, are, therefore, much thankful to him. We will have the pleasure of seeing and hearing him. There are works in the Tantras extant in Bengal. The Vedic Religion is exciting great interest, and receiving considerable attention by the presence of the Jagat-Guru Sankaracharya in our midst. If the Veda becomes known to the people, as before, I am sure it will be attended with the most beneficial result. There can be no doubt that Bengal is being greatly favored by the presence of the Swamiji. Sometime ago, the late Rajah Ram Mohun Roy established the Adi-Brahma-Samaj, on the basis of the Veda. His object was not fulfilled, in consequence of a departure by his followers from the principles laid down for their guidance.

However, since it has pleased the Jagat-Guru to come to us, by the blessings of God, we have no doubt that the Veda will become the Religion of the people, in course of time. For, when the Veda and the study of the Sanskrit language are receiving now-a-days much attention in Germany and America, then the teachings of the Jagat-Guru must have the effect of creating a taste for the Sanskrit language, and love for the teachings of the Veda. (Cheers.)

From the Translations of Professor Max Mullar of the Veda, we have come to know that there is no other work in the world superior to it. When Foreigners have translated it in such beautiful English, it cannot admit of the shadow of a doubt that the exposition of the Veda by such eminent Sanskrit scholars as Jagat-Guru Sankaracharya, must have the effect of exercising great influence in our mind.

Our country has greatly deteriorated for want of a knowledge of the Sanskrit language, and the Veda. We hope that, by the blessing of the Jagat-Guru, we shall soon become acquainted with the teachings of the Veda. And if Calcutta holds such large Meetings as are now being held at Howrah, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, through the exertions of its indefatigable Secretary and Founder, Babu Sham Lal Day, the people will reap great benefits. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman then called upon the Secretary to read the Proceedings of the last Meeting of the Society.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, in English, the Hon'ble Chairman asked the Reporter of the Bangabasi, (who was then present), to explain the same to the audience in the Hindi. The Reporter having done so, the Proceedings, read by the Secretary, were duly confirmed.

The Hon'ble Chairman then requested His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat-Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka to commence his Seventh lecture to the Society on—

The Efficacy of Rituals :—

The Venerable Swamiji discoursed on the subject for more than two hours. In the course of which he said, that what we do is called Karma, (work). The work prescribed in the Veda, is real work. What is enjoined in the Veda should be obeyed. What is not enjoined in it, should never be performed. When a person acts in accordance with the Injunctions of the Veda, he becomes happy in the end.

The observance of daily and evening Rites, the Vali Vaisya Dev ceremony, &c., enable people to acquire wealth, religion, salvation, and the fulfillment of their wishes. By our good deeds, we are known to the world. By good works, our Rishis and Munis were superior to all. The sinners go to hell by their mis-deeds. By good works, one is born a Brahmin, a Khatrya, and a Vaisa. By good works, the Brahmins acquire a knowledge of the present, the past and the future. By good works, Bali Rajah, by his munificence, became great. By virtue of leading his life in accordance with the Veda, one can ascend to higher region. When one acts in opposition to the Injunctions of the Veda, he begins gradually to fall. From the ant to the Angel, all beings acquire higher life, according to the Virtue of their acts.

In this life, if you act according to the Veda, you will attain the rank of a Debta. By virtue of their works, Yudhishthira, Vishnu, Ramkrishna, &c., attained higher lives. Everyone ought to act according to the Veda. Those who do not do so, fall in this world. Those, who do not work at all, are inferior to person, who work a little. There are Gur-vadhan, Upanayan, &c., in the Veda. Until a Brahmin takes his Holy Thread, he is not entitled to study the Veda. The Brahmins ought to take their Holy Thread at Eight years of age, the Khatryas at Eleven, and the Vaisas at Twelve. Until they take the Holy Thread, they are reckoned like Sudras. The taking of the Holy Thread may be called Second Birth. At the present time, the Precepts, contained in the Veda, are not required. The Puranas and the Shastras form an adjunct to the Veda, and the two together,—the Efficacy of Rituals, form a literal counter-part. (Cheers.)

After the Venerable Swamiji had finished his speech, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhur, in proposing votes of thanks to the distinguished Swamiji, and the Hon'ble Chairman, said, that the night had advanced, and we have been already sitting in this hall for a considerable time. The Meeting having been hold early, it is proper that we should now be separated. But, however, the Venerable Swamiji deserves our best thanks for his trouble in expounding to us in easy and fluent language the abstruse subjects, on which he had been discoursing during the last six days. I, therefore, propose a vote of thanks to the learned Jagat-Guru Sankaracharya from the core of my heart. But, before we separate, we must also record the most sincere thanks of the Society to our worthy Chairman, the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen, who has, at much sacrifice and inconvenience to himself, come down all the way from Calcutta to Howrah to grace the Calcutta Literary Society's Meeting, with his presence.

He has already, in asking the Jagat-Guru to proceed with his discourse, expressed his sincere esteem for the Sankaracharya in fluent language. It is to be hoped, that the active part which he took in this afternoon's proceedings, will have the effect of rousing sympathy with the Venerable Swamiji, and respect for the teachings of the Veda in its several branches. You must know that the present is, no ordinary Meeting—a Meeting that was presided over by such a distinguished Gentleman,—as the Hon'ble Mr. Narendra Nath Sen, Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, the Editor, Indian Mirror, &c., &c., cannot fail to produce the most beneficial result. (Cheers.)

The Meeting came to a close after 8-30 P.M.

As announced in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, &c., a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Sanker Ghose's Lane, Cornwallis' Street, on Saturday, the 18th March, 1899, at 5 P.M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Amongst those present, were, Dr. Salzers, M. D., Mr. B. H. Oung,

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

Assistant Comptroller-General; Mr. Damji; Pandit Hari Deva Shastri, Professor, Bishop's College; Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law; Babu Khetra Nath Ghose, M. A., Professor, Metropolitan College; Babu Charu Chandra Bose, Editor, Maha-Bodhi Journal; Babu Jadu Nath Mozoomdar, Vakil, High Court, and Editor, Hindu Patrika of Jessore; Mr. J. N. Bose, Attorney-at-Law; Professor Satish Chandra Vidya Bhushan, M. A.; Babu Krishna Chandra Dass, retired Sub-Judge; Babu Hausaram Dass of Lahore; Babu Anath Nath Chatterjea of the Panjab; Babu Brindaban Chandra Ghosal; Babu Gobind Chandra Dhar; Sister Damadima; Brahmahari W. Harish Chandra and others.

On the motion of Babu Srish Chandra Viswas B. L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, seconded by Mr. B. H. Oung, Assistant Comptroller General, the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen, Attorney-at-Law, Member, Bengal Legislative Council, Editor, Indian Mirror, Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner, Calcutta, &c., &c., was voted to the chair.

The Hon'ble Chairman, having taken his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which having duly been confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman, in a few well-chosen words, introduced the distinguished American Countess M. De S. Cannavarro to the Meeting. He said, that the Lady lecturer of the evening had made her appearance before us for the first time. The object of her coming here was to acquaint the people of Calcutta what the Philosophy and Psychology of Buddhism is. The Countess came from Ceylon, where she has founded several Religious Institutions for the education of Cingalese girls, orphans, and poor children.

The Hon'ble Chairman, after expatiating on her good works there, gave a short sketch of her life. He said, that by accident of birth, Countess M. De S. Cannavarro was an American, but of Spanish descent. The English is not as universally spoken in South America as it is in the East; consequently, the Countess received her education in Spanish, and scarcely spoke English, at the age of Five years.

At the early age of Sixteen, she was married to an American gentleman, and travelled for a year in North America, whence she returned to South America, where her husband was engaged in Booking business. The Countess became a widow soon after her marriage. She was, therefore, engaged for the second time to a Portuguese gentleman of Noble Family, who was then the Minister of Sandwich Islands, in Portugal.

The Countess belongs to one of the oldest Aristocratic Families of South America, and has some good old English Blood in her veins. From her early life, she has been engaged in philanthropic works. She seldom came before the public, until she professed Buddhism. Her life is now devoted to working for humanity.

In October, 1897, the Countess began her work in Ceylon, opening Religious Institutions, re-organised the Order of Bhikshams, and has opened, with the help of Mr. Dharmapala, a Convent, an Orphanage, and many schools in Ceylon.

After making the introductory remarks, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Countess M. De S. Cannavarro to begin with her First lecture to the Society on—

The Philosophy and Psychology of Buddhism:—

The Countess spoke on her subject for about an hour. She said that she was at first a Roman Catholic, then she was attached to the Teachings of Buddha, after having studied the translation of the high Tenets of Buddhism.

Being dissatisfied with the Teachings of her own Faith, she decided to break through the prescribed Rules, and to seek for truth out of the fields of theory. With this view, she began to study comparative Religion, Philosophy and Science. Being of a Scientific turn of mind, not content with Theory, Truth was sought through analysis.

The Countess then mentioned the diverse Religious works she perused; viz., Confucianism, Darwinism, &c., till at last she became a Theosophist. Theosophy is not a Religion, but accepted the Truths of all Religions. By reading the Secret Doctrine, written by Madam Blavatsky, the lecturer first found the higher teachings of Buddha, which gave consolation and satisfaction.

After relating these few simple facts, the Countess gave a brief description of—how she confined herself four months in studies and preparations in retirement—leading the life prescribed for a Buddhist Devotee.

After these preliminary remarks the Countess took up the subject of her first lecture on—

She dealt with it in a simple and concise manner.

She was so earnest that the audience was spell-bound. She clearly defined the Philosophy of Buddhism, as a Scientific preparation for a higher perception of truth. The precepts of purifying the Soul by renunciation of all that was earthly the immolation of Self and the unity and brotherhood of man was described most admirably. She spoke of the eight-fold path, promulgated by the Great Philosopher, Gautama Buddha. One must persistently followed this path, if he seeks for Salvation.

A simple belief in God cannot lead to Salvation. She continued, that Buddhism was not agnostic, as many men suppose. For agnosticism pre-supposes ignorance, but that Buddha, being all wise, was not ignorant of truth. Buddha was seeking a means for Man's Salvation, but could not find it in a blind belief in God only, but in a religious life. The Countess was simply silent when asked about Creation, which could not be described.

It was a pity that Buddhism was so little known. The people of the East have forgotten their great religions. The various persecutions they had met with compelled them to give up the noble teachings of their Scriptures.

The Hindu now personifies God or Gods, and worships them in Stone Images. Speaking the truth, she said, without fear or favor, she hoped that she would not wound one's feeling, if she were to speak of the manner in which the various sects of Hindus of to-day observed their Religious Rites, and it showed that they had not the highest understanding of their own Religion which in itself was the most beautiful.

She further stated that Gods were the ultimate refinements of the forces of Nature, which constitute the elements of the universe, such as fire, water, air, and the earth, beneath our feet, and argued that they were not personalities. Those who did not cultivate their momental instinct, required object lessons to bring before them certain conditions, enabling them thereby to comprehend the precepts of good teachings, but the more intelligent should teach humanity, the meanings of the symbols of the Images which are clearly defined in the Psychology of Buddhism.

The Countess then recited a few Causal Laws which, in their divisions and sub-divisions, go into the millions, and stated that for want of time she would close her lecture that evening, and take up the subject in her next. (Cheers).

After the Countess had done, the Hon'ble Chairman, in bringing the Proceedings to a close, spoke of the admirable manner in which the Countess had acquitted herself. He hoped that Hinduism would revive, and that Buddhism, which formed a part of it, would also revive. The Countess would do a service if she could create a taste for the study of Buddhism among our country-men. (Cheers).

In proposing a vote of thanks to the Countess and the Hon'ble Chairman, Babu Gobin Chander Dhar said that he was glad that he had come to that Meeting. He was much pleased with all he had heard. He entirely agreed with the Hon'ble Chairman, in expressing the hope that an ardent desire, after the knowledge of truth, no matter whether it was contained in the Scriptures of Buddha, or, of any other Religion will ere long dawn over the mind of his country-men.

If we could Hinduise those, who had been un-Hinduised, and impart to them a Knowledge of all that was true by the Revival of Hinduism in its simple form, we should be achieving a success which must commend itself to every body.

Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, Municipal Commissioner of Sinthi-Cossipur, in seconding the proposal, spoke a few words, thanking the Countess for her admirable lecture.

The Hon'ble Chairman then announced that the Countess will deliver her Second lecture, to the Society on Karma, at the hall of the City College, Mirzapur Street, on Wednesday, the 22nd March, 1899, at 5-30 P.M.

The Meeting terminated at 6-30 P.M., (Vide, the Indian Mirror, 19th and 28th; the Englishman, the Hindu Patriot, 20th; the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 18th and 20th March, 1899, respectively.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, Mirzapur Street, on Wednesday, the 22nd March, 1899, at 5-30 P.M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Amongst those present, were Pandit Hari Deva Shastri, Professor, Bishop's College; Mr. Damji; Mr. Bose; Mr. A. T. Sirkar, and others.

On the motion of Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, seconded by Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, Municipal Commissioner of Sinthi-Cossipur, the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen, Attorney-at-Law, Member, Bengal Legislative Council, Editor, Indian Mirror, Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner of Calcutta, &c., &c., was voted to the chair.

The Hon'ble Chairman having taken his seat, amidst cheers, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which having duly been confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman called upon the distinguished American Countess M. De. S. Cannavarro to give her Second lecture to the Society on—

Karma:—

The Countess dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour and-a-half. She made a very nice Speech, which greatly pleased the audience, and the Countess was frequently cheered. She said that, in her First lecture to the Society, held on the 18th March, 1899, she simply touched on the Philosophy and Psychology of Buddhism. It is a mistake to think that the Psychology of so great a Philosophy, as that of Sakya Manu, can be elucidated in a few short remarks; the ignorance of the Subject is verified by such a supposition.

The points, on which I dwelt in the concluding remarks of my last lecture, I would now touch upon again, in a few words; viz.,—on the Ten thousand causal Laws and their sub-divisions, as these causes lead to Karma, which is the Subject of my lecture, this afternoon.

The hypothesis from which these causal Laws are deduced is causation or ignorance and desire. When the elements float in space, they are free and without consciousness, but with desire as its origin, they can be seen from the way, they whirls are attracted and repulsed. Now, just here comes Chemical assimilation and kinetic force. What are these two forces?—And whence do they come?—It is the Duty of Man to enquire. But, my friends, as we have only to deal with facts, we will try not to go beyond them.

You may here think me a Materialist, and so I am on the plane of matter, which deals with the problems of suffering and sorrow, and their extinction. Returning to the subject of Chemical assimilation, you must know how the elements unite by attraction—that they are possessed of form, Microscopical, yet, nevertheless, forms; these forms are circular, and around their circles, there are numberless little hooks; when the attraction of affinity takes place, they unite by these little hooks, and in so uniting, change from atom to molecule, and a more material form is produced from the union.

From the infinitesimal addition of Matter, motion is less rapid, freedom is restricted, and, through the medium of Scientific Psychology, the action of Matter can be seen in the region of ether, and a conclusion drawn—that, as far as the mind of man can reach, we see ignorance in its propelling personal power.

The atom, light, as the ether in its freedom and ignorance whirls and is caught up in the arms of matter, sinks deeper into the ocean of material desire, which is to be its future prison (protoplasm).

It has been assumed that the Protoplasm of every existing thing, whether it be plant or animal, is identical; now, just here again comes in the Psychology of Buddhism, inconstancy—the eternal law of change; how wonderfully verifiable is this continuous change in the world of finer forces of Nature?—Therefore, I say, that the Protoplasm being identical is an assumption, and not an indisputable fact.

The modern Scientist sees in the far distance that there is a little assumption in declaring such to be a fact, and he has now stopped, and is seeking for further light upon the Subject. Buddhism is a Religion of Science, and walks by its sides, hand in hand, till the Great wall is met—the wall of pass not beyond; then Buddhism scales this wall, and helps her less competent companion, (which is Material Science), to seek beyond it, in the fields of Mental Psychology, for a further postulation, so that Science, may from those postulations, seek through analysis deducible facts. You might think that, I have wondered from my Subject, but, I am now handling the new born babe Karma in its infancy or beginning.

We have now traced Karma from the atom to the protoplasm, and find that the first law of causation is Karma, or ignorance or desire; so, hereafter those points, which I have elucidated, will be called Karma, substratum. At this point, we must turn to the division of the three great kingdoms; viz., Mineral, Vegetable and Animal. In these divisions, we find first the manifestations of in-organic and organic life; and where it is believed that Protoplasm is the same in all that lives. But, my friends, Buddhism goes far beyond, and teaches that Protoplasm is not the same in all stages of evolution, that there are divisions, sub divisions, interest, compound-interest before the great three divisions, and since there have been esoteric meanings in three great divisions, meanings so ineffably grand, as to carry our thoughts to the Infinite Being.

One of these Secrets lies buried in the link between the elements and protoplasm, which, in spite of Modern Science, makes a difference, and this differentiation is in human protoplasm.

Karma returns to that point, where every desire and action is registered in the Great Book of Justice, which is Karma. Try to cast your mind into this almost fathomless pit of abstruse reasoning, and the answer will be given, why Karma of Buddhism is so very difficult to explain, and why the Men of Letters, whose minds are working wholly on the plane of deducible facts, can not fathom its subtle meaning.

Twenty-five of the Ten thousand Causal Laws are given to the students, and those Twenty-five are the divisions and sub-divisions of the combination of Three elements; viz.,—Oxygen, Hydrogen and Carbon, which deducted from facts prove that ignorance, desire and suffering are the primary causes, and thus a hypothesis is established, upon which these Causal Laws are built. Summing them all, and reducing to minimums, let us return to the occult numbers, three and eight.

The First three divisions; viz.:—Ignorance, Desire, and Suffering. The Eighth division commences with:—

- (1) Cause—which is ignorance.
- (2) Domination—which is desire.
- (3) Association—attachment to things.
- (4) Conception—origin, form.
- (5) Nutrition—the functions exercised in the growth of form.
- (6) Environment—conditions surrounding the person.
- (7) Simultaneous development—growth of senses, or springing into a conscious life.
- (8) Reciprocal action—action of evolved senses, or dependent origination, &c., &c.

There is a more minute method of the summing up of cause and effect, which is Karma, but the above is sufficient to give you an insight into its labyrinth. I have given this to you, with the hope to enable you to follow me, but here I shall make a leap, for, it would take a month of lectures to discourse minutely into these subtle questions, besides, it require years of study; any how, you now know how far back Karma extends, and why Buddha took intermediate ground to postulate his doctrine, and so begin at ignorance, giving no further, nor seeking that, which did not pertain to Man's Salvation.

The whole of Karma is summed up in brief; viz.,—in the vast ocean of space, there are formative and organizing elements, from their combination, arises awkwardness, or feeling, and from sensation and desire are developed the Five Senses and Mind, and when these Senses come in contact with things, Sensation is developed. Now, it is Sensation that creates thirst for individuality, and then we cleave; and in this cleaving, we produce a continuation of Self, reproduced in Re-birth, these Births are our Karma, from Ignorance.

The Science of Evolution gives one a fair understanding of the question: for instance, in studying Microscopic life, it can be seen, how one life progresses, and from its progress, new lives are formed, each in its turn ascending the scale of advanced life. Again, it can be followed in the progress of animal evolution, from the vertebrate, or animal-life to the mammalia or higher vertebrate, and springing a period by mental conclusion, animal evolves into the fully developed man. A link in the chain is dropped. Darwin tried to find it, but could not, the link having been dropped in the annals of time, and the question now stands.—Will it ever be found? My own opinion is that the missing link is not in the physical form, but in mental progress.

This being another Subject, and, though a very interesting one, I must pass it over. In Buddhism, Karma is divided into three parts; viz.,—(1) Fruitful, (2) Barren and (3) Fruition. Again, the three are sub-divided—(1) Fruitful Karma is that which is fructified, and will bear fruit in this life, immediately or later; as, for example, if a man does an act, and there is no immediate other subtraction, Karma, to follow the act, will bear fruit at once. (2) Barren Karma is deeds in moments of abstraction, when the consciousness is not evolved, and no impression is left on the vibratory cells of the brain, as in the case of irritant motion. (3) Fruition Karma is the fruit matured, and ready to fall, that is to say, the time has arrived for a previous action to weigh in the balance, and manifests itself in happiness, suffering and sorrow. This matured conditions,—like the ripe fruit, have a seed fully developed, which may, or may not grow, depending on whether the seed is planted and on the soil on which it is planted.

If this point, the four Truths are grasped, the person whose one portion of Karma is ripened, will not permit the seed to find soil to grow in, but, will destroy it, and that portion of his Karma will have ceased for the causes are ended. A Motto here is good. Bear patiently whatever comes to you, and allow no evil passions to intrude. Bear in mind, that every act of your life, aye, every thought is registered in the Great Book.

Go into the Mountain fastness, over the broad ocean, where the foot of man never trod, and your Karma will overtake you. It is like your shadow, or your Sthul Sarir, or, etheric double, in fact, it is yourself, breakable, everchanging. in constant, yet, always a continuation, like these leads on my arm, distinctly separate, yet, united by this thread does not represent ourselves, but Truth, the great unchangeable law, where by an expression of its infinity is termed God. This Law dwells not in any one thing, but, in all things. It makes the coolie as much my brother, as you are, and must call forth a universal love for all.

My dear friends! I know how hard a doctrine this is. After Buddha attained enlightenment, he hesitated in going out to preach it, and said, the foolish world can not understand this great Doctrine of mine. I shall have to tell it to them in parables and stories. Then if so great a One found the task so difficult, what can I, but a poor mite—expect to do? How difficult to take from Man that which is himself, his growth, since the beginning of time.

Man here may ask:—Who is the doer of the Deed?—the answer is himself. Who is the sufferer?—the answer is again himself. Atman is not the doer of your deeds. Then, how is this, if there is no One to suffer or enjoy, how difficult and subtle is this question! If you can in spirit as well as in letter, love your neighbour, as well as yourself, the questions which vex the minds of men will easily be answered. How can One be said while all that live must suffer. The above sentence is taken from the Book of Golden-Precepts, which is pre-Buddhistic; try to comprehend this, and you will reach beyond words, and a light will penetrate into your consciousness.

By the power of Tanha, (desire of life), our Skandas, (the five elements), have borne fruit, and living being springs into existence who will inherit our Karma. As the Coamos, so the individual; again, I will take my beads to explain. Do you see how these beads are strung?—Does one bead form a part of the other?—No, perfectly separate. Yet, would there be a string of beads, if broken?—Now, I will tell off my beads, one drop—I take up another, &c., &c., where is the continuance between the beads? Is it in the beads themselves?—No, it is in the string, and this string continues to make of them a string or unity.

Now, this string we will call Tanka;—break the string, and the string is destroyed, or, otherwise, kill desire, which is the cause of Karma: and Karma ends for the individual; no more does life continue, and we melt into nothingness according to the ideas of those, who have not grasped Truth. Now, there is another evolution after Man has reached a state of Holiness, and that evolution is the evolving consciousness, rising higher and higher on the plane of Spirituality, until the Truth unfolds itself before him, and stretches out like a vast panorama.

At this stage, Man is a perfected being with the Idhi powers of penetration; his mind can reach back into the past, and forward into the future. Again, like my beads, life after life comes and goes until the end is reached, and he sees and knows all; the last life is reached, and perfection gained, Buddha is there.

This is bordering on Metaphysics, and so, I will come back to facts. In the more Scientific aspect of Buddhism, there are two other kinds of Karma; viz:—(1) Physical and (2) Mental—The Physical evolution of Man, which I have already described, whose Karma is disease, or health, called by the Scientist, as inherited maladies.

The other Karma is the evolution of the mind, but the two are so co-related with each other that the mind cannot act without the Physical body. The Physical Karma begins with the amoeba, and evolves inward, outward through all the vast stages of innumerable existences, till man's Physical body is perfected without having reached intellectually much above the animal, but, from environments and the struggle for life, his thinking powers are turned inward, and these become Reason. Then Conscious Reasoning comes in, and then Mental Karma sets in, and man becomes what he thinks.

The brain-cells increase, these brain-cells are Sensitive plates, where every action of man's life is mirrored. And with the increase of necessities, desire increase; and as desires increase, brain becomes a more complicated structure; at each stage of evolution, there is an increase of brain-cells, working under vibratory motion, according to the thought of mental plane.

After the physical brain, structure of Man is perfected the finer vibration; which passes through ether, acts upon these cells, and the Scientific plates produce living pictures in the mind.

All the senses-organs being co-related with the brain are awakened and developed, man sees, as through a Microscope, things past, present and future. He is God or leader of men,—but, not a Creator. At this point, a knowledge of the Science of vibration is necessary to grasp a deeper understanding of the Nature of conscious thought.

The Science of vibration is yet in its Infancy, still, we know with what rapidity light and sound are carried through Ether, and the marvellous vibratory motions of colours, or, the effect of vibration on the sensory organs of sight. Science measures the thought current in man's brain, and photographs, though proving all phenomena to be matter and subject to impermanency; activity is matter on the higher plane and mind is Matter removed some degrees only, consequently action in its condition.

The mind of man is constantly flying from one thought to another. There is nothing so unstable and impermanent as thought. From phenomenal powers, which the mind of man is unable to grasp, he imagines that behind his personal Self, there is another Self. But, if we look at the question, from an impersonal point of view, we find no such thing, and that consciousness is not the inheritance of one, but all.

For example, take the child at birth. Where is the consciousness of another life?—Where the ego? the child is but a bundle of potentialities, subject to Karma, which is intelligence and understanding subject to conditions. At birth pure as the lily, till it arrives at this stage, and then Karma, with its manifold sub-divisions and subtractions begins to follow in the chain of cause and effect. Can any one say that Intelligence is a special inheritance? No,—it is universal, and within the reach of every being.

Let man's mind reach the limit of thought, and still there is more beyond, and it is but useless waste of time to dwell upon these questions, believing them to yield to Salvation and Freedom for Man. There are Secrets which had better be left buried in oblivion, for the hands of the unscrupulous, are dangers, as it gives a power over the majority, which is harmful and degenerating.

After the Countess had finished, Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, Municipal Commissioner of Sinthi-Cossipur, in an eloquent speech, made the following observations. He said:—

Hon'ble Chairman, Countess Cannavarro, Ladies and Gentlemen,—I hope you will all agree with me in thinking that we have been much benefited by the very instructive lecture of the Countess of the evening. If you desire me to speak, as you do, I should be as brief as possible. For, you will again agree with me in thinking that we should be very cautious that we do not mar the effects of the Countess's speech, which so much charmed us.

You are well-aware that the history of my country is the history of the Religious Heroes, and the Religious movements, under the leadership of one or the other of these Heroes. One of them disappeared only to make room for another to flourish and occupy his place. But, in the earlier period of such movements, you will see that there were plenty of Tenets and Doctrines. They were enough to form the character of the intelligent folk. But, only when Buddha flourished, we got something, which would penetrate, not only into the upper classes, but, also the masses. One thing there should be the foundation of a Religious System to ensure its adoption by the generality of people. That thing was absent in earlier times—that thing was supplied by Buddhist system of Religious thought. I mean, by that thing—a Personality.

There should be a grand, electrifying Personality to draw men towards Him—to make men imitable. Him almost un-consciously. Though it might be possible for the intelligent and advanced portion of the community to realize a grand Ideal. Ideal of God, with Doctrines and Tenets, and Teachings of Sages, yet the lower classes of people, the general community could not be expected to rise higher in the scale of Spirituality, and Religious progress, is impossible without a grand Personality to lead them on, and to draw them towards Him incessantly.

Such a Personality was Goutama Buddha. The result of his Incarnation was that the largest portion of the human race of the time embraced Buddhism. The speculative Brahmanism could not stand before the personal Buddhism.

The Countess said, that Buddha taught more by stories and parables than by anything else. I would say,—He taught by His personal example more than anything else. Again, if you turn your face towards Nuldea, in Bengal, you will find another Grand Personality, who taught people to embrace one another as their own-selves, only separately reflected, who taught them, by his personal example,—by personal example alone, and not by stories and parables at all—who made men approach God, only by passing them through the process of singing and dancing—who had strange similarity of career with Great Buddha—I mean Chaitanya,—the Light of Bengal.

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

As I have already observed, let students of comparative Religion know every system of Religious thought, prevailed in India to the recent time, for nothing short of that would satisfy their sacred craving after Divine Knowledge. But, for the common folk, these two Personalities with other, like Nanak, Ramanuja and Sankaracharya will be required to lead them on—in their upward progress with the influence of their electrifying beacon-fire, and I fervently await the day, on which Buddha and Chaitanya and Sankaracharya will be able to occupy Men's hearts, and guide them on in the path, which will ultimately lead them into Salvation and Mukti.

I cannot be sufficiently thankful to the distinguished Countess, for her taking so much care to come over here, from a long journey, as a Buddhist Upasika, and give us the benefit of her attainments of Buddhistic System of Religion.

The Hon'ble Chairman then advocated the cause of Moral and Religious Education of Hindu-boys, which could only regenerate them.

The Meeting terminated after 7.30 p.m., with votes of thanks to the Countess and the Hon'ble Chairman, (Vide, the Indian Daily News and the Hindu Patriot, 27th March; the Indian Mirror, 7th April, 1899, respectively.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Saturday, the 25th March, 1899, at 5.30 p.m., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Babu Narendra Nath Sen, Attorney-at-Law, Member, Bengal Legislative Council, Editor, Indian Mirror, Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner of Calcutta, &c., &c., &c.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the distinguished American Countess M. De. S. Canavarro delivered her Third lecture to the Society on—

The General Principles of Nirban.

The Countess spoke for about half an hour. She discoursed on the elementary principles of Nirban or Buddhistic Salvation. Though she was out-of-sorts that day, still, she could not fail to charm her audience with her sonorous voice and cogent arguments. She concluded by saying that, we should not wantonly take away lives of even the minutest insects. The audience seemed deeply interested in her instructive discourse.

After the Countess had done, Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, Municipal Commissioner of Sinthi-Cosnipur, said that, he should not urge upon his country-men to take pity with the lower animals—and even Insects. For the good of a particular locality, sometimes the villagers worship Goddess Kali. That is a good thing. But he was much pained to see the sad spectacle of Animal Sacrifice before the Goddess Kali.

It has become a part and parcel of the ceremony to sacrifice goats before her altar that she might be appeased. She is the Mother of the Universe, and the animals are also Her creatures, and so, She would never have Her own creatures bled before Her—a Mother does not long for the blood of her children.

Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal then appealed to the audience to take care that they did not participate in such repulsive observance.

The Hon'ble Chairman then made some pertinent remarks on the Subject of the evening, and alluded to the above facts. He said that, as Buddha was one of the Incarnations of Narayana, the Spirit of Buddhism should permeate into Hinduism, and the day should come soon when the Hindus of Aryya Varta should welcome the Buddhists, when the latter come to their Mother-land.

With votes of thanks to the Countess and the Hon'ble Chairman, proposed by Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, and in doing so, the proposer paid a high eulogium to the Hon'ble Chairman of the evening, for all that he had been doing to raise the Hindu-Nation in the scale of Spirituality.

The Meeting separated at 5.45 p.m.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Indian Daily News, the Hindu Patriot, 27th, and the Indian Mirror, 31st March, 1899, respectively.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College-Square, on Tuesday, the 28th March, 1899, at 5 p.m.

The Meeting was largely attended. Among the audience the Hindusthani and Bhatia Communities, who thoroughly appreciated the Veda, were strongly represented,—several of their most respectable Members being present. Of the prominent amongst them were, Pandit Ram Narayan Sarma; Pandit Ram Krishna Sarma; Babu Jahar Mull; Babu Sheo Persad; Babu Karim Chand; Babu Sadaram; Babu Darsi Dwarkadas; Babu Debsebhoy Herjebhoy; Babu Nathubhuj Odhowjee; Babu Purusattam Marje; Babu Hausaraj Lalji; Babu Chaturbhuj; Babu Jahwali Chand; Babu Chamad; Babu Purna Chandra; Pandit Satya Charn Rai; Babu Hari Bhushan Dutt; Babu Bene Madhab Mullick; Babu Umakanta Dhar; Babu Odharji Sheruaji; Babu Velja Narainji; Babu Adherji; Babu Hausaraj; Babu Khetri Mull; and several others.

On the motion of Pandit Basudev Tripathi of the Rangabasi Office, seconded by Pandit Hari Prasad Chobay of Mathura, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Chairman Hindu-Family Annuity Fund, was voted to the Chair.

The Chairman, on taking his seat, amidst cheers, said that, although a very popular individual, Swami Nityananda Saraswati of the Panjab, who was well-versed in the Veda, was, as announced, to give a discourse upon a most important Subject that afternoon, he could not account for the scantiness of the audience, owing to a large Meeting, that was being held at the next door, (i.e.), at the compound of the Calcutta Government Sanskrit-College, to unveil the Statue of the late Venerable Pandit Ishar Chandra Vidyasagar, C.I.E., under the presidency of His Honor the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn, K.C.S.I., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. But, he expressed a great hope that as soon as the Ceremony, for which the large and respectable gathering had assembled at that Institution was over, a very large number of Gentlemen would begin to flock in there to hear the learned Discourse of the Swamiji.

As anticipated, the Chairman, expressed his pleasure at the large gathering of the most respectable Pandits, and Members of the Bhatia and Marwari Communities, assembled to hear the learned lecturer.

The Chairman, in introducing Swami Nityanandji Saraswati of the Panjab to the Meeting, said, that the Subject chosen was a very important one, viz. —

How to Comprehend God :

He continued that, it was a very fortunate circumstance that they had for their lecturer such a distinguished Personage, as the learned Swamiji, who had come to Calcutta, all the way from the Panjab at his personal expense, with a view to enlighten us on one of the most difficult problems of the day. He himself is a very devout and religious person, and, therefore, we can only expect grown up men, who care for the Religion of their ancestors to come and hear him.

Our young men,—the flowers of the Calcutta University, who are thoroughly versed in English, generally attend large Meetings, held for the purpose of hearing lectures on popular subjects, relating to Political and Social Reforms, delivered in the English language.

The Swamiji stays in Calcutta for three days only, and, so, he will be able to deliver his three lectures to the Calcutta Literary Society. On his arrival here, he communicated at once with the indefatigable Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, (having previously delivered a discourse at a public Meeting, convened by the Society, held on the 21st March, 1896, at the Emerald Theatre, Beadon Street, under the presidency of Babu (now Hon'ble) Narendra Nath Sen, Editor, Indian Mirror, &c.,) and expressed his desire to deliver three lectures to the Society. His request was complied with.

Those, who are Religiously inclined, should avail themselves of the present opportunity, and do justice to a man, who, at much inconvenience and sacrifice to himself, is staying in Calcutta, by coming over to hear him discourse on How to Comprehend God, and other cognate Subjects—which the learned Swamiji was alone competent to deal with, as he had devoted his life to the study of the Sanskrit language, and of the Veda, and had, therefore, fully mastered all the rich treasures contained in them.

I would not detain you long with my Introductory remarks, but, would only say that his antecedents are of a very high order. He has been lecturing in upper and lower India for several years, before large and appreciative audiences. His experience of men and manners was of very great importance.

Now, the Subject, before us, is, How to Comprehend God.

This is a very Solemn question.—The answer to it will equally be Solemn and difficult. It is beyond our comprehension. It can only be comprehensible to those, who have devoted their lives to God, sacrificed all pleasures, and renounced all worldly aspirations, for the sake of glorifying His Works, and fulfilling His Wishes.

We, poor creatures, gifted with very little intelligence, can know but little, can understand less, and can do still more less all that can re-dound to the Glory of God and His Works.

I have no doubt, that the learned Swamiji will be able to expound to us the Ways and the Teachings of Providence, in such a manner, as will enable us to comprehend all that is good in Man, and glorifying to God. They remind me of a passage, in Milton, which, I cannot help now in reciting to you.—Adam, when placed in the Garden of Eden, after God had created him, awoke from his slumbers, and saw all the things around him,—things with which he was surrounded on all sides. The hills, the mountains, the dales, and the lofty trees, the beautiful rivulets, and the still more beautiful streams filled with fishes, the ducks playing all around, and the flowers and fruits over-hanging the trees, and the air filled with such fragrances, as would drive away all the pains, all the cares, and all the anxieties from the human breast. All these filled Adam's heart with such pleasurable emotions, that he could not help exclaiming.—These are Thy glorious Works, Parent of Good Almighty,—Thyself, how wonderful then!

How to comprehend this glorious and beautiful God, that the learned Swamiji has, I repeat, come forward to discourse upon.

This is a point which he should, in the prelude to his discourse, touch upon. His erudition is vast. He is a thorough master of the Sanskrit language. His knowledge of the Veda is extensive. He has travelled far and wide, and has gained experience, such as seldom falls to the lot of a single individual, within the short span of his life to attain.

Therefore, he would necessarily bring to bear upon the Subject of his Discourse, all his erudition, his knowledge and his experience, and adduce proofs of the Veda, the Upanisads, the Puranas and the Tantras, in support of his utterances. His discourse, this afternoon is, therefore, expected to be a grand affair altogether, such as hardly falls to the lot of an audience, who listen to. We should, therefore, as we have been patient and eager to hear him, try our best to give our utmost attention to all, that he says for our common good, and carry home the lessons, which he will impart to us and utilise them to the best of our power and ability.

With these preliminary remarks, which you have been good enough to listen to, I now request my friend, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, to read the Proceedings of the last Meeting.

The Secretary having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Swami Nityanandji Saraswati (of the Panjab), to commence his First lecture to the Society on—

How to Comprehend God.

The Swamiji dwelt upon his Subject for nearly two hours, and the audience was much pleased to hear his Discourse. He said that, God is Omnipresent. Those, who do not think of Him, are Infidels. They are, at the end, drowned in Misery. By knowing God, Man can be happy. In the Four Veda is to be found an account of One God only. The God's Existence can be proved by the things that we see all around us in this world.

The Veda describes God to be Omnipresent, all-powerful, humane, just, most beautiful, without beginning and without end. We ought to worship and pray unto Him. Because, by worshipping God, we can comprehend His Nature, and His Works, and He only can improve our Nature and our Works.

Prayer destroys Pride, and leads to the acquirement of God. As God is just, so the prayerful Man should learn to be just. Whoever sings His praise, and speaks of His good qualities, should lead his life according to His Maxims. Otherwise, his Devotion would be fruitless. Whoever does not idle himself, but devote himself to the service of God, surely attains Him sooner or later.

It is written in the Upanisads, that those who, by Samadhi Yoga, lead an abstemious life, and renounce the pleasures of this world, attain such bliss, as cannot be described. Because, the Soul of such an individual lives in and enjoys the Spirit of God.

The Spirit of Man, when it approaches the Spirit of God, fully realizes the presence of the Omnipresent and All-seeing God. By Ashtanga Yoga, we can attain God. Patanjali Rishi mentions in the Darsan that there are Eight Order of the Yoga, viz :—(1) Yoga, (2) Orderliness, (3) Asan, (4) Pranayan, (5) Pratihara, (6) Prayer, (7) Devotion, and (8) Samadhi. The practice of these Eight Yoga is called Sanjam.

I.—Yoga has five sections; viz :—(a) Envylessness, (b) Truth, (c) Asthea (i.e. The Abstemiousness, and (e) Renunciation of Self.

The Five sections of the Yoga may be explained, thus :—

- (a) Envylessness (i.e.) those, who do not envy others, or create enemies amongst them, may be said to be devoid of jealous. When a man gives up envy, he renounces enmity with the world, and thereby no body becomes inimical with him.
- (b) Truth (i.e.) As you are possessed of Reason, so you will speak what is Just. Tell nothing,—but Truth, and respect Truth.

If you speak the Truth, you will succeed in all your acts.

- (c) Asthea (i. e.) Steal not. Give up stealing altogether, whether by physical deeds, or, mentally, or, by words. When a Man gives up stealing, he gains all that is good, and worthy in this world.
- (d) The Abstemiousness (i. e.), you should conquer all your Passions.
- (e) Renunciation of Self (i. e.), You should be devoid of Pride.

Again, when a person abnegates himself the following questions, viz :—(a) Who I am ? (b) Whence have I come ? (c) Where will I go ? (d) What I am capable of ? and (e) What I should do ?—then, his wants forsake him. He relinquishes the idea of acquiring wealth, and all other Passions lose their hold upon him.

- II.—Orderliness comprises Five sections ; viz :—(a) Sanctity, (b) Contentment, (c) Prayer, (d) Devotion and (e) Renunciation of Self. The Five sections of Orderliness may thus be explained :—

- (a) Sanctity, (i. e.) leading a Holy life, thus :—

You should keep your body always clean, and free from all impurities.

Your heart should be pure and divested of all un-clean thoughts.

As you wash your body by water, so by Knowledge, by Truth, and by Religion, you should purify your Soul. By the purification of your body and the Soul, you can judge the condition of the body and Soul of other people. A True Yogi never associates with those, whose body and Soul are not clean. By Sanctity, the purity of the Spirit, the cheerfulness of the heart, the subjugation of the Passions, and the knowledge of the mind, becomes matters not beyond his reach.

- (b) Contentment, (i. e.) you should keep your Spirit buoyant by Religious thoughts, and speculations. You should never be over-joyed with temporary gain, or feel miserable with temporary loss. You should always perform Religious Acts and often shun Ir-Religion, you should not lose patience, under the pressure of distress. The happiness, which contentment produces, can be called everlasting happiness.
- (c) Prayer, (i. e.) As Fire purifies gold, silver and other metals, so Prayer purifies the Soul, and the Heart. Prayer renders the Passions powerless, and destroys their influence.
- (d) Devotion, (i. e.) The study of the Veda, and the pronunciation of the term Om, prepares the mind for the service of God. By Devotion, you can attain God Himself, the sanctity of the Soul, and everlasting Salvation.
- (e) Renunciation of Self to God, (i. e.), you should merge your heart, your Soul, and all that you possess in the world, to God. The prayerful man soon acquires that everlasting Bliss, which alone can be acquired by Prayer.

- III.—Asan (i. e.), the way in which a person takes his seat, before uttering his prayer to the Almighty God. Some use the Padyasan, Birasan, Bhadrasan, &c. Others use the tiger's skin, such as they consider to be Holy and well-suited for the purpose of Prayer. If you can fix your mind upon the seat you occupy, and associate it with Religious thoughts, Prayer becomes easy. Neither heat nor cold can hinder you in your course.

- IV.—The Pranayan, (i. e.), You should learn to obstruct the free passage of breath by means of Judgment. You should not touch the nostrils by your hand, but obstruct the holes thereof, by the use of Reason. This is called the Pranayan.

Pranayan consists of four sections ; viz :—(a) External, (b) Internal, (c) Sumbha Briti, and (d) Bajhyambhar Nerod.

By Pranayan, you can destroy un-reason, and thereby gradually fully develop Reason itself.

- V.—Pratihara, (i. e.) When man can subdue his mind, he becomes the master of all his Passions, and brings them under his control. Because, the mind leads all the Passions. Those, who have subdued their minds, can settle them wherever and whenever they think it proper to do so. You can cultivate a love for truth, and always despise untruth.

- VI.—Prayer (i. e.) You should learn to fix your mind firmly upon God, after driving away all fickleness. The navel, the heart, the head, and the nose should be fixed before you begin to Pray. That God exists should be the first object coming to your mind.

- VII.—Devotion, (i. e.), You should learn to devote your Heart and Soul to God—and God alone. No outward thing should be allowed to disturb the peace, or firmness of your mind, and whenever any evil thought comes over your mind, turn it to the channel of pious inspiration.

You should try to divest yourself of all outward objects and merge yourself deep into the Spirit of God, so that, nothing will be able to shake you off or merge you from the path of duty, which you have chosen for yourself. You should mingle yourself with the infinite and boundless Spirit of God, just in the same way, as river mingles with the sea, and remains in it. When doing so, you should not bring into your recollection any other object than God, the Existence of which, you would realize in the very depth of your heart, and enjoy it in such rapture of the Soul, as can never be compared with all the worldly pleasures put together.

- VIII.—Samadhi, (i. e.) As fire enters into iron, the Spirit of Man comes into the Spirit of God, for having its bodily existence. At this moment, God and Man become mixed up with one another, and the Light of G imparts a Sanctity into the Soul of Man which adorns and purifies the Soul of Man in a most marvellous manner. This is called Samadhi or Nirban, or, Self-emotion.

There is a difference between Dhyan and Samadhi. The first is communicated with God, the second the merging of our Soul in the Supreme Soul. In the first, you have to think of three objects ; viz :—(a) Those who are engaged in Devotion, (b) The thing to which they devote themselves, and (c) The way in which one devotes himself.

By the Second process of Spiritual Culture merge the Spirit of Man into the Spirit of God. There is no difference whatever in the three objects. As Man, drowning himself into water, remains there for a short time, so the Spirit of Man, by merging itself in the Spirit of God, remains there for a short time, and comes out afterwards, and then merges itself again and again, till at the end, the final stage of Samadhi affected a stage from which there is no separation of the Soul from the Supreme Soul.

When a Man merges himself into the Spirit of God, it is called Samadhi. (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his Speech, the Chairman proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the Swamiji for his instructive speech, which was carried by acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved after 8 P. M. with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 26th April, 1899.)

As previously announced in the local papers, a very large and influentially attended public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises No. 8-3 Rup Chand Roy's Street Burra Bazar, on Wednesday, the 29th March, 1899, at 6 P. M.

Amongst those present were, Pandit Prabhu Sankar; Pandit Suryya Persad; Babus Nathu Bhai Odheji; Odheji Shivaji; Chaturbhuj Bhai Mathurdas; Vasanjibhoy Ghaneshyam Dass; Damadar Odhowji; Mahendra Nath Addy; Manick Chand Khetri; Jaharmall Khanna; Madan Mohan Khetri; Munshi Makham Lall, Gurudas Khetri; Bhim Raj, and a large number of Hindusthani and Bhatia communities residing in Burra Bazar.

On the motion of Babu Darsi Dwarkadas, seconded by Babu Umakanta Dhar, Babu Bhimji Bhai of Guzerat was voted to the chair.

After the Chairman had taken his seat, Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which, on being duly confirmed, the Chairman, in a few well-chosen words, introduced the lecturer in the evening, Swami Nityanandji Saraswati of the Panjab to the Meeting, and asked him to commence with his Second lecture to the Society on—

The Anti-Vedic Doctrines.

The learned Swamiji spoke on his Subject for more than two hours. The audience heard his discourse with stillness and rapt attention. The Swamiji said that, the Veda is the repository of all True Religions. It is the duty of the Aryans to study the Veda, and to live in accordance to its Tenets, and to promulgate its Teachings. The Veda was ushered into the world by God Himself. As God is True and Infinite, so is the Veda—the Word of God, is full of Truth and is Infinite also.

The Veda consists of Three sections; viz.: (a) Necessity of good works (b) Culture of Reason, and (c) Urgency of Prayer. Within these Three sections is comprised the origin of all True Knowledge. Whatever Truth is to be found in other works, has been taken from the Veda. There are four divisions of the Veda, viz.:—Rig, Yayur, Shyam and Atharna that expound One God only. A full description of God, the Soul and the Nature is to be found in the Veda. The Veda describes God to be without a Second, omnipresent, immortal, fearless, just and infinite.

God is the Creator of the Universe. He judges Man, according to his actions. We can see God through Solemn Prayer, Yoga, &c. The Veda describes God to be eternal.

Five thousand years ago, we had, for every day-action of our lives, the Veda as our guide. Wars took place when the Veda was disregarded. When un-reason prevailed in the land, we had the great battle of Kurukhetra. By this War, the people lost their Senses, and every body did as he wished.

There are Four Doctrines opposed to the Veda, viz.: (a) Pouranic, (b) Jaini (c) The Christian, and (d) The Koranic. The Doctrines are the Roots of all other Doctrines. Gradually, these Doctrines evolved in this world. They again branched-forth into One Thousand Doctrines.

The friction between One Thousand Doctrines is productive of great mischief. Therefore, it is the duty of the Pandits to adopt Truth, and to discard un-truth.

India is the Sacred home of all Religions. She cannot be compared with any other country. She bears golden fruits. In India, the Brahmins, the Khatrias, &c., have their own residences. The Aryans were superior to all other Human Races. People may have heard of the Stone, that converts Copper into Gold by its simple touching. It would not be un-wise to compare India with that precious Stone. Mannu has written that the Rishis of Aryya Varta imparted Knowledge to the whole world. Since the creation of the world, the Aryans held sway over the Human Race. All the kings owed their subjugation to the Aryans, since the War of the Kuru-Pandavas, and the celebration of the Rajsua Yagna performed by Maharajah Yudhisthira, at which all the kings were invited to take part in the proceedings.

From the Reign of Sayambhu to that of Yudhisthira, there was only one line of kings. And when these kings began to quarrel among themselves, every thing was destroyed. Consequently, the Brahmins gradually lost all their influences. The Tenets of the Veda were disregarded too, and every thing went wrong with them. In this state of things, the Brahmins commenced uttering Slokas from the Veda, in order to earn their daily bread. They began to preach the Doctrines, and said that, those, who revered the Brahmins, will only go to Heaven, and those, who disregarded them, will go to hell. They said that the words uttered by them, came direct from God. They began, by this means, to realize money from the ignorant classes, and thereby to lead a luxurious life.

They said that all the fine things of this world were created for them. They preached that they had a right to perform all the different ceremonies, (i.e.) from the birth of a child to the death of an old man. On the occasion of marriage and death, they began to receive gifts in money and goods.

They then took their stand on the Tantras, and thence, they began to worship the Images of God, saying that they owed their origin to the Veda. The Brahmins commenced in the name of the Munis and Rishis, to preach the Tantric Religion and to sacrifice sheeps, goats, &c., on the Shrines of the Holy Temples of Kali and Parvati.

The Tantric Religion is now to be found scattered far and wide in Bengal. Seeing these, Buddhism and Jainism prevailed. The Buddhists and the Jainis began to destroy the works on Vedanta, and also to persecute the followers of the Veda. The former insulted the followers of the Tantras. Thus, Aryya Varta was in the possession of the Jainis for nearly Three hundred years.

About Two thousand and five hundred years ago, Sankaracharyya was born. He re-established the Vedic Religion. He entered into controversies with the Buddhists and the Jainis, defeated them, and obstructed the progress of their Faith.

After Sankaracharyya, his followers established Four Muths in India; viz.:—(1) The Singari Muth in the South, (2) the Voo Goverdhan Muth in the East, (3) The Jyoshi Muth in the North, and (4) The Dwarka or the Sarada Muth in the West. They resided like Mahantas in these Four Muths. Sankaracharyya had written Vaskya, which his followers read, and acknowledged the Union of the Soul with the God-head. Sometime after, the followers of the Tantras made Images of Stone, and worshipped Das-Maha-Vidya, while the Saivyas believed in Sankaracharyya, as the Incarnation of Sivd. The Jainis first commenced to worship the Images of God.

The followers of the Tantras are also doing the same. The Christians are worshipping Christ, and the Mahamedans, Mahamet.

If the Hindus establish the Hindu Samajes throughout the country, and thereby preach the Vedic Religion then, there will not be a shadow of doubt that the pure Vedic Religion will one day be re-established amongst the people of this country. (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words. He said that, if they could conduct themselves in the method, which the Swamiji has just laid down for their guidance, he was sure they would prosper, and the country would reap great benefits in the end.

He then proposed a vote of thanks to the learned Swamiji, and hoped that, those present would act in accordance with the Precepts of the Vedic Religion. (Cheers.)

The Meeting separated after 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair. (Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 19th April, 1899.)

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises No. 8, 3, Rup Chand Roy's street, Burrabazar, on Thursday, the 30th March, 1899, at 7 P.M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Amongst those present were, Pandit Ramkrishna Debadi; Pandit Ram Dutta; Pandit Ajodhya Persad; Pandit Devi Dutta; Pandit Santa Lall; Pandit Mahan Lall; Pandit Jagannath; Babu Ajodhya Persad Barman; Babu Jai Narayan Gupta; Babu Dharse Dwarka Dass; Babu Mathura Dass; Babu Ghane-shyam Dass, and a large number of Marwari and Bhatia Gentlemen residing in the Metropolis.

On the motion of Babu Umakanta Dhar, seconded by Pandit Satya Charan Rai, Pandit Gakul Chand, (of Agra) was voted to the Chair.

On the Chairman's resuming his seat, Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which, after being duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Swami Nityanandji Saraswati, of the Panjab, to deliver his Third lecture to the Society on—

Yoga :—

The learned Swamiji dwelt on his Subject for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, in ancient times the Munis and Rishis performed the Homa Ceremony every day with many fragrant things, which they burnt in the Fire mixed with Ghee. The Brahmins and the Khatrigas also observed the Ceremony in like manner. For this reason, there was no Plague, no pestilence, and no untimely demise.

At present, the Injunctions contained in the Veda, are not properly observed. To get over the Plague, it is necessary to observe the Homa Ceremony. When the Ghee, with other fragrant articles, is burnt, the particles spread in the Atmosphere, and the Air we breathe, becomes purified and the impure air is driven away, and in lieu thereof, we get pure and fresh air, and thereby we keep good health.

Again, the fumes produced from the flames of the Homa, rise into the skies and form themselves into Clouds, and come down to us as Rain. Rain-water, therefore, is always pure. By that water the fruits, we eat, the corn we live upon, are produced, and the use thereof, conduces to the preservation of health. At present, the Ceremonies, prescribed in the Veda, are seldom duly observed. The Veda is the word of God, and it is full of Reason. The observance of Yoga Ceremony conduces to the good of the world.

By the Infinite power of God, the world, fire, air, earth and water have been produced. By His command, the Sun regularly rises daily in the East, gives days to the world, and by its heat nourishes the growth of the fruits and the flowers, and the corn that we see all around us.

When the particles, produced by the exhalation of the fragrance of sweet flowers, exceed the particles produced by the putrid smell of filth, the Atmosphere becomes pure, and the air, we breathe, produces very good effects in the system, or otherwise pestilence prevails in the land, and thereby we began to lose our vigour, vitality, freshness, and at last succumb ourselves to untimely death.

Cause produces Effects. God has given to the world the Veda for the benefit of the Human Race, and those, who disobey its injunctions, would, at last, suffer in the end. The possessor of Riches, therefore, should spend a portion of his money in performing the Rites of the Homa, &c.

The over-crowding of a place, by a large number of persons, who live together, is followed by pestilence, disease, and even death. Man is responsible for all these acts. It is Man, who keeps together a large number of elephants, horses, cows, and other domestic animals for his own comfort and pleasure. He is, therefore, responsible for the stench they create, unless he looks after the cleanliness of the place with his own eyes.

It has been ascertained that the Air, we breathe, and the Water, we drink, becomes putridified by man's negligence of the Law of Health. It is his duty, therefore, to adopt methods to purify them.

God has created Man superior to all other beings. He fully understands that which tends to his happiness or otherwise. God has created Man after His own Image, and endowed him with Reason, the full development of which enables him to work wonders. He, who neglects it, reduces himself to the position of inferior beings. God gave this power to Man. No other beings have it. It is, therefore, the duty of Man to perform the Rites of Homa Ceremony now and then.

At first, Veda was the Religion of the people. Then Saktism prevailed. It was followed by Vaisnavism. The Tantras superseded it. The Pouranic then predominated over them all. And, at last, all the different sects merged themselves into One Great Religion, viz.:—the Hindu Religion.

By the free-will of God, a Disciple was born. He began to preach, and thereby re-established the Vedic Religion. He explained to the people that they were Argans. Their country was Argya Varta, and that they were the first, from whom sprang all other human Races.

It is unwise to perform the Homa Ceremony once in a fortnight, or a month. It is better to observe it daily, according to your own means. Because, by so doing, there will be no apprehensions of Plague, pestilence and untimely death.

If a family use to burn a little Ghee in the fire daily, and thus observe his Homa Ceremony, it will be attended with most beneficial results. (Cheers.)

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman said, that it afforded him much pleasure to thank the Venerable Swamiji for his very able speech. He has, after studying the Veda carefully leading the life of a Brahmachari. He is imparting instructions to the people of India to lead their lives to the Vedic Faith. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, our best thanks are also due to Babu Sham Lall Day, the worthy Secretary and Founder of this Literary Society, for his having taken so much trouble to convene this Meeting at the heart of the Metropolis, (i. e. in Burra Bazar).

From the learned Swamiji, we have listened to the Precepts of the Vedic Religion. The cultivation of European Science has not yet reached the height to which our Munis and Rishis cultivated it in former days, and obtained therefrom knowledge of the Veda and the Yoga, by which they reached its highest limit.

As Patanjal Rishi wrote in his work on the Yoga Vidya, and how to attain God, so, other Munis and Rishis of old wrote on the same Subject, in thousands of similar works.

Gentlemen, I hope you will try to act upon the Precepts, given to us by the Swamiji this evening.

As the geese pick up milk from water, so, after hearing the Precepts given to you by the Swamiji, you will all learn to regulate your lives accordingly.

We have been quite satisfied with his lecture, and we now tender our best thanks to him. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dispersed at 9-30 P. M., after a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 17th May, 1899)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Manic Theatre, Bendon Street, on Monday, the 3rd April, 1899, at 6 P. M.

The Meeting was largely attended, and about five hundred gentlemen graced the Meeting with their presence. Amongst those present were, Dr. Mahendra Lal Sarkar, M. D., C. I. E., SECRETARY TO THE INDIAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE CULTIVATION OF SCIENCE; Dr. Anulya Churn Sarkar; Dr. Chuni Lal Bose; Miss Margaret Noble; Babu Shyamal Chandra Dutt, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW; Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. L. OF THE ALIPUR BAR; SWAMI Brahmananda; Babu Nagendra Nath Law, B. L.; Babu Panch Cowri Banerjee, B. A., EDITOR, Basumati; Babu Upendra Nath Mukerjee, PROPRIETOR, Basumati; Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar; Babu Amarendra Nath Dutt, Manager, Classico Theatre; Babu Jaladhar Sen; Babu Vishnu Narain Chatterjee; Babu Brjendra Kumar Chowdhery, M. A.; Babu Swat Chandra Chakraborty, B. A.; Babu Dharsoo Dwarka Dass, (of GUZIRAT); Babu Mahendra Nath Mukerjee; Babu Sat Cowri Dutt and several others.

On the motion of Babu Narendra Nath Mitra, B. L., ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, seconded by Dr. Netaji Churn Haldar, the HON'BLE Babu Narendra Nath Sen, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, MEMBER OF THE BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, HONORARY PRESIDENT, MAGISTRATE, MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER OF CALCUTTA, &c., &c., was voted to the chair.

On the HON'BLE CHAIRMAN taking his seat, amidst shouts of applause, Babu Sham Lal Day, the FOUNDER AND SECRETARY TO THE SOCIETY, read the PROCEEDINGS OF THE LAST MEETING, which were duly confirmed. Then the HON'BLE CHAIRMAN, after making a few introductory remarks, asked the distinguished LADY LECTURER, SWAMI ABHAYANANDA OF CHICAGO, (IN AMERICA), to deliver her FIRST LECTURE TO THE SOCIETY on—

The Law of Karma :—

The LADY SWAMI gave an excellent discourse on the SUBJECT, which was listened to with rapt attention by the audience present. She spoke for more than an hour and a half, during which time she was frequently applauded.

She said that, one of the greatest of MODERN PHILOSOPHERS has said that the inherent ideal of perfection in us is a positive proof of the EXISTENCE OF GOD. Though this ideal of perfection varies according to the culture and enlightenment of each individual mind, and though EACH MAN tries to reach HIS OWN IDEAL, yet, the mere EXISTENCE OF THE IDEAL conclusively proves that there is such a thing as absolute perfection, which is but another name for God or SOUL.

So long as the Ideal of perfection is not reached, man tries to attain his own IDEAL by applying himself to certain works, which judged according to the standard, which his individual conception of perfection presents, appear as good and virtuous. The doing of these DEEDS is the expression of our attempt to lift the veil, which covers the glory of the SOUL from our vision.

It is, therefore, all very good to perform them. But, so long as we choose our particular course of action to follow, and our particular kind of objects to love and admire, we exclude from our living consideration those, who do not come according to our PERSONAL JUDGMENT under the category of the good. This exclusiveness, on our part, proceeding as it does from a SENSE OF RELATIVITY, affords us only a RELATIVE BLISS on what is understood by selection from CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY. Now, as every thing on this side of the RELATIVE IS PHENOMENAL, SALVATION ALSO IS PHENOMENAL, and as such, it is subject to CHANGE AND DESTRUCTION.

SALVATION is the result of our GOOD DEEDS, and as no GOOD DEED is possible in the beginning, without a sense of duty, it follows that our preliminary steps lie through duty of KARMA. It is, therefore, that we see in the BHAGBAT GITA, SRI KRISHNA preaching to ARJUNA, first of all, the PRINCIPLES OF DUTY. But, as our IDEAL OF PERFECTION goes on gradually widening its sphere, we include within the range of our loving regard, many things which, from a lower platform of SPIRITUAL ENLIGHTENMENT, appear as unworthy of ourselves.

Thus, gradually and imperceptively is our exclusiveness replaced by an inclusiveness, which finally absorbs all that is transcendental and transmutes our sense of duty to a feeling of love, to DO IS NOW TRANSFORMED INTO TO BE. We become IDENTICAL with the IDEAL OF PERFECTION, and from the stage of KARMA, we pass on to the stage of YOGA. In this state of YOGA, we do not give up KARMA but, are entirely LIBERATED from the binding sense of duty, which formerly kept us following the right path. We are LIBERATED from all the FEAR OF PUNISHMENT, OR HOPE OF REWARD, we are LIBERATED from the THRALDOM OF THE THREE GUNAS, and as such, we transcend even the VEDAS; our WILL becomes LAW and we enjoy PERFECT LIBERATION OR MUKTI, (CHEERS).

After the LADY LECTURER had finished her speech, the HON'BLE CHAIRMAN addressed the MEETING for some time. He then proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the LADY SWAMI for her eloquent and instructive speech, which was carried by acclamation.

Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. L. OF THE ALIPUR BAR, having proposed a vote of thanks to the HON'BLE CHAIRMAN, which was also carried, the MEETING terminated after 8 P. M.

(VIDE, the HINDU PATRIOT, 18th May, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Sankar Ghose's Lane, Cornwallis Street, on Tuesday, the 4th April 1899, at 6 P. M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Amongst those present were, Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. L. Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur; Babu Mahendra Nath Gupta, M. A.; Swami Sivamanda; Babu Panch Cowri Banerjee, B. A., Editor, Basumati; Babu Girindra Nath Mitra; Babu Ram Doss Mazumdar, M. A., Principal, Argya Mission College; Mr. George Grant, Reporter of the Kempess, and others.

On the motion of Babu Narendra Nath Mitra, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, seconded by Babu Panch Cowri Banerjee, B. A., Editor, Basumati, Roy Yatindra Nath Chowdhery Bahadur, M. A., B. L., Zemindar; Taki and Secretary, Bangya Sahitya Parishad, &c., was voted to the chair, amidst shouts of applause.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting of the Society had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, in introducing the distinguished Lady lecturer, Swami Abhayananda of Chicago (in America), to the Meeting, said :—

"Gentlemen, I thank you for the honor you have done in electing me to the chair this evening. The Lady lecturer before you needs no introduction at my hands—She being so well-known to the public for the last two months or more,—as an expounder of the Vedanta Philosophy.

"But, I must here draw your attention to the deep debt of gratitude which Swami Vivekananda has laid us under. It is he, who has so ably and successfully brought to the notice to the West, the Philosophy of India. Many are the persons who have gone to the civilized West on Religious Missions, but none ever devoted his time wholly to the exposition of the Philosophy of this ancient land. It was, as you know, at the Parliament of Religions, held in connection with the Chicago Exhibition, that the Swamiji first held out the mysteries of the Vedanta Philosophy before the representatives of every civilized Nation of the World. And the presence of this Lady here is the direct outcome of the movement set on foot in that historic date.

Now, I have great pleasure in calling upon the Lady lecturer to deliver her Second lecture to the Society on—

Salvation Versus Liberation:—

The Lady lecturer dwelt on her subject for upwards of an hour. So learned was her discourse, and the exposition of the Veda, and the interpretation of the Gita was so excellent, not to speak of her vast and unquestionable knowledge of the Western Philosophy, that the audience remained spell-bound for a time. The continued cheers and applause bespoke the sentiment of the audience, excited by seeing an American Lady of fame handling a purely Hindu theme with care and facility. (Cheers)

After the distinguished Lady lecturer had concluded her speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting as follows:—

"Gentlemen, we have all listened to the learned discourse of our fair lecturer, and you will admit the masterly manner in which she has handled her Subject. Personally speaking, I may not fall in with all the points set forth by the lecturer, but I may safely assert that we all agree with her to a great extent, as to what she has said, is based upon our sacred Scriptures.

I have now to propose a hearty vote of thanks to the Lady Swamiji, and I hope you will all carry it with acclamation.

A vote of thanks is also due to the Authorities of the Metropolitan College, who have so kindly lent the use of this hall for the Meeting of this Society (Cheers)

The Meeting dissolved at 8 P M., after a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon delivered his First lecture to the Society, on—at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Thursday, the 18th May, 1899, at 5 P M.

How to Earn one's livelihood without serving any body:—

He dwelt on his Subject for about an hour and a half, in the course of which he said that, if a people wished to rise in the scale of nations, they must endeavour to cultivate individuality of character. Service, indeed, was a bane, and forms the chief impediment to the progress of a Nation.

At present, the rage among educated young men is for Service—and Service only. A few of them study the Professions. It is the formation of character upon which depends the true development of a country's greatness. It is the spirit of enterprise that has made the Americans, a great Nation within a very short space of time.

A handful of men settled there, and it was through their energy that the land commenced to yield rich harvest. It was through their energy that the wilderness was converted into fruitful gardens. It was through their energy that Manufactories and Mills were built in profusion, and commenced to give employment to large bodies of labourers, who greatly profited by the wages, which they obtained in them.

Our countrymen should learn to cultivate individuality of character, which is essential to the formation of a Nation. Look at the condition of Japan! Compare it with what it was only a quarter of a century before, and, you will find a rapid change for the better in all the departments of the Japanese life. A dozen of Japanese Youths went to America, and several places of Europe. They came back to their Native land, after studying the Technical Sciences, and inculcated the lessons, which they had learnt to their countrymen.

The Japanese have now become a rival of other nations by the gigantic progress, which they have since made in different branches of public life. Confucius told the Chinese to remain Conservative, two thousand and five hundred years ago, and they continue to be Conservative up to the present time. But, with what result?—They have made no progress. They have lagged behind other peoples and countries and the Nation suffers in power, in prosperity and in glory.

Among the Bengalis there is a good deal of talk, but no practical action. It is this weakness on the part of the Nation, which accounts for this backwardness. Unless a people can become energetic and enterprising, it must lack in true greatness. He said, he was reading in that morning's Indian Mirror, a paragraph to the effect that one hundred Indian youths were studying Law in England. But, can the Study of Law make a people enterprising?—It can enrich successful legal practitioners, but, it can never open new industries or fields of enterprise. It is the study of the Sciences, which is really wanted. It is the Study of Diplomacy, in which our countrymen lag behind.

We should study Technical Arts and Diplomacy, before we can develop the resources of our country. Far from being able to do so, we are depending upon the products of other peoples to meet our daily supplies and wants. The Inkstand, we use, is a Foreign product. The Cloth we wear, is also another Foreign product, not to mention numerous other things.

Then again, there is Early Marriage, which forms the chief impediment to all real progress. A boy becomes a father, before he is fit to be a husband. A girl is married before she has attained her teens. A father thinks of marrying his son with the prospect of having a grandson; the belief is that, he will thus obtain a chief passage to Heaven. Thus a family becomes ruined, and thus poverty overtakes everybody in the land with rare exceptions.

The matter stands thus:—when a boy earns Fifteen Rupees a month, he has to maintain himself and his wife. In the course of time, he gets Twenty Rupees a month. But then two or three children are born of him by that time. Therefore, he has to provide for a decent family with such scanty means as Twenty Rupees a month only. He remarked that he would rather not go to Heaven, when the practice of Early Marriage entails so much suffering and misery upon us.

Then again, there is the hooka, which is so much in vogue here. Wherever you go, you see the hooka and smoke, and, therefore, every progress ends in smoke. If you wish to see a better state of things, you should change every thing for the better. You should first of all learn to be truthful, enterprising, compassionate, and manly. You should abandon your sensuality, and not put a premium on procreation.

The only way to achieve this great end, he said, was for One hundred Bengali Graduates of the Calcutta University to acquire learning for learning's sake, to devote their lives and talent to the cause of their country, and, if necessary, to die in that cause. In this crusade they should be able to depend on the pecuniary help of the aristocracy of Bengal. Then—and not till then—would India take her proper place among the great Nations of the earth.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M., after according a vote of thanks to the learned lecturer, which was proposed by Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, and seconded by Babu Satish Chandra Acharyya Vidya Bhushan, M.A., professor of Krishnagar College, and carried by acclamation.

(Vide, the Indian Daily News, 19th, the Englishman, the Hindu Patriot, and the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20th May, 1899, respectively.)

Despite the fact that the weather was anything but opposed to lecturing, Anagarika H. Dharmapala delivered his Second graphic lecture to the Calcutta Literary Society—a Meeting of which was held at the Albert Hall, College Square—on Friday, the 19th May, 1899, at 5 P. M., on—

His Travels in America, Europe, the Far East, and India :—

The lecturer spoke on his Subject for more than an hour and a half, in the course of which, he expressed in a very bold but clear manner, the numerous shortcomings of the people of India at large. He said, that, since the year 1889, he had been travelling all over the principal European countries: viz. England, France, Germany, Austria and the United States of America, as well as Burma, Siam and Japan, but no where had he seen such want of energy and devotion to duty, as in India.

In fact, in the European countries and in Japan in Asia, there was a dominant Spirit of energy and enterprise, whereas in India, the principal characteristics, which go to make a Nation progressive were wanting. In India, there were two hundred and seventy six millions of un-educated people, while those termed literate amounted to only twelve or thirteen millions.

The lecturer summed up his subject, and grew quite enthusiastic, when he spoke of the people of Japan, whose habits were very cleanly, there not being a single lane in any of the back-slums of the principal cities in Japan, which he had seen in a dirty condition.

The learned speaker, from the eloquent way he spoke on this good trait, one out of the numerous, ones possessed by the Japanese, whom he regarded as a really great Nation, could, without any hesitation, be put down as a firm believer in the old adage:—Cleanliness is next to godliness. This, however, was not the only trait in the Japanese character, which was admired by the speaker.

In addition to it, they were deeply devoted to duty, and were knit by a true tend of brotherly feeling, which pervaded the whole atmosphere of Japan, and were full of patriotism and love for the land of their birth. But, when the lecturer turned to the people of India, he could find not a single one of these characteristics in this great land, where there were so many millions of people, and nor could he expect to find any, until the people, particularly the Aristocracy, rose from their lethargy to a keen sense of their duty, and tried to do as they should, by their poorer brethren by imparting to them at least the rudiments of elementary education.

It is needless to say that the lecturer also referred, in glowing terms, to the American people, for whom he appears to have the highest regard, but, he pointed them out to the people of India as an example of Industry, Perseverance, etc., which they should at least endeavour to follow.

He pitched into the Bengali, in right earnest, about this lack of ambition, which had today made the Americans what they are, and turned into ridicule their efforts to obtain employment in some office on a monthly salary of Fifteen or Twenty Rupees only, and be content to remain in that state all the rest of his days. The American youth, on the other hand, was the exact counterpart of the Bengali in this respect. His aim in life, was to be President of the American Republic, or some other great personage, and, he did not rest, until, he had succeeded at least, in a part of his ambition by attaining a position, which, if not in being head of the American Government, was one in which he could command the respect of his fellow-citizens.

The lecturer, like all expounders of Religion, thought India was a vast field for a great work, but, it rested entirely with the people of the land to awake from their slumber and be up and doing. In his estimation the Aristocracy of the land should help forward any work started for the Education of their poorer brethren, as best lay in their power, (instead of wasting their money in subscribing to the various movements set on foot by the GOVERNORS OF THE DIFFERENT PROVINCES).

In conclusion, the speaker again referred to what appeared to be uppermost in his mind the whole evening, viz:—The Habits of cleanliness, and urged the people strongly to adopt these habits, which were sadly wanted in this country, where all around them there was nothing but filth, and also to try and teach the poorer classes the Science of Hygiene and Sanitation. Then and only then with these habits reigning in their midst, and with the richer people living a LIFE FULL OF EMBRACING LOVE for their poorer brethren, would INDIA be able to take its stand among the GREAT AND PROGRESSIVE NATIONS OF THE WORLD.

Before concluding his lecture, Mr. H. Dharmapala exhibited to his AUDIENCE several ILLUSTRATIONS OF JAPAN AND AMERICA. The PICTURES were beautiful in themselves. They were taken out of an AMERICAN NEWSPAPER which, he said, was very cheap and popular. The number of copies sold exceeding several thousands. They occupied a large share of the attention of the AUDIENCE, who were greatly pleased with them.

After a vote of thanks proposed by Babu Narendranath Mitra, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, seconded by SWAMI ABHAYANANDA of CHICAGO, IN AMERICA, and carried by acclamation, the MEETING dissolved at 7 P. M.

(VIDE, THE INDIAN DAILY NEWS, 20th, the ENGLISHMAN, 22nd, the HINDU PATRIOT, 26th and the AMRITA BAZAR PATRIKA, 29th May, 1899.)

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, in a few appropriate words, expressed his obligation to the Members of the Society for having done him the honor to take the chair that evening, and asked the renowned Pandit Madhu Sudan Goswami of Sri Brindaban, (who, he said, was too well-known to need any introduction, as his name was a house-hold word in every Religious family in Bengal), to deliver his first lecture to the Society on—

The Efficacy of Rituals :—

The Venerable Pandit dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour and a half. He fully and clearly interpreted the meaning of the word Karma Kanda. Also the signs thereof. How persons are disposed to perform Religious works. How Karma Kanda was divided into several parts, according to the Tenets of the Vedanta, Sankhya, Puran, and the Tantras. How people desired to perform Rituals and when the desire to perform them was extinguished. How we enjoyed the fruits of good deeds. He then dwelt on the future existence, and whether our good works go with us to the next world after our death, and how we enjoyed the fruits of these works there.

The learned lecturer having resumed his seat, amidst shouts of applause, the Chairman asked the audience to comment on the lecture. At this, Pandit Achitnanda Paribrajak said that, the lecture delivered was so excellent that no one could say any thing further on the subject.

The Chairman, who on rising was received with cheers, made a little nice speech, in which he highly eulogised the discourse, which he had heard that evening, and thanked the Venerable Pandit from the core of his heart, for his taking so much trouble in coming over all the distance from Sri Brindaban to Calcutta, to edify them with his instructive speech.

Roy Yatintra Nath Chowdhery Bahadur, M. A., B. L., ZEMINDAR OF TAKI, having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was seconded by Babu Sham Lall Day, and carried by acclamation, the MEETING dissolved at 8-30 P. M.

After the PROCEEDINGS of the last MEETING had been read by Babu Sham Lall Day, the FOUNDER and Secretary to the SOCIETY, which were duly confirmed, the CHAIRMAN asked the Venerable PANDIT Madhu Sudan Goswami, (of Sri Brindaban), to deliver his Second lecture to the Society on—

The Kingdom of God :—

The learned PANDIT spoke on the Subject for two hours, in the course of which he said that, as the capital of BRITISH INDIA was Calcutta, so the capital of the KINGDOM OF God, was Golok or Heaven. As the VICEEROY resided in Government House, so God, (though present every where), had a special seat in Heaven. Some people define God as ISWAR, others call Him BHAGABAN. The former possessed one attribute, the latter several. God had the CREATIVE power. He created all beings. They met with destruction according to His laws.

The VICEEROY delegated his powers to his SUBORDINATES, and under those powers the MAGISTRATE had the power to sentence a criminal to imprisonment, whilst the INSPECTOR possesses the power to send him to Hajat. God delegated His FUNCTIONS to several bodies; viz.,—the Sun, the Moon, the Planets, the Fire and the Air. The MAGISTRATE might attend his office one day at ten, another day at eleven, close it one day at three, another day at four, according to his own free will. He might perform his work according to his pleasure. But, the commands of God are not so. The Sun must rise and shine and then go to rest at a fixed hour—The Moon also must rise in Heaven, according to rotation, and impart its mild light to the world. There was no change, and so the God's command was absolute.

In like manner, the trees must grow and bear different fruits. The clouds must send rains. The air must refresh and cool the atmosphere. The Laws of God are fixed and uniform. Every thing must act its part according to the function assigned to it. There was to be no change. There is not a shadow of doubt that God exists, and that He created all things.

There are some INFIDELS, who say that there is no creative power, and every thing goes on according to Nature's Laws. But that can never be so. Take for example, the case of a watch. The iron hands that work it, cannot be the same that you find in a rude state in a Smith's shop. The hand, the spring, and several other cognate parts make it go through its work every twelve hours, without rest. You cannot deny that there was somebody, who made the watch. In the same manner, you cannot deny that God created this vast Universe.

If a man went against THE LAWS OF GOVERNMENT, he was sent to PRISON to meet the ENDS OF JUSTICE—But whilst confined there, if he happened to be sick, he was attended upon by a CIVIL SURGEON, who regulated his diet and gave him medicine. This is an ACT OF MERCY on the part of GOVERNMENT. For, if he was sick at home, he could not even be attended upon by a COMMON MEDICAL PRACTITIONER. Similarly, when a person offends God and acts in disobedience to His Laws, he is punished. This is a PURE ACT OF JUSTICE. But, when God sees that the world is FULL OF SINS, He INCARNATES HIMSELF, and preached RELIGION unto the wayward man. THIS IS HIS MERCY. Thus, GOD sent CHAITANYA, BUDHA, MAHAMET and other PROPHETS into the world, who preached JUSTICE AND GOOD WORKS for the SALVATION OF MAN.

To enter the KINGDOM OF HEAVEN is always DIFFICULT. We were always surrounded by MAYA, or love of the world. Our wives and children obstruct us at every stage of our life, and do not allow us to do acts that might carry us into HEAVEN. We are all lodged in this world like PRISONERS IN A JAIL.

The MASTER OF A FAMILY must work the whole day, and live upon VERY ROUGH FOOD AND CLOTHES, whilst his wife, his sons and his daughters must roll in BEDS OF LUXURY AND ROSES. This is the way of the world. When a person rebels against the GOVERNMENT, he is lodged in JAIL, but, on the occasion of a DIAMOND JUBILEE, several prisoners are set at liberty. We have rebelled against God, and are treated as such. But God, out of His INFINITE MERCY, sometimes forgives us by sending His OWN SON TO SUFFER PENANCE FOR US.

The animate and the inanimate world belongs to God. He has drawn a line of demarcation between the two. God, being Omnipresent, knows all about His CREATION. If we wish to see God, we must have to cross the animate world, and proceed by means of Religious Rites and Acts and Faith to Heaven. Without strong FAITH, it is difficult to enter into the KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the CHAIRMAN invited the audience to comment on the discourse. At this, one of the AUDIENCE, named Champati BAWAJI, B. A., spoke a few words on the Subject. The night being advanced, Babu Avinash Chandra Ghose, M. A., in a few well-chosen words, proposed a vote of thanks to the learned lecturer, which was seconded by Babu Gobinda Chandra Dutt, ZEMINDAR, and carried by acclamation.

The CHAIRMAN, in bringing the MEETING to a close said that, he had at first intended to make some remarks on the SUBJECT OF THE LECTURE, which was a VERY INTERESTING ONE. The ELOQUENT MANNER in which the learned SPEAKER had dwelt upon his SUBJECT, was beyond all praise. There was a perfect UNANIMITY OF OPINION on the excellence of the discourse delivered that evening. The AUDIENCE were enraptured, whilst they listened to the VENERABLE PANDIT. He, therefore, had the greatest pleasure to convey to the renowned lecturer the vote of thanks, just fitly accorded to him. He would not detain the AUDIENCE any longer, as the night had advanced.

After a vote of thanks to the chair, PANDIT RADHA GOBINDA GOSWAMI entertained the MEETING with two of his BEAUTIFUL SONGS, at the conclusion of which, the MEETING dispersed after 8.30 P.M.

(Vide, the AMRITA BAZAR PATRIKA, 12th, the ENGLISHMAN, 15th, the INDIAN DAILY NEWS, and the HINDU-PATRIOT, 16th, and the INDIAN MIRROR, 26th August, 1899, respectively.)

As announced in the local papers, a public MEETING, convened by the SOCIETY, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nimtola Street, on Saturday, the 12th August, 1899, at 6-15 P.M.

The MEETING was largely attended. Amongst those present were, PANDIT Jagadish Chandra KAVYA BENADA; Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee; Babu Hem Chandra Chakherberty; Babu Chandra Kumar Bhattacharyya; Babu Kali Charn Chakherberty; Babu Tarapada Mukerjee; Babu Avinash Chandra Banerjee; Babu Basanta Kumar Mukerjee; Babu Maumatha Nath Ganguli; Babu Ram Lal Chatterjee; Babu Asutose Banerjee; Babu Ram Dass Sarkar; Babu Hari Charn Rudra; Babu Kedar Nath Bhowmik; Babu Devendra Nath Dass; Babu Satya Charn Bose; Babu Balai Chand Chandra; Babu Gosta Behari Dass; Babu Jadu Nath Sarkar; Babu Gopal Chandra De; Babu Nanda Lal Paul; Babu Surendra Nath Ghose; Babu Hari Gopal Bose; Babu Tin Cowri Mitra; Babu Mahendra Lal Mitra; Babu Raj Narayan Bose; Babu Besheahwar Kundu; Babu Kamini Nath Rai; Babu Sachindra Narayan Mazumdar; Babu Sarat Chandra Bysack and others.

On the motion of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, seconded by Babu Panna Lal De, Babu Panchoy Banerjee, B.A., EDITOR, BASUMATA, was voted to the chair.

On the CHAIRMAN taking his seat, amidst cheers, PANDIT Radha Govinda Goswami sang a sweet song.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Pounder and Secretary to the Society, then read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which, having duly been confirmed, the CHAIRMAN CALLED UPON PANDIT Madhu Sudan

GOSWAMI, OF SRIBRINDABAN, to deliver his THIRD LECTURE TO THE SOCIETY ON—

Sri Gouranga Avatar:

The learned lecturer dwelt upon his SUBJECT for more than two and half hours; in the course of which he said that, GOD IS LOVE. All lovely things of the world can only be known by ILLUSTRATION. Some people give sixteen, some twelve, and others eight ILLUSTRATIONS. In NYA PHILOSOPHY there are four, but, in the VEDANTA, there are THREE ILLUSTRATIONS. All the ILLUSTRATIONS are to be found included in the latter three; VIZ:— (1) OBSERVATION, (2) CONTEMPLATION, and (3) SOUND.

(1) All things, that we see in this world, are the RESULT OF OBSERVATION.

(2) After seeing a thing several times, we begin to CONTEMPLATE IT. This is called contemplation.

(3) Such things as CANNOT BE PERCEIVED BY OBSERVATION OR CONTEMPLATION, can be known by SOUND.

God cannot generally be known by the SENSES. That is the reason, why HE cannot easily be seen by us. We can neither SEE, nor contemplate God. He can only be seen by the SPECTACLE OF REASON. How GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF, and why HE DID SO, these are two different subjects. Therefore, I should not dwell upon them now.

It is an acknowledged fact that GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF. He had several INCARNATIONS. BEFORE THE CREATION, the surface of the earth was all covered with water. At that time, the fishes were the only living beings. According to HINDU SHASTRAS, God incarnated Himself in TEN PRINCIPLE AVATARS; VIZ:—

FIRSTLY, GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF IN THE FORM OF A FISH. Because, If God was to INCARNATE HIMSELF as a lion or a serpent, ALL HUMAN BEINGS would be frightened, and would then leave the world.

SECONDLY,—GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF AS A CROCODILE which partly lives in land, and partly in water.

THIRDLY,—GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF AS BARAHMA OR SWINE.

FOURTHLY,—GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF AS HALF ANIMAL AND HALF MAN. (i. e.,) NRSINHA AVATAR.

FIFTHLY,—GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF AS A DWARF, (i. e.,) BAMAN AVATAR.—Mr. Darwin has described human beings of this period to be DWARF FISH.

SIXTHLY,—God came into the world as PARASURAM, when CIVILIZATION had not made sufficient progress.

SEVENTHLY,—God came into the world as RAM CHANDRA, who was an emblem of obedience to his father, and love to his brother, when man became civilized.

EIGHTHLY,—God appeared in this world as SRI KRISHNA, when the world had reached the ZENITH OF KNOWLEDGE.—For this reason, SRI KRISHNA is described as possessor of the fullest wisdom AND KNOWLEDGE. Whatever SRI KRISHNA had done, shows that He was ALL-WISE. From youth to manhood, HE WAS AN EMBLEM OF PERFECTION. He is, therefore, described as supreme AVATAR.

NINTHLY,—GOD INCARNATED HIMSELF AS BUDDHA, when the world made great progress in Logic.

TENTHLY,—SRI GOURANGA was the AVATAR OF FAITH AND DEVOTION. With the advancement of NYA PHILOSOPHY, FAITH BEGAN TO GROW IN THE WORLD. Sri Gouranga was FULL OF FAITH, FULL OF MERCY, FULL OF LOVE, and FULL OF DEVOTION.

Some people doubt as to the AUTHENTICITY OF SRI GOURANGA'S BEING a part of GOD HIMSELF—They say, He is a DEVOTEE. The HINDU SHASTRA does not bear any testimony regarding it. But, I can unhesitatingly assert that the VEDAS, the PURANAS, the TANTRAS, and all other SHASTRAS bear ample TESTIMONY AS TO SRI GOURANGA being a REPRESENTATIVE of God Himself. (Cheers.)

If we see things with the EYE OF FAITH, all our doubts would cease to exist. When the world is covered with sin, some RIGOROUS ADMINISTRATION is necessary. I can, therefore, prophesy that GOD will appear as KALKI AVATAR some time in the present KALI YUGA. But that time is not very near.

After the VENERABLE PANDIT had finished his SPEECH, the CHAIRMAN spoke a few words. He highly EULOGISED THE LEARNED LECTURER.

PANDIT Radha Govinda GOSWAMI then entertained the audience with two of his MELODIOUS SONGS regarding SRI GOURANGA AVATAR, which were composed by him for the occasion.

After a vote of thanks accorded to the CHAIR, the MEETING dissolved at 9-15 P.M.

(Vide, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 14th, the Englishman, 15th, the Indian Daily News and the Indian Mirror, 16th, and the Hindu Patriot, 31st August, 1899, respectively.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nimtola Street, on the 20th August, 1899, at 6 P.M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Among others, the following Gentlemen were present:—Pandit A. P. Tewari of Lucknow; Pandit Bhagirath of Delhi; Pandit Ramdass Puri of Bikanir; Pandit Kashi Nath of Benares; Pandit Mohan Lal Puri of Barabazar; Babu Hari Dev Singh of Patna; Babu Suk Deo Singh of Patna; Babu Dakhi Singh of Azimgarh; Babu Nepal Chandra of the Panjab; Babu Mohan Lal of the Panjab; Babu Suryya Ram Sett of Bikanir; Pandit Jagadish Chandra Kabra Venoda; Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar; Babu Niharani Chandra Banerjee; Babu Kunnad Behari Banerjee; Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee; Babu Mamatha Nath Chakraborty; Babu Bhushan Chandra Sanyal; Babu Ram Lal Chatterjee; Babu Kuli Charn Chakraborty; Babu Narayan Chandra Banerjee; Babu Avinash Chandra Banerjee; Babu Heradall Dutt; Babu Gopal Chandra De; Babu Lalit Mahan Dass; Babu Kherad Chandra Dass; Babu Boloram Rai; Babu Chandra Kumar Rai; Babu Punindra Nath De; and Babu Kera Chandra Ghose.

On the motion of Pandit Basudeva Tripathi of the Rangbasi Office, seconded by Swami Paramananda Saraswati of Rajputana, Pandit Gokul Chand of Agra was voted to the Chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Pandit Kasi Nath of Benares to recite a few Vedic Hymns from the Yajur Veda Samhita.

After the learned Pandit had finished his Vedic Hymns, the Chairman asked Pandit Ram Krishna to deliver his lecture on—

The effects of Idol worship :—

The Pandit spoke on the Subject for nearly half an hour, in the course of which he said that we all know that the worship of Idols is not universally liked. Some people say that, Idol Worship is not fair in itself. It tends to demoralize man. I deny this statement. Because, unbelievers can only dare to make such a mis-statement.

Those, who are unable to form any idea of God, their intellect being un-cultivated, can alone realize the presence of God, through Idol Worship. When they see an Idol, they say that the Image represents the likeness of God Himself. So that, if we worship the Image, we worship God through it. If we make offerings to the Idol, God accepts the same. Because, He knows that those offerings are made by His own children. Thus, their fault, in this respect, is extenuated. If God cannot find fault with those men, we ought not to find fault with them. Because, by so doing, we would be acting against the will of God.

The effect of Idol Worship is always beneficial. Because, it tends to make men God-fearing. It enables them to avoid sin, which they consider to be culpable and hateful in the eye of God and man.

Man's nature is to avoid doing such things, as are despicable. Man shrinks from doing act, which other people despise. If this was possible with every body, we shall get rid of our criminal population. No body will commit any crime, because, he will see and feel that it is hateful, and liable to punishment. (Cheers.)

Babu Nilmani Dutt, zemindar, having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved at 8 P.M., with the singing of a few Sanskrit Hymns by the Pandits, present on the occasion.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 14th Sept., 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 21st August, 1899, at 6-30 P.M. The Meeting was fairly attended.

On the motion of Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee, seconded by Babu Priya Nath Banerjee, Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, in a few appropriate words, introduced Swami Abh Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N. W. P. to the Meeting, and asked him to deliver his First lecture to the Society on—

The Progress of the Soul:—

The Venerable Swamiji spoke on the Subject for more than two hours, and the audience heard his discourse with rapt attention. The Swamiji said that, until our passions, anger, ambition, desire of having the worldly things, and conceit are got rid of, our Soul cannot be sanctified, our health cannot improve, and our country cannot prosper.

It will be found in the Baghat Gita that, the Passions owe their origin to the Will. And from the Passions proceeds Anger. Ambition is also produced from Anger. From Ambition proceeds love of the world.

The Will for Action is either good or evil. We always ought to relinquish evil acts, and perform good deeds. A Hermit is strictly prohibited from co-habiting with Females. We should look upon young females as our own daughters, wives of others as our sisters, aged women as our mothers, and so on. Females are intended not only for the propagation of the human race, but, also, to look after the house-hold affairs of man. (Cheers.)

The Swamiji continued that, if the branch of a tree is cut off & separated from its leaves, the tree does not wither. But, if its root is cut off, the tree is at once destroyed. In like manner, men should never waste their intellects. After the birth of a child, a husband should not go to his wife for at least two years. Judgment will then be necessary for him to control his evil passions.

As an angry man knows no reason, we should always be away from him. Men require the Arm of forgiveness for controlling anger. Our deeds will well be judged in the next world, as we perform them here.

Contentment is essentially necessary to destroy ambition. Our body consists of bones, flesh, muscles, blood, &c. The Soul cannot be purified, unless the body is clean. Faith, love, and trust cannot exist without abstemiousness. (Cheers.)

The learned Swamiji then illustrated this by an example. He said that,—there lived in a country a Jola, (a low class weaver), who was instructed by his mother to be quick and quick in all times. Jola committed this to his memory. He often uttered that word. One day, he saw a fowler catching birds in a forest. He came there, and as soon as he began to utter quick and quick, the birds flew away. The fowler, on seeing this, chastised Jola and beat him. Jola asked the fowler the reason of his doing so. The fowler explained, Jola was then taught by the fowler to say fly and fly, but come quickly.

Afterwards, a thief was seen stealing in a house. Jola happened to be there, reciting the words, fly and fly, but come quickly. The thief, being enraged at this, gave Jola a good thrashing. Jola asked the reason, and this was explained. Jola was then commanded by the thief to say bring and bring and keep this here.

After a few days, the Prince of the city died suddenly. When the relatives of the deceased Prince were lamenting, and brought the corpse for cremation, Jola happened to be there, reciting the words bring and bring and keep this here. The kinsmen of the deceased Prince were so much pained at his word, that they also beat Jola.

Having asked them the reason, which was clearly explained. Jola was then ordered to say, this is not good, this is not good.

Sometime after, a Zemindar was celebrating the Rice ceremony of his child. He saw Jola there, uttering the words, this is not good and this is not good. On hearing that unpleasant word, the Zemindar severely beat Jola, they, at the same time, advised him not to utter that unpleasant word any more, but to say this is good, this is good.

After a while, several houses of the locality had suddenly caught fire. Jola, on seeing that, began to recite there, this is good, this good. The people was much enraged at this, and thinking Jola had set their houses on fire, wounded Jola so severely, that he died a few days after.

Now Gentlemen, what we learn by this story?—We learn that as Jola disobeyed his mother's command, but, repeated the sayings of other men, he felt his consequence very soon, and ultimately met with an untimely death.

We should always stick to the precepts of our good parents, and act accordingly. Because, by so doing, we may spend our days happily in this world. (Cheers)

The learned Swamiji having resumed his seat, amidst shouts of applause, the Chairman spoke a few words, and eulogised the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 9-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 25th August, 1899.)

As previously announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N.W.P. delivered his Second lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Tuesday, the 22nd August, 1899, at 7 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to deliver his Second lecture.

The learned Swamiji dwelt on his Subject for more than two hours, in the course of which he said that, unless our body is clean, our Soul cannot be purified. As our hands and feet are cleaned by water, so our tongue is purified by Knowledge, the Intellect by Reason, and the Mind by Truth. Bharti Rishi said that, pious men act justly. A Sandal wood does not lose its perfume by being rubbed in stone, so, the Store of wisdom of educated men is seldom exhausted.

The Indian Munis and Rishis of old were also true Reformers. As sugarcane becomes ripe and ripe, it gives more and more sweet juice, as gold is refined by fire, and becomes bright, so, pious men remain honest, no matter, whatever difficulties may beset their path. Idleness is the Mother of Vice, so it should at once be shunned. As the black colour remains black, and the red colour remains red, so the mind of man may be coloured, as it may be tinged. Unless, our Passions are brought under our subjugation, nothing can be satisfactorily done.

As the leaves of a tree always move to and fro, the flag waves by the wind, the lightning shines, and the crocodile moves, so, the Mind of man is always restless. Because, the Mind goes on to the sky in a moment, then to the bottomless deep, and travels instantly from one region to another. The Mind sometimes imagines to be a King, and sometimes his subject. Until the Mind is purified, the Soul cannot be sanctified. Manu says that, as the Mind cannot be purified until it becomes truthful, so, the Intellect also cannot improve, until knowledge is acquired.

True Reason purges the Intellect. We may lead our Mind in four different ways; Viz :—

- (1.) By True friendship,
- (2.) By Studying the Veda,
- (3.) By Studying the Yoga,
- (4.) By Pure Meditation.

Ratnakar, (afterwards called Valmiki Rishi), was, by birth, a villain. His Nature was at last so purified by his having associated with the Aryan Rishis for several years, that his name is still remains as bright as the Rays of the Sun. You should always associate and cultivate friendship with those, who are good, great and merciful.

Association with evil men destroys the Virtues of our past life. So, it should always be shunned. Good stone converts Iron into Gold, but, it cannot impart its virtues to Iron. The Sandal wood is cool, and when applied to head-ache, it removes the heat, and soon cures it. The Mind should be divested of ignorance. It will be found in the Hindu Shastras that the visit paid to a Holy person can bring back the virtues of past life.

Idleness brings sleep, uneasiness, and at last fever. Scanty meals drive away idleness. By reposing trust in others, a person can become devoid of fear. But, by reposing confidence on the Yoga, the Mind is enlarged. (Cheers).

The Swamiji then gave several illustrations.

After the Swamiji had finished his Speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting terminated after 9-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 28th August, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N.W.P. delivered his Third lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Wednesday, the 23rd August, 1899, at 7-15 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Swamiji to deliver his lecture.

The Venerable Swamiji dwelt upon his Subject for nearly three hours, in the course of which he said that, it is written in the Yoyur Veda that "whoever does not know what the Soul is, does not understand any thing." It is written in the Hindu Shastras, that on studying the four Vedas, (Shyam, Rig, Yoyur and Atharva), a man may attain a full knowledge of the Soul.

The Swamiji then gave the following illustration on the Subject. He said :—

A Pandit was once lecturing to a King—
What the Soul consists of. The King, on hearing his lecture, asked the Pandit to bring a Soul to him. At this, the Pandit could not satisfactorily reply.

So, the King confined the Pandit in prison. The King, in like manner, put several Pandits in confinement within a very short time, as they all could give no satisfactory reply to his query.

After a few days, a Paramhansa visited the King. The King, in like manner, asked him to bring a Soul to him. The Paramhansa replied that, if the King would bring to him a precious diamond, and send for some of the best Jewellers of his State, his question may easily be answered. The King consented to this, and sent for the best Jewellers of His Majesty's Kingdom.

When the Jewellers came to the King, the Paramhansa asked them, one by one, to appraise the value of the Diamond Ring. Some Jewellers valued the Ring Ten Thousand Rupees, some Fifteen thousand, some Twenty thousand, and so on. To this, the Paramhansa asked the Jewellers to give him the Wisdom, by which they appraised the value of the precious Ring. To this, the Jewellers could not reply. The Paramhansa then asked the King that, as the Jewellers could not give him the Wisdom, so he could not bring a Soul to the King. Hearing that, the King paused for a moment. He then asked the Jewellers to impart the Wisdom to the Paramhansa. The Jewellers replied that — Wisdom is neither a brick, nor a stone, that they could give him. But, if the Paramhansa be associated with them for several years, he could obtain some knowledge of the Wisdom. The King thought the Jewellers were very right in their sayings, and told the Paramhansa to do that.

The Paramhansa replied, that if by becoming a companion of the Jewellers, he would attain the Knowledge of Wisdom, the King would better associate with the Sages, in order to enable him to obtain a Knowledge of the Soul. (Cheers)

The King meditated on this, and all his doubts were then removed. He handsomely rewarded the Paramhansa, and, at once released all the Pandits from their confinement. (Cheers).

The Swamiji then gave another illustration on the Subject. He said that, a merchant was once going to his garden, accompanied with his Dewan. After walking there for two hours, he got upon his carriage, and asked his Dewan that he wanted to return home, as he had then taken fresh air.

The Dewan smiled and said, as he was hungry, he would ask for some fresh air. The merchant remarked that, the air was neither a cake, nor a fruit, that he give it to him by hands. (Cheers.)

Ignorance prevents people from having a knowledge of the Soul. But, when that ignorance is removed, one can understand what the Soul is.

The Swamiji illustrated this with an example. He said that, a Pandit was once reading the Bhagbat Gita before a King. The King asked the Pandit why Rajah Parikhita was freed from his sins, on hearing the Bhagbat Gita?—At this, the Pandit could not reply. Next day, the King put the same question to him, and the Pandit could not give a satisfactory reply. At last, a Paramhansa came to the King. The King asked him whether by hearing the Bhagbat Gita, Rajah Parikhita was freed from his sins?—At this, the Paramhansa replied, that if the King would allow him to rule over his kingdom only for two hours, his question might easily be answered by him. The King complied with his request.

The Paramhansa then ordered the servants of the Raj to tie the King with a rope to one pillar, and similarly his Pandit to another. The servants complied with his request.

After a few minutes, the King asked the Paramhansa to release him, as he was then suffering. The Paramhansa replied that, a third man would be necessary to release the King.

As the King and the Pandit could themselves not be released, the Paramhansa himself made them at last free.

The Paramhansa continued that, the King was all along busy with the affairs of his Raj, and as long as he gave them up, he could not be relieved. The Pandit, in like manner, was subject to wordly gains, and courteousness. Until, he gave them up like Sakdeva, he cannot be expected to acquire Salvation. (Cheers).

Most of the rich seldom associate with the learned men. As they are always surrounded by temptation, they have not the opportunity of knowing the Soul. They hate the Puranas and the Shastras, and thereby, they become proud of themselves. So, where is the way of their Salvation!

Some people call the body Soul. Others call the five senses Soul. Again, there is a sect who call air Soul, life Soul, wisdom Soul, and so on. But, they are greatly mistaken in thinking so. Because, the body is formed only of material substances, so, it can never be called the Soul.

Neither is the body, nor are the five senses, or any material thing — Soul. — The Soul exists only in itself. It is infidelity, which calls any thing Material, Spirit or Soul. Man acts accordingly as his Soul wills. (Cheers).

The Meeting dispersed at 10.15 p.m., after a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 1st September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sunyasi of the N.W.P. delivered his Fourth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Thursday, the 24th August, 1899, at 7.15 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar.

The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Swamiji to commence with his lecture.

The Swamiji dwelt upon his Subject for nearly three hours, in the course of which he said that, the Hindus, the Mahamedans, the Christians, and other Races, all worship Idols. The Mahamedans declare that God had given them a big Stone, which had been placed in Mecca. By worshipping this Stone, the heart becomes purified.

Let those, who wish to worship Idols, continue them to do so. You should never laugh at them. You should also not slander the Idols of other races.

The Christians worship the Image of Christ, and that of Mary. The Roman Catholics also worship those Images. The Hindus, in like manner, worship the Images of Sri Krishna, Siva, Durga Devi, Kali Mata, Luchmi, Sri Rama Chandra, Nrisinha Avatar, and other gods and goddesses.

The Infidels declare that, there is no good in worshipping Idols. This is absurd. Akbar, the Great Mogul Emperor, once asked his Minister Birbal, why the Hindus worshipped Idols? The Minister replied, because, God is propitiated by worshipping the Idols. Akbar asked the reason. Birbal prayed for six months' time to answer his master's query. The Emperor complied with his request.

Birbal then erected a Temple, and placed there an Image, or bust of Akbar. He also engaged an old lady to worship the same every day, so that she might see the Emperor.

Thus, the old lady began to pray the Image of Akbar regularly once a day.

After a few days, Akbar heard the news. He at once went personally to the temple and saw the woman there worshipping his image. On seeing this, he asked the woman why she was every day worshipping his image there? The woman replied, because, she wanted to see the Emperor. Akbar said, there he was and she can see him. At this, the woman knelt down and began to pray to the Emperor for sometime. Akbar was so much pleased at the solemn sight, that he offered her some jaghir. Birbal, on seeing this at, asked the Emperor the reason for his doing so. Akbar replied his motive clearly to him.

Now, Birbal explained the Emperor how God is propitiated by the worship of Idols every day. He continued that the Emperor only rules over his own Kingdom, but God, out of his infinite Mercy, governs the Universe (Cheers.)

The Swamiji continued, the question is often asked, why the Images are made of clay and stone?—The answer is because, the Images of Sri Krishna, Siva, Durga Devi, Kali Mata, Saraswati, Lachmi, Sri Ram Chandra, Nrisinha Avatar, etc., are often worshipped by the Hindus. Sincere worship presents those Images before the mind's eye.

The second question is asked, why the Hindus strike the gong at the time of their worshipping Idols?—The answer is because, by that they know the people that the time of worshipping God is commenced, and that people might join with them in the worship.

The third question is asked, why the Hindus sing songs in the presence of Idols?—The answer is because, their motive is to create Spirit of Devotion in the minds of those who hear them.

The last question is asked, why the Hindus place sweetmeats and fruits before the Idols at the time of their worshipping, and distribute the same to those who attend there, and then to their relatives and friends?—The reply is because, it creates satisfaction in the minds of those, who eat them, and thereby induce them to come and worship the Idols again.

The worship of Images is essentially necessary. Because, by so doing, we can fix our attention to the object which we cannot see by our naked eyes. We see before us fire, air, earth and water, and by so doing, we can form an idea of those objects.

Sri Ram Chandra, by worshipping the Image of Durga Devi, enabled to conquer the Empire of Ravana. In ancient time, Hanuman, by worshipping the Image of Sri Ram Chandra, enabled to set fire to Ravana's Dominions. Guru Govinda Singh, by worshipping the Image of Durga Devi, was equally—successful in destroying the Infidelity and Sin that prevailed during his time.

I, therefore, insist upon Idol Worship, which our forefathers observed in a Spirit of Devotion, and thereby lived happily in this world and led a Religious life. (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the Swamiji for his instructive lecture.

The Meeting came to a close at 10-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the HINDU PATRIOT, 2nd September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of N. W. P. delivered his Fifth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimtola Street, on Friday, the 25th August, 1899, 7 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, zemindar, &c. The Meeting was fairly attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Swamiji to begin with his lecture.

The Swamiji dwelt upon his subject for more than two hours, in the course of which he said that, the fruits of Pilgrimages are written in the four parts of the Veda. Viz :—(1) Rig (2) Yajur. (3) Shyam and (4) Atharva.

In the Atharva Veda, it is distinctly written that whoever will bathe in the holy River Ganges and its tributaries will be divested of all his Sins. Yajur Veda also acknowledged the same, and so did the Manu and Bhatri Rishis. A person becomes freed from his sins by uttering the sacred word Swaha.

A person is delivered of his sins by offering his prayer to Sri Krishna, Sri Ram Chandra and the holy River Ganges. The Ocean is called a place of pilgrimage by Balmiki Rishi. The names of the holy rivers the Ganges, Brahmaputra and the Saraswati are mentioned in the Rig Veda to be the places of Pilgrimages.

The Ganges possesses the virtues, which others have not. If you put the water of the Ganges in a phial, it seldom becomes dry, while other waters soon dry.

Indigestion is removed by drinking the water of the holy River Ganges, as insects do not live in it. The water of the River Ganges does not emit any bad smell. By bathing in the River Ganges, the body becomes perfumed and purified.

As long as the Sun and the Moon shine in the sky, the purity and the glory of the holy River Ganges will not be destroyed. God is in the Ganges. By worshipping the water of the Ganges, God is propitiated. The places of pilgrimages are the most suitable places for Devotion, as many Sadhus (Holy men) are to be met there, and as their company does great good to us. Unna Chatra (Oceans of Rice) are opened in places of pilgrimages, where thousands of people receive their food. The Government, the Railways and the shop-keepers derive immense profits from places of Pilgrimages.

Infidels declare that Malaria fever is produced from the places of Pilgrimages. But that is not the case. Malaria fever is seen to be prevalent in small villages. There is no Malaria fever in Calcutta and Bombay, which are overcrowded. Cholera is found in America, Germany, Russia, England and other countries, although these are always kept clean. Cholera breaks out, to some extent, in places of pilgrimages, because, food-vendors prepare there many adulterated-food, which produce indigestion.

Songs in praise of Sri Krishna are always sung in Sri Brindaban. If you go there, you should bathe in the holy River Jumna, because, by so doing, you can attain Salvation. A man, dying in Brindaban, goes to Vishnu Loka and a man, dying in Benares, goes to Siva Loka. The Munis and Rishis of old, had written much in praise of Pilgrimages.

Religious creeds contain arguments in favor of Pilgrimages. As the Mahamedans acknowledge that by bathing in a certain River in Mecca, they may attain Salvation, the Christians also declare that by bathing in the River Jordan, the Salvation is attained. The Hindus, similarly, call the Ganges, the Jumna, the Saraswati, the Brahmaputra, the Godavary, and the Ganga Sagar, Benares, Allahabad, Mathura, Dwarka, Somnath, places of pilgrimages. Because, by bathing in the waters of these Holy Rivers, with Devotion, man attains Salvation.

The Hindus call Rameswar, Amritsar, and Bhadrakali, also places of Pilgrimages. A man can attain Salvation by worshipping the shrines of these places. Let the people act according to their own faith. You should never slander them.

The Swamiji said that, the Infidels declare before the ignorant that Nature is all powerful, and so, there is no need of visiting places of pilgrimages. But, common sense will tell you that they are mistaken in thinking so. Because, by visiting the places of Pilgrimages, much benefits can be derived. If the Infidels do not get drinking water for ten days, they will surely die.

In the Hindu Shastras, there are three different classes of Karmas; Viz :—(1) Nitya Karma (2) Naimittic Karma and (3) Prayashchitra Karma. Sandhea, Gaitri and Tarnan, are classified under the head of Nitya Karma. The Soul becomes purified and saved. By them Sadh ceremony and acts performed during the eclipse of the Sun and the Moon are called the Naimittic Karma. By these acts, the Soul also becomes purified. There are certain ceremonies, mentioned in the Veda, which can also drive away our Sins. These are called expiation.

Again, expiations, are of two kinds; Viz. (1) Common and (2) Un-common. Sins committed unknowingly. Common, Expiation is necessary. But Sins committed knowingly, Uncommon Expiation is necessary.

The Temple of Siva contains the emblem of God, which, in other words, called Siva Linga. The Goddess Kali Mata represents the power of God. Therefore, Kali Mata and Durga Devi are called powers of God. Without Sakti (power) God is powerless. The power of drinking water inheres in quenching the thirst. The power of Fire inheres in destroying things. The power of the Sun and the Moon inheres in giving strong and mild light. The power of the earth inheres in containing all creatures. The power of air exists in attracting all things respectively. These are called powers of God. Without Sakti, (power), God could not create the world. (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words. The Meeting terminated after 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 2nd September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, SWAMI Ala Ram Sagar SANYASI, of the North-Western Provinces, delivered his SIXTH LECTURE to the SOCIETY ON—

at the premises No. 84, Nintola Street, on Saturday, the 26th August, 1899, at 7 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, ZEMINDAR, &c. The MEETING was fairly attended.

After the PROCEEDINGS OF THE LAST MEETING had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the FOUNDER AND SECRETARY TO THE SOCIETY, which were duly confirmed, the CHAIRMAN asked the SWAMIJI to begin with his lecture.

The learned SWAMIJI dwelt upon his SUBJECT for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, GRATITUDE is essential to YOGA, which is divided into several parts. One of these YOGAS consists of (1) HUMANITY TO ANIMALS; (2) Truth; (3) Not to Steal; (4) Brahmacharyya; (5) Celibacy and (6) Humanity to human beings.

The HINDUS, the MAHAMEDANS, the BUDDHISTS, &c, all should show HUMANITY TO ANIMALS. In the BIBLE, it is distinctly written ENVY NOT. In the KORAN, it is also written ENVY NOT, but, be KIND TO THE DUMB ANIMALS. ALANGIR advised his son not to go quickly, lest he would tread upon insects and thereby kill them. SHAIK SADI also advised NOT TO HURT EVEN THE SMALL ANTS. It is written in the YOGER VEDA that Animals should be protected by men. Manu wrote in his works that EIGHT PERSONS were capable of INHUMANITY to a SINGLE LIFE; Viz :—(1) He who advises to kill; (2) He who gives his consent to kill; (3) The person who kills; (4) He who sells the meat; (5) He who buys the meat; (6) The Cook; (7) He who distributes the cooked meat and (8) He who eats.

Manu wrote in his works that, he, who kills a dumb animal without any offence, will be destroyed as many times as the number of hair in the body of the animal killed. He will also be born in his next life in the womb of the animal killed for his food or pleasure in this world. A butcher, named Sudra used to kill goats. He was a professional butcher. One day, a customer came to his shop to buy some meat. The butcher brought a goat to kill. At this, the goat seemed to smile. The butcher thought the reason. The goat appeared to reply thus :—that he can finish his duty, as in previous life the goat was butcher and the butcher was goat, and so he, (the goat), killed the butcher. In this life, he was born as a goat and he, (the goat), will kill him again. This is the rotation and command of God. Thinking this, the butcher paused for a while, pondered over the matter, and at last gave up his professional butchery and began to lead a pious life for the remainder of his days.

MANU also wrote in his works that, he who eats the flesh of an animal for the sake of pleasure, his flesh will, in like manner, be eaten by the same animal in his next life. Gentlemen, so it is not advisable to live in flesh. The Swamiji remarked that he was then four scores of years old, and he had never touched any flesh. He had also never used spectacles, like most of the College and school students. He could even read books and write easily at night. He could still work hard, which many youths could not.

Those, who say that Manu advised to eat flesh, are greatly mistaken. Because, Manu distinctly wrote in his works that it was a great virtue not to live in flesh. A person keeps good health, by not eating flesh. It is, therefore, not just to sacrifice animals before the Goddess Durga Devi and Kali Mata, when sweet-meats and fruits would serve the purpose, instead of animal flesh. It is written in the Veda that the Goddess Kali is the Universal Mother. So before the mother her children should never be sacrificed.

Fish-lovers declare that, they eat fish, because, it has good taste. They are not right in thinking so. Because, unless you cook fish with ghee, spice, &c., it is not delicious to eat. From this, it shows that ghee, spice, &c., possess good taste. So, Gentlemen, I advise you to take ghee and spice instead of fish. Moreover, the fish had bad smell. Doctors are also of opinion that fish create indigestion headache, sickness and other numerous diseases.

Milk drives away indigestion. It strengthens the eyes, the body and the brain, and it helps in curing sickness. For these reasons, you should always take milk instead of fish. It is a mistake to think that fish strengthens the body. The elephant, the camel, the horse, &c., never take fish for their food and bread. See how they have got good strength! Sri Ram Chandra and his dutiful brother Luchman never took fish, and see how mighty they were! They killed, in action with the great Ravana, who used to take fish. Sri Krishna, abstained from fish-eating, killed the powerful Karna, who took fish. Fateh Singh, a Sikh, never took fish, and how he defeated a mighty Mahomedan, who used to eat fish, in arm to arm fight! The Sikhs and the Rajputs do not take fish up to the present time, but see how mighty they are now!

The Munis and Rishis of old always used to live on vegetables and milk, and behold! how educated they were!

Our boys, take fish now-a-days instead of taking milk, and so, they use spectacles from their Infancy, because their eyes become dimmed.

You should not kill goats and sheeps, because their milk prove efficacious in helping to cure several diseases. The Siberians worshiped the goat, as its skin provided them with hats, coats, pantaloons, &c., which protected them from severe cold. You should not kill sheep, because, its milk is of great use in curing hard diseases and its wool, too, provides men with shawls, linen, &c. You should always take particular care of the cows, as their milk nourish children of all classes of people in all ages and thereby strengthen them. About fifty years ago, a cow that could be had for Ten Rupees in Maharajah Ranjit Singh's Dominions, in the Punjab, can now seldom be had for One hundred Rupees! At that time pure milk sold there for two pice a seer, and it now cannot be had for even one anna a seer! Formerly ghee could be had at two seers a rupee. Grain was sold at that time at eight annas a maund, and now it sells at three Rupees a maund! Oats sold for five maunds a rupee and now it cannot be had at twenty seers a rupee.

The urine of cow is also of great use in curing diseases of the stomach. A European, in a mofussil station, sent for milk to drink tea. His servant went to a cow-shed, and bought pure milk for him. The European was much pleased with the servant for his bringing pure sweet milk. If we can have pure milk, it will do us great good.

You have a Society here called, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of which His Excellency the Viceroy is the Patron. This is no doubt, a humane act. In sections 428 and 429 of the Indian Penal Code provide punishment for those, who, in any way, are disposed to injure dumb creature. Thus, you see our benign Government is also fully aware of its sense of duty towards mute animals (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved after 9-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 9th September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ran Sagar Sanyasi of N. W. P. delivered his Seventh lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on the 27th August 1899, at 7 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c. The Meeting was fairly attended.

Do not be jealous :—

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Lecturer to begin with his lecture.

The learned Swamiji spoke on the subject for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, the Yogi are not in enmity with any body; as it destroys virtue and creates misery. It is written in the Rig Veda that men should give up jealousy. They should love each other. People should be of one mind. In the Atharvana Veda, it is written that father and mother should love each other, father and son, husband and wife, brother and sister should also love each other. We should obey the Tenets of the Veda, and act accordingly. Batmiki Manu wrote in his works that Sri Ram Chandra went to the wilderness in obedience to his father's command. Every son should similarly obey his father. As Sita Devi went to the wilderness with her beloved husband Sri Ram Chandra, so, every wife of a Hindu family should always be submissive to her husband. Sri Bharat Chandra never sat on the Throne, after the death of his father Dasarath, as his eldest brother Sri Ram Chandra was then in wilderness. He knew well that he was not the due successor, but, that was his eldest brother. He regarded his eldest brother thus.

Every brother should love his brother similarly. Sri Ram Chandra killed Baly Rajah, because, the latter had illegal connection with Tara, the wife of his brother. Stugrib. Sri Luchman cut the nose and ears of Surpanakha, sister of Ravana, because she wanted to marry him and his brother, Sri Ram Chandra, by forsaking her own husband. Hanuman killed Kalnemi Asura, because, the latter disguised himself as Hanuman. Sri Ram Chandra gave Lanka to Bebheshan, brother of Ravana, after conquering it, because, he had no ambition. So, we ought to love each other and thereby live in peace. We should not be jealous of any body.

In a village, there lived two friends. They always lived together and thus spent their days happily for some time.

An envious fellow tried to create enmity between them. He sought to hit, but failed. At last, he went to one of them and said that he had to tell him something. When the friend came to him, the envious fellow told him that he had already said his private word to his other friend, and when the other friend came to him, the envious fellow told him that he had just told his friend his word and that he could know that from him. Thus, the two friends asked each other, what the envious fellow had said. The one said to the other nothing, and, thus, they quarrelled amongst themselves, saying that, he no longer wished to remain his friend, because, he was concealing what the envious fellow had said. Thus, the two friends remained separate for ever.

The lecturer gave another illustration on the subject. He said that, there lived in a village a Brahmin, a Khatrigya, a Vaishya, and a Sudra. They remained for a long time true friends to each other. One day, they took their walk in an orchard, and ate the fruits of the garden. The gardener, on seeing them came to them, and bowed to the Brahmin, the Khatrigya, and the Vaishya, saying that they were all good men, as they did no harm to his orchard. The Sudra had eaten all his fruits and he should, therefore, be punished. Thus, he tied the Sudra with a rope on the branch of a tree and beat him. Afterwards, the gardener tied the Vaishya, in like manner and beat him, saying that he had eaten all his fruits. He dealt similarly with the Khatrigya, and, at last, he treated the Brahmin in similar way. The story teaches us we should never be disunited, but live in unity. Unity is strength, otherwise we shall share the same fate as the Brahmin, the Khatrigya, the Vaishya and the Sudra.

In a village, a tiger used to kill every one that came before him. The Hindus, the Mahamedans and the Christians inhabitants of the village united themselves one day in a body, and killed the tiger. The village was thus freed from its enemy and the people thereby lived happily in peace.

The Yogis seldom quarrel among themselves. They live in amity with each other. We should learn to love each other and live in amity, peace and happiness. (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had done, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer. The Meeting dissolved after 9 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair, (Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 9th September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of N. W. P. delivered his Eighth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Monday, the 28th August, 1899, at 7 P. M. The Meeting was fairly attended.

On the motion of Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee, seconded by Babu Ram Lal Chatterjee, Babu Kali Charn Chakerborty was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to deliver his lecture.

The learned Swamiji delivered his lecture for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, Yogis should always be truthful. The Veda and the command of God are just. The Upanisads insist upon speaking the truth. Vedabyas has written in his Mahabharat that truth should always be maintained. Manu has also written in his works that, truth always imparts pleasure in the heart of man. You should always speak kind words to others. If you call a blind man blind, he becomes sorry. But, if you tell him what has become of his eye-sight, he is not dissatisfied. If you call a boy that his mother's husband is going, he becomes angry. But, if you tell him that his father is going, he is not displeased.

A disciple of a Paramhansa was accustomed to tell lies, in spite of the latter rebuking him often for his fault. One day the disciple returned home late at night, and explained his reason to the Paramhansa, thus :—that as an elephant pursued in the jungle, he got upon a tree. The elephant followed him, and climbed the same tree. He then fell from the tree and was drowned into a kuñdala. The elephant also did the same. He then escaped out of it, but, as the elephant tried to be out, his tale was so entangled that it remained there, and could not be out of it. That was the reason of his returning at night. Hearing his story, the Paramhansa told the disciple that as he was still a great liar, and could not mend his habit, so, it would not be possible for him to study the Yoga Vidya any more, and he must, therefore, go away from him.

Whoever tells an untruth, is a sinner, and whoever speaks the truth is virtuous. This is the maxim of Munis and Rishis, and they often stick to it.

Man should never steal. If he takes a thing without the permission of its owner, he is called a thief. Munis and Rishis passed their life in virtuous deeds.

Whoever can control his passions is a Brahmachari. But, it is generally said that whoever studies the Veda is a Brahmachari. That is not the case.

There are Eight kinds of Byabhhichar ; Viz :—

- (1) To hear the words of a woman.
- (2) To recollect often the image of a woman whom he saw before.
- (3) To speak in praise of woman.
- (4) To think of a woman with a bad motive.
- (5) To speak with a woman courteously.
- (6) To think of co-habiting with a woman.
- (7) To ask a woman to live with him.
- (8) To secure a woman at last.

He, who can abstain from these Eight kinds of byabhhichar, may be called a true Brahmachari. Manu wrote in his works that, whoever thinks of the passions, is subject to much sufferings at last. Suicide is a great sin. It should always be prohibited according to the Hindu, the Mahamedan, and the Christian Religion.

The Swamiji continued to say that, Bhoj Raj once went to the wilderness at the dead of night, garbed as a Hermit. He saw there four virgins, speaking to one another. One amongst them said that, those who ate fish were happy. The second said, No.—Those who drank much were happy. The third passed her opinion that those who visited concubines were happy, at last the fourth said that, those who abstained from these sins were happy. BHOJ RAJ heard their conversations privately from out side. He appeared before them, noted down their names and addresses, and went away, after writing what he had heard from them. Next day, BHOJ RAJ sent for these four virgins. They were brought in his presence. BHOJ RAJ asked them respectively, to explain how they thought that the meat-eater, the drunkard, and the whore-mongers were happy. The virgins beautifully answered his queries, gave their reasons, and then went away, rewarded.

Gambling should always also be avoided, and the passions should also be controlled. The Brahmacharies ought to look upon all men with an impartial eye, as dissensions arise by ordinary people, considering other men inferior to them.

By indulging the passions, a man looks upon a woman with a lustful eye. This should be avoided. RAVANA lost his kingdom by an undue indulgence of passions; Kreechuk lost his life by doing so. An undue indulgence of the passions leads to the use of intoxicating drugs, which weakens the mind and body. It is, therefore, condemned by the HINDUS, MAHAMEDANS and CHRISTIANS ALIKE.

It is written in the BHAGRAT GITA that GOD GAVE WINES TO ASURAS TO CAUSE THEIR DESTRUCTION, as they became vicious to men. One day, a DRUNKARD was lying in the street, a dog came, and discharged its urine upon his face. Several men were returning home at the time after hearing a lecture. They passed by him, remarking that the discourse given was sweet, to which the drunkard replied no,—it was rather saltish.

The Ignorant declare that, SRI KRISHNA was passionate as He married sixteen thousand FAIR SEX. This is not true. Those who think so, are mistaken. Because, SRI KRISHNA came to amuse himself with the company of FEMALES IN RASH LILA. He never indulged in any thing that was harmful (Cheers.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, the CHAIRMAN spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved after 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 12th September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of N. W. P. delivered his NINTH LECTURE TO THE SOCIETY ON—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Tuesday, the 29th August, 1899, at 7-30 P. M. The Meeting was fairly attended.

On the motion of Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee, seconded by Babu Rajendra Lal Sett, B. L., TRANSLATOR, HIGH COURT, Babu Nilmani Dutt, ZEMINDER, &c., was voted the Chair.

After the PROCEEDINGS OF THE LAST MEETING had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the FOUNDER AND SECRETARY TO THE SOCIETY, which were duly confirmed, the CHAIRMAN asked the lecturer to begin with his lecture.

The Swamiji dwelt upon his subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, according to Hindu Religion, Chastity is looked upon as a great virtue in females. Manu wrote in his works that a wife, who is always subject to her husband, should never be abandoned. A wife should live with her sons after the death of her husband. At infancy a girl should live at her parents.

When young, she should live with her husband. What-ever ignorant and addicted to drinking and prostitution the husband may be, he should be worshipped by the wife as an idol. Widow-marriage is not prevalent amongst the Hindus of Orthodox class. The Veda do not sanction Widow-Marriage. It prevails amongst the Brahmas, the Mahamedans, and the Christians.

There are four kinds of virtuous females mentioned in the Tulsi Ramayan, viz. :-

- (1) Those, who worship their husbands as God,
- (2) Those who look upon young men as their sons, able-bodied men as their brothers, and old men as their fathers.
- (3) Those who never look upon other men with a lustful eye.
- (4) Those who maintain chastity

In the Hindu Shastras it is written that, Arundhati, Anusua, &c., were renowned for maintaining their female-virtues. Madhab Rishi wrote :- The sun once did not rise continually for eight days, in honor of a virtuous female. At Anurisar, the leprosy of a husband was cured by the virtue of his chaste wife. As a thief gives up his profession of stealing on inflicting of a punishment, so a wife maintains chastity, on receiving instruction on Female virtue. If the Widow-Marriage system had been prevalent amongst the Hindu Society, I fear our females would become ir-religious. Widow-Marriage is prevalent in England. A woman can kill her several husbands for the sake of getting re-married. At Lahore, a wife killed her several husbands for the sake of Widow-Marriage. Girls are generally married in India at the age of Twelve, as its climate is hot, and especially because, they arrive at puberty almost at that age. The climate of England is cool, and girls of that country arrive at puberty at the age of Sixteen. If a husband marry several wives, he must have many issues. But, if a woman takes several husbands, she seldom gets any child. Husbands should always provide good food and clothing for their wives, and to impart them instructions on Female Chastity.

In a certain country a Yogi saw a girl, whose parents had recently gone on a pilgrimage. He asked her to live with him. Hearing this, the girl brought a precious diamond and gave it to the Yogi and told him to appraise it. The Yogi went to a jeweller and asked him to appraise it. The jeweller set a high price upon it. The Yogi then returned to the girl and told her the price of the diamond. The girl, after this, burnt the diamond and gave it again to the Yogi to appraise it. The Yogi went to the same jeweller and asked the price of the burnt diamond. The jeweller, after examining the diamond, returned it to the Yogi, and rebuked him for his folly. The girl, on being informed of this, explained the Yogi that if she lived with him, she would lose her virtue like the diamond, and become a laughing-stock to the world. The Yogi, after meditating this, begged her forgiveness, left the place and spent the remaining of his life in solemn prayer in wilderness.

A widow arrived at a Railway Station with a child in her arm. The station-master on seeing her, detained her in a waiting room for an immoral motive. The widow knowing this, asked the station master that as she would go to a call, of Nature so she would wish to go out once for a short time. The station master complied with her request. She then went out of the room and locked the door from outside. The station master, after a while implored the widow to open the door, else, he would kill her child. The widow replied from out side that he can do whatever he wished, but she will not open the door; and lose her virtue. A little while after a train arrived, the guard asked the widow where the station-master was. She related to him all the circumstances, and the station-master was then handed over to the Police.

A Yogi wished to see a widow at Gurdaspore. The widow, after being informed of his motive, told him to see her another day, when she took physic, and cut a part of her body. The Yogi, on seeing her next day, could not recognize her. He asked the woman where the widow was, whom he saw before? The woman replied that she was the same widow. The widow, thus expostulated the Yogi, who was much ashamed. He asked her forgiveness, and then went away to wilderness for prayers for the remainder of his days.

Hindu ladies are most virtuous. The custom of a widow, dying with the last remains of her husband, still exists in Nepal.

The Swamiji said that, he had given several examples and hoped that the audience would much be profited by them. He wished that both men and women would learn to lead Religious lives for their own good. (Cheers).

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting came to a close after 9 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 7th September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of N. W. P. delivered his Tenth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on Wednesday, the 30th August, 1899, at 7-30 P.M. The Meeting was largely attended.

Sanctity and knowledge:

On the motion of Babu Madhab Krishna Bysack, seconded by Babu Harendra Kumar Bose, Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee was voted to the Chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the learned SWAMIJI to begin with his lecture.

The Venerable speaker dwelt upon the subject for nearly three hours, in the course of which he said that, Sanctity is holiness. A Holy person always speaks the truth. He, who bathes in the holy River Ganges and worships there every morning, he who keeps his body clean, he, who never takes intoxicated food, he, who does not talk in vain, and he, who always lives on vegetable is a sacred person. He, who does not keep his body clean, and, bathes daily, becomes lazy and sickly. He seldom enjoys peace of mind, and thereby unable to judge what is right and what is wrong. But a sick person should not bathe. Man should avoid anger, jealousy, insincerity and dishonesty. Contentment consists in avoiding evil acts and performing good deeds. It is written in the Hindu Shastras that he, who does good to others always lives happily. A vacant mind has no inclination. By the force of man's will, a lion may easily kill an elephant. Basistha Rishi remarked Rajah Ram Chandra that he, who had no strong will, could never prosper in any business. By the force of strong will a man can do much. A knowledge of the Yoga can be attained by strong inclination. Hermits should always remain contented. They should extract honesty from dishonesty, as the geese drink milk and leave the water aside.

True knowledge cannot be attained by simply speaking different languages. It consists in the attainment of wisdom. Once, the primary Sanskrit language was prevalent in the world. Other languages were born after it, as their root can be traced in the Sanskrit, which is the mother of all the languages. From the Sanskrit, A is derived A; from व+इ is derived B; from त+इ is derived C; from ड+इ is derived D; and so on. From the Sanskrit, अ+न+म is derived Alpha; from the Sanskrit ब+अ is derived Ba, and so on. I have thus illustrated the root to which the English and Urdu languages derived their origin. Unless you know Foreign languages as well as Sanskrit, you will not be able to understand how the former are derived from the latter. It is written in Patanjali, by Mahabhasakar Rishi that every man should know at least several languages, and impart a knowledge of them to his children.

In every town and village there ought, at least, to be a school for the study of Sanskrit, Urdu and English. Because, by so doing, the people will be able to acquire true knowledge, and thereby perform good deeds. Ignorant is the Mother of all Vices. By the power of knowledge, the English have constructed engines and machineries telegraphs and electricities, and many such wonderful things. The poor is known by his relatives only, the rich is honored by his zemindaries, the King, in his own kingdom, but the wise are honored throughout the world. For these reasons, the superiority of knowledge is acknowledged every where. Those, who do not educate their children from infancy, are considered to be their enemies after wards.

Manu wrote in his SANHITA that the GIFT OF TRUE KNOWLEDGE is superior to all other GIFTS in the world.

SANKARACHARYYA, VEDABYAS, GOUTAMA, PATANJAL, MANU, &c., were very pious and educated Rishis. They are still respected in every civilized country.

Manu wrote that neither longevity, grey hair, nor wealth makes a man great. True greatness consists in the ATTAINMENT OF KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM. Knowledge often protects a man from danger like his parents. Knowledge can neither be stolen like wealth, nor does it decrease by gifts to others. It goes on increasing the more and more as man imparts it to his fellow-brethren (Cheers).

After the learned Swamiji had concluded his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved after 10-15 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, the Hindu Patriot, 14th September, 1899.)

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi delivered his Eleventh lecture on—at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on Thursday, the 31st August, 1899, at 7-15 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c.

The Devotion to God :

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Swamiji to deliver his lecture.

The venerable Swamiji spoke on his Subject for more than two hours, in the course of which he said that, a man can obtain Salvation, by his sincerely worshipping God at least once in a day. Rig Veda says that, by so doing, his heart becomes purer day by day, and finally it will turn out to be a pious man.

It is distinctly written in the Shyam Veda that, when Indra became proud, after defeating the Asuras in great battle, God, in disguise, appeared before him in the form of a man with four hands to destroy his pride.

Rajah Indra could not, at first recognize Him. So, he commanded Air to ask him whereabouts. The Air obeyed him and went to God. God asked him, who he was?—The Air replied, he was the God of Air. God said, what power he possessed?—The latter replied that, in his way, everything flew away. God gave a bit of straw and asked him to show his power. The Air failed in his utmost attempt, and thereby being much ashamed, went back to RAJAH Indra and told him what had happened. Indra sent the God of Fire to God, who asked him, who he was, and what power he possessed?—He replied that he was the God of Fire, and his duty was to consume every thing before him to ashes. God gave him the same bit of straw and commanded him to reduce it to ashes. The latter failed in his utmost attempt, and being ashamed, returned to Rajah Indra.

So, RAJAH Indra commanded his other gods one after the other to go to God, but, all having failed to carry out the latter's command, went back to Rajah Indra with shame.

Indra on seeing that, at last himself went to God, who then suddenly disappeared. Rajah Indra was much grieved at this. A voice from the Heavens then suddenly told Rajah Indra that as he had become proud of his might, so, God appeared before him and destroyed his vanity. Indra, on hearing this, gave up his pride from that day. (Cheers)

By this, it appears, that God incarnates Himself, when necessary. God has His own image inside the Sun, where He is worshipped. By worshipping this Image, man also attains his Salvation.

Without a name, nothing can be fixed in this world. As a child becomes a favorite with his father, by constantly calling his name, so, when God is solemnly worshipped, man attains His blessings. God incarnates Himself to protect His sons. When the world was full of sins, the RISHIS and MUNIS began to sing His praise constantly, and at last God incarnated Himself in the image of SRI RAM CHANDRA to rid the world of its sins. (CHEERS.)

Ajamil was a great sinner. He never worshipped God. He had a wife of whom a son was born. A Paravahansa kept the name of the child Naraiyan. Ajamil often called his son by this name, and what the result was?—He at last attained his Salvation and went into the heaven, by often calling his son—Naraiyan. (Cheers.)

After the Swamiji had resumed his seat, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved after 9-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sanyasi of the N. W. P. delivered his Twelfth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Friday, the 1st September, 1899, at 7-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to begin. The Swamiji spoke on the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, by the performance of Yoga, the Soul becomes purified. It is written in the Atharva Veda that, our senses can be governed by Yoga. The senses are divided into two parts; Viz:—

(1) REASON and (2) EXTERNAL SENSES.

(1) REASON leads over the following five senses, Viz:—

(1) Ear, (2) Eye, (3) Tongue, (4) Nose, and (5) Touch.

(2) The EXTERNAL SENSES are hands, legs, &c.

YOGI should subdue THEIR EXTERNAL SENSES, because, these bring all evil passions.

Men are enamoured of the world by objects around them, and the result is that, they are destroyed in the end!

Bees are enamoured of the honey of the different flowers, which at last kill them.

Men become voluptuous by the charming objects, which they see around them. The YOGI fix their attention upon the Atman, on which they are seated, so as to settle their minds. This is called YOGASAN.

There are several kinds of Atman; Viz:—PADYASAN, YOGYASAN, etc. (CHEERS.)

After the SWAMIJI had finished his speech, the CHAIRMAN spoke a few words, and thanked the learned lecturer.

The Meeting separated after 6 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, SWAMI Ala Ram Sagar SANYASI of the N. W. P. delivered his THIRTEENTH LECTURE to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on Saturday, the 2nd September, 1899, at 7 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, ZEMINDAR, &c. The MEETING was largely attended.

After the PROCEEDINGS OF THE LAST MEETING had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, THE FOUNDER AND SECRETARY TO THE SOCIETY, which were duly confirmed, the CHAIRMAN asked the lecturer to begin with his lecture.

The SWAMIJI dwelt upon his SUBJECT for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, according to the HINDU SHASTRAS, a person is born again after his death, and reaps the fruits of the acts of his past life, (i.e.), if he does GOOD ACTS in his present life, he will be born with a silver-spoon in his mouth in his SECOND BIRTH after his death, and if he does EVIL ACTS, he will suffer great distress in the end, and, also in his next life. He had seen an insect with several feet. He placed it on a stone, and he watched it in his own eyes that, it had THREE BIRTHS in the course of a week, after which, he saw it flew away towards the sky. The body of the deceased, after its SECOND BIRTH, was found on the stone, and so of the THIRD BIRTH also.

According to the VEDA, the wise and the religious are not born again in this world, but, they go and remain in heaven. The sinners are born again and again to reap the fruits of their past crimes. They begin to repent for their past evil deeds, but, Alas! it is then, of no avail!

According to the same Vedantic Tenet, the relatives of a deceased person should observe annually the performance of sraddh ceremony, for the good of the deceased in his next life. This is evidently supported. Some say that, the deceased person can not know his relatives after his death. This is absurd. The relation between father and son continues to exist, after the death of the former. For this reason, the Hindus annually perform the sraddh ceremonies of their deceased relatives. A son should duly perform the Annual sraddh ceremony of his deceased parents. The image of the father is seen by his son in his dream, which means that, the father appears himself before his loving son from time to time.

Some say that, when a person eats, the hunger of his relative is not appeased. They are mistaken in thinking so. Because, when a son eats, his mother is quite satisfied. When a wife eats, the hunger of the infant in her womb is appeased.

Five years ago, there was a great conference at Lahore, on —the Necessity of Sraddh Ceremony. The arguments were written, and papers were submitted to Professor Max Muller for his opinion.

That eminent linguist replied that, in the Rig Veda, there are arguments in support of Sraddh ceremony, which are reasonable, and cannot be refused.

Manu says, it is written in the Bhaghat Gita that, a son, who does not perform the annual sraddh ceremony of his deceased forefathers, goes at last to hell.

In the CHRISTIAN & Mahamedan Religions, the necessity of distributing alms in the names of deceased persons is insisted upon.

As the necessity of performing the Annual sraddh ceremony, tarpan and distributing alms, etc., in the names of deceased persons, sufficient illustrations were given in the Veda. (CHEERS.)

After the learned Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting terminated after 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the North-Western Provinces delivered his Fourteenth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nimitola Street, on the 3rd September, 1899, at 7-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to begin with his lecture.

The lecturer spoke on his subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, God was present every where and He heard every thing that was passing around Him in this world.

We cannot conceal anything from the sight of God. He sees all our actions and scans our heart. He is always just, but His justice is always mingled with mercy. He is fair and impartial. He never makes any mistake. One bench of our judges can convict, and another bench of the same court can let off one and the same criminal. God's ways are mysterious, but His justice is always un-mistakable. Although, we cannot see God, in our naked eyes, yet we can see His actions, throughout the universe. He made the Sun to shine. He made the Moon to give us her soothing light. He made the wind to blow. He made the cloud to give us rain. He made the tree to grow flowers, and to give us delicious fruits for our daily food. He sows the corn with His own hands, through the farmer in the field, and supplies us with the staff of life.

The heading of my lecture pre-supposes that, I should speak something of Man. I have already said what I had to say of God, and His works. If I were to expatiate about His works, that would fill a column, and what I would say would be endless.

God is infinite in wisdom, in mercy and in power. These three attributes cover every thing that we can say of God. Now then what is Man?—Man is a finite being. He cannot do any thing of his own will. He is solely dependent upon God for every thing that he does. Man is weak. God is strong. Man is always erring. But God never makes any mistake. Man is im-perfect, but, God is perfect. Perfection means power,—full power,—absolute power. The cyclone can over-turn everything. It can weed out large trees, which are of centuries old, in a moment. God's power and command can alone stop the cyclone. Earth-quakes can shake the foundation of our houses, bring them down in a trice and break them to pieces. We are helpless, and powerless. We cannot do anything without the help of God. We are but men—puny creatures—frail beings—mortals—subject to death at every moment of our life. It is God, who protects us. We must, therefore, depend upon God for everything and be prayerful unto Him, and abide by His will. God's will must be done on earth, as it is in Heaven. That ought to be our Motto and we can then make no mistake, and suffer no misery. (CHEERS).

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the CHAIRMAN spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N. W. P. delivered his Fifteenth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on Monday, the 4th September, 1899, at 7-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee.

The effects of studying the Veda :—

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the lecturer to deliver his lecture.

The Venerable Swamiji dwelt upon his subject for about an hour, in the course of which he said that, by studying the Veda, we can comprehend God. The SWAMIJI then illustrated his subject by an example. He said that :—

One day a Paramhansa was reciting the texts of the Veda before a large concourse of people. A lad of twelve summers happened to be there. The Paramhansa, in the course of his speech, addressed the assembly that, each word of the Veda was worth a lac of Rupees. On hearing this, the lad went to a smith next morning and asked him to sharpen his knife. The smith demanded one pice for his labor. The lad said that, he would recite a few Shlokas of the Veda, the worth of a word of which is One lac of Rupees. The smith laughed at this and drove the lad away from his shop. The lad then returned to the Paramhansa and stated to him the dealings of the smith.

The Paramhansa directed him to go to his King, who appreciated the true value of the Veda. The lad did so, and recited a few Shlokas of the Veda to him. The King was so much pleased with the lad that, he rewarded him with five valuable diamonds. The lad received the diamonds and came back to the Paramhansa and narrated him the circumstances.

The Paramhansa ordered the lad to go to the market, and buy some vegetables with one piece of the said diamond. The lad complied with his request. He went to the market and bought some vegetables from a vendor. The vendor having asked the price of the vegetables from him, the lad offered him one piece of the said diamond.

The foolish vendor, not knowing the real value of the precious diamond, rebuked the lad for his folly, and drove him away from his shop. So, the lad wept bitterly. He at last returned to the Paramhansa and stated to him what the vendor did.

The Paramhansa, on hearing him, sent the lad to a Jeweller, with one piece of the said diamond, and instructed him to sell that to the Jeweller, and to take the price from him in lieu of the diamond. The lad did so. The Jeweller, on seeing the diamond, offered the lad five hundred Rupees for the same. The lad having agreed to that, the Jeweller paid him the price. The lad, after taking the money, went back cheerfully to Paramhansa.

The Paramhansa then told the lad that, as the Jeweller was fully aware of the value of the diamond, he had bought that easily. In like manner, a man of real intelligence like the King can know the value of the Veda. (CHEERS).

Whoever hears the Veda, should know its merit. Every one wishes to be happy. By studying the Veda, a man can live in peace and contentment, and thereby he becomes happy. Man attains his salvation by studying the Veda. (CHEERS).

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting broke up after 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N. W. P. delivered his Sixteenth lecture to the Society on—at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on Tuesday, the 5th September, 1899, at 7-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, &c.

This being the last lecture of the Swamiji, the Meeting was densely crowded.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the SWAMIJI to begin with his lecture—

The Venerable Swamiji dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, during which, he was frequently applauded. He said that, it is written in the Puran that, those, who perform Yogna, (oblique ceremonies), at their dwelling houses, distribute alms, feed the poor, and make presents to Brahmins, are loved by God, and at last go to heaven. Those, who perform religious deeds, also, attain God. Mann wrote in his Sanhita that, every man should study his own Shastras, so as to sharpen his intellect.

It is also written in the Veda that, the palm must be given to superior intelligence. No person can attain God, unless he acquires high wisdom, and fully cultivate his reason. By keeping an eye constantly over wealth and the riches of the world, no one can be happy and free from care and anxiety. We should, therefore, give up covetousness entirely from our heart, and pray to God, at least, once a day.

The wise abandon false arguments. To be pious, we should cultivate Friendship with the learned and the religious sages. Rishis and Munis of old declared that there are several methods of attaining Salvation.

But we should particularly observe the following ; Viz :—

- (1).—We should try to acquire a knowledge of Self.
- (2).—We should gain a knowledge of the world.
- (3).—We should learn to subjugate our worldly desires.
- (4).—We should keep our passions entirely under our control.

There are two sorts of creatures in this world ; Viz :—

- (1).—Rational.
- (2).—Ir-rational.

(1).—Rational creatures are human beings possessed of intellectual faculties, reason, understanding, senses, &c.

(2).—Ir-rational creatures are deaf and dumb animals, possessed of senses only.

Whether the dumb animals are endowed with any intellect is questionable, which cannot be decided to the satisfaction of all. Some people argue that a dog knows his own master, and response to his call. How is it then that the dog can show the symptom of possessing something, which enables him to know his master?

In this way, it is argued that, an animal possesses something much superior to the senses,—we mean sense of taste, sight, hearing, &c.

Rational creatures can alone hope to obtain Salvation, by leading lives of self-obtigation, by making several self-sacrifices, by rigidly leading virtuous lives, and by devoting themselves to the service of God, and their fellow-creatures.

The learned SWAMIJI also illustrated that by several illustrations, which greatly pleased the audience.

After the SWAMIJI had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved after 9 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on the 10th September, 1899, at 6 P. M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Among those present were, Pandit Amulya Charn Dass, Pandit Jagadish Chandra Kabya Venada, Babu Hera Lall Mukerjee, Babu Hari Charn Bose, Babu Bemala Charn Chakraborty, Babu Avinash Chandra Banerjee, Babu Kumad Kanta Banerjee, Babu Tarak Nath Chakraborty, Babu Ram Krishna Chatterjee, Babu Naraiyan Chandra Haldar, Babu Nut Bahari Mazumdar, Babu Chander Kumar Banerjee, Babu Tarini Charn Guha, Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, Babu Nalmami Bysak, Babu Kali Charn Mitra, Babu Madhav Chandra Bysak, and others.

On the motion of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar &c., seconded by Pandit Jai Chandra Sidhanta Bhushan, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N. W. P. was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the Venerable Pandit Krishna Dass Vedanta Rishi of KALIGHAT to deliver his First lecture to the Society on—

Devotion and Religion :—

The learned Pandit dwelt upon his subject for more than one hour, in the course of which he said that, we are Aryans. We prove every thing by what is laid down in our Shastras. What we see, we do not forget that soon. If we see a glass before us, we call that the glass exists. Our knowledge of things is derived from the following Senses ; Viz. :—

- (1) The eye.
- (2) The ear.
- (3) The nose.
- (4) The tongue.
- (5) The touch.

The Aryans declare that, what we see in our naked eyes, is not always the exact thing. As we sometimes mistake a piece of rope for a Serpent, as we consider a mirage to be an ocean, so, the present and the future state of existence sometimes becomes objects of delusion. Sometimes, we commit such blunders that, instead of going to the East, we go to the West.

The Aryans do not always believe what they see. We can know a Gentleman by seeing his legs, but a farmer, by seeing his body. So, the object is different from the person, who sees it.

An object of enjoyment is different from the person, who enjoys it. The body is an object, which we see. A person, who sees it, is different from the body itself. What we see, becomes an object of thought. A vision is deception, therefore, we cannot think of it properly. What we cannot see with our naked eyes, needs the proof of the Shastras. What is contained in the Shastras cannot be known in any other way, except by a reference to the Shastras itself. The SHASTRAS is true. We have no right to violate its TEACHINGS. The sayings of the learned should always command respect. Sankhya, Naya, and all other HINDU PHILOSOPHY, were written according to the direction contained in the Vedas. There can be no mistake in the interpretation of the Vedas and other Shastras.

Without Devotion, we can seldom acquire a knowledge of the Soul. This is the reason why the SHASTRAS is universally acknowledged to be infallible, and why its tenets are universally regarded. If, after studying the Shastras, a person does not obey its TEACHINGS, all his knowledge then become fruitless. The Soul always hankers after a knowledge of Spiritual wisdom.

If we study the Vedas, with all our hearts, we can acquire true wisdom.

A bird lays eggs, it hatches upon them. When the young ones begin to have feathers, they fly from their parents for ever, and never return. Similarly, the approach of death takes away from man all the objects, which he had before that time enjoyed as his own. In the purity of character consists Real virtue. Without Religion, a person can hardly acquire True Reason and Faith. (CHEERS.)

By practicing the Yoga, a person becomes virtuous. Patanjali Rishi wrote in his work that, by Devotion to God, man can only be saved. If we can resign ourselves to God entirely, then, we can hope to be called Devotees. If we leave every thing to the will of God, all the acts that we then perform, would be acknowledged to be due to His goodness.

We are surrounded in all sides with temptations in this world. We should not be led away by them. Let us love God. Let us worship Him. Let us resign ourselves entirely to His will, and we shall then be blessed for ever. No care and no anxiety will overtake us. We shall all be freed from every worldly desire, and thereby enjoy health of body, peace of mind, and attain everlasting happiness. (CHEERS.)

The Soul cannot live separate from God. There is no value that can be set upon the pleasure, which is derived from His company. Pralhad said that, he got more than he wanted from God Himself. When God appeared and said unto him that he can have whatever blessings he wanted, Pralhad abruptly replied as follows :—

- (1) He wanted nothing, but the blessings of His feet.
- (2) He wanted the blessings, that he would never lose sight of God.

As the Queen, in consequence of the blessings, which Her Majesty enjoys in the King's household, never desires to forsake the King, similarly, Pralhad prayed unto God that, he may be blessed with the desire of never-parting from His company.

As a wife loves her husband with all her heart, so his Soul loved to offer itself on the altar of Devotion. (CHEERS.)

When Ravana was asked why he stole Sita Devi in the disguise of a Hermit, and not as Sri Ram Chandra?—He replied that, he could not gain his object, if he had assumed the garb of the latter.

The dumb eats, but he cannot say how he relishes the thing given to him. In the same way, we cannot say by word what happiness we derive by true Devotion (CHEERS.)

After the learned Pandit had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 8-45 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nimtola Street, on Monday, the 11th September, 1899, at 6-30 P. M.

The MEETING was largely attended. Among those present were, Pandit Anuiya Charn Dev Sarma, Pandit Jagadish Chandra Kanya Venkata, Babu Hera Lal Mukerjee, Babu Kumada Kantha Banerjee, Babu Madhub Krishna Bysak, Babu Avinash Chandra Banerjee, Babu Tarak Nath Chakherberty, Babu Bemala Charn Chakherberty, Babu Nilmani Bysak, Babu Ram Krishna Chatterjee, Babu Naraiyan Chandra Haldar, Babu Nut Behari Mazumdar, Babu Chandra Kumar Banerjee, Babu Tarini Charn Guha, Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, and several others.

On the motion of Pandit Baikuntha Nath Mukerjee NYAKATNA, and seconded by Babu Avinash Chandra Mukerjee, Pandit Jai Chandra Sidhanta Bhushan of Santipur was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon the Venerable Pandit Krishna Dass Vedanta Bagis of Kalighat to deliver his Second lecture to the Society on—

Transmigration :—

The learned Pandit dwelt upon the subject for more than two hours, in the course of which he said that, although the infidels disbelieve Transmigration, yet, they believe in the next world. We will share the effects of our works in the next world, as we perform them here. We enjoy things with the help of our Senses. As the blind cannot see, the deaf cannot hear, those, who have no tongue, cannot taste, so, if there is no Transmigration, then how is it possible that we enjoy happiness, or suffer misery in this world?

In Heaven there is Eternal Happiness, and in Hell there is Misery. Nothing is Infinite. By this, we easily understand that, what is produced on earth is destructible.

Let us remember that for our sins, we will be driven to hell, and that as a reward for our virtues, we will go to heaven.

If we had no eyes, nose, ears, &c., we could not have thought of any thing in this world. In like manner, if we had no Transmigration, there would be no reward for virtue, and no punishment for Sin. This is the saying of the Aryan Sages.

We should always speak kind words and show kindness to all beings. Because, by so doing, we shall remain cheerful. Kind words make men happy.

There is no birth in heaven, but in hell. A person lives in heaven or in hell, according to his acts in life. After our death, we will enjoy for our virtue or suffer for our sin. Those, who perform Religious Acts, ascend in heaven, and, those, who lead Ir-religious lives descend to hell. The Soul can never be divided. A tree can be cut, because, it is Material. The Soul is Spiritual. It is formless. It can never be seen, and is indestructible. When we dream, we imagine the things, which we then see are as if Real. But, when, we awake, we perceive that, they were mere visions. Our body is composed of such things as smell so badly, and, so, it is difficult to approach it after our death.

When a child is born, it comes out of the womb with closed fists, which means that the world is at his command. But, when he dies, he goes out of the world with open fists, which means, that the things of this world are no longer his!

We should give up all vanities. When the eyes become still, it is clear that the person must cease to exist. He can see and feel that, he is departing from this earth to some other world. As GOLD, being mixed with borax, becomes purified on the application of quick-silver and fire, so, our Intelligence would be sharpened by constant association with good and wise men.

As the image of a person is reflected in the looking-glass, so, the whole world is reflected in the mind of man. A person, whose mind has become wedded with evil thoughts, can never give up his early tendencies of vicious habits. Every person ought to purify his mind by the help of the teachings of the Bhagbat GITA. The human body when burnt, is reduced to ashes. If, not burnt, it becomes putrid and is also covered with insects.

Man is born in this world for purposes of enjoyment. The abandonment of all worldly desires is the only true way to SALVATION. We are all enmeshed with the ties of this world. We first desire,—then act. So long as we cannot give up worldly desires, we will have to remain tied to the things of this world, and thereby cannot expect Salvation. (CHEERS.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the learned lecturer.

The Meeting, dissolved at 9-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the SOCIETY, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nimtola Street, on Saturday, the 23rd September, 1899, at 5 P. M.

The Meeting was not so largely attended as was expected before, owing to incessant rain. On the motion of Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee, and seconded by Babu Kali Charn Mitra, Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the renowned Pandit Nil Kantha Goswami of Sri Brindaban to deliver his First lecture to the Society on—

The knowledge of the Soul :—

The learned Pandit dwelt on the subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, the body and Soul are quite distinct from each other. The world consists of material and immaterial objects. The Soul of man is susceptible of continual development. Sin loses its influence by constant prayer. Repentance follows sinful acts. When a person sincerely repents for his crimes, he is forgiven by God.

A thief is sentenced to imprisonment for his correction. We turn to the Shastras for Instruction. When a child destroys a valuable thing, his parents do not chastise him, because, it did so from ignorance. But, if a grown-up boy destroys the same, his parents reprimand him for his fault.

The Laws of God are uniform. When beasts and birds snatch other's food, they are excusable. But, when a Man does so, he is seldom excused. Because, he is possessed of Reason. As the body of Man is nourished by food, so his Soul by prayer.

The trees draw sap from the earth, and thereby nourish themselves. The beasts take their food with their mouth, but a man takes his food by his hands. The Soul of man should always be kept sacred. Man should live in this world carefully, and should try to advance in knowledge and reason. When a man thinks of objects in the day, he imagines them again in his dream at night, because, his mind is then free from earthly care and anxiety, and rules supreme in the body. Thus, then, if you wish to lead a pious life, you should often avoid sin. When a child meets with danger, it cries for its parents to help him. We should, in like manner, learn to pray to God, in order to be freed from all dangers and sins. (Cheers.)

After the learned Pandit had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on Sunday, the 24th September, 1899, at 6 P. M.

The Meeting was densely crowded. Among those present were, Babu Raj Narnayan Byrak, Attorney-at-Law, Babu Manmatha Nath Ganguli of the Duff College, Kabiraj Durga Dass Gupta, Babu Manmatha Nath Paul, Babu Gour Charn Ghose, Babu Keran Chandra Dutt, Babu Bejoy Gopal Mukerjee, Babu Kali Krishna Dutt, Babu Sarat Chandra Chowdhery, Babu Manmatha Nath Mitra, Babu Hera Lal Dutt, Babu Harendra Kumar Bose, Babu Panchanand Chowdhery, Babu Sital Charn Ghosal, Babu Umesh Chandra Dutt, Babu Surendra Nath Sarkar, Babu Anantose Chowdhery, Babu Hari Doss Mullick, Babu Upendra Nath Sarkar, and several others.

On the motion of Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, and seconded by Babu Kali Charn Mitra, Dr. Kali Prasanna Ghosal was voted to the Chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the FOUNDER AND SECRETARY TO THE SOCIETY, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked SWAMI SARADANANDA, a disciple of the late SRI RAM KRISHNA PARAMHANS of Dakhineswar to deliver his FIRST LECTURE TO THE SOCIETY ON—

Vedanta and Devotion :—

The learned SWAMIJI dwelt on his SUBJECT for more than one hour. He said that, God can only be known by DEVOTION. Reason and Devotion are two different things. By Devotion, a person spends his life in prayer, singing the name of the Almighty God, and giving up all earthly pleasures and desires. Narad Muni always spent his days by singing the name of the Creator. He said that, God is FULL OF LOVE.

SANDAL MUNI says that, resignation to God is Devotion. Pralhad was an Aruler of Devotion. He also says that, if we learn to love God, as we love the world and all other earthly things, we shall be saved. We shall really grow in Reason, if we can centre all our desires on God—and God alone, as all our desires are at present centred in worldly objects.

SRI Ram Krishna Paramhansa says that, we always cry for children, for wealth, &c., but, we never cry for the Creator. Ignorant people are fond of the worldly things. If we become fond of God, we can easily attain SALVATION.

Worship God, pray unto Him, and you will then become a DEVOTEE. DEVOTION is the fruit of earnest longing after God. All worldly gains become trivial, when the doors of Heaven are thrown open to us by Devotion. We begin to act then, in accordance with the will of God. (CHEERS.)

We go as we are led by Him. Who I am?—Where I am?—In all these queries, we are led by pride. The wise declare that, Give up every thing, then you will become little in your own estimation. To day you possess power, but, tomorrow it will go away! The SOUL reigns supreme in the body. You cannot burn or destroy it, at your pleasure, because, it is indestructible. But the body is destructible.

Know your Self, and then you will be entirely free from all worldly pangs and miseries. The wise man will say that, you have conquered death. You have to scan the SOUL. But, first you should acquaint yourself with all its powers, and then you will have to judge of them. When we see people suffering from distress, we do not feel for them. But, when we ourselves are in distressed circumstances, we feel the pangs of want.

So long as I exist—the world is mine. You can train your mind in any way you like. The fire burns every thing. But, it helps us in preparing our food, and keeps us warm. If you can use your powers in all that tend to benefit mankind, you would become really great in the estimation of the world. (CHEERS.)

SRI Ram Krishna Paramhansa also said that, the teachings of all the Shastras are the same, as the cries of Jackals. Give up all your desires to God—ALL YOUR PASSIONS TO GOD—your anger—your covetousness to God—Resign your self entirely to God. The Soul possesses great power, and the body derives all its powers from the SOUL.

By Devotion, you can have faith. You can also learn to repose all your trust in God. Do not envy—and you will see God. Hear, judge for yourself, and learn to pray. The wise man says that, I am a Devotee, so, I am doing every thing. But, a TRUE DEVOTEE will say that, GOD IS DOING EVERY THING—I AM NOTHING.

If we understood each other, then the Christians would not go against the Mahamedans or the Hindu Religions, as the object of all Religious teachings is one and the same. When the world goes to sleep,—GOD IS AWAKE. It is written in the Vedas that, you should put your trust in your own faith. But, you must not slander the religion of other races. All worldly things will decay one after the other, and at last have an end! GOD only is im-mutable. He has no beginning, no decay and no end. (CHEERS.)

Never think that I am great and he is low. All this disappears in the Kingdom of God. The rich and the poor, the great and the low, the strong and the weak, all will go to one place of rest after death, and, thereby make no distinction of race, color, or creed. (CHEERS.)

After the learned SWAMIJI had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The MEETING dissolved at 8-00 P. M., after a vote of thanks to the chair.

A public MEETING, convened by the SOCIETY, was held at the premises, No. 84, Nintola Street, on Monday, the 25th September, 1899, at 7 P. M. The MEETING was fairly attended.

On the motion of Babu Chandra Kumar Mukerjee, and seconded by Babu Kali Charn Mitra, Babu Nilmani Dutt, Zemindar, was voted to the Chair.

After the PROCEEDINGS OF THE LAST MEETING had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the FOUNDER AND SECRETARY TO THE SOCIETY, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked the renowned PANDIT Atul Krishna Goswami of KHURDA to deliver his lecture on—

God and the Devotee :—

The PANDIT spoke on the SUBJECT for more than two hours, in the course of which he said that, unless a man is in need of a thing, he cannot desire. If he is asked—What he wants? He will reply either money, service, or honor. No body will say that, he wants only God. Because, every one wants happiness.

The wise man says that, there is no limit to human desires. If a man enjoys things for thousands of years, still, he will not say that, his desires have been fulfilled.

The fire will go on consuming and still it will consume. There will be no end to burning. We want such a thing to which there will be a limit—and that is ONLY GOD.

Before going to a KING'S DURBAR, we need first of an INTRODUCTION. No body can give such INTRODUCTION, unless, he is known to the King. Similarly, no body can introduce a person to God, unless he is a DEVOTEE. Before knowing God, we should first of all search for a DEVOTEE. We ought to have a TRUE DEVOTEE. Unless, a person can know a TRUE DEVOTEE he cannot approach God. So, we first need of SI to search for a TRUE DEVOTEE.

GOD said unto UDHAB that, 'if he worshipped Him, that would not suit Him'. GOD also said to ARJUNA that, He loved those, who worshipped His Devotee. In a conference with God, NARAD MUNI said that, GOD was great—But, the latter replied,—No,—he, (NARAD), was great, because, he was a DEVOTEE. Unless a person knows his own BJRU, and a TRUE DEVOTEE, he cannot have an easy access to God. (CHEERS.)

The WORSHIP OF IDOLS IS THE TRUE WAY TO GOD. Because, by worshipping the IMAGES OF IDOLS, a person can acquire a TRUE KNOWLEDGE OF THE DIVINE, and he sees that, GOD IS PRESENT IN THE IDOL. SRIMATI RADHICA represents TRUE BHAKTI (DEVOTION). If a person solemnly worships SRIMATI RADHICA, he can have easy access to SRI KRISHNA. It is written in the BHAGBAT GITA that, every person ought to look upon his fellow-brothers with a good eye. Those, who sit at a distance from fire, cannot warm their body. This is their own fault. So, GOD is near unto us, if we fail to realize His presence,—this is our own fault.

A person, who drinks, does not know that drinking blinds him. Similarly, we are all intoxicated with the love of wealth, love of family and children, love of worldly things and the like, and thereby do not know that we are really blind to our own good. A man, who loves his brother as himself, can feel for his brother likewise. Whatever proceeds from selfishness, cannot in the end, tend to true happiness. Because, a selfish man can never have all his desires fulfilled. If one thing is given to him, he asks for another, and so on, till there is no end to his desires.

If a person worships God with a selfish motive, his prayer is not fulfilled. Be not selfish, therefore, in all you do, and especially when you worship God, and by so doing, you will attain Him. Because, He is Omnipresent. He sees everything. He sees the innermost heart. No body can conceal any thing from His sight. Before His eyes everything is naked, and as clear as noon-day light. Nothing can be hidden from His sight. He, who tries to do so, deceive himself, and the doors of heaven are closed against him for ever (Cheers).

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer. The Meeting dissolved after 9 P. M., with votes of thanks to the chair and the lecturer.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Wednesday, the 27th September, 1899, at 5 P. M.

The Meeting was largely attended. Among those present were, Babu Surendra Nath Bose, Babu Satish Chandra Banerjee, Babu Asutose Mukerjee, Babu Surendra Kumar Rai, Babu Amulya Krishna Sen, Babu Nagendra Nath De, Babu Khagendra Bhashan Chakherberty, Babu Nani Krishna Nandi, Babu Asutose Chowdhery, Babu Sarat Chandra Chakherberty, Babu Jiban Krishna Ghose, Babu Phanindra Nath De, Babu Shyam Lal Laha, M. A., B. L., Pandit Asha Nanda Swami, and others.

On the motion of Babu Surendra Nath Bose, seconded by Babu Anukul Chandra Mitra, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Chairman, Hindu-Family Annuity Fund, was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Swami Saradananda, (who had then returned from America), to deliver his Second lecture to the Society on—

The Teachings of Bhagbat Gita :—

The learned Swamiji dwelt upon the Subject for nearly two hours, in the course of which he said that, those, who have read Bhagbat Gita,—cannot but entertain the highest respect for this Great Work. The Book is a great favourite with those, who can comprehend its teachings. He had travelled in America and in Europe, and found that Bhagbat Gita was a great favourite with the people in those countries. A person, who was travelling by the Railway, had a copy of the work in his pocket, so that, he might read it in the carriage, whilst proceeding from one place to another. The teachings, contained in it, I must confess, are superior to the teachings contained in other Religious works. I have no doubt that, as the people of the West will advance in Sanskrit learning, the Bhagbat Gita will become an Universal Bible, in course of time, and when the people of the West and the South will adopt it, as their Holy Bible, the people of India—the educated Indians, will not be slow to follow their example. (Cheers.)

The Bhagbat Gita, indeed, is one of the best books ever produced by any man in the world. In India, there are persons—especially in the Western Presidency, who do not take their morning meals, without once going through a chapter or two of this Sacred Book. He had no wish to speak in disparagement of the teachings of Avatars—Bhagbat Gita is the greatest gift of God, and it is written by our Munis and Rishis of old. This work has come down to us from generation to generation, which still cherishes a profound respect for the work. This is not a new thing to us.

Proverty, in European countries, means a villain, who can do any thing, and every thing. He will go about stealing, robbing, picking the pocket, and sometimes even grievously hurting a person, so as to earn his daily bread. The result is that, he is at last sent to prison or the work-house for correction.

Proverty in India means, a person, who will go about singing the name of God from street to street, begging for alms from door to door, in order to satisfy his hunger. This is due to the teachings of the Bhagbat Gita. The dignity of those teachings is universally confessed. And to that dignity, we owe the dignity of our countrymen, both rich and poor, high and low. That dignity is derived from the teachings of Sri Krishna, who was the greatest of all Incarnations. (Cheers.)

In the Bhagbat Gita are recorded the conversations between Sri Krishna and Sri Arjuna, which display wonderful tact on the part of the former, in giving directions to the latter, how to conduct the Wars of Kurukhetra. In the course of that conversation, Sri Krishna urges upon Sri Arjuna to be strong in his mind, in order to be victorious. When Sri Krishna saw persons arrayed on both sides in the battle-field were his own kinsmen, and he thought of the blood, which must be shed, in order to bring the Great War to a successful issue, he did not shrink from the duty, which he had to perform in taking the side of Sri Arjuna. In the great battle-field, there was a mighty display of arms and heroism on both sides. What a contrast does the book present to us, when, in the end, Sri Krishna urges upon Sri Arjuna to give up every thing to abandon all sacrifices and ceremonies, and thereby to believe in Him only.

When we go to the other Religions, we find it recorded in the Bible that, Christ was crucified. In this, there was an object to be gained, and Christ was incarnate for the fulfilment of that object. He might have brought all the Angels from Heaven, all the forces of his father, if he liked, in order to avoid the disgrace of crucifixion. But—No!—He came to the world, in order to obey the command of His Father, to sacrifice His life for the benefit of the human race.

In like manner, when we come to the teachings of Bhagbat Gita, we find them to be not only beautiful, but wonderful! Sri Krishna tells his disciples to learn to depend upon Him, (i. e.) to depend upon God, so that, he might obtain eternal bliss. There is great harmony in all the teachings of the Bhagbat Gita. There is Philosophy, here is Religion, and there is every thing, which you cannot find elsewhere.

Be wise, love God above all things, and you will be able to control your evil passions, and then, all the wickedness, that reigns in this world, will cease to exist. Seek truth, and you will find it. (Cheers.)

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman asked the audience, whether they had any remarks to make, or any questions to ask on the subject of the lecture. But, none having responded to the call, he proposed a vote of thanks to the learned Swami Saradananda, in a few well-chosen words, for the very excellent discourse, which they had heard that evening.

He continued that, the rapt attention with which they heard the lecture, fully indicated that, they appreciated all that the learned Swamiji had said. There was great truth in the saying that one should first learn to obey, before he can expect to command. Sri Krishna, in his teachings, had fully impressed this upon Sri Arjuna. To the teachings of Sri Krishna, we are indebted for the beautiful doctrines contained in the Bhagbat Gita. All those, who have read the Bhagbat Gita, cannot but entertain the highest respect for its teachings. Those teachings are intended to benefit the human race.

in all the departments of life. Whether in Politics, or in Tactics of War, or, in imparting lessons on Philosophy and Religion, Sri Krishna was, no doubt, the greatest of the great; not only the greatest teacher of his own age,—but of all ages. Sri Krishna is believed to be an incarnation of the Deity. So is Jesus of Nazareth, and other great and inspired men, who were born in different ages and in different countries. (Cheers.)

The learned lecturer has told us that Sri Krishna was the greatest of all incarnations. Whether great or small, all the incarnations of the world have had great objects in view. They had come down to us to fulfil the commands of their father in heaven! They had come and fulfilled the mission, which they were born to fulfil, and they departed from this world, leaving landmarks of their greatness, which can bear no comparison. (Cheers.)

The lecturer, before us, is a disciple of the Great Sri Ram Krishna Paramahansa of Dakshineswar. He fitly represented his Great Master. I remember seeing the Paramahansa at Dakshineswar, where I paid frequent visits to him, in company with the late Babu Keshub Chandra Sen and I must confess that, whilst the Paramahansa and Mr. Sen conversed with each other on Religious topics, the conversation was highly instructive and edifying. (Cheers.)

I will not detain you long. I have no doubt that you will carry home with you and recollect all that the learned Swamiji has said, and benefit by them. If you go home and treasure-up in your mind all that you have heard this evening, and endeavour to regulate your lives according to the teachings, which have been inculcated to us, I would consider that the labors of the learned Swamiji have not been fruitless. (Cheers.)

The vote of the thanks, proposed by the Chairman, was carried with acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair, which was also carried by acclamation.

The Forty-eighth public Meeting for the Session 1899, of the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Keshub Academy, No. 65, Beadon Street, on Saturday, the 30th September, 1899, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Sarat Chandra Chakraberty, B. A.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Kherad Chandra Mitra to deliver his First lecture to the Society on—

The Necessity of Religion :—

The speaker dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, we should first of all know, what Religion is, and what is its necessity. By its force, we can raise ourselves to the highest ideal. All social organisations have Religion for their basis. The greatest impulse is brought into play by its cohesive force. There are two theories of Religion; Viz:—

(1) Spirit.

(2) Evolution.

Let us see where is the beginning of Religion. In ancient times, men worshipped Nature. In Rig Veda, they personified the Sun, the Moon, the Ocean, the Hurricane, &c. They tried to understand the cause of every Natural Phenomenon.

When we dream, our body becomes inactive, but the mind remains active. At the time of death, though the body is inactive, the mind is not destroyed. In this manner, we get the idea of Immortality.

Religion is brought into light through Inspiration. Not only our Vedic Religion, but every other Religion of the world has its origin in Inspiration.

As our ancient Manis and Rishis brought the Vedas before us, so the Great Reformers Buddha, after having practised samadhi for a long time under a tree, discovered the Truths of Buddhism. The mind, when inspired, transcends the limitation of the senses.

Every human being has an ideal of infinite Power. Every human being has an ideal of infinite pleasure. But to manifest the infinite, through the finite, is impossible. For the body is limited, and the Senses are also limited. We can never go beyond that limit. Therefore, the renunciation of individualism is necessary. Not I—But Thou.—Not self—But Non-self. This is the Motto of the highest state. When we renounce the idea of Self, a light comes to us from the Infinite.

The passions always assume various aspects in our mental world, as the clouds causing different phenomena in the material world. The mainspring of the strength of every race lies in its Spirituality. The bond of Religion is potent. The Great Saint Sri Ram Krishna Paramahansa of Dakshineswar taught men to abandon Women and Money. We are all slaves to women and wealth, and through these, we cannot form any idea of Religion. One servant cannot serve two masters. To serve Mammam and God, at the same time, is impossible. Therefore, we should try to establish the kingdom of Spirituality in place of Materialism. (Cheers.)

After the speaker had finished his speech, the Chairman, after thanking the lecturer, said that, the most important of all the problems of life was—dissolution of Self. Man's life gradually expands and evolutionises with the process of the suns to come face to face with that problem. Birth must end in death, and happiness in sorrow. If they are all relative, and there is no gain-saying, that every thing in this world is governed by the law of relativity. People grow experienced day by day with the effects of these relative varieties. Religion begins then and then only. The material world re-acts on the mental and helps the unfolding of the inner regions of our hearts. Thus, comes the Age of Philosophy, Ethics, Psychology and Religion. Religion is, therefore, the necessary product, the inevitable result of the gradual evolution of the mental world.

We can trace the same evolution in the Vedas too. The Rishis, in the Samhita-path, pour out their hearts in spontaneous outburst to the praise of different Deities. Religion really begins then and ends in the ultimate unity of the pervading Soul. One, with a grain of Reason, can never remain satisfied with the relative events of precarious life. He is forced by Reason, and the inner promptings of the heart to seek for something higher more permanent than this gross material world. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair,

As announced in the Hindu Patriot, the Forty-ninth public Meeting, for the Session 1899 of the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Seal's Free College, No. 8, Halliday Street, on Thursday, the 5th October, 1899, at 4-30 P. M.

On the motion of Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, seconded by Babu Gopal Chandra Bose, Babu Shyam Lal Laha, M. A., B. L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, was voted to the chair.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Babu Kherad Chandra Mitra to deliver his Second lecture to the Society on—

Hinduism and Pantheism :—

The speaker dwelt upon the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, the first objection, which has been raised against the pantheistic tendency of Religion, is that, it is inconsistent with the idea of a personal God, which is one of the greatest necessities of our Spiritual Instincts. We seek a nearer God, in whom the Spirit may live and move and have its being. Is the tendency weakness?—As long as we are not robbed of our Free will, as long as our right of choice is drowned in the universal gulf of God's Omnipresence, so long Pantheism cannot be objected to.

The next objection is that, Pantheism undermines Morals. There is a limit in Man's independent power, and there is a limitation of circumstances, which he can never surmount. At the same time, man can preserve a degree of Free-will in himself, which is sufficient for up-holding the Moral Law. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting for some time.

The Meeting then dissolved at 6-30 P. M., with votes of thanks to the Chair and to the lecturer.

As announced in the local papers, a very crowded Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the premises, No 84, Nimtola Street, on the 8th October, 1899, at 5 P. M.

The Proceedings of the Meeting were opened with a few Bengali songs sung by the Kakurgachi Yozadyan Sankirtan Party.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, Babu Mana Mahan Mitra, a disciple of the late renowned Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa of Dakshinwar, delivered a heart-burning lecture on :—

Yuga Dharma or Religion of the Age :—

The learned speaker dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, the state of our Modern Society was deplorable. The people are drunk with the wine of carnality and dollen worship. Few cultivate Religion with sincerity and open-heartedness. The foreign rule and the consequent changes brought upon our social, educational and professional life, leave but little time and opportunity to ponder over the higher and the more important problem of life, the solution of Self.

The struggle for existence is gradually making us more material and objective, more attuned to vice and insincerity, and more slavish and dependant. So, a very few of us can have leisure to lead an Ideal Religious life, as prescribed by the Hindu Shastras. Renunciation, which is the Key-note of Religious realisation, has almost become a dead-dorm now-a-days. So, in the dis-organised Hindu Society, the people are sinking into the sloughs of sensuality, insincerity, and dishonesty.

Most of those, who have time to cultivate Religion, are insincere and hypocrites. Perhaps, many of them, living the rough profligate life at first, suddenly turn to be religious teachers, looking solemn and wearing the holy garb of Sanyasis. Perhaps, a few of them, by the practice of some sort of Yoga, acquire some psychic powers, and think them to be the ultimate reward of religion and remain quite contented with them. The ordinary run of people in India, who have long-lost the tree, Ideal of our Religion, are deluded by those professional Gurus, and, perhaps, begin to practice some sort of religion merging either on insanity or fanaticism.

Ignorance and insincerity are reigning supreme. The Vedic, the Philosophic, the Pauranic, the Tantric Religions, and even the most beautiful and beneficent Religion of the Prophet of Niddea, have been so deteriorated and demoralised that, the time is ripe for the amelioration, if not, for the destruction of them all. The basis of all Religions,—even that of Christianity and Mahomedanism, has been shaken to its foundation, either by insincerity, or, by the worship of Money. So that, there has been a most incubant necessity for the advent of the God-head here below.

In the Divine songs of the Gita, Sri Krishna promised to come down here for the maintenance of Religion. His promise has been fulfilled. If we study Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa's unique-life, we shall see in it, the fulfilment of that Divine promise.

All the Religions of the world have got equal impetus from his Divine-life. He, by practicing all the Religious forms of worship, at last came to the conclusion that, things were all true. But, he has in culcated that, the same truth can only be realised by renunciation of women and wealth. Different Religions are but different types of the same thing, suited to the different peoples of our Society. In Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa is the most beautiful reconciliation of all Religion, and, therefore, his Religion of our Age, or, in other word, it is the Yuga Dharma. (Cheers.)

After the speaker had finished his speech, several songs were sung by the Kakurgachi Yozadyan Sankirtan Party.

The Meeting dissolved after 7 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

As announced in the local papers, a large and enthusiastic public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held with great elation, at Babu Ram Lal Sett's Thakerbhari, situated at No 5, Banstola Street, Burra Bazar, on Monday, the 13th November, 1899, after 7 P.M.

The Meeting was very largely attended. Upwards of Two thousand gentlemen assembled at the Meeting, and almost all the leading Marwaris of Burra Bazar were present.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, Pandit Din doyal, General Secretary of the Bharat Dharma Mahamandal, delivered his First lecture to the Society on—

The Creation of the world :—

The learned Pandit spoke on the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, in the beginning, God only existed. He thought of becoming Many. Out of the Sky—the Air was produced, Out of the Air, the Fire was produced, and out of the Fire, the Water was produced, and so on. It is a well-known fact that every thing produced in this world is destructible. The world was created out of atoms collected together.

According to the Nya-Philosophy, the world owes its existence to extraordinary causes. God's will produced the Creation. According to Sankhya-Philosophy, the world is the work of Nature. A child, when conceived, is the off-spring of God. God protects the child in the mother's womb. He nourishes it, till it is ushered into existence.

The learned Pandit then dwelt upon the different systems of Hindu-Philosophy, produced at different times. Those systems were very abstruse in themselves. They are not easily comprehensible to the common mind.

The large audience, which consisted of learned Pandits, brought up in different systems of Philosophy in Western India, were much pleased with all that the learned Pandit had said. He seemed to have a grasp over his subject, which few individuals in the present time could be expected to possess. The lecturer was, however, quite at home and his delivery was very lucid to those, who understood the same.

Pandit Madhav Prasad also spoke on the subject for nearly half an hour, and Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N. W. P. delivered an impressive address for nearly an hour. He was cheered many times, and the audience was much pleased with all the speeches.

The Meeting dissolved after 10 P. M.
(Vis. the Englishman, and the Hindu Patriot, 15th and the Dinik Chaudrika, 16th November, 1899, respectively).

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the spacious compound of the Thakerbhari of Babu Ram Lal Sett, situated at No. 5, Banstola Street, Burra Bazar, on Tuesday, the 14th November, 1899, after 7 P. M.

There was a large gathering of the leading Marwaris of Burra Bazar and other places. Upwards of Fifteen hundred gentlemen assembled to hear the Second lecture of Pandit Din doyal, General Secretary of the Bharat Dharma Mahamandal on—

The Relation between Soul and God :—

Before the learned Pandit commenced his lecture, Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi, of the N. W. P. addressed the Meeting for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, in the Vedanta, it is distinctly written that, the observer and the observed are quite distinct from one another. The observer sees, and the object observed is seen. The observer is animate, and the observed is inanimate. The animate being is of one kind, and the inanimate are of several kinds. The animate is indestructible and the inanimate is destructible.

What we imagine in dream—is false. Such is not the relation between God-spirit and Man-spirit. A false object is indescribable. From our senses, we derive pleasures, and the love we owe to each other. God existed in all the Yugas. He existed when nothing existed. So, the relation between God and Man is that of father and son.

Some learned Pandits have declared that, they and their Creator are one and the same. There is no difference between God-spirit and Man-spirit. If a person can cultivate his Intellect to the fullest extent, and if he can become sinless, then, really there will be no difference between the Spirit of God, and that of Man. This is the reason why and idea prevails amongst Devout men, that a certain human being born in one Yuga, is Incarnate, and is different from other persons.

Some people say, such an Incarnate Being may be called God-man. He cannot be perfect himself, but, he can approach God, in all that is good and true. We cannot have true notion of God, until, we can cultivate the Spirit of Devotion, such as is calculated to enable us to see God, as we see one another. Until, we can attain perfect wisdom, we will have to perform Rites and Ceremonies, such as we observe in this world. (Cheers).

When we read the Vedanta, we derive infinite pleasure from it. There are few persons, who can approach God, by the eye of Reason. But, there are several, who can approach Him by the performance of Rites and Ceremonies, as I have already said to you.

It is written in the Yayur Veda that, those, who cannot comprehend the Spirit—that is in Him, must go to hell. It is the duty of Man to acquire a knowledge of Self. Bashista Rishi, Sankaracharyya, Sri Arjuna, Bhishnu, and others acquired a knowledge of Self, and they also lived in this world with their family and children. (Cheers).

On the Swamiji's resuming his seat, Pandit Madhav Prasad spoke on the subject for about half an hour. Pandit Din Doyal then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for about an hour.

He said that, Man's duty is, first of all, to study the Shastras himself, and then to teach it to others. Because, by so doing, he will be able to go to Heaven. The mind of Man is anxious to acquire wisdom. If we do not allow the wish to grow, we act against God's command. The Spirit is the same throughout the universe. Devotion and knowledge should go hand in hand. Unto him, who is blessed, and to him the doors of Heaven are opened, and they become easy of access.

The Meeting dissolved after 10 P. M., with votes of thanks to the learned speakers.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held, (under the patronage and presence of Rajah Sheo Bux Bogla Bahadur, late Sheriff of Calcutta), at the extensive compound of the Thakbari of Babu Ram Lal Sett, situated at, No. 5, Banstola Street, Burra Bazar, on Wednesday, the 15th November, 1899, at 7-30 P. M.

Upwards of Fifteen hundred Gentlemen were present, including the Leading Marwaris of Burra Bazar. Among others, the following Gentlemen were present:—Mahamahapadhy Pandit Govinda Shastri and Pandit Lachman Sastri, Professors of the Government Sanskrit College, Pandit Durga Persad Misra, Editor, Uchit-Pada, Pandit Hari Narayan, Pandit Sri Narayan, Pandit Keshub Persad Misra, Rai Hari Ram Goenka

Bahadur, Babu Sheo Persad Jhunjhwalwa, Babu Bal Mukund, Editor, Bharat Mitra, Babu Tula Ram Goenka, President of the Marwari Association, Babu Ranga Lal Poddar, Secretary of the Marwari Association and others.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, Pandit Madhav Persad addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He was followed by Swami Ala Ram Sagar Sanyasi of the N.-W. P., who also spoke for nearly half an hour. he said that, the English are entitled to our gratitude for the instruction that they are imparting now-a-days in our Colleges and Schools. Our young men, after acquiring knowledge, should stick to their own respective professions; Viz. :—the carpenter should hew wood and make articles of furniture for our domestic use, the weaver should weave cloth, the farmer should till the field to produce corn, and so on. (Cheers).

The Swamiji concluded by saying that, when he was at Gurudaspur, in the Panjab, he heard a European giving lecture to Hindustani Youths, saying that, they all can never expect employment after finishing their English Education in India. They should, therefore, try to improve their own professions by the help of the knowledge, they have acquired in their Colleges and Schools. This is a truism, which we must do well to bear in mind. (Cheers).

Pandit Din Doyal, General Secretary of the Bharat-Dharma Maha Mandal, who on rising, was received with deafening cheers, then delivered his Third lecture to the Society on—

The Progress of a Nation :—

He dwelt on the subject for more than an hour and a half, in the course of which he said that, if a person wish to make progress, he must, first of all, have Faith in the Religion of his Ancestors, otherwise, he can seldom expect his countrymen to make any real advance in the scale of Nations.

It is necessary that the following five things should strictly be adhered to; Viz. :—

- (1) The National language. (2) The National dress
- (3) The National food. (4) The National habit. (5) The Caste system.

You should always be un-selfish in all your actions. You should always pray to God that, He may grant you strength to observe all this.

The National language referred to is, Sanskrit and Hindi. You will learn many things by studying these two ancient languages. You should, first of all try to improve these two languages, before you have recourse to others.

The Foreign dress not only destroys our beauty, but is also very expensive. The Europeans and Foreigners never give up their National dress. It is a pity that now-a-days our young men generally use foreign dress.

The duties, you have to perform, will be, in accordance with those laid down in the Hindu-Shastras. You should protect the Brahmins,—not with a view to derive instruction from them, but, because, they are descended from Holy lineage.

You should also feed the cow, not for the milk, but because, it is a sacred animal. This is distinctly written in the Hindu-Shastras. (Cheers).

You should never take European food, because it not only destroys health, but, is also expensive. You cannot easily digest such food, as is not suitable to a hot climate.

You should love your own countrymen above all others. You should live united. Because, if you do otherwise, you will bring your own destruction soon. Where there is dissension in a family, you should bear in mind that, it will be followed by your own ruin.

Gentlemen when you get up in the morning, you must pray every day. you must love your parents, brothers and sisters dearly. The husband should love his wife, and the wife her husband too. Thus amity and peace will reign in a family. You must be humble and always endeavour to acquire knowledge. (Cheers).

The Meeting dissolved about 11 P. M. with a vote of thanks to the learned lecturers.

MAHARAJAH SURYYA KANTA ACHARYYA BAHADUR OF MYMENSINGH,
An Illustrious Patron of the Calcutta Literary Society.

Sulov Press,—Jorasanko, Calcutta,

== Preface. ==

WE think it due to His Highness Suryya Kanta Acharyya, the Maharajah Bahadur of Mymensingh, as one of the illustrious Patrons of the Calcutta Literary Society, to give a short sketch of his life. This part of the Proceedings of the Society is dedicated to His Highness in token of the Society's gratitude for his patronage, support, & interest in its affairs.

THE Maharajah Bahadur is a distinguished Scion of the well-known Acharyya Family of Muktagachha, who trace their pedigree to Udayana Acharyya Bhaduri,—the Great Commentator of Kusumanjali. His Highness is the Fifth in descent from Srikrishna Acharyya, the Founder of the Family, who obtained the Perganah Alapsing as a gift from the Emperor of Delhi.

HIS Highness was born in the year 1852. As the Maharajah Bahadur was a Minor, at the time of the demise of his illustrious mother, the ancestral property was taken over by the Court of Wards, and the young Zemindar was sent to the Calcutta Wards' Institution for his Education.

THE Maharajah Bahadur was married to Sreemati Raj Rajeswrai Devi during his Minority. But, unfortunately, the Maharani Sahiba died within a few years of their marriage, in 1292, B.S., leaving the Maharajah Bahadur disconsolate. The Maharajah Bahadur has since remained a widower.

THE Mymensingh Water Works have been presented to the town by the Maharajah Bahadur in memory of His Highness' beloved wife.

IN 1867, His Highness attained his Majority, and assumed himself the charge of his vast Estate. By successful and exceptionally able administration, he managed to increase his rent-roll, and to add to his property by wise purchases of large Zemindaries.

Maharajah Suryya Kanta Acharyya Bahadur stands at the head of the present Mymensingh Family & all Eastern-Bengal Zemindars, being the Premier Hindu Nobleman of that part of the country, and is well-known for his princely liberality and benefactions. A few among many of his Acts of Public Spirit were noticed in the speech made by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, when conferring the title of Maharajah on him.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal said:—

"MAHARAJAH,—Born as you were, in a Family of Distinction, you have worthily upheld, and more than upheld, the credit of that Family, you were vested with the title of Rai Bahadur, on the occasion of the Imperial Assemblage, on the 1st January 1877."

"You were made a Rajah in 1880, and Rajah Bahadur, at the celebration of the Jubilee of Her Majesty's Reign in 1887. But, though you had attained these high distinctions, you none the less continue to pursue that Honourable Course of conduct by which you had gained them."

"As a wealthy Zemindar, you have had many opportunities of doing good, and your Noble Liberality in improving the Water Supply of Mymensingh, is only one of your numerous titles to the Public Gratitude, though it is the most conspicuous of them. But, not merely your own Ryots and Neighbours have received your Bounty, the Thompson Medical Hall at Dacca, The Imperial Institute in London, The Jubilee Sanitarium in Darjeeling, and other Institutions, have reaped the benefit of your far-reaching Liberality. But the distribution of Money is not the only form in which the Liberality is shown. You are known as a Man of Liberal Views, and a Promoter of Learning."

"It has been felt that such Merits as those deserve recognition, both as an acknowledgment due to you personally and as an encouragement to others, to imitate so excellent an example, you have, now, therefore, on the auspicious occasion of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty the Empress, been raised to the Rank of Maharajah, and it is with great pleasure that I present to you the Sanad, conferring the Dignity upon you, and the Khilat, which accompanies it."

THIS sketch, as it is imperfect, of the Maharajah's career, would be incomplete if we did not notice the fact that His Highness is a born Shikari. It is, perhaps, generally not known that the Maharajah Bahadur possesses remarkable literary talents.

IN early years, His Highness was in the habit of contributing to various Journals: and the public is to be congratulated on the fact that His Highness has taken up the pen again, and is contributing to a Bengali Monthly Magazine, named NIRMALLYA,—the tale of His Highness' Shikar, which has greatly impressed the Literary World by the richness of its language, beauty of its similes, and by its brilliant epigrams. It is also known, among the intimate circle of his friends, that he is the author of a remarkable book of Verses, which, it is to be hoped, will someday be given to the world.

HIS chief pastime is Shikar. He keeps a Fine Stud of Elephants, numbering over Fifty, for that purpose. The distinguished Sportsman, Sir Samuel Baker, who once joined his Shikar Party, made flattering remarks regarding the steadiness of the Maharajah Bahadur's line of Elephants in his book, Wild Beasts and their ways.

HIS Excellency General the Right Hon'ble Sir George Stewart White, v. c., K. C. B., G. C. S. I., C. I. E., Late Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in India, the Hon'ble Sir Comer Pitheram, Kt., Late Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court, the Hon'ble Sir Francis Maclean, Kt., Q. C., K. C. S. I., Chief Justice of Bengal, and other distinguished personages, like the Right Hon'ble Lord Durham, M. P., the Right Hon'ble Lord Hechester, M. P., as also as some Russian Noblemen had, with pleasure, from time to time, joined His Highness, in his Annual Shooting Expeditions.

The Maharajah Bahadur is also an expert in khedda operations. His Highness is, at the present moment, engaged in extensive operations of that kind. Up to this time, His Highness has captured several scores of elephants.

As would appear from the Portrait, we publish, the Maharajah Bahadur is, in every way, striking and handsome in his appearance. His Highness is tall and well-built, and carries himself well.

Since the destruction from Earthquake in 1897 of His Highness' Crystal Palace—the Sashi Lodge, His Highness has been obliged to live in Calcutta. What, however, is an undoubted loss to Mymensingh, is a distinct gain to Calcutta, as his residence here has become the resort of some of the most brilliant men of our town.

The Maharajah Bahadur is, however, accessible to all, and full of sympathy. A great personality he makes himself, felt as soon as one comes in contact with him. Men such as he is, are rare in all ages and times.

May God bless His Highness with a long life, prosperity and happiness.

The Meeting was very largely attended— the Members of the Society, the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Metropolis composed the bulk of the audience.

The Twenty-fourth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College-Square, on Monday, the 22nd January, 1900, at 6 p.m. The Meeting was very largely attended—the Members of the Society, the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Metropolis composed the bulk of the audience. The Hon'ble Vedya Benada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu, Rai Bahadur, C.L.E., Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council presiding. The Hon'ble Chairman, on entering the hall, was received with an out-burst of universal applause.

In proposing the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur to preside, Babu Asutose Sen, of the Nashipur Raj, said, "Gentlemen when Babu Sham Lal Day, Secretary to the Society invited the Hon'ble Rajah Ranjit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur, Member, Bengal Legislative Council, to preside in this Meeting, he accepted the invitation. But owing to the sudden illness of his wife—the Rani Sahiba—he was obliged to go home immediately on receipt of a telegram. So, I beg to propose that the Hon'ble Rai P. Ananda Charlu Bahadur, B.L., C.L.E., do take the chair, in his place this evening." He was seconded by Babu Blaban Krishna Mitra, Zemindar, and carried with acclamation.

The Hon'ble Chairman, on taking the presidential chair, rose up amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting thus: "Gentlemen, how I come to occupy the chair this evening, requires some explanation. I was only this afternoon when I was writing a letter, the indomitable Secretary of the Society sent up his name to me, and asked me if I would condescend to preside at their this Twenty-fourth Anniversary Meeting. On the perusal of the letter, it sent a thrill of terror into my heart. However, I could find no other alternative but to accept his kind invitation, and this is the reason how I come among you this evening. With these words, I now call upon the Secretary to read the Report of the Society, for the year ending 1899."

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society then said.

Address by the Secretary :—

HON'BLE RAI BAHADUR AND GENTLEMEN,

We gladly welcome your presence here this afternoon, and feel sincerely thankful for the honor you have done us in accepting our invitation to preside at this our Twenty-fourth Anniversary Meeting, in spite of numerous calls on your time, and for your taking a great interest for the prosperity of this Literary Institution from several years.

As the Calcutta Literary Society originated with the humble individual, who is now standing before you, I feel special pleasure in announcing to you, that smoothly passing many a storm, it has now entered upon the Twenty-fifth year of its existence with un-interrupted success. I cannot allow this opportunity to slip away, without expressing my heartfelt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of Events, for His unusual kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

The Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and Seventy-five with the object of advancing literary culture in this country, and promoting social fellowship between Europeans and Indians.

The means hitherto adopted have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest. Since the date of its foundation the Society has been able to organize scores of public meetings, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of Her Majesty's subjects, and by so doing, it has undoubtedly achieved a fair measure of success.

The Society has enrolled among its Honorary Members the flower of the European and Indian communities. Dozens of distinguished Graduates of the University of Calcutta and several European Advocates have gladly and willingly joined the Society as Honorary Members.

In submitting the Twenty-fourth Annual Report of the Society, allow me to congratulate you on its exertions in inducing illustrious literary men to come forward, and favor the Society with various interesting and instructive lectures at its public meetings.

There were fifty-two public gatherings, convened by the Society, you will be glad to learn, held during the year 1899, at the hall of the different educational institutions of the town, at which the Members and Pandits of the Society took active parts in the proceedings.

Amongst those, who were good enough to edify the public by their lectures, were very eminent and high personages, such as His Holiness Paramhansa Jagat-Guru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the holy temple of Dearka, who had temporarily sojourned to Howrah, and was residing at the Temple of Sri Sri Satya Narayanji, belonging to our illustrious citizen Rajah Sheo Bux Bogla Bahadur, situated at No. 11, Cullen's Place Howrah.

When I had the honor of paying my first visit to His Holiness, he expressed his desire to give a series of lectures, under the auspices of this Society. His request was at once most gladly complied with.

The Twenty-third Anniversary Meeting, of the Society was held with great eclat at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College-Square, on Wednesday, the 4th January, 1899, at 5 p.m., when

Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, delivered his first lecture, before a large and appreciative gathering, on the Present Day Problems, under the presidency of Mr. N. N. Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, Editor, Indian Nation, Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner, etc., etc., etc.

Besides the Anniversary Meeting, the following lectures were delivered during the year 1899; viz:—

(1). On the Study of History, by Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, under the presidency of Babu Shyam Lal Law, M.A., B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, at the hall of the General Assembly's College, Cornwallis' Square, on Tuesday, the 8th January, 1899, at 5 P.M.

(2). On India's Call to Her sons, by Professor M. N. Chatterjea, M.R.A.S., (London), of Patiallah State, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B.L., C.I.E., Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, at the premises of the M. L. Jubilee Institution, 89, Harrison Road, on Monday, the 30th January, 1899, at 5 P.M. The Meeting was densely crowded.

(3). The reading of the Report being over, the Hon'ble President asked Babu Benayendra Nath Sen, M.A., Professor of the Presidency College, to proceed with his lecture on Our social Resources.

The learned Professor addressed the Meeting for more than an hour. He said, that the future of Indian Society must be a subject full of interest to every lover of India. There were, perhaps, people whose idea was that the Indian Society of the future would exactly be shaped on the model of Western Civilization. Undoubtedly, there were forces at work, some of them explicit, others secret, which were modifying our ideas, our aspirations, our social and industrial organization and institutions, all tending to recast our Society on a new basis. But he thought it would be a misfortune if under the onslaught of this Western Civilization India were to lose her own distinctive spirit and character. That distinctive character was looking upon the interests of the Spirit as supreme, and dealing with every affair of life from a spiritual stand point. This characteristic had marked her civilization in the past, and in the future, India, amongst all the Nations of the world, and in the midst of a universal materialism, would have to hold up the banner of the Spirit. The lecturer then proceeded to apply these remarks to three important questions of the day; viz:—(1) the Question of Livelihood, (2) the Question of Education, and (3) the Question of Religion.

With regard to the first, the lecturer observed that the spirit of the modern age was freedom; industry, and so far as the demands of this spirit went, Indian industrial organization had been, and would still further have to be, modified and recast but in three cardinal points the tendencies brought from the West would have to be restrained by the spiritual instincts of the East; viz:—

(1). Contentment regarding the needs of the body.

(2). Distribution of wealth on principles of justice and sympathy and not mere individualistic competition.

(3). Work, not for the sake of wages, but from a higher impulse.

With regard to Education recognising gratefully all that Government had so far done and was doing in this direction, still it was a patent fact that all future progress would more and more depend upon our own exertions. We should have to remember particularly that the object of all education is to strengthen a man for the struggle of life and this could be secured only if three conditions were satisfied; viz:—

(1). Education must be based upon a strict discipline and obedience to Law, so as to form habits, which would be a perennial source of strength in future struggles.

(3). The atmosphere of the place, where education is given, must be full of the spirit of sympathy and love, so as to call forth every latent power and strengthen every good impulse.

Lastly, with regard to Religion, the lecturer observed, that the characteristics of the genius of our national religion were world-wide catholicism, toleration, meditateness, and intense depth of devotion;—but there were certain serious defects which must be remedied; such as, a certain lack of the sense of individual responsibility and strength of will, owing perhaps to the prevalence of a belief in fatality, want of right views about and also the right spirit of prayer, also perhaps due to the same cause, and the absence of a spirit of progressiveness, which, alone, is the source of never-ceasing energy, and hope crowned with ever-increasing blessings (Cheers).

After the learned speaker had finished his speech, the Hon'ble President proposed the adoption of the Report, which was seconded by Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Chairman, Hindu Family Annuity Fund, and carried. He next proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was also unanimously carried.

The Hon'ble President then spoke a few encouraging words, and said that he could not make any lengthy remarks, as the inner body was rebellious as the night had advanced. He sat amidst loud applause. Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar then proposed a vote of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman, which was carried by acclamation, and the Meeting dissolved.

A well-attended Public Meeting, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the premises of the Classic Theatre, Beadon Street, on Friday, the 26th January, 1900, at 7 P.M.

On the motion of Babu Gour Hari Sen, Secretary, Beadon Square Literary Club, seconded by Babu Chuny Lall Dutt, Government Pensioner, the Hon'ble Rajah Ranjit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur, Member of the Legislative Council of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, was voted to the chair amidst cheers.

The Hon'ble Chairman, on taking his presidential seat, asked Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, to read the proceedings of the last Twenty-fourth Anniversary Meeting. The Secretary having done so, the Hon'ble Chairman called upon Babu Lalit Mohun Ghosal, Municipal Commissioner of Cossipur, to begin with his lecture on Our Duties in the Present Crisis in the Transvaal.

The learned speaker, with his usual eloquence, delivered his speech. He said, "Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen, the other day an esteemed friend of mine asked me What was my opinion on the Boer War?—Whether my sympathy was Pro-British, or Pro-Boer? There was a European soldier present. He was standing expectantly to hear my reply. I was silent for a while. My friend again asked me, whether or not I was thinking what answer to give? I said, no—the reply is plain, and on my lips. He said, on what side my sympathy lies?—Whether or not it was for the Government of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of India?

I replied, if he had totally forgotten the dark days preceding the British Conquest of India. The country was, as it were, then, immersed in the depth of misrule—No white cloud as silver linings to be found on the Firmament. The free will of the Emperor, or his subordinates, was the law—No constitution, or safe-guard to protect the weak from the strong! Education was not—or, if it was, it was of a degrading and debarring character. No life was safe. We could not then go from one point of the country to the other safely—the Deccois (Villains) and marauders infested the country. There was no convenience of Railway Journey, or Postal or Telegraphic communications.

These are facts that will suggest themselves to any readers of the history of the period. These are still green in our memory. The English came, and the blending of the Western Civilization with our ancient one was the dawn of a new epoch, and we began to make progress as a man does when he awakes from the sleep, of Rip Van Winkle, when the conditions are so favourably changed. And do you now ask me whether my sympathy was with such benign Government or not? What else can it be?—It can't be otherwise.

But, I cannot forget one fact—it was a salient fact that we, the Bengalis are not still allowed to enlist ourselves as Volunteers. If the sort-sighted policy of a section of Rulers would not have prevented such happy consummation, then certainly, the British Nation, and for the matter of that the whole of the world's Nations would have witnessed how the Bengalis could have shed their hearts' blood for the beloved Queen-Empress of India, and the country! They would have, by, this time, stood in a solid phalanx, and fought shoulder to shoulder the British Arms.

It would have been a spectacle worthy of the gods to see you speak of the reverses of the British soldiers—Reverses there must be for sometime. Will not these reverses make the ultimate victory? a thing of real glory and triumph—If they had gained the day without such distressing circumstances—the lesser would have been the glory of the valliant survivors. The ultimate victory of the English arms is certain, beyond the shadow of a doubt. God cannot but be propitious to the English—the Nation of philanthropists, the reclaimers of down-fallen nations—the rescuers of the fallen. We should stand firmly by the rulers, and demonstrate our loyalty in an unmistakeable way. Let us explain the real state of affairs to the mass, and pray to God our wish for final triumph of the British. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Babu Panch Cowri Banerjee, B.A., Editor, Basumaty, addressed the Meeting for sometime. He compared the present state of Bengal with what it was before the British Rule. He particularly impressed upon his audience that it was their bounden duty, as educated men, to go more amongst their less enlightened countrymen, and explain to them the state of affairs in South Africa. Although they were unable to participate in the fighting, they had still a way of showing their high appreciation of the governing nation by doing their best with subscriptions to the Transvaal War Fund, not forgetting the generous help which accorded India during the famine of 1897." (Cheers).

On his resuming the seat, and no other audience desiring to speak, the Hon'ble Chairman made a fine little speech and he was frequently applauded.

He explained how the War in South Africa broke out with the Boers, and how heroically the British soldiers are fighting there, and how cheerfully are they lay down their lives for the Sovereign and for the prestige and glory of the British Nation! How the noble families in England have volunteered their services in the War, and some of them even sacrificed their lives in the field! How the sad death happened of the Earl of Ava, and the heir of Lord Roberts! One the son of a former Viceroy of India, and the other, the son of the Ex-Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in India! In either case, the heir to the title and honors has fallen gallantly fighting for his country, and in either case the sympathy of the entire population of India will go forth to the sorrowing parents!

He then briefly pointed out the blessings which British Rule had bestowed on India. He said that before the British advent, they could not call their money their own, and their lives and properties were not safe as now. They had none of the thousand and one advantages of civilization which they now enjoyed. Among Her Majesty's most loyal subjects, Indians would ever take a high place, and although they could not fight, as has been remarked by his friend Mr. Ghosal, they could still show their loyalty to the Queen-Empress by prayers, and by helping to swell the fund which had been opened on behalf of the widows and children of the soldiers that died in South African War. (Cheers).

A vote of thanks to the chair was then put to the Meeting and was cordially carried.

All present were also urged to muster strong at the next day's Town Hall Meeting, convened by the British Indian Association, under the presidency of His Highness the Hon'ble Rameswar Singh Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhangah, Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, and one of the oldest Members and well-wishers of this Society. (Cheers).

As announced in the local papers, a well-attended Public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College-Square, on Monday, the 19th February, 1900, at 5-15 P.M.

On the motion of Babu Durga Nath Sarkar M.A., seconded by Babu Rajkrishna Dutt, (Zemindar, Municipal Commissioner, and Author of several books), Khan Bahadur Mirza Shujat Ali Beg Sahib, Representative of Her Highness the Nawab Begum Sahiba, of Murshidabad, C.I., was voted to the Chair, amidst shouts of applause.

After the reading of the proceedings of the last Meeting by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, the Chairman called upon Mr. R. Palit, (of Howrah), to deliver his lecture on Mind in Nature.

The learned lecturer dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour, and he was listened to with rapt attention. He said, "Mr. President, and Gentlemen, the beautiful aspect of Nature, which we observe all around us, naturally brings home to our mind the question, Who is Her Creator? This is the problem, the solution of which we first tried to find out among the experiences of our boyhood, and, then, when we attain the age of maturity, we repeat the same question. But alas! How few of us try to answer it! It should be the duty of every father to instruct his son in such lessons, as would go towards inculcating in his mind the rudimentary principles of religion.

Beneath the social disturbances of the day—beneath the discussions of Science—beneath the anxiety of some, and the sadness of others—beneath the ironical and more or less insulting joy of a few, we read at the foundation of many intellectual manifestations of our time these gloomy words, Henceforth, no more God for humanity! What may well send a shudder of fright through Society—more than threatening war, more than possible revolution—more than the plots which may be hatching in the dark against the security of persons, or of property.—is the number, the importance, and the extent of the efforts, which are making in our days to extinguish in men's souls their faith in the living God.

Religion, (I take this term in its most general acceptance), is not, as many say that it is, either dead or dying. I want no other proof of this than the pains which so many people are taking to kill it. It is often those who say that it is dead, or falling rapidly into dissolution, who apply themselves to this work. They are too generous, no doubt, to make a violent attack upon a corpse; and it is easy to understand, judging by the intensity of their exertions, that, in their own opinion, they have something else to do than to give a finishing stroke to the dying.

Present circumstances are serious, not for religion itself, which cannot be imperilled, but for minds which run the risk of losing their balance and their support. We are apt to think that these times, in which we are living, are extraordinary. That we are passing through an unequalled crisis, but, the more deeply we ponder over the circumstances, which immediately surround us, the more easily we perceive that religious thought has in former times passed through shocks as profound and as dangerous, as those of which we are witnesses.

Still, I take the crisis to be a real one. How many among us idly sleep over the solemn questions of Religion, which affect the salvation of our soul! Oh! How we would run mad after the phantoms of this world—never thinking for a moment of the ultimate scope of so grand a human life endowed with an immortal soul revealing in itself the wisdom of a creative mind! There are infidels in every religion, who seldom try to find out the existence of a creative mind in the background of Nature.

It has been said with an air of presumption by some of the giants in intellect that Science, strictly speaking, confutes the idea of a creative mind in Nature, everything we see then over is the product of chance. By this, I do not meant under-value the researches of the real philosopher or the investigations of the true scientist, because their discoveries enrich literature, confirm the facts of history, and establish the great verities of every religious book.

By all means, let the philosopher pursue his studies in the various walks of science and departments of Nature. Let the Chemist daily ply his laboratory to extort the Secret of Nature. Let the Astronomer rightly turn his watchful eye to the heavens, exploring the depths of space. Let the Geologist turn over the stony leaves of the old terrestrial books, and read the testimony of the rocks, and let the Physiologist turn his mind to human physiology, with its wonderful organs and functions.

The result of this study, observation, and experience, (if honestly done in the true spirit of Philosophy), will be to bring out more proofs of the power, wisdom, and goodness of God, the Great Preserver, and Ruler of the Universe, and also supply fresh illustrations of the truths of Religion.

Everyone, as an anxious inquirer in the field of Natural Science, would be delighted to sit the feet of such men as Professor Huxley, Professor Tyndall, Dr. Darwin, and Sir John Lubbock, when they speak as Scientific Observers and truly inductive Philosophers; but, when the celebrated Scientists speak as Philosophic Theorists exceeding the just boundaries of Scientific precision, mistaking fictions for facts, theories for truth, and by it dishonour Science and cast discredit on Religion, he refuses to hear or follow them.

Their teachings, if not imparted on the strict principles of Religion, would surely have the effect of hampering the moral progress of a Nation; and it is, therefore, as an introduction to this great subject, I should wish first to give an exposition of the term Nature, and secondly, to enquire whether we find sufficient proofs of a Mind in Nature.

The thoughts of man are innumerable; and so in their indefinite variety, they never relate to a to one or another of these three objects, viz:—(1) Nature, or the world of material substances, which are revealed to our senses. (2) Created Spirit, similar or superior to that spirit which is ourselves; and (3) God—the Infinite Being,—the Universal Creator. Therefore, there are two sorts of atheism, and there are only two. The mind stops at Nature, and endeavours to find in material substances the universal principle of existence, or rising above Nature, the mind stops at humanity, without ascending to the Infinite Mind,—to the Creator.

The word Nature, has various meanings. We employ it here to designate matter, and the forces which set it in motion; those forces being conceived as blind and fatal, in opposition to the conscious and free force, which constitutes Mind. Matter and the laws of motion are the object of Mechanics, of Chemistry, and of Physics. Do these Sciences suffice for resolving the universal enigma?—Such is precisely the question, which offers itself to our examination.

Let us first of all determine what, in the presence of the spectacle of the universe, is the natural movement of human thought; when human thought possesses the idea of God: Ah! he would exclaim in the transport of animation: The Creator is, first of all, He, whose glory the heavens declare, while the earth makes known the work of His hands. He is the Mighty One, and the wise, who has given being to Nature, and who directs at one the chorus of stars in the depths of the heavens, and the drop of vital moisture in the herb which we tread under foot. Let us translate this delightful description into the heavier language of Science.

The intellect is one of the things with which we are best acquainted. Logic is the Science of thought and Logic is, perhaps, among all the Sciences, the one best settled on its bases. The intellect discovers itself to us in the exercise of our activity. We pursue an object, we combine the means for attaining it, and it is the intellect which operates this combination. What happens if we compare the results of our activity with the results of the power manifested in the world! When we consider in their vast ensemble, the means of which Nature disposes, when we remark the infinite number of the relations of things, the marvellous harmony of which universal life is the produce, we are dazzled by the splendour of a wisdom which surpasses our own—as much as boundless space surpasses the imperceptible spot, which we occupy upon the earth.

Think of this! The Science of Nature is so vast, that the least of its departments suffices to absorb one human life-time. All our sciences are only in their very beginning; they are spelling out the first lines of an immense book. The elements of the universe are numberless; and yet, notwithstanding, all hangs together, all things are linked to one another in the closest connection. The savants, therefore, find themselves in a strange embarrassment. It needs not that we seek very high or very far away for occasions of astonishment: the least of the objects, which Nature presents to our view, contains abysses of wisdom.

The acquired results of Science appear simple—through the effect of habit. The Sun rises every day—who is still surprised at its rising? The Solar system has been known a long while; it is taught in the humblest schools, and no longer surprises any one. But those who found out, after long efforts, what we learn without trouble, the discoverers reckoned their discoveries very surprising. Kepler, one of the founders of Modern Astronomy, in the book to which he consigned his immortal discoveries, exclaims: "The wisdom of the Lord is infinite, as are also His glory and His power. Ye heavens! sing his praises. Sun, Moon, and Planets, glorify Him in your ineffable language! Praise Him, celestial harmonies, and all ye who can comprehend them! And thou, my Soul, praise the Creator! It is by Him, —and in Him only, that all exists. What we know not is contained in Him as well as our vain Science. To Him be the praise, honour, and glory for ever and ever!" These words, Gentlemen, have not been copied from any religious book; they are read in a work, which as all allow, is one of the foundations of Modern Science.

I pass on to another example, and I continue to keep you in good and high company. Newton set forth his discoveries in a large volume all bristling with figures and calculations. The work of the mathematician ended, the author rises, by the consideration of the mutual interchange of the light of the stars, to the idea of the unity of the creation; then he adds, and it is the conclusion of his entire work: "The Master of the heavens governs all things, not as being the Soul of the world, but as being the Sovereign of the Universe." It is on account of His sovereignty, that we call Him the Sovereign God. He governs all things, those which are, and those which may be. He is the one God, and the same God, everywhere and always. We admire Him—because of His perfections. We reverence and adore Him, because of His Sovereignty. A God without Sovereignty, without providence, and without object in His works, would be only destiny or Nature. Now, from a blind metaphysical necessity, everywhere and always the same, could arise no variety; all that diversity of created things, according to places and times, (which constitutes the order and life of the universe), could only have been produced by the thought and will of a Being, who is the Being, existing by Himself and necessarily."

Nature is verily and indeed a marvel, placed before the observation of our minds. The growth of a blade of grass, the habits of an ant, contain for an attentive observer prodigies of wisdom. A drop of dew reflecting the beams of morning, the play of light among the leaves of a tree, contain treasures of Poetry. But, too often, blinded by habit, we are unable to see; and when our mind is asleep, it seems to us that the universe slumbers. A sudden flash of light can sometimes arouse us from this lethargy. If Science, all at once delivers up to us, some one of those grand laws, which reveal in thousands of phenomena, the traces of one and the same mind, without which, there could be no order in the universe, the astonishment of our intellect excites in our soul an emotion of adoration. When the first rays of morning light up the lofty summits of our Himalayas, when the Sun at his setting stretches a path of fire along the waters of our lake, who does not feel impelled to render glory to the Supreme Artist?

Such is the presence of Nature, the spontaneous movement of the heart and of the reason. But a false wisdom obscures these clear verities by clouds of sophisms. When your heart feels impelled to render glory to God, there is danger lest importunate thoughts rise in your mind and counteract the impulse of your adoration. Perhaps, you have heard it said, perhaps, you have read, that the accents of spiritual song, those echoes, growing ever weaker, of by-gone ages, are no longer heard by a mind enlightened by modern Science. I should wish that in the view of Nature, even those who have as yet no wish to adore, with St. Paul and David, the Royal Psalmist, Him whose invisible perfections are clearly seen when we contemplate His works, may at least feel themselves free to admire with Socrates "The Supreme God, who maintains the works of creation in the flower of youth, and in a vigour ever new."

Let us now analyse the ideas of this great Philosopher as thus expounded. We may note these two affirmations; viz:—

1. The universe displays an admirable order, which reveals the wisdom of the Power which governs it.
2. The universe lives; it is not fixed, and its variations suppose an intelligent Power which directs it.

When we contemplate within ourselves this wonderful mechanism of the universe, we instinctively recognise therein certain mental operations, such as idealization, pre-science, intentionality, and individuality. Order implies intelligence and will, and the grand synthesis or system, which we call Nature, leads the human mind necessarily up to a creative and ruling Mind,—that is a personal God. A great Philosopher maintains that Order implies what by Analogy we call Intelligence, using the word Intelligence, in a sense broader than is ordinarily attached to it; viz:—as inclusive both of knowledge and volitions. Two or three examples, brought forward by Janet in his profound treatise, Final Causes to set forth what may in an important sense be called the instinctive character of such conclusion, are worthy of reproduction. The first runs thus:—

"The illustrious Kepler, whose soul was as religious as his genius, was powerful, found everywhere material for Philosophic or Scientific reflections. One day, when he had meditated on atoms and their combinations, he was, as he himself relates, called to dinner by his wife, Barbara, who laid a salad on the table. 'Dost think,' said he to her, 'that if from the creation plates of tin, leaves of lettuce, grains of salt, drops of oil and vinegar, and fragments of hard-boiled eggs, were floating in space in all directions and without order, chance would assemble them to-day to form a salad? 'Certainly not so good a one,' replied his fair spouse,—'not so well-seasoned as this.'"

Let the second example also be presented in Janet's own words:—"A Scottish Philosopher, formed the ingenious idea of putting in operation, the proof of final causes to inspire his young child with faith, in Providence. This child was five or six years old, and was beginning to read, but his father had not yet sought to speak to him of God, thinking that he was not of an age to understand such lessons. To find entrance in his mind for this great idea in a manner suitable to his age, he thought of the following expedient.

In a corner of a little garden, without telling any one of the circumstance, he drew with his finger on the earth, the three initial letters of his child's name, and sowing garden cresses in the furrows, covered the seed and smoothed the earth. Ten days after, he tells us, the child came running to me, all amazed, and told me that his name had grown in the garden. I smiled at these words and appeared not to attach much importance to what he had said. But, he insisted on taking me to see what had happened; 'yes,' said I, coming to the place, 'I see well enough that it is so, but there is nothing wonderful in this';—it is a mere accident and went away. But he followed me, and walking beside me, said, very seriously, "that cannot be an accident. Some one must have prepared the seed to produce the result."

Some Philosophers tried to prove the existence of the creation, by the theory of Chance—a theory traced through successive ages to Epicurus, is a first so risible that it has been given up by Modern Philosophers and Scientists as untenable. Chance could never have realized so beautiful a co-ordination or adjustment of parts, as to have all the elements of stability in it. Every kind of work or production, which shows signs and marks of design and contrivance, with parts put together for a purpose, must be the work of an intelligent mind. Fenelon says:—"The atoms, we are told, have an eternal motion; their fortuitous concours must already have exhausted, during the eternity infinite combinations.—By infinite is meant something that comprehends all without exception. Among these infinite combinations of atoms, which have successively happened, there must necessarily occur all those that are possible. The combination of atoms, that form the present system of the world, must, therefore, be one of combinations, that atoms have successively had. This principle being stated, need we wonder that the world is as it is? Thus, we see that Fenelon brings forward this argument in favour of the theory of a fortuitous concurrence of atoms, and let us see how far his argument stands the test of true Philosophy.

If we think for a moment of the beautiful structure of the universe, we would come to a recognition of the fact, that instead of an infinite number of combinations, there has been a continued march, if not evolution in the accepted sense of the term, from the simple and indefinite to the complex and definite; there never were heads without bodies, branches without trunks, unsuccessful attempts at organization, products inconsistent with law and order. Nature is not merely now an order, but it has been an order from the beginning. Its progress has been regulated by law, and mere chance has had no place in its development. So Fenelon's reply to this argument is not needed in these days.

The existence of atoms and their arrangements into any form or figure have to be explained together with the laws impressed on or immanent in them; and no explanation can be satisfactory without positing design as its starting point. The atoms must have been made of specific form and endowed with specific potentiality with specific end in view, otherwise, their gradual evolution into the series of combinations they have realized, would not have been what it has been. If it be said, that they have voluntarily developed into the forms, Nature has assumed in its progress from the homogenous to the heterogenous, the simple to the complex, and the indefinite to the definite, the spontaneity assumed has to be explained, and cannot be accounted for without reference to foresight of ends and choice of means.

Nature left to itself, or un-controlled by certain laws or principles, would be as little inclined to order as to disorder; and its orderly development cannot be explained by such vague terms as chance, spontaneity, automatism or natural selection. Nature is admittedly an order, and the term order implies subserviency of means to ends, and this again implies moral causation, or a moral Agent, who foresees or idealizes ends and chooses means, and whose wisdom and power are vast and boundless, as the universe. From adaptation, arrangement and Inter-Dependence in Nature, we rise to cognition of specific ends realized by determinate means, and from these to such mental operations as idealization and volition. These are comprised in the term Intelligence, which, in the First Cause, must be proportioned to the unutterable vastness of Nature.

Kant maintains that form only of matter being contingent, not its substance, the argument can bring forward God only as the Architect, not as the Creator. And, secondly, he affirms that as the strength of the argument depends on Analogy between the products of Nature and those of art, the conclusion it leads to, is that the First Cause is more powerful, wiser and skilful than man, not all-powerful, all-wise, and all-skilful. Kant observes in the vast creation operations of a cause which is powerful and wise, but is reluctant to call it the Creator. He maintains that the form of matter has no real being, but has only phenomenal existence, and, therefore, he says, God is an Architect, not one who has bestowed existence.

The intellect of Kant nods at the theistic idea of an explanation of the phenomena of Nature. From the tone of his argument, we are naturally led to the conclusion, that he is willing to bring forward another agent to uphold his belief in the existence of the creation. He maintains that on the back ground of Nature, there is a cause which is wise and might well be termed as an architect God,—not a Creator God. When we look around us and observe the beautiful workmanship of human genius, are we not naturally led to think that this exhibits by an antecedent representation the originality of a vast wisdom—a wisdom which must necessarily be the Creator?

When you gaze towards the depths of the sky, does it never happen to you to remain in a manner terrified, as you contemplate those worlds which, without end, are added to other worlds? As you fix your thoughts upon the immeasurable abysses of the firmament,—as you say to yourselves that how far so-ever you put back the boundary of the skies! if the universe ended there, then the universe with its Sun and groups of stars, would still be but a solitary lamp, shining as a point in the midst of the limitless darkness—Have you never experienced a sort of mysterious fright and giddiness? At such a time, turn your eyes upon nearer objects. He, who has made the heavens with their immensity, is He who makes the corn to spring forth for your sustenance, who clothes the fields with the flowers which rejoice your sights, who gives you the fresh breath of morning, and the calm of a lovely evening: it is He—without whose permission nothing occurs, who watches over you and over those you love.

Gentlemen, in the face of such overpowering proofs of an infinite wisdom, do you feel yourselves inclined to exclaim with agnostic Kant that on the back ground of Nature you see nothing, but the operations of an Architect God—a God, who is little or no better than a Mighty Philosopher or a Scientist. Why should we accept the Theory of Kant—a Theory, which ascribes a place to God in the dark region of negation?

The architect must, first of all, use his mind, skill, and talents in drawing the plans and specifications of the house to be built, and every person can see at once what skill, knowledge, and intelligent contrivance the Architect must possess in order to draw out such plans and build the house according to the plans and specifications. What vast intelligence, mighty power, infinite wisdom, and great skill and contrivance, God must possess as the Architect of the Universe, and the Builder of the world! No God! No Builder for the Great House of the world! I again ask, can you fancy a rude heap of bricks, stones, and timber, shot from a cart on the ground, forming themselves into a fine house? No, you cannot. It is not possible for any one, in a sound mind, to fancy anything so foolish; and, yet, Kant would not allow himself to call God—a Creator, or one, who has bestowed existence. Kant further concludes that the First Cause is more powerful, wiser and skilful than man, but not all powerful, all-wise, and all-skilful.

Whether the First Cause created the world out of nothing, and is possessed of wisdom and power, both infinite, these questions I leave to those, whose minds have been more enlightened by the culture of Philosophy. As for myself, I would remain satisfied, if I see that, it simply proves intelligence and liberty in the First Cause, and, therefore, it is different from blind chance or unconscious force. The First Cause must be a Cause uncaused, and, therefore, self-existent, or the Absolute. It is not, however, absolute matter, unconscious, dead, but Absolute Spirit, intelligent, voluntary. As the Absolute, its intelligence and power must be unlimited and illimitable, and, I believe, Gentlemen, none among you would hesitate, for a moment, to call the First Cause, the Creator of the vast creation, where planets, stars and moons are marshalled like a mighty host. Do not the external aspects of Nature, Gentlemen, suggest to your mind an all-powerful God, without whom there would to-day be reigning chaos everywhere, instead of so beautiful an assembly of human beings? Do not, again, Gentlemen, our faculties suppose an all-powerful God?

Take for instance, the mental power known as personal consciousness. By the exercise of this faculty, we can recognize our own being and identity as distinct from other people; also, the various thoughts and feelings which pass in our minds. This faculty is the foundation of all knowledge, and without it, no other mental power could exist, or be exercised, if it did exist. In a word, the exercise of this mental power is the Soul of Man recognizing its own Being, and thereby proving its superiority over the material body, which has no power of recognition. The Sun knows nothing of His brightness, nor the Moon of Her light, nor the Stars of their shining, nor the air of its oxygen, nor the earth of its fruits, nor the body of its motions; but the Soul, by its personal consciousness, has the power to recognise the whole. Darwinism leaves man without a Soul, and traces man's origin to the spore of a sea-weed, which was created about 300 million years ago.

Huxleyism traces man's origin to his simian ancestors—the monkeys. In the wonderful capabilities of the Soul and its power of recognition, I can see a faint reflection of the infinite intelligence of God, but no relation to a sea-weed or monkey.

It would be difficult to enumerate here all the faculties and their qualifications, within a short space of time allowed to me, I would, therefore, mention only one more faculty, I mean the mental or moral faculty, the will or power of volition, which gives man the power of choice. I do not speak of the will in a theological sense, but in the metaphysical aspect. The will is a simple faculty among the rest of man's intellectual powers; but volition is the will called into activity. If man were destitute of this power, he would be a mere machine, and, therefore, incapable of responsibility or moral excellence. It is the power of will, of freedom of choice that constitutes man a rational and responsible being.

Dr. Samuel Clarke, in his great argument for the Being and attributes of God, has well said; "That the self-existent and original cause of all things is not a necessary agent; but a Being endowed with liberty and choice." And, therefore, when the Self-Existent and All-wise God, created man in His own Image, He endowed him with the mental and moral attributes mentioned above. If men can think, and reason, and obtain wisdom by the exercise of their powers, it is logical and reasonable to argue from man up to his Creator, and ascribe power, and wisdom, and intelligence to God—the Creator of man.

I would like to ask, if Sir Issac Newton never lived, who thought out the thoughts in the Principia. If Sri Krishna never lived, who is the author of that religious book, which has been so acceptable to the people of the world?—I mean, the Bhagbat Gita. The Author of the book read in no school, and belonged to no particular system of Philosophy, yet, His teachings are sublime, and His code of ethics is unparalleled. Page after page of the vast volume of Nature was unrolled to Him, and He penetrated into the deepest mysteries of the universe. Thus, we see, that the glorious existence of God, is a truth in harmony with all the truths of Anatomy, Physiology, and Psychology. Surely, every one among us, this evening, would, I believe, be willing to exclaim with King David: "I will praise thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made; marvellous are thy works, and that my soul knoweth right well."

It might well be urged here, how we could know that our knowledge of God is based upon an indisputable truth, and to them I would say that, there are two principal channels of knowledge, the testimony of our senses, and the testimony of our fellow-men. These are analogous, as being founded on the same principles of the human mind. St. Augustine says:—"There are two general ways which lead us to believe that a thing is true. The first is the Knowledge, which we have of it ourselves, from having known and sought out its truth, whether by our senses, or by our Reason. This may be called generally—Reason, since the senses themselves depend on the judgment of Reason and Science. The other way is the authority of persons, worthy of credence, who assure us that such a thing is, although we ourselves know nothing about it. This is called faith or credence. Both are signified to us by signs, the interpretation which is attended with a conception and belief of the things signified.

Let us see first of all whether our senses suggest to our mind, the Existence of God in the creation. Our five senses, viz:—seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, and feeling are the five gate-ways of knowledge. John Bunyan, whose name man among you have, perhaps, heard, has described these five senses in terse and tangible language in his Holy War, which, I would like to refer here, as it is so easy to remember. This writer says that the famous town of Mansoul had five gates in, at which to come, out at which to go. The names of the gates were these—Ear-gate, Eye-gate, Mouth-gate, Nose-gate and Feel-gate. The wonderful arrangements of those five organs and their wise adaptation to the object and elements of Nature and the world, prove the existence of God infinitely wise, benevolent, and good.

Take for instance, the organ of sight, which is an optical instrument of the most perfect construction. This organ is the Sense, which receives impressions from Rays of Light, reflected from luminous objects, meeting and forming images on the retina of the eye. The eye may be considered as a series of lenses; because, the rays of light proceed from luminous objects, enter the eye through the pupil in the centre, and paint on the retina at the back of it an image, which is conveyed to the brain by the optic nerve, and on the soul by this Divine arrangement. The eye is placed in the most convenient and advantageous position to answer its end. Placed in the front of the head, so far from the ground, it enables us to see our way, to direct our steps, to go about our work, and perform our varied duties to the best advantage possible. To keep it from harm, it is placed a little more inward than the bulk of the face, and carefully walled round with hardy substances, and over-arched and protected by the forehead and eye-brows. It is supplied with lids and eye-lashes to preserve it, and the lids are supplied with muscles, so contrived as to secure the most prompt and rapid motion, and so fit them in the best way possible to answer their important end.

Gentlemen, if man had been the product of careless or blundering power, and the arrangements of man's organs left to blind chance, the eye might have been rendered comparatively useless by being placed in the foot, or on the top of the head. The eye is the window of the Soul, and an inlet to an endless variety of knowledge, and a great amount of enjoyment. The eye is exactly adapted to the world, in which we live, the world with its light, and various forms and colors. To this Organ of Sight, we are specially indebted for our ideas of the sublime, grand, and beautiful in Nature.

By means of the eye, we can see the beautiful features of human face, with its various forms and colours, its looks of love, its expressions of sympathy its smiles of joy, its tears of gratitude, which arouse in our mind, a spring of pleasure. By means of the eye, we can feast our minds on all that is beautiful on earth, and sublime in the heavens above. We gaze with delight on the tranquil grandeur and picturesque views of the lofty mountains, the lovely valleys overhung by the most romantic steepes, and covered to a great extent with the noblest forests, the flowing streams, with their murmuring sounds, the deep forests, with their trees spreading on every side their gigantic arms—thorny and prickly shrubs of every size and shape, the wide-spreading lawns, the heaving ocean, the foaming beach, the Moon-lit night, the rugged cliff, the thundering cataract, and all that is grand and sublime in Nature.

We can feast the soul by lifting the eye to the heavens, and then contemplate the black and fiery clouds, the darkness and the light, the glories of the opening and closing day, the Sun, the Moon, and stars, in their far-sweeping orbits; Ah! how all-wise the Creator must be who has been so wonderfully regulating the universe as to bent the conditions of His creatures. Thus we see, that the testimony of our senses fully demonstrates the existence of an all-wise, all-powerful, all-skilful, God in Nature.

Let us now see whether the testimony of our fellow-men suggests to our mind the existence of God in Nature. Sir William Thompson, a most distinguished Scientist, says:—"Overpowering proofs of intelligence and benevolent design lie around us; and, if ever perplexities, whether metaphysical or scientific, turn away from them for a time, they come back upon us with ir-resistible force, showing to us, through Nature, the influence of a free-will and teaching us that all living beings depend upon the ever-acting Creator and Ruler." Revd. W. Miller, in his lecture to the educated Hindus, says:—"Let a man devote his life to the highest ends he knows of—let him seek to express the highest ideal, he can form a notion of in his own actual every day deeds and words;—let him fail, as he will fail too often, and then seek amid the shame of failure for strength to do what he aims at doing and become what he ought to be:—let him learn thus, as he will learn, that there is something beyond himself that aids him in striving after good, and disapproves when his strivings cease; such a man will have more conviction of the Being of a God within a month than attention to the most valid arguments will awaken within him in the course of years."

Let us go back to the Vedic period, and read the testimony of our Aryan fore fathers. In the religion of the Veda, we observe the onward progress of the human mind—a progress from the sincere invocation of the rising Sun, or, the beneficent sky to the sublimer idea, that neither the Sun nor the sky is the Deity—that the Deity is greater and higher than these, and has created these objects. Coming nearer to the Rationalistic period read also the testimony of Upanishads. The idea of a Supreme Being a Universal Spirit, an all-pervading Breath or Soul is the key-stone of the Philosophy, and thoughts of the Upanishads. The attributes of God, according to the Vedanta Philosophy, have thus been recapitulated by Colebrooke:—"God is the Omniscient and Omnipotent cause of the existence continuance, and dissolution of the universe. Creation is act of His will. He is both efficient and material cause of the world, Creator, and Nature, framer and frame, doer and deed. At the consumation of all things, all are resolved into him. The Supreme Being is one, sole, existent, secondless, entire, without parts, infinite, ineffable, invariable ruler of all, universal soul, truth, wisdom, intelligence, happiness." The Yoga Philosophy also recognises the existence of God in Nature. In Him, "the seed of the Omniscient attains infinity, and He is the instructor of even an early one, for He is not limited by time. Coming to the Bhagabat Gita, we also read therein, that Creation is like an Aswattha tree, with its roots turned upward, and branches downwards. The Vedas are its leaves, the godly are its top-most branches, the un-godly are nethermost branches. God is its main root. Desires and hopes are its hidden roots. Satwa causeth it to increase, while by the action of Rajas it blossometh.

Worldly-minded men fail to perceive the top-most root of the tree, whose position, it is difficult to trace, and whose beginning and end are incomprehensible. One must cut at the root by the axe of unselfishness, find the Essence, viz: the Divine Essence. It is this Divine Essence, which maintains Solar light and heat, and the moisture-producing power of the Moon. It causes the fire to burn, and life to grow. It is the main spring, from which all knowledge flows. Thus, we also see in the testimony of men, the existence of God in Nature.

Gentlemen, all Nature proclaims the ceaseless activity of a creative mind, as if, from the house-top. Every object of Nature is in a flux, perpetually changing its internal mechanism, and external form, throwing off and taking in molecules, and thereby producing in itself a ceaseless mutation of arrangement and shape, of proportion and colour, of what may be called its inner-life and outer appearance. Human consciousness, moreover, is in a flux, perpetually changing from one state to another, never being in one or the same state for any two moments, and no two states being absolutely the same. When we look around, we see nothing but the un-interrupted, unremittent activity of force,—a force consequent on the actions of a Mind: and, when we shut our eyes, and look within, the same thing is noticeable. We are, therefore, justified both on Physical and Metaphysical grounds in representing the primal force, as not merely existent, but, persistent in its activity, as an over-active principle. The force is, moreover, a moral agent, not merely a material entity of the ponderable or imponderable species. Arrangement or adoption implies the subserviency of means to ends, and subserviency of means to end, implies moral causation.

To sum up the conclusion, to which the assemblage of effects we call Nature brings us, the Mind is an Intelligent Being, powerful and wise, righteous in His administration, and merciful in His purposes. He reveals in His works, as God of Might, wisdom, holiness and love. We know nothing about this Essence, very little indeed about His modes of existence, thought and feeling; and our minds are dazzled and thoughts paralysed the moment we pry into the mysteries of His Nature. We can according to a time-hallowed distinction of Theology, apprehend, but not comprehend God. Nature reveals God enough to encourage us in the midst of our distresses, to approach Him with earnest prayer for further light and help. I am oppressed and cruelly maltreated by sin, and I cannot possibly help myself out of the degradation and wretchedness, in which it has plunged me. I do not know all about God, or anything else, I have no insight into His modes of being, thought and feeling, and I cannot form any adequate idea of the infinitude of any of His attributes. But I is perfectly aware that He is all-wise and Good, all-powerful and Merciful; and I feel within myself an encouragement "to approach the foot-stool of His august Throne for the measure of light and help which I stand in need of, and I appeal to you, Gentlemen, to possess yourselves of the stern truth that there is a Mind in Nature—a Mind that operates through the vast mechanism of the universe in a manner most wonderful.

The arguments of Philosophy and the generalizations of Science, all dwindle into mummery before the power of the Eternal wisdom of God. Approach Him in all the spirit of humility, and when He will condescend to come to you from His august Throne, encompassed with the splendour of innumerable suns, blazing stars, rolling planets, and bright systems. Let this be your motto to serve God above all throughout your life-time. I might here take the liberty to mention that the Religious Idea is the very substance of civilization, and the generating principle of political constitutions. In the word of Edgard Quinet:—"Religion, above all, is the pillar of fire, which goes before the nations, in their march across the ages, it shall serve as a guide." You boast yourselves as being the generations of Indo-Aryans, who possessed a civilization unequalled in the annals of history, I know you feel within yourselves a sense of elation when you remember the glorious chronicles of your Aryan-Forefathers, but I ask you seriously what are you doing to do credit to your birth and education? This is a question for you to think, ponder over this, and try to live a life worthy of your ancestors, or otherwise better not call yourselves the generations of Indo-Aryans. That you may be worthy sons of your ancestors, and thereby exalt your religion into a foremost rank is my fervent prayer. (Cheers)

The learned lecturer having finished his speech, the Chairman asked the audience to comment upon the lecture delivered. At this, Babu Durga Nath Sarkar, M.A., spoke a few words on the subject. He said that apart from considerations of the merits of the subject, he would like to mention first the Poetic beauty of the young lecturer's language, which, as if it were the sweet murmuring sound of a River flowing gently but withal in its sublimity. The lecturer has handled the subject in a very masterly manner, which does credit to his learning, and erudition. He then made a very few remarks on the subject, and took his seat.

The Chairman then rose up, amidst shouts of applause, and addressed the Meeting in a very eloquent tone. He said that, it would have been better had the task of occupying the chair fallen on an abler hand. He said, the lecture has been dealt in so able a manner, as to leave very little room for him to comment upon. He said that the mind of man, above all, proves his superiority over other creatures of creation. So much so, that the Ideal School of Philosophy were led to believe that every phenomenon noticeable in Nature is nothing but a manifestation of the power of the Human Mind. He then quoted a Poem from the Book of Poet Sa'li, and said a day might come when men of this world hold communication with those Beings, who live in stars. (Cheers.)

A vote of thanks was then proposed to the lecturer by Babu Krishna Chandra Deb, and seconded by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bepin Krishna Bose, Member of Governor-General's Legislative Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary to the Society, then having proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was also unanimously carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved after 7-30 P. M.

(vide, the Englishman, the Bengalce 21st, the Hindoo Patriot, the Anrita Bazar Patrika, 27th February, 1900, and also other local newspapers.)

A public Meeting convened by the Society, was held at the premises No 24, Nimtola street, on Wednesday the 25th April, 1900, at 4 P. M., under the presidency, of Dr. N. L. Dey. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the Proceedings of the last Meeting had been read by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Prafulla Chandra Mukerjee to deliver his lecture on—

How great are the powers of Music !

The lecturer spoke on the subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that it is no fiction that Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast. All hearts pay homage to her power; and the saint, the savage and the sage acknowledge their willing allegiance to her sway.

It is a principle that soothes the sorrows of the afflicted, and draws forth tear of affection and of sympathy in their favour. It brings peace to the troubled mind, and like a good conscience can shed a ray of consolation even through the darkness of midnight.

It is a principle that, in the services of the temple, can elevate the mind to Devotion, enjoyed by the voice of inspiration, it is delegated with the power of sublimating the passions, and of lifting the soul to heaven. Music is so directly capable of refining all our sensibilities, and of exerting so felicitous an influence upon Society. For, if any thing that can gladden the heart of innocence, and throw off the unhappy reserve and restraint but too conspicuous in social intercourse, can be so estimated, Music undoubtedly can.

We have known Physicians recommend to the family circle Music and Singing, after dinner, as an efficient means of producing a pleasurable state of mind; and thereby agreeably, we presume to the laws which regulate the nervous sympathy between the brain and the stomach, of promoting a healthful digestion.

We know that literary men in Germany have recourse to Music, not only as a re-creation to the mind, but, as restoration to the body; believing that it affects both the mental and physical powers, and mainly tends to obviate the prejudicial influence of sedentary application.

We sincerely hope, that the time is not distant when education, taken in its true and extensive acceptation, may become generally contributive to the vigour of both body and mind; and when evident on this subject, we may appeal to the practice and experience of literary men abroad. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer for his very able speech.

The Meeting dissolved at 5-30 P. M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

THE HON'BLE MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI, MAHARAJAH BHADUR OF COSSIMBAZAR, Member of the Legislative Council of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.
AN ILLUSTRIOUS PATRON OF THE CALCUTTA LIBRARY SOCIETY, &c. &c. &c.

Preface.

THE name which has shed a halo all over India,—for liberality and generosity is that of the late MAHARANI SURNOMOYEE of Cossimbazar and a Member of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India,—a Lady, who was regarded as the personification of charity in Bengal,—MAHARANI SURNOMOYEE was the most illustrious representative of the distinguished House, and made herself conspicuous by her liberality, from the very beginning of her life.

ON the Tenth day of August, 1871, the Distinction of MAHARANI was conferred on her, and in January, 1878, the distinguished Lady was appointed a Member of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, along with certain other Ladies of the highest Rank of the English Nobility.

THE MAHARANI'S devotion to Religion was un-exampled. The Lady performed all sorts of Rites and Ceremonies in Orthodox-Hindu-style.

MAHARANI SURNOMOYEE expressed kind words of encouragement and sympathy with the work and efforts of the Calcutta Literary Society, in her letter, No. 112, dated the 10th April, 1879, Her Highness concluded her letter thus :—Wishing the Society every success. Again, in letter, No. 104, dated the 4th March, 1880, Her Highness said :—I am glad the Society is growing in worth and importance.

THE name of this distinguished Lady is a house-hold word in India. It was feared that, with the death of the MAHARANI, the benefactions of the Cossimbazar Raj would cease. Happily, the fear has proved un-founded, as the MAHARANI'S illustrious nephew and successor, MAHARAJAH MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI BAHADUR has been maintaining all the best traditions of the Raj un-impaired.

MAHARAJAH MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI was born on Tuesday, the 17th of Jaistha, 1267, B. S., (29th May, 1830). He lost his mother at the tender age of two, his elder brother at seven, and his father at eleven ! His eldest brother also died in the course of the next year ! He suffered from an attack of head-ach, at the early age of fourteen, which compelled him to leave School, and seek for the benefit of a change.

Though relieved of its violence with care and Medical treatment, the disease still recurs from time to time !

ON the death of his noble aunt—MAHARANI SURNOMOYEE, C. I.,—the vast Estates reverted to the Maharani's Mother-in-law, RANI HARA SUNDARI,—then living the life of a recluse at the Holy City of Benares. The reversionary Heir MAHARAJAH MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI,—the only surviving son of SRIMATI GAVINDA SUNDARI, daughter of RANI HARA SUNDARI, succeeded to the Estate, by virtue of a deed of relinquishment, executed by his grandmother, RANI HARA SUNDARI.

MAHARAJAH MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI BAHADUR thus succeeded to the Guddee of the Cossimbazar Raj on the 26th September, 1897. The succession was hailed with joy by people of all ranks throughout the district. The Distinction of Maharajah was subsequently conferred on him by the Government, on the 30th May, 1898, in fulfilment of its pledge to the late illustrious MAHARANI SURNOMOYEE, C. I.

MAHARANI SURNOMOYEE'S brilliant Deeds speak forth to her successor thus :—Go thou and do likewise ! God will bless thee. He will give thee His Grace. And the united-voice of the people will applaud and loudly bless thee.

The following list of the benefactions of MAHARAJAH MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI BAHADUR, during the First three years of his accession to the Gulder of the COSSIMBAZAR RAJ, (i.e.) from 1898 to the present time, will speak for itself :—

	Rs.
Berhampur Water-works,	2,53,827
Private Charities and Alms,	2,01,978
Education,	1,38,648
Miscellaneous Charities,	67,576
Donations and Subscriptions to Tanks,	65,340
Monthly helps to respectable persons, in distressed circumstances ,	61,241
Grants to Brahmins and Paulits ,	33,312
Medical,	18,855
Helps for construction of Public Buildings ,	17,420
Excavation of Tanks and Wells,	10,902
Encouragement to Literature and Literary men ,	5,713
Helps for disposal of girls, in Marriage ,	2,830
Helps to distressed people,	1,760
Total Rs.	8,79,402

These benefactions do not, however, include his daily disbursements to distressed people. If these were added, the total would exceed a Million.

The peculiarity of the Maharajah Bahadur's benefactions is that, all classes of people, without distinction of caste, colour or creed, have benefited by them, and the Money was wisely spent for purposes of both public utility and private charity.

Good drinking water, for instance, is the criying need of almost every district and division of Bengal, and the Maharajah Bahadur of Co-simbazar has, (seeing that Charity begins at home), provided wholesome water for Berhampur, at a cost of more than Rupees two-lacs-and-a-half.

Nearly, a Lac-and-a-half has been devoted to educational purposes. Tanks and Wells have formed a part of the Maharajah Bahadur's beneficence. One of the items, which has particularly drawn the attention of the public, is the monthly stipend given to respectable people, in distressed circumstances.

This form of Charity is very praiseworthy. The Middle class is now almost reduced to beggary, but, being respectable, cannot ask for help, for shame. To support them, by monthly grants, is a work which is especially commendable in a person of high rank and position, who feel for the distress of others, and is anxious to relieve it.

Another item, though small in itself, is also note-worthy.—Help for disposal of girls in Marriage. This particular beneficence will be best appreciated by those poor parents, who have not sufficient means to give their daughters in Marriage.

To complete the Water-works, opened by his distinguished Aunt, and to continue to maintain the Berhampur College, at an annual cost of Rupees Twenty-thousand, and to keep intact almost all the acts of Charity, and Gifts, for which the late Noble Lady occupied the foremost place among the present Land-owners of Bengal, are deeds befitting the position of the Maharajah Bahadur, at present occupying the Gulder of the Cossim-bazar Raj.

His energy, untiring devotion to business, easy accessibility to persons of all classes and creeds, faithful observance of Social and Religious Instructions, purity of life, and Moral Integrity, ungrudging help to friends and relatives are the most prominent features of a character of singular force and vitality formed in the midst of early struggles and adversity.

The Maharajah Bahadur has three sons ; viz :—Maharaj-Kumar Mahim Chandra Nandi ; Maharaj-Kumar Kirti Chandra Nandi and Maharaj Kumar Srish Chandra Nandi ; and two daughters. The eldest son is a student of the B.A. class of the Presidency College, Calcutta.

The Maharajah Bahadur is, as said before, accessible to all. He is full of sympathy. A great personality he makes himself felt as soon as one comes in contact with him.

The Maharajah Bahadur knows the Needs of the Poor, and he has the heart to supply those Needs.

May God bless him with long life, peace, and prosperity.

Address by the Secretary:—

The Hon'ble Chairman, on taking his seat, amidst shouts of applause, Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, addressed as follows:—

Hon'ble CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN—

This is the Twenty-fifth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society.—The Anniversary of this Society is generally held in the month of January each year, but, owing to the lamented demise of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria and Empress of India, this year it was postponed.

We have, therefore, met here this afternoon to celebrate the Twenty-fifth Anniversary, and it is a matter of congratulation that the Society has passed through Twenty-five years of its existence,—during which period, it has weathered many a storm.—Perhaps, the Calcutta Literary Society is the oldest Literary Society in Calcutta, excepting the Mahomedan Literary Society.

The Twenty-fourth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, N.E., on Monday, the 22nd January, 1900, at 6 P. M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Benada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu, Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B. L., C. I. E., Madras Representative of the Governor General's Legislative Council, to whom the best thanks of the Society are hereby given, for the interest he always takes in its welfare.

This Meeting was very largely attended—the Members of the Society, the Graduates and the Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University composed the bulk of the audience. Babu Benayendra Nath Sen, M.A., Professor of the Presidency College, delivered a very eloquent lecture on Our Social Resources. The learned Professor addressed the Meeting for more than an hour, and he was frequently applauded.

Besides the Anniversary Meeting, the following three lectures were delivered during the year 1900; Viz. :—

(1) On Our Duties in the Present Crisis in the Transvaal, by Babu Lalit Mahan Ghosal, Municipal Commissioner of Sinthi-Cossipur, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Ranjit Sinha, Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur, and Member of the Legislative Council of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, at the Classic Theatre, Beadon Street, on

(2) On Mind in Nature, by Mr. R. Palit, of Howrah, under the presidency of Khan Bahadur Mirza Shujat Ali Beg Sahib, Representative of Her Highness the Nawab Begum Sahiba of Murshidabad, C. I., at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Monday, the 19th February, 1900, at 5-15 P. M.

(3) On How Great are the Powers of Music!—by Babu Prafulla Chandra Mukerjee—under the presidency of Dr. N. L. Das, at the office of the Society, on Wednesday, the 25th April, 1900, at 4 P. M.

As the Plague continued to decimate the town, the Society was unable to convene any more public Meetings, during the year.

The following is a Summary of the transactions of the Society during the session, 1900 :—

His Highness Bijoy Chand Mahtab, Maharaj-Adheraj Bahadur of Burdwan, has been pleased to present a copy of his Bejoya Gitika, Part I., for which the best thanks of the Society are hereby given to His Highness.

The best thanks of the Society are hereby given to our distinguished Nobleman and Millionaire of the town, Kumar Radha Prosad Roy Bahadur of Posta for his kindly bearing a part of the expenses in republishing the abstract Proceedings of Public Meetings of the Society (from 1875 to 1885), Part I.

It is with profound sorrow I have to announce that, the Calcutta Literary Society has lost its oldest Patron, His Excellency-General the Right Hon'ble Field-Marshal Sir Donald Martin Stewart, Baronet, G. C. B., G. C. S. I., C. I. E., who was the Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in India, from 1880 to 1887.

In conclusion, the Society begs to record its most cordial and grateful thanks to its Patrons, Members and friends for the valuable aid, which they have rendered to it during the year 1900. (Cheers.)

As the Society was inaugurated by the humble individual, who now stands before you, it is with considerable satisfaction I find that, it has continued to exist for the last Twenty-five years, by the Grace of God,—a fact on which we may all well congratulate our-selves. (Cheers.)

Now I fervently hope that, by the blessing of the Almighty God, our Society may go on prospering in the career of usefulness year after year. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, the Hon'ble Chairman moved that it be adopted. The proposal was carried by acclamation.

The Hon'ble Chairman then introduced the Anagarika H. Dharmapala, (of Ceylon), to the Meeting, and asked him to deliver his lecture on the Origin and Influence of Buddhistic Literature:

The learned lecturer spoke on the subject for nearly an hour, during which he was frequently applauded. He delivered an eloquent speech, which was listened to with rapt attention.

The learned lecturer commenced by saying that, Lord Buddha's life was inimitable. A Prince of Royal Blood he left his home, a young wife and a babe to proceed on tour and to preach the Religion, which it was his Mission to promulgate throughout the length and breadth of the land. His self-sacrifice was very great, and I need hardly say that, as a teacher and instructor his parallel cannot be found in history. He continued that, India was a sealed country to the world before the birth of the Buddha Goutama. The Puranas speak of Him as the Ninth Avatar, or, the God Incarnate; but, give no further details as to the incomparable and stupendous revolution, he had caused by the promulgation of a Religion, which had once been embraced by over 800 millions of the Asiatic race. The Literature that had its origin in the land watered by the Jumna and Ganges is not, now to be found in the birth place of the Supreme One. To the patient, industry of the Bhikkhus of Ceylon, Burma, Siam, China, and Japan as well as the energetic scholarship of European and American Oriental scholars, the non-Buddhist world is deeply indebted for the light, that has thrown on the state of the Indian world in the Buddhist Period dating from 600 B.C. to 100 A.D.

Before the advent of the Tathagata, India had a literature monopolised by the three castes. The Kshatriyas, according to the Upanishads, and the Bhagvat Gita, were the teachers of the Esoteric Doctrine. The Brahmins had to learn the higher philosophy from the Rajanyas. Janaka, the King, taught Vyasa and Suka. In the principal Upanishads the teachers of the Brahmins were Royal Sovereigns. The Brahmins were sacrificers and drinkers of Soma juice. To the king they had to go whenever they wanted to make sacrifices. The Kshatriya caste was to rule the Brahmin and protect him; but, to protect and rule the Kshatriya, the Law of Justice was promulgated. The Kshatriya is the representative of the gods Indra and Surya, and the Brahmin sacrificers worshipped the gods and obeyed the Kshatriya. It is the Kshatriya Royalty that claims all the Avatars; viz.—Rama, Krishna and Buddha. They are the saviours of India, and they are all worshipped and invoked. The Religions of India are the products of the Kshatriya Royal teachers. The sacrificing priests only worshipped the gods, and made human and animal sacrifices to them, but, they were never religion-makers. The Bhagvat Gita contains the exhortations of one Kshatriya to another and the Bhagbat Dharma, taught by Buddha, contains the Ethical, Doctrinal and Psychological Religion, that suits universal Humanity. The pre-Buddhistic Indian Religious teachers confined themselves to India proper, but, for the first time in universal history, Buddha gave to the world an eclectic religion. The castes, as created by Brahma, was a purely Indian Institution, which ethnologically is an anomalous principle incomprehensible to the races outside the Gangetic Valley. Even in the Dravida territory, the early inhabitants had not known the caste differentiations of the Manava Sastras. Countries, beyond Panjab and beyond Himalaya, had no knowledge of Brahma creating the four castes.

For the first time, Indian exclusiveness was removed after the appearance of Buddha. The Greeks had their civilization, which was far more aesthetically developed than the Indian. On the frontier of the Panchala, where East and West met the Grecian and Indian studied together in the University of Takkha Sila. That the sons of the Indian Nobility and Princes had their education completed. Arts and Science were studied; and Indian students from Kasi, Mithila, Magadha, and Kosala met each other there, who, after finishing their education, returned to their respective homes. Painting, architecture, archery and all useful sciences were taught. But, there was no Religion. Ascetic philosophers had their retreat Ashtams on the banks of the Ganges, Nerbada, Jumna and Godavery, as well as on the summits of the Gangetic Valley. Manasaravar, the Mano Sila of the Pali texts, was the abode of great Rishis. These were the philosophers, who, renouncing the pleasures of the sensual world, soared high into the realms of the infinite. There were metaphysicians, who went high above the realms of the material heavens as far as the immaterial heavens; they transcended space and occupied themselves in the psychological exercise of analysing the perceptions, whether they could get absolute emancipation from the senses.

Religion proper had no existence. People were given stones, when they wanted bread. Naked asceticism based on the principles of animal life, following the habits of the cow, the dog, the fowl, the bird, retreating into a forest to mortify the body for the purpose of emancipating the Soul entity from the prison of physical atomic organization, by sublimating the body through a process of starvation, was the climate approaching Religion. Ordinary people worshipped trees, rivers, forests; and priests sacrificed cow hiefers, goats, lambs, &c., to appease the Deva Gods.

Buddha then appeared on the scene and gave India a Religion, removing all accretions of morbid asceticism of sacrifices and caste monopolies. The absolute uselessness of slaughtering innocent animals was taught by the Great One; asceticism was condemned. The priest had lost his profession, and the Ascetic saint had lost his followers; spiritual trust which had become the monopoly of the higher caste were ignored and Humanity became partakers of the Divine Law of Righteousness.

The disciple Bhikkhus of Buddha were the great pioneers of civilization. By the influence of the Doctrine of Righteousness, five hundred years before the birth of Christ, the whole of Asia was saved from the immoral ethics of Nihilism, Atheism, Polytheism and Sensualism. A lofty conception of spiritual life was enunciated and the millions upon millions for these two thousand four hundred years have found solace and comfort in the beneficent teachings of the Omni-scient One, whose glorified life has been the highest ideal, which has been given to man to follow on this Earth of Sin and Sorrow.

The influence of Buddhistic Literature is beginning to be felt in Europe and America, and the study of Pali by Western scholars has proved the way for wider appreciation of the sublime tenets by the people in the West, for the Ethics, Philosophy and Psychology of the Religion of Buddha are unique and incomparable. (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech the Hon'ble Chairman drew the attention of the audience to all that the speaker had said. He gave a digest, so that, they might carry the instruction home, and profit by the lessons imparted to them. The Presidential address was worthy of the occasion.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhur said, I beg to propose vote of thanks to the learned lecturer for his instructive and interesting discourse, and to the Hon'ble Chairman for the clear manner, in which he had placed before the audience all that the lecture had said.

The Votes were carried by acclamation.

The Meeting then came to a close.

Proceedings of the Silver Jubilee Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 20th March, 1901, at 5 P. M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Vinada, M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B. L., Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire, Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, &c., &c., &c. The hall was crowded by a large number of Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, and other respectable gentlemen of the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta.

To celebrate the Silver Jubilee of the Calcutta Literary Society, a very interesting ceremony was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 20th March, 1901, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Vinada, M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B.L., C.I.E., Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, &c., &c., &c.

The hall was decorated with flowers, trees, and garlands. The trees were placed in most excellent order, which imparted beauty to the building.

On the table, in the platform, were placed huge Nosegays of Roses of variegated colors, which imparted a charm to the distinguished audience. There was a large gathering of Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, and other respectable gentlemen of the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta.

On the Hon'ble Chairman taking his seat, amidst shouts of applause, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar said :—

Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen,

I have been asked by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Secretary and Founder of this Society, to give something like an address of the President of this Society. (Cheers.)

If the President of the Society, the late Dr. Jagendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M. A., D. D., Law-Examiner of the Calcutta University, &c., had been living to-day, he would have gladly addressed you on the present occasion. The success of the work of the Society measured by the number, substance and length of the speeches delivered at its various Meetings has been great. But, to our extreme regret, he has untimely been snatched away by the cruel hand of death! He had a carbuncle, and he succumbed to it, in June, 1899!

I have been temporarily acting for him. I have been present at most of its Meetings, and I have had ample opportunities of watching with interest the Proceedings of the Society.

I had the honor to preside at several of its Meetings, and I can safely affirm that, the Society conducted its operations in a way, that must command itself to those, who have the well-being of their country at heart.

I now unhesitatingly assert that, the lectures, delivered at its various Meetings, were generally of a very high order. The gathering was large, and the Society, I have no doubt, is engaged in excellent work.

It is, indeed, a matter of congratulation that, the Society has now passed through the Twenty-sixth year of the existence, during which period, many Literary Societies were started in the town, several of which have now ceased to exist. It is, therefore, gratifying that, the Calcutta Literary Society not only exists, but, has achieved marvellous success. This is only due to the untiring zeal and energy of its worthy Secretary, Babu Sham Lal Day, who projected the Society, and which he has been nourishing with his own hands, for a quarter of a century, from 1875 to 1899. (Cheers.)

The Calcutta Literary Society has gone through much practical and useful work during the last Twenty-five years. The lectures delivered, during this period, were One hundred and sixty in number, giving an average of more than Six lectures, during a year, on subjects of Literary and Scientific interest. This is a matter much to be congratulated upon.

The Calcutta Literary Society has had its troubles, but, in spite of them, has amply fulfilled the expectations of its promoters. This is as it should be.

Not only Lectures were delivered, but Messages of Congratulations and Condolence were sent from time to time to high personages in India and England, to which replies have been received, as will be found printed in the Appendices, attached to the Report of the Society.

It would, perhaps, be egotistical, if the Society was to narrate all the work that it has done, during the last Twenty-five years. But, the Council cannot help alluding to some of the most important of the works it has gone through.

Besides the Lectures given at Meetings, connected by the Society, with which department of its work it was not fully satisfied, the Society, therefore, established Four English Schools, at four different places, for imparting education to the children of the people of middle classes, at moderate fees, as they could not afford to pay for the high rates, which obtained in other schools of the town.

These Four Schools were situated, one at No. 50, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sovabazar; the second at No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, the third at Haraganj Road, Silkea, and the fourth at No. 81, Baranasi Ghoses' Street, Calcutta.

All the Four Schools imparted education in the English language, up to the Calcutta University Entrance Standard and the nature of the education imparted in them will speak for itself.

The Schools existed for Eight years; viz :—From 1883 to 1890, and when it was found that other schools, with similar objects, were started throughout the town, at which instructions could be obtained at moderate fees, the Society thought it advisable of closing its Schools, thinking that they had done their work.

You will, perhaps, be anxious to hear the amount of money, which the Society spent upon its Four Schools. I am glad to tell you that, the amount expended was upwards of Thirty-two Thousand Rupees during eight years, giving an average of Four thousand Rupees, a year.

This sum was partly paid by our worthy Secretary and Patrons of the Society, and partly from the small fees received from the pupils of the Schools, who attended in them. The Society did not work for a name, it proceeded on principles of utilitarianism.

Several of the pupils of the Schools received Free-board and lodging, according to their circumstances. Upon this work of Charity, a large sum of money was also expended.

Several of the pupils of these Schools have now grown into man-hood, and they are now employed in Government and Mercantile Offices. Some have been practicing as Medical Practitioners, and others are working as Pleaders and Tradesmen. This, indeed, is much gratification to the Council.

Here I think it necessary to state that, during the

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

Eight years of the existence of the Schools, medals, prizes, and scholarships were awarded to the meritorious pupils, at each of their annual and quarterly examinations.

The Schools were also visited by some of the most eminent men, such as Mr. A. C. Clarke, C. B., Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle, the late Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerjea, F. U. C., the Revd. James M. Hamilton, M. A., B. D., Professor of the General Assembly's College, Rai Radhika Prasanna Mukerjea Bahadur, &c. These gentlemen expressed themselves highly satisfied with the progress made by the pupils of our Schools, and they all have given testimonials of their appreciation. (Vide, the Annual Reports of the Calcutta School).

The Council had always been of opinion that, it should labour for the sake of the work, that devolved upon it, and not for a name, and it must be confessed that, it had succeeded in all its efforts in this direction.

The Objects of the Calcutta Literary Society, are :—

- (a) To foster Social Union between Europeans and Indians,
- (b) To further Intellectual culture.

The lectures which are given at its various Meetings are calculated to revive a spirit of friendliness, when the European and the Indian meet on common ground to discuss Literary and Scientific subjects of importance to those, who take an interest in them.

When lectures on subjects delivered in the English language had been well nigh exhausted, the Council invited some of the most learned men of this city, and those, who visited it, to deliver lectures in Hindi and Bengali, on abstruse subjects.

The Secretary is the founder of the Society, and it is natural, therefore, that he should continue in his work of love with the same earnestness and zeal which he evinced when the Institution was established in the year 1875.

Babu Sham Lall Day, the worthy Secretary of the Society, has three-fourths of the time had the sole practical management of its various activities, and the Council desire to express their deep sense of gratitude of the excellent work, which he has quietly and un-ostentatiously carried through these twenty-five years past.

All the more, great credit is due to the indefatigable Secretary that he has been able to keep the Institution at a steady level of prosperity. (Cheers.)

I trust that the Society will go on increasing in usefulness, and continue to do its good work for many years yet to come. (Cheers.)

Address by the Secretary :—

After Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar had finished his speech, Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, said :—
Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen,

It is most fortunate that, we have had such a high personages as the Hon'ble Vidya Vinada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avargal, Rai Bahadur, B. L., Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire, and Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, to preside at the Silver Jubilee Meeting of the Society, this afternoon, with his usual kindness towards the Institution.

The Members of the Society beg to tender their warmest thanks for the favor, and I am also grateful to him for having spared the time in the midst of the multifarious duties of his office to come here to-day.

We meet here this evening to celebrate the Silver Jubilee Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, having for its objects—a creation of Social Union between Europeans and Indians, and furtherance of intellectual culture.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of public Meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest.

Since the date of its foundation, the Society has been able to organize scores of public Meetings presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Majesty's subjects, and by so doing it has marvellously achieved a fair measure of success.

The Society was started by me in January, 1875 with the help of some of my young friends,—the advanced pupils of various institutions of the town who were then associated with me in the good work.

I have the honour of being the Secretary since its foundation in 1875, and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has rapidly been marching onward in the path of progress, ever since its establishment.

May He continue to shower His manifold blessings upon us, grant us strength enough to sustain us in our work, and cheer us at the time of our difficulties. (Cheers).

After Babu Sham Lah Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly adopted, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Anagrika H. Dharmapala, of Ceylon, to deliver his lecture on—

THE STUDENT LIFE IN ANCIENT BUDDHISTIC INDIA :

The learned lecturer, who, on rising, was received with cheers, dwelt on his Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, when the world was covered with Sin and Misery, Lord Buddha appeared to impart its teachings to those, who were much in need of them. His teachings covered every thing.

The Great Promulgator, who enunciated the Bhagvat Dharma, formulated his Religion on the strong basis of a strict ethical discipline. The student had to learn sitting at the feet of his Upajjay, or, the Spiritual Preceptor, for several years, and then with his permission, the student had to go in search of the teacher, —the Acharyya, for the prosecution of higher studies, under whom he had to serve for at least five years.

Lord Buddha laid down Ten principal Rules for the Brahmachari students, which are to be observed by every one between the ages of seven and twenty. The student-life begins at the age of seven.

The following are the Ten Rules of the Brahmachari; viz:—

- (1) To abstain from destroying life,
- (2) " from stealing,
- (3) " from sexual intercourse,
- (4) " from lying,
- (5) " from taking intoxicating drinks, &c.,
- (6) " from taking food after 12 A. M., till next morning. (But, Ghee and sugar may be taken, if necessary),
- (7) " from dancing, music and theatrical shows,
- (8) " from wearing garlands, and using unguents, scented oils for beautifying the body,
- (9) " accepting gold and silver,
- (10) " using high and broad beds.

The student had to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning, use a daton, or a prepared twig or brush for cleaning teeth, he had to prepare his lessons, sweep the sacred grounds near the Bo Tree, and the Shrine.

He had to bring water and place before the Upajjhaya for washing his face, hands and feet, and hand over the prepared tooth-brush. He had to do the several duties of a valet to his teacher—in handing him his double robes, his begging bowl, and, when the teacher went to beg food, he had to follow him, and when returning to the monastery, he had to go first, so that, he might prepare the seat for the teacher, and the water to wash his feet. When the teacher arrived, he had to go to meet him, take his food bowl from his hands, and place it in the proper place, and when the hour for taking meal had come, he had to follow the teacher to the dining hall, and there at a distance from the teacher he had to sit and eat his food.

After finishing his meals, he had to wash the bowl of the teacher; put the robes of the teacher for a little time in the Sun, and when the teacher went for his noon-day rest, under some tree or quiet place, he entered his own room, or some solitary place and began his studies. Till 4 P. M., he studied, and then again began the duties of bringing water to the teacher, sweeping the sacred grounds, lighting the lamps in the shrine.

After offering flowers at the shrine, wherein are the Relics of Budha or where his statue is placed, he went to the Teacher, made the necessary obeisance and in the ukhuthika posture asked the teacher's pardon for the faults committed, if any, and then again began his studies. He repeated the paritta, the sacred recitations, to ward off all evil influences, and at 10 P. M., he retired to sleep.

As a student, he had to sleep in the dormitory, set apart for the students, who were under twenty-one years of age. No elder was allowed to sleep in the dormitory of students. This was the routine of the Spiritual student, till he reached his twentieth year. As a student, he must not expose his body, always he must be decently robed, he must not associate with others, who were not his Spiritual companions.

When he arrived at the age of twenty-first year, he had the option of continuing his Spiritual studies, and gaining the super-human knowledge of the exalted Arhats and attaining the absolute Nirvan, or leaving it for the house-hold life to marry, and beget children. Such was the Brahmachari student-life, that was ordained by the Tathas, and the children were well-trained in the Monasteries, and were converted under Spiritual leaders the Bhikkhus and Bhikkunis.

India for a thousand and five hundred years maintained this discipline, and there was happiness in the land. When this training and discipline were neglected by the followers of Buddha, the decline of the youth began, and then came the downfall of the Great Teacher's Religion in India.

He also dwelt upon the following three main points; Viz :—

- (1) The boys and girls were equally liberally educated.
- (2) Buddhist Religious Education did not exclude the Vedas.
- (3) The Upadhyas looked not only after the literary, but, also, the Moral and Social education of Brahmacharis (pupils). Buddha asked his pupils not to accept any thing, on mere authority, without critically understanding it; the young men should realize, as far as possible, the ideal. (Cheers)

The lecturer continued to say that, boys should not be married before the age of twenty-one, and the girls before they attain their teens. In ancient Buddhist India, the Hindu-females were duly educated. They advanced in learning and they taught other people, the Philosophy of life.

An old man was always lamenting for the death of his son, as he had then only one daughter left. After a few days, an educated man, who saw the person weeping, advised him to go to Buddha, when all his pangs will cease. The old man complied with his request. He started from Benares for Mithila, where he met Buddha. The old man was thus consoled by visiting Budha.

Agastrika H. Dharmapala continued that, there was no Caste System amongst Buddhists. The Teachings of Buddha embraced every department of Philosophy. It is not easy to analyse them.

The progress of human thought was dependent upon these teachings. Moral development was one of the principal objects, which engaged Buddha's attention.

Man should make progress both Intellectually and Morally, so as to become fit members of Society. We have many men here, who do not think of others. Their sole attention is confined to themselves.

God made man not to live for himself alone, but, also for others. No Society can advance, unless its members learn to lead an useful life. We should exercise strong common sense, in judging, as to what we should do, and what we should avoid doing.

We should cultivate manliness. We should try to follow the footsteps of our fore-fathers, as they were great.—Great in wisdom, learning and morality. It is the moral man that makes a deep impression upon others.

We should learn to rely upon ourselves. We should try to develop the resources of our own country. We should try to make rapid strides in every department of life. We should try to advance as Japan and America. Our fore-fathers were great and civilized. In ancient times, when other people were ignorant and superstitious, we advanced in civilization and learning. (Cheers).

After the learned lecturer has finished his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman, commented upon it very elaborately, and incidentally called Mr. Dharmapala his Guru.

In conveying the thanks of the Society to the learned speaker, he said that, it is stated in the Sanskrit Text that, we should never utter what is unpleasant to others—though, true. On the contrary, my contention is that, we should always say what is unpleasant,—if true. I thank Dharmapala for the way, in which he has conveyed his teachings to us this evening.

You must all know what you ought to be. To have discontent in you is good, because, discontent leads to emulation, and by emulation, we try to excel others. By emulation, I do not mean envy. You should all try to acquire Self-knowledge. I do not say that, you should not become R.A. S., and M. A. S., but, that you should do so, and, after having done so, you must complete your education. You must not sit like Buddha—under a tree, but, that you must try to act, and act like men.

The cause of humanity demands that, we should all work,—and work for the benefit of the public good. God's creation shows that, He is always active, and, therefore, we should try to follow God in our lives and actions. (Cheers).

The Hon'ble Chairman then congratulated the Society upon the admirable work, which has been done during the last twenty-five years. He was glad to find that the condition of the Society was what it ought to be, and wished the Institution every prosperity and success. (Cheers).

With a vote of thanks to the chair, proposed by Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, and carried with acclamation, the proceedings terminated at 8-30 P. M.

(Vide, the Englishman, the Statesman, the Bengalee, 22nd March, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, for March, & the Journal of the Moha Bodhi Society, for April, 1901.)

A well-attended public Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Metropolitan Institution, Bow Bazar Branch, No 187, Bow Bazar Street, on Monday, the 29th July, 1901, at 6-30 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Asutosh Ghose, B. A.

The hall was very beautifully decorated with flags, foliage, and evergreens, and as the Meeting was convened in commemoration of the Tenth Anniversary of the death of the late Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar, C. I. E., there was a dense crowd of people of all classes, who had gathered to bear testimony to the great popularity of the late Vidyasagar.

After the Chairman had explained the object of the Meeting, he introduced Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, and asked him to deliver his lecture on the :—

Life and teachings of the late Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar, C. I. E.

The Babu, who, on rising, was received with deafening cheers, then addressed the Meeting thus :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

As one of the oldest friends of the venerable Pandit, I think it due to him, that I should say a few words regarding his life and teachings.

Ten years have elapsed since his death ! The late Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar was born in a village called Birsinha, in Midnapur, in the year 1820. His father, Pandit Thaker Dass Banerjea was very poor. He had not sufficient means to pay for the expenses of the education of his boy. Finding, that there was great facility in educating the Brahmin boys in the Calcutta Government Sanskrit College, Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar was admitted into that Institution for learning Sanskrit-Grammar.

After finishing his education there, he secured the appointment of Head-Pandit, under Major Marshall, in the Fort-William College, on a salary of Rupees Fifty per month. At this time, he learnt the English, Uriah, Hindi, and Urdu languages.

Major Marshall soon began to appreciate the intrinsic merits of the learned Pandit, and it was through his influence, that the late Pandit was afterwards appointed Assistant Professor of the Calcutta Government Sanskrit-College.

It was here that his parts began to display themselves in their brightness. In course of time, his services were so much appreciated by those, under whom he was employed, that he was afterwards promoted to the office of Principal of that College.

The Pandit commanded the highest respect of those, who knew him. As a load-stone converts iron into gold by its simple touch, so, the company of the late Pandit always exerted an influence for good, which cannot be over-rated.

The late Babu Ram Kamal sen was then Secretary of the Sanskrit-College, and although, he did not like as an Orthodox-Hindu, the heterodox ideas of the learned Pandit, still, he could not help admiring him for his erudition. He was afterwards appointed Inspector of Schools. And it was, in consequence of a difference with the then Director of Public Instruction, that he was at last obliged to resign his office.

My intimacy with him began to grow, when he joined the Committee of Management of the Calcutta Training School. The circumstances, which led to the establishment of this Institution, were rather unique. When the School of the late Mr. David Hare was converted from a free to a paying-Institution, and, when the Missionaries commenced to take fees from their pupils, that the idea of establishing a School for the education of boys of poor parents, at moderate fees, was broached.

The Calcutta Training School was established in Shanker Ghose's Lane, Cornwallis Street, at the house of the late Babu Shankar Chandra Ghose. Babu Hem Chandra Banerjea, afterwards Senior Government Pleader, was appointed Head-Master of the School, on a salary of Rupees fifty per month.

Babu Thakerdass Chakerberty conducted the duties of Secretary of the Committee, which were composed of Eight Members. Subsequently, Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar was asked to join the Committee as President, and three other Members were also added to the Committee.

The School greatly flourished, and for a time, the work of the Institution went on smoothly. But, afterwards a cloud that appeared like a child's hand, in the horizon of the Committee gathered and broke into thunder claps and lightening.

This difference divided the Committee into two factious parties. The Secretary opened a School, close to the Institution, called the Calcutta Training Academy. It was, therefore, thought expedient that, the Calcutta Training School be made over to a new Committee, all the old members resigning in a body.

This idea found favour with the old Committee, and a new Committee was formed, under the presidency of the late Rajah Pratap Chandra Singh Bahadur of Paikhar, who appointed Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar to be its Secretary. The School, thus greatly flourished, and, it was afterward called the Metropolitan Institution.

Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagar devoted his head and heart to promote the education of the boys of this country. It was for his spirit of self sacrifice, benevolent and public-spirit that, his Memory is still cherished with the fondest of recollection by his country men.

It was through the influence of the late Pandit that the Hindu-Family Annuity Fund, which was projected by Babu Nabin Chandra Sen, Babu Nand Lal Mitra and Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar was established and flourished. He was appointed a Trustee in conjunction with the late Justice Dwarka Nath Mitra. They were afterwards constrained to resign, owing to a difference in the Committee and to avoid future unpleasantness, the Hindu-Family Annuity Fund was made over to Government. The Fund still exists, and its business is now managed by a Committee, of which the Hon'ble Dr. Asutosh Mukerjea is President.

The large gathering of this evening shows the esteem, in which the late Pandit is still held by the people of all classes, high and low, rich and poor. I do not wish to say much regarding his princely benevolence, which is too well and widely-known. It was, on account of this, that he was fitly called the father and mother of the widow and the orphan.

On one occasion, he told me that, if he possessed the wealth of the richest man, then in this town, the late Millionaire, Babu Shama Charn Mullick, it would not be too long before he spent all his fortune in acts of charity. His charities were of a private character. His right hand gave, what his left hand did not know. He did not seek for a name. He did not give princely donations for publication in the New papers, so that, the Government and the people might know what he gave. This, indeed, was a trait in his character, which cannot be too greatly admired.

He always expressed his anxiety to found a People's Association to represent the grievances of the poor to Government. He used to say that, the rich zemindars had the British Indian Association. When I would tell him, who would become the President, and bear the expenses of the new Association? He would then smile and say that, he would like to have Babu Shama Charn Dey and Babu Peary Charn Sarkar as Vice-Presidents, and Gobin Chandra Dhar as its Secretary, and a Weekly Journal to be conducted by the last named gentleman, with the help of Babu Peary Charn Sarkar.

The idea, however, could not be carried out, in consequence of differences in Native Committees, of which he would always complain. He would say that, the Ati Brahmi Samaj flourished, because, it was under the management of a single individual, Maharshi Devendra Nath Tagore, and, the Brahma Samaj of India also, flourished, because, it was under the sole management of Babu Keshub Chandra Sen, although there were Committees to help them.

I have forgotten to tell you that, he was a great advocate for the Education of girls. When the late Mr. Bethune thought of establishing a School for their education, he greatly helped him. The Pandit was not only much liked by him, but, also by Dr. Mouat—the then Secretary of the Council of Education, and Mr. Cecil Beadon, afterwards Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

It was this last named gentleman, who greatly helped him, in getting the Widow-Marriage Bill passed. His pamphlet against Kulin polygamy his work on the Exile of Sita, and his numerous other works, well-adapted for the education of the youths of this country, bear ample testimony to his gigantic intellect and versatile command over the language of his country.

It might justly be said that, he was the father of Idiomatic Bengali Language, which some of our educated countrymen have recently improved for the expression of their thoughts. The late Fandit was not only a good, but, really a great man,—the like of whom, we can seldom meet with.

He died in the year 1891, at the age of Seventy-one, deeply mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives.

The Meeting broke up at 8 p.m., with votes of thanks to the lecture, the chair and to the Manager of the Institution, for lending the use of the hall for holding the Meeting of the Society, (Vide, the Bengalee, 30th July, 1901).

On hearing the lamentable demise of Her Imperial Majesty the Empress Frederick Victoria Mary Louise, the Dowager-Empress of Germany, a widely-attended special Meeting was convened at the Wellington Square Park, on Wednesday, the 7th August 1901, for expressing the sorrow, and offering the sincere condolence of the Society to the Members of the Bereaved Royal Family, on the sad event, which happened on Monday, the 5th August, 1901.

The following Resolution was unanimously carried, a solemn silence :—

That the Calcutta Literary Society have learnt with profound grief the demise of Her Imperial Majesty the Empress-Frederick of Germany, and humbly desire to offer their respectful condolence to His Imperial Majesty the Emperor and other Members of the Royal Family in their bereavement.

It was further Resolved that the Office of the Society be closed for three days, in honor of the memory of the late illustrious Dowager-Empress of Germany.

The Resolution was forwarded to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

A copy of the above Resolution was also forwarded to the Imperial German-Consulate at Calcutta, on the 8th August, 1901, to which the following acknowledgment was received :—

I. No. 1228-1236.

Kaiserlich Deutsches General-Konsulat
in Calcutta.

Simla, the 19th of August, 1901.

From,

Baron Speck Von Sternburg, Imperial German-Consul-General,
Simla.

To,

SHAM LALL DAY, Esq,
Founder and Secretary,
The Calcutta Literary Society,
Calcutta.

Dear Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that I have transmitted your letter, expressing the sympathy of the Honourable Members of the Calcutta Literary Society with His Imperial Majesty,—my Most Gracious Master, and the Members of Royal Family on the melancholy occasion of the demise of Her Late Imperial Majesty the Empress Frederick, immediately after having received it from the Imperial German Consul at Calcutta to His Excellency Count Von Bismarck, Chancellor of the German Empire, for Submission to His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Germany.

Believe me to be,

Dear Sir,

Yours Sincerely,

Baron Speck Sternburg,

In celebrating the 16th Anniversary of the death of the Great Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa of Dakshineswar, a special Meeting was convened by the Society at the Beaton Park, on Thursday, the 5th September 1901,—the sacred day observed by the Hindus, on the occasion of their Janmastomi Festival.

The unfortunate weather accounted for the thinning in the gathering of spectators—the assembly being not very large.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of the lecturer Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, on account of the four weather who had intended to deliver an address on—

The Life and Teachings of Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa,

Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, was requested to read his notes.

The Secretary to the Society accordingly read them "Gentlemen,"

We are assembled here to-day to celebrate the Sixteenth Anniversary Utsav of the Great Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa of Dakshineswar. This is a day peculiarly holy to us—the Hindus—for two following reasons ; viz :—

- (1) Being the Anniversary Birthday of Sri Krishna, whom the Hindus worship, with great ecstacy and devotional fervour, such as is seldom to be met with in any part of the country.
- (2) Being the day, on which the late Paramhansa died in his recess at Dakhineswar where the present generation had ample opportunities of seeing and conferring with one of the most learned and devotional Hindus, whose Orthodox teaching carried conviction to such eminent men as the late Keshub Chandra Sen and other Members of the Calcutta University who have passed the Degrees with Honours, and to whom it was difficult to carry him the Orthodox teachings of the Hindu-Religion, which the Śrīmat-Bhagbat Gita and other Religious works of the Munis and Rishis of old inculcate.

Sri Ramkrishna Paramhansa was the youngest son of Pandit Khudern Chatterjee. He was born at Kimarkur, (a small village, situated twenty-four miles west of the Great Temple at Turkeswar), on Wednesday, the 20th February, 1835. He was deeply engaged in prayer for twelve years. Rani Rashmoni dearly loved him with veneration. She wished him to live at her Dakhineswar Kalibari. So, the father of the Paramhansa at last spent the remainder of his days with his son, Sri Ram Krishna, at Dakhineswar.

The Paramhansa was married at the age of twenty-four, with the fifth daughter of Pandit Ram Chandra Mukerjee at Joyrampur. His Guru was Pandit Narayan Shastri of Jeyrampur.

The name of Sri Krishna, as you are all well-aware, is calculated to create in our minds feelings of devotion and sacred associations, with which, His Worship is coupled in those, who believe in His incarnation.

His sayings and doings are enshrined in that holy book of the Hindus—the Bhagbat-Gita. Even in these days, when infidelity predominates so largely in the land, there are to be found men, who are so devout, that they will not take their morning meals, without reading a Chapter or two of this Great work.

The teachings of the Bhagbat-Gita are now being fully appreciated by those of our Western fellow-brethren, who have made the Oriental Language and Literature, their fond objects of study. With them, the Bhagbat-Gita is, now-a-days, a greater favorite than with our own countrymen.

The mind of the late Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa was full to overflowing with the spirit of the teachings of the Bhagbat-Gita. He only knew how to imbibe that spirit, and to seat it in the innermost

There is a beauty in the splendour of the teachings of the Bhagbat-Gita, which cannot be over-rated. To those teachings, we are indebted for all that is beautiful and grand in our daily worship, which forms the admiration of the world.

With those, who made the acquaintance of the late Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa at Dakhineswar, he was a great favorite. Those, who had the pleasure of once seeing him and talking with him, entertained a great regard for his Devotion and Spiritual development, the like of which, can seldom be met with elsewhere.

Several of his Disciples were so enchanted with his conversation that, they fell at his feet, and worshipped him. Those Disciples were not ignorant men. Most of them were University Scholars, who had creditably passed the Degrees with Honor, both to themselves and to their fellow-countrymen.

Some of those Disciples have travelled in many Foreign countries of Europe and America, who preached there the Great Teachings of Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa with advantage to themselves, and to those, who listened to them at Meetings, which consisted chiefly of men of erudition of the West, whose knowledge and culture cast a halo round their names. (Cheers.)

The Teachings of these Disciples formed the admiration, particularly of European and American Ladies of Rank, who were even moved to tears!

Sucmi Alhayananda, a distinguished American Laity of vast literary acquisitions, who had lately visited India, and several countries of the East, felt a pride in pronouncing his name, and speaking of him with great veneration and respect. The Laity is, in a manner, welded to the Disciples of Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa, and felt a great pleasure in being present at various Meetings, where those Disciples delivered lectures or preached Religious Truths, which emanated from the late Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa.

I happened to know several of those, who took great pleasure in visiting the Paramhansa on Sundays and other holidays, when I went to him. I have heard them pronounce his name with awe and veneration. They have confessed that his teachings left a peculiar impression in their minds, which could seldom be effaced. I can personally testify this statement.

They are even now found to remark that, so long as they lived in this world, they would always cherish his name with the fondest of recollections. Even our distinguished townsman,—the foremost Reformer of his time, used to visit the Paramhansa at Dakhineswar, in spite of several engagements, which always claimed his time and attention. He used to speak of him with fondness and admiration. It was, indeed, a Scene, when the two congenial Spirits met together, and conversed on Religious Topics of grave importance.

The mode of speaking of Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa was colloquial and common place, such as could easily be understood, even by the most ignorant.

There was interspersed in his Speech, which, though common place in itself, a grandeur and a holiness, such as is hardly to be met with in the speeches of the best of our Religious teachers.

There was a force of Logic, which could seldom be refuted. That was his special forte, which only men of intelligence and culture knew how to realize.

We know not how to admire Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa and his Teachings. No language is strong enough to depict them in vivid colours. It was the strangeness of his Teachings, which made those, who listened to him to stare and look aghast at him. They could not discover the Reason, how to much wisdom could lay hid in the store-house of that small brain, which the late Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa had possessed.

He was not pretty to look at. Neither he had any out-ward attraction. His structure was of a peculiar make. He did not possess a heavy skull. He was, rather a man of small dimensions. But, his Intellect was of a commanding nature, which few could hardly phathom, and which still, fewer are known to possess. It is not strange, therefore, that some of his Disciples believe in his Incarnation. (Cheers).

The Meeting then terminated.
(Vide, the Bengalee, 6th September, 1901.)

On receipt of the sad intelligence of the cruel and premature demise of His Excellency President Mc. Kinley of the United States of America, the Office of the Calcutta Literary Society was closed, as a mark of respect to the late distinguished President. It also remained closed on the 19th September, 1901, commemoration of the funeral of His Excellency.

A Letter of Condolence was, accordingly, duly forwarded by the Society, to General R. F. Patterson, Consul-General of the United States of America, requesting therein to convey the heart-felt Sympathy of the Society to the bereaved family of the late illustrious President Mr. Mc. Kinley, and the American Nation into their bereavement, to which the following reply was received:—

United States Consulate-General,
Calcutta,
September, 19th, 1901.

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for your very kind letter of condolence on the death of President Mc. Kinley—Mr. Mc. Kinley was one of the most popular Presidents our country ever had, and his death is a great calamity.

Had such a tragedy occurred in a Despotism country, one might understand it; but in our, where the People elect their own rulers, it seems incomprehensible, though Mr. Mc. Kinley is the third President, who has been associated in the United States within the last thirty-six years.

Our country is too free in permitting Anarchists to propagate their infamous doctrines by public speeches and through the press, and it is time measures were taken to stamp them out.

Again thanking you for your kind sympathy,
Sham Lal Day, Esq.,

Founder-Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society,
24, Nimtola Street.

I am,
Sincerely yours,
R. F. Patterson.
Consul-General, U. S. A.

The following letter was subsequently received from the Consul-General of Germany:—

24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta.

Dear sir,

I am directed by His Excellency Count Von Bismarck, Chancellor of the German Empire, to inform you that your letter containing the address of condolence of the Calcutta Literary Society, on the lamentable death of Her Late Imperial Majesty the Empress Frederick has been placed before His Imperial Majesty, my Most Gracious Master.

I am further directed to convey to you and the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society His Imperial Majesty's sincere thanks for your sympathy with Him in the great loss which the Imperial Family has met with, and to ask you to assure the Members of your Society of His Majesty's grateful appreciation of all kind feelings expressed in their Resolution.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF

The Calcutta Literary Society,

BY SPECIAL PERMISSION,

DEDICATED

TO

Maharaj-Kumar Raj Rajendra Narayan Bahadur,

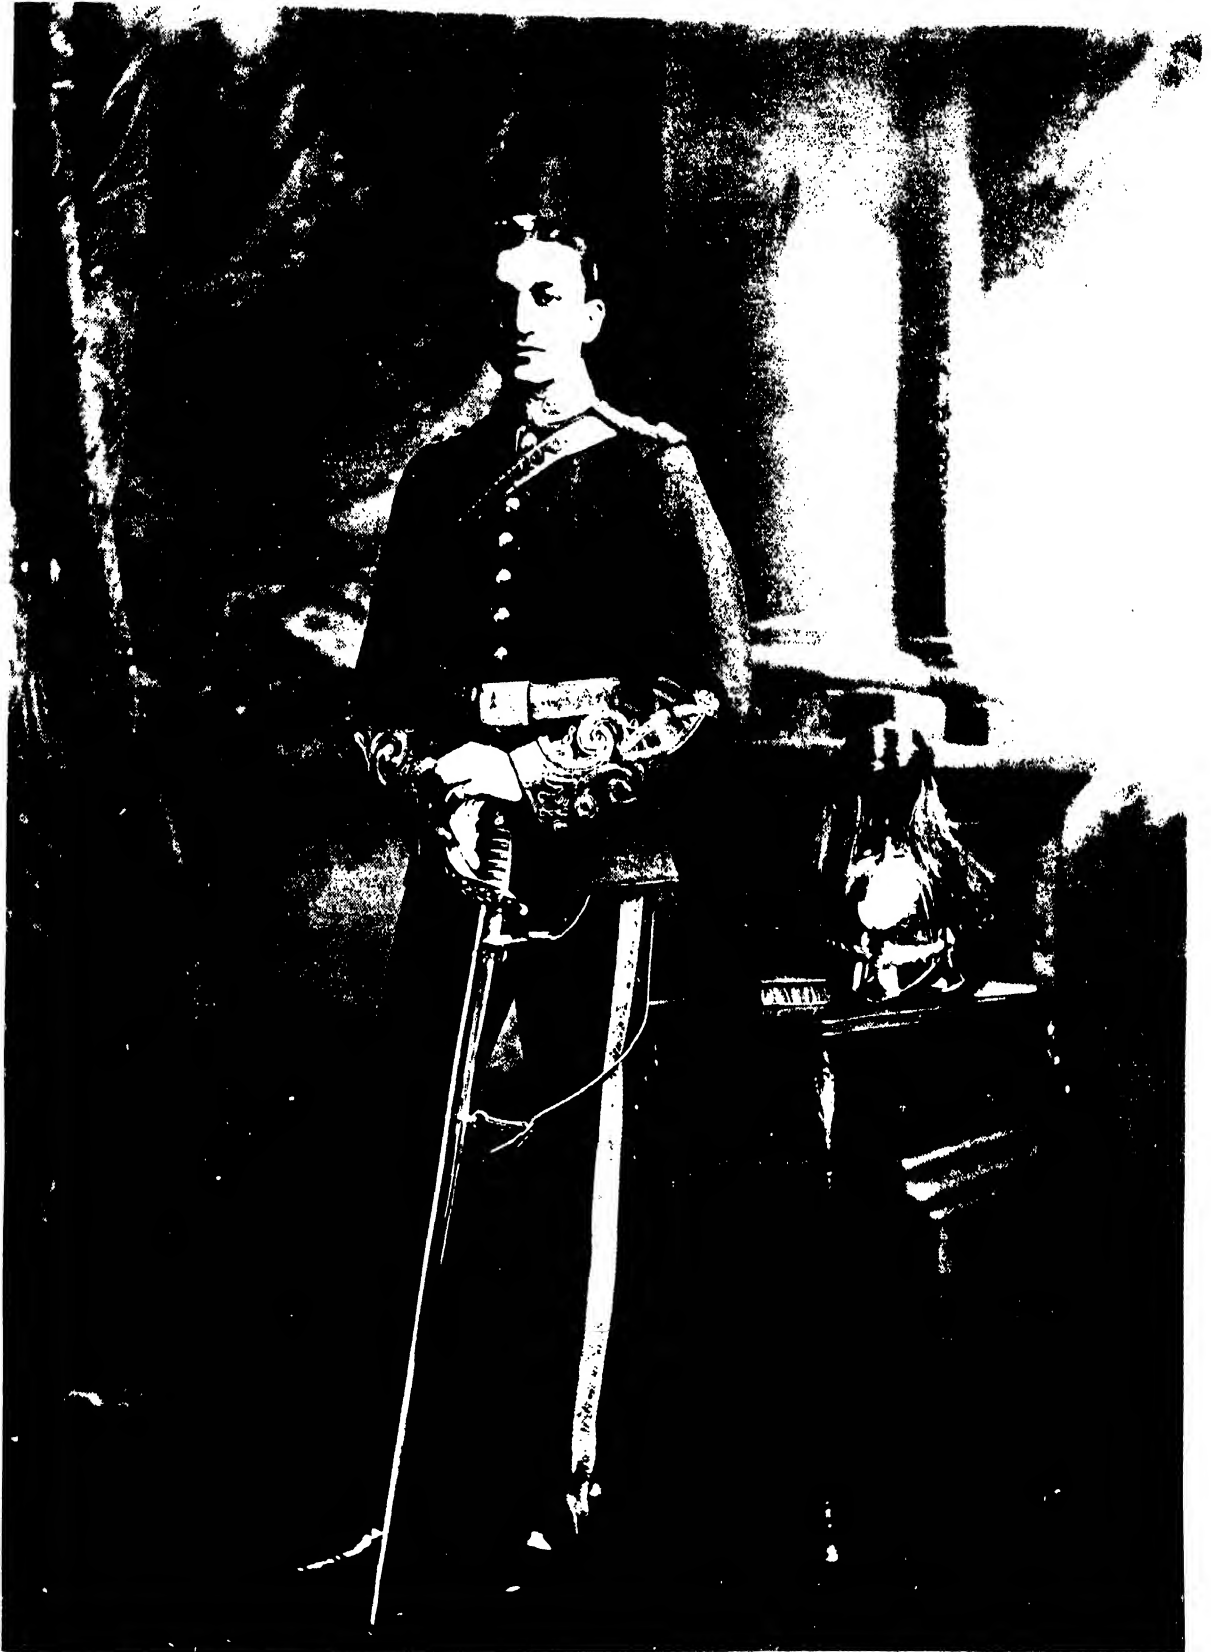

Heir-Apparent of Cooch Behar State,

BY

HIS HIGHNESS' MOST OBEDIENT SERVANT,

SHAM LALL DAY,

Founder-Secretary to the Society.

MAHARAJ-KUMAR RAJ RAJENDRA NARAYAN SAHIB OF COCHI BEHAR
An illustrious Member of the Calcutta Literary Society.

HISTORY OF THE STATE OF COOCH BEHAR.

More than three centuries ago, two brothers, named Bissoo Singh and Sissoo Singh, established, by their conquests, a principality in the North-Eastern part of India.

The former is the immediate ancestor of the Rajahs of Cooch Behar, and of the Nazir Deos, or Ministers of Cooch Behar. Bissoo Singh's son, Nur Naraiyan, extended his empire eastwards over Lower Assam, and, at that time, the Cooch territories must have embraced the greater part of the Dinajpur, Rungpur, and other districts, which once formed the kingdom of Kamrup. He was the greatest ruler of the dynasty and began to reign about 1550.

About 1603, the Mogul armies, greatly encroached on the little State of Behar, until, about the beginning of the Eighteenth Century, the Rajah's dominions were reduced to their present limits.

Some years previous to 1772, the then Rajah of Cooch Behar Dhujendra Naraiyan, who had a dispute, regarding succession, with his brother, Ram Naraiyan, deprived the latter of the appointment of Minister. Ram Naraiyan appealed to the Bhutias and was reinstated by them.

The Rajah afterwards, however, put the Minister to death, for which the Bhutias carried him off to the hills, appointing his brother, Rajendra Naraiyan, Rajah, in his place.

On the death of Rajendra Naraiyan, shortly after, the Nazir Deo set up Durrendra Naraiyan, son of Dhujendra Naraiyan, as Rajah. The Bhutias had, on their side, appointed to the Gadi, Brajendra Naraiyan, the son of the captive Rajah's elder brother, each party proceeded to maintain the Chief, nominated by itself, and the Nazir Deo, being worsted and driven out of the country, applied to the East India Company for aid.

In 1772, the British Government came in contact with Cooch Behar. The Bhutias, whose trade with Bengal was carried on through the countries occupied by the Cooch Chiefs, appear to have always maintained their connection with Cooch Behar, and to have occasionally interfered in its affairs.

In 1773, the aid was granted after the Nazir Deo had concluded, in the name of Durrendra Naraiyan, a Treaty by which the Rajah agreed to acknowledge subjection to the British Government, to allow his estate to be annexed to Bengal, and to make over to the British Government one-half of the annual revenues of Cooch Behar for ever.

The other moiety he was to retain on condition of remaining firm in his allegiance to the British Government who, on the other hand, bound themselves to assist the Rajah with a force, whenever he might require it for the defence of the country, the Rajah bearing the expense.

Captain Jones, with a number of Sehays, proceeded to Cooch Behar, dispossessed the Bhutias, and pursuing them to the hills, compelled them to make terms with the British Government.

In 1774, a Treaty was concluded with Bhutan, and, agreeably, to one of its articles, Rajah Dhujendra Naraiyan was released from confinement.

In 1776, although a Sunnud was granted to Rajah Dhujendra Naraiyan, conferring on him the Zemindari of Cooch Behar, he did not re-assume the government of the State, until the death of his son, Durendra Naraiyan, which occurred in 1780.

In 1783, Rajah Dhujendra Naraiyan died, and his infant son, Harrendra Naraiyan Bahadur, was put forward as Rajah. Disturbances ensued, and in 1788, two Commissioners were sent to enquire into the affairs of the State, on whose report, a British Commissioner was appointed to the management of the State.

In 1800, the Rajah came of age, and the Commissioner was withdrawn. As, however, the Rajah could not manage the affairs of the State, Commissioners were re-appointed in 1802, and, again in 1805, 1813, and 1817, to supervise the administration. This duty eventually devolved on the Governor-General's Agent, North-East-Frontier.

In 1839, Harrendra Naraiyan died at Benares. Shibendra Naraiyan Bahadur a son of the deceased Rajah, was then placed upon the Gadi. Before his death, he adopted one of his brothers' sons, named Narendra Naraiyan, who succeeded him in 1847. Narendra Naraiyan being, at this time, about four years old, the State was governed by Rajendra Naraiyan Koer, brother of the late Rajah, as Regent.

In 1857, the Regent died, and the two widows of Rajah Shibendra Naraiyan undertook the management of affairs.

In 1862, Rajah Narendra Naraiyan received a Sannad, guaranteeing to him the right of adoption. He died in August 1863, in the twentieth year of his age, and was succeeded by his son, Colonel His Highness Maharajah Sir Nripendra Naraiyan Bhup Bahadur, C.B., G.C.I.E., the present Chief, who was then a minor, about ten months old. During the Rajah's minority, the State was managed by the Commissioner of Cooch Behar.

Colonel His Highness Sir Nripendra Naraiyan Bhup Bahadur, C.B., G.C.I.E., Maharajah of Cooch Behar, and A. D. C. to His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward VII, Emperor of India, was born on Saturday, the 4th day of October 1862, succeeded his father in August 1863, and has thus reigned for nearly forty-five years. The age of His Highness is now only forty-six.

His Highness was educated, first, in the Wards Institute at Benares; secondly, under the guardianship of Mr. H. St. J. Kneller, in the Bankipur College, Patna, and next as a Law Student in the Presidency College, Calcutta.

From 1863-65, during His Highness' minority, the State rendered good service in the Bhuain War, for which two guns were presented to His Highness by the British Government.

The abolition of slavery in Cooch Behar has formerly been proclaimed, and the British Rupee declared the only legal tender. A new settlement for twenty years, commencing from 1873 has been authorized, and the administration modelled on that of the British provinces.

In 1877, His Highness was presented with medal and sword, at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, as Empress of India.

In March 1878, His Highness married Her Highness Maharani Suniti Sahiba, C.I., eldest daughter of the famous reformer Mr. Keshab Chandra Sen. Soon after the marriage, His Highness was sent, for the first time, to England, the same year, to complete the education, under the joint guardianship of Surgeon-Major, (now Sir), Benjamin Simpson and Mr. H. St. J. Kneller.

In the spring of 1879, His Highness returned to India. On Thursday, the 8th November, 1883, the Maharajah Bahadur was formally installed as a Ruling Chief, on his ancestral Gadi, by the Hon'ble Sir Augustus Rivers Thompson, then Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.

His Highness' troops took part also in the Lushai War, and on several occasions, His Highness offered own personal services and resources of his State for all disturbances on the North-Western-Frontier.

In 1885, in acknowledging these offers, the Hon'ble Sir Rivers Thompson, K.C.S.I., the then Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, said :—

In 1890, His Highness was made District Grand Master of Bengal.

In 1891, His Highness was installed District Grand Master of Bengal.

In 1897, His Highness was appointed an orderly officer of the late General Yeatman-Briggs' Staff in the Tirah Campaign, and was present at Dargai and Samana. His Highness' services were repeatedly acknowledged despatches, and were rewarded with the Frontier Medal, with two clasps for Samana and Tirah.

In 1898, His Highness was also decorated by Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria herself with the Order of the Companion of the Bath.

In 1898, His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Earl of Elgin, G. C. S. I., G. C. I. E., Viceroy and Governor India, in congratulating the Maharajah Sahib, on His Highness' safe return from Tirah, communicated Her Majesty's approval and said :—

I may also express, on behalf of the Government of India, our appreciation of Your Highness' zeal and loyalty in these troubled times.

In 1902, His Highness was appointed Honorary Aide-de-Camp to His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII. King of England and Emperor of India, with the full rank of Colonel, in the British Army.

The Maharajah Bahadur has visited England several times. His Highness is a keen sportsman, and has excelled in polo, tennis, and other games. His Highness has four sons, and three daughters viz. :—

Maharaj-Kumars Raj Rajendra Naraiyan Bahadur, Jitendra Naraiyan Bahadur, Dherendra Naraiyan Bahadur and Hetendra Naraiyan Bahadur, and three daughters, viz. :—Princess Sukriti Sundari, Princess Pratiba Sundari and Princess Sudhia Sundari.

The Heir and successor to the State of Cooch Behar is His Highness' eldest son, Maharaj-Kumar Raj Rajendra Naraiyan Bahadur, born on 11th April, 1882, and is now only twenty-four years. The Prince has received a liberal education in England, and is a master of English language. He is also a keen sportsman. He has inherited the noble qualities of his illustrious father, and has already been distinguished for loyalty and liberality.

The town of Cooch Behar is situated on the river Tista, and has a railway station.

Among other improvements, a railway has been constructed for a length of twenty-two miles, which is now being extended, for a further twelve miles.

The earth quake of 12th June, 1897, caused a damage to public buildings, roads, &c., in the State, to the estimated amount of fifteen lacs of Rupees.

In Cooch Bihar, rice is grown on three-fourths of the total cultivated area. Jute and tobacco are largely grown for exportation over an increasing area year by year. The only special industries are the weaving of a strong silk from worms fed on the castor-oil plant, and of a coarse jute cloth, used for screens and bedding.

The chief exports are jute, tobacco, oil and timber; salt, sugar and piece-goods are imported.

The ancestral banner of the family displays a sword and a blade of grass (with which, according to tradition one of the Maharajah's ancestors cut off the head of an enemy as an offering to the goddess Kali). The supporters are a tiger and an elephant. The Crest is a Harpoon, holding a club in each hand.

In conclusion, it may be added that for the most wonderful progress of this ideal Native State in Bengal, the Maharajah Bahadur and the people of Cooch Behar, owe a debt immense of endless gratitude to Rai Calika Dutt Bahadur, B. A., B. L., C. I. E., the Dewan Sahib, (born 3rd July, 1841), who is managing the State with incomparable ability, honesty and matchless statesmanship since August, 1869, or, nearly thirty-eight years.

The area of Cooch Behar State is 1307 square miles; its population is 6,02,624, chiefly Hindus, but, including 1,74,539 Mahomedans. The gross revenue of the States from all sources is about Twenty-three lacs of Rupees.

His Highness maintains a military force of nine cavalry, one hundred and seventy-six infantry and four guns and is entitled to a salute of thirteen guns.

His Highness pays a tribute of Rs. 67,700-15-0, at which amount it was permanently fixed in 1780.

The Twenty-sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great clat, at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, N. E., on Wednesday, the 15th January, 1902, at 5 P. M., Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Land-holder, and Government Pensioner, presiding.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers. There was a large and influential gathering, upwards of one thousand gentlemen were present. The Members of the Society, the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University composed the bulk of the audience.

On the Chairman's taking his seat, the pupils of the Industrial Home and School for the Blind sang a sweet song, especially composed for the occasion. The audience were much pleased, and the spectacle presented by the blind boys at the singing in a chorus was indeed worth seeing.

Babu Sham Lal Day, Founder and Secretary to the Society, first read the letters received from Rajah Peary Mahan Mukerjee Bahadur, M. A., B. L.; Roy Vatindra Nath Chowdhery Bahadur, M. A., B. L., Zeminfar of Taki, and Babu Khetra Mahan Bose, Tutor to their Highnesses, the Princes of Tippera, in which they expressed their regret at being unable to attend the Twenty-sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Society.

The Secretary then addressed the Meeting thus:—

Address by the Secretary:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

This is the Twenty-sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society.

During the year 1901, we had to pass through the dark pages of our history! For, in that year, we had to record several mournful events, which cast a gloom in many a home, and covered it with grief and sorrow. The first and foremost of all, we had to record the demise of Her Most Gracious Majesty Victoria, Queen of England and Empress of India, on Tuesday, the 22nd January, 1901. That sad event has now passed into the pages of history, and will ever remain a monument of the various acts of munificence, combined with an amount of self-sacrifice, which are seldom met with in great men, much less in women.

I need not expatiate on this subject, for, India has played its part well, in raising a magnificent amount of subscription of more than half a crore of Rupees for the Memorial of one of the most excellent Sovereigns that ever adorned the throne of any country in the world.

Then the demise of Her Imperial Majesty the Empress-Frederick of Germany—the eldest daughter of our beloved Queen-Victoria, on Tuesday, the 6th August, 1901. Not long after Her Majesty's bereavement, the Empress went into that bourne, from which no traveller returns.

Next, in importance, was the premature death of His Excellency McKinley, one of the most popular Presidents of the United States of America. He was assassinated by a villain of that country. His Excellency endeared himself into the hearts of the people by consulting their feelings, wants and wishes in various acts of administration, which earned him that great Republic.

The

allies of the English Government. During his reign, peace pervaded that land of turmoil, which is always a source of un-easiness, not only to the people of India, but, also of England.

The office of the Calcutta Literary Society was closed on each occasion, to mark its respect and esteem for the illustrious deceased, and letters of condolence were sent to the bereaved Royal Families, replies to which are given below:—

The following letter was received from General R. F. Patterson, Consul-General of the United States of America:—

United States Consulate-General,
Calcutta.
19th September, 1901.

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for your very kind letter of condolence on the death of President McKinley.—Mr. McKinley was one of the most popular Presidents our country ever had, and his death is a great calamity.

Had such a tragedy occurred in a despotic country, one might understand it; but, in ours, where the people elect their own rulers, it seems incomprehensible, though Mr. McKinley is the third President, who has been assassinated in the United States within the last thirty-six years.

Our country is too free in permitting Anarchists to propagate their infamous doctrines by public speeches and through the press, and it is time, measures were taken to stamp them out.

Again thanking you for your kind sympathy.

SHAM LALL DAY, Esq., I am,
Founder-Secretary, Sincerely yours,
Calcutta Literary Society, R. F. Patterson,
Calcutta. Consul-General, U.S.A.

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

(8) In celebrating the Sixteenth Anniversary of the death of the Great Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa of Dakshineswar, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Beadon Park, Beadon Square, on Thursday, the 5th September, 1901—the sacred day observed by the Hindus, on the occasion of their Jannamstami Festival.

The unfortunate weather accounted for the thinness in the gathering of spectators, the assembly being not very large.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of the lecturer, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Founder and Secretary to the Society was requested to read his notes on the Life and Teachings of the late Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa.

On the 1st August, 1901, Maharaj-Kumar Bejoy Chand Mahtab Bahadur of Burdwan has been pleased to present a copy of his Bijaya Gitika, Part II, for which the best thanks of the Society are hereby given to His Highness. (Cheers)

On the 21st December, 1901, on Address of Congratulation was presented, by deputation, to the Hon'ble Sir Rameswar Prasad Singh Sahib, K.C.I.E., Maharajah Sahib of Gidhaur, on His Highness' becoming a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council. The Hon'ble Maharajah Sahib was kind enough to welcome the deputation. His Highness received the Address, thanked the Society and gave a suitable reply. (Cheers.)

The grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its Meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasions, as well as to the Proprietors and Principals of the halls for allowing the Society to hold its Meetings, and the conductors of Newspapers for publishing the Proceedings of Meetings of the Society, also, to the Patrons and Members for their unabated interest in the welfare of the Society. (Cheers.)

I have thus given you a brief outline of the works of the Society during the year under report. There can be no doubt that the Society has been prospering by the grace of God, and I hope that it will continue to prosper for many years to come. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly adopted, the pupils of the Industrial Home and School for the Blind entertained the audience with a sweet song.

The Chairman then in introducing Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay), to the Meeting, said that, he hardly had any words to introduce a gentleman, who is not only famous in Bombay Presidency, but, also in many provinces in India. Mr. S. P. Kelkar was a person of high erudition. He was a strong advocate of Technical Education. In his own presidency, he held for a considerable time the post of Wearing Master.

Again, he had the honor of becoming the Secretary of a Cotton Mill in that presidency. It was, with the object of making himself useful to his countrymen, that he went to England at considerable expense to himself. He stayed there for eight months.

He then visited France, where he stopped for one month only. During his sojourn, he visited several factories, both in England and France. It was a fortunate circumstance that he was present, at the Grand Paris Exhibition, when he had ample opportunities of examining for himself most useful productions of Art. He also saw the Mills-work at Manchester.

Mr. S. P. Kelkar will not only speak to you on Technical Education, but, give his experiences on Foreign Travels, not only in England and France, but, also in several countries in India. We will have much to learn from his experiences. as Mr. S. P. Kelkar is not only a practical man, but, also one, a thoroughly acquainted with the wants of his countrymen. I need not take much of your time, but, will now ask Mr. S. P. Kelkar to proceed with his First lecture to the Society.

The Technical Education and Foreign Travel

The lecturer rose amidst cheers and spoke on the Subject for upwards of an hour. He gave some historical agitation on the subject of Technical Education in the Bombay Presidency. A Brahmin gentleman of Poona, he said, well-versed in Sanskrit literature took up the subject of Industry. He tried to learn weaving, dying, calico-painting, &c., and wrote a book on them, as far back as the year 1846.

This learned man perceived, long ago, that the introduction of foreign goods, in our country, would our Industries, and it was necessary for our educated youths to take up our Industries in hand, and make the necessary improvements in them so that, we may be able to compete with foreign products. But, very little attention was paid by our educated people to this advice.

Every one was eager after Government Service. But, lately, since the year 1870, greater attention was paid towards this subject, when the late Justice Mr. Banade delivered two lectures, in Poona, on our economic position, dealing with the exports and imports of our country. Coming to the subject of Technical Education, Mr. S. P. Kelkar divided the same into two parts; Viz:—Primary Technical Education and High Technical Education.

There is a tendency to jump at once to High Technical Education and think of going to foreign countries to acquire a knowledge thereof. But, it was a mistake to do so.

As one can not go to high secular education, without receiving instruction in primary education, so also, you can not go at once to High Technical Education. Many Industrial works are still carried on in our country, by our artisans, with their primitive tools. They now require some improvement to be made in them, but, unless, you know how these Industrial works are carried on at present, you can not see what improvement is necessary.

As in secular education, you would first learn the Alphabets A, B, C, so, in Technical Education, cutting, boring, chiselling, joining &c., are A, B, C's. Every student should acquaint himself with these rudiments. If you study the industrial works, as they are carried on, at present, one more intelligent amongst you will see, what improvements can be made in them.

It is quite necessary to start small Technical Schools, where small industrial works can be taught. After you have made some progress in these schools, one question of going to foreign countries comes next. In going to foreign countries, or, in sending young men to such places, some precautions ought to be taken necessarily.

First, a proper selection of candidates ought to be made. Next, a proper industry should be selected. Another important thing, which should be considered beforehand, is the capital required to introduce the Industry in our country, after the person or persons had returned to an Industry. From his personal experience, Mr. S. P. Kelkar said, it would be much convenient, if three or four students would go together in a batch to study different arts. They can live together, help each other, and the cost of living there would be much less, if they would hire one unfurnished separate house for themselves. When each person hires a room or two for himself, he has to pay nearly double the rent. If they know how to cook their food, and if they would cook it, by turns, they would find it much cheaper and more suited to their taste.

They would also be able to put a check on each other, which is also essentially necessary to young men in foreign countries. But, there are distant thoughts. We should have first Primary Technical Schools, and they should be undertaken by our own countrymen, without depending upon Government.

Government Aid ought to be sought afterwards (Cheers.)

PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS OF

On the lecturer's resuming his seat, amidst cheers, Mr. M. K. Gandhi, Barrister-at-Law & of South African fame, proposed, in a few words, a vote of thanks to the learned lecturer. He was seconded by Rai Sarat Chandra Banerjee Bahadur M. A., B.L., who passed great eulogium on all that the lecturer had said.

He agreed with Mr. S. P. Kelkar on the subject of Technical Education. He said that Mr. S. P. Kelkar fully deserves the sympathy and support of all those, who wish well of their country, and as they all knew that we could seldom prosper, unless we learn ourselves how to promote useful works of Art and Industry, by which we can add to our resources and rise in the scale of nations. (Cheers.)

Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal followed. He was eloquent and urged his countrymen to follow the advice of the learned lecturer, and direct their attention to the study of useful Arts.

Mr. Srish Chandra Biswas, B.L., of the Alipore Bar, then spoke a few words on the Subject, and admired the lecturer.

The pupils of the Industrial Home and School for the Blind then sang another sweet song.

Mr. S. P. Kelkar then thanked the speakers for all that they had said, and the audience for the attention, with which they had listened his lecture.

The Chairman then brought the proceedings to a close, in a few eloquent and well-chosen words. He thanked the lecturer for his very lucid and interesting speech, on a subject which was then engaging the attention of every body in this country. It will be superfluous to try to add any thing further on the comments, which the previous speakers had made on the subject. All that he can say was, that he never before had heard a lecture on Technical Education, which contained such practical and useful observations. This was to be expected, as Mr. S. P. Kelkar had devoted the best part of his life, to the promotion of Technical Education in Bombay.

There are practical men in that presidency, who are not only willing to spend large sums of money, but, also, send their boys to school to learn subjects, to which the wealthier classes in this part of the country, entertain prejudices, which, indeed, greatly obstruct the progress, which, otherwise, we could make, with advantage to ourselves and to the poorer classes of our countrymen.

He added, Mr. S. P. Kelkar had to learn much from his visit to England, as at Manchester he examined the details of the ways, in which the Mills were working. The dexterity, with which the workmen handled the several appliances attached to the Mill was, as Mr. S. P. Kelkar told us, worth-seeing and examining for themselves by those, who take an interest in promoting Technical Education in this country. Now, then, my advice to you, Gentlemen, is that, you should take to heart all that the lecturer had told us this evening. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 8 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair and after singing two songs.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Shankar Ghose's Lane, Cornwallis Street, on Wednesday, the 22nd January, 1902, at 4-30 P.M. The Meeting was very largely attended.

On the motion of Babu Satish Chandra Mukerjee, M. A., Editor of the Dawn and seconded by Babu Anath Nath Palit, M. A., Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M. B., C. M., R. C. S., Fellow of Medical Society, London, First Class Honors in Medicine, Therapeutics, Midwifery and Diseases of Women and Children, Member, British Medical Association, and Chelsea Chemical Society, &c. &c., was voted to the chair, amidst shouts of applause.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Twenty-Sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman.

in introducing the lecturer said :—

Gentlemen, It is not in the language of customary conventionality that I wish to introduce to you our distinguished countryman, Mr. S. P. Kelkar, who will address you on the subject of the Improvement of our Domestic Industries. I know no one more fitted, by reason of personal inclination and practical knowledge, to speak on this important subject with more authority than our friend.

There is, indeed, no question, which requires greater scrutiny and encouragement than this important one. India has been, in the past, dead to the world of commerce. Other nations, more enterprising, better situated, have surpassed us in the race of life.

It is true we have the heritage of glorious traditions in the field of higher thoughts. Civilization, learning, and culture all these formed a part of our ancient history. Indeed, when other nations wallower in primitive barbaric pursuits, India in her calm solitude dictated the results of the highest thought in man. The clarion call of culture resounded over our borders calling the less favoured to a higher destiny. But Alas! It is vain to dwell on the flated past. Let us act in the living present. Let us look around and keep pace with the march of time.

Commerce is the Imperial factor in International politics. No body denies, that our people have the ability and the energy. What we want is the leadership to guide us over the resaugustae. If mammoth factories are beyond our means, let us remember that the domestic trade pursuits are still within our reach. The Muslins of Dacca, to take but one instance, are still unequalled. The Shawls of Kashmir have defied the machines of Manchester, and are the favoured of the gods.

Gentlemen, I shall not anticipate the practical things, which you will hear from the lecturer. Mr. S. P. Kelkar is one of our foremost pioneers in the shuttle loom venture and his labours have proved that we still retain the spark of noble fire, which will blaze forth from its slumbering state, and be a beacon to other nations for the elevation of humanity. (Cheers.)

He then asked Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay), to deliver his Second lecture to the Society on—

Improvements of our Domestic Industries.—

The learned lecturer spoke very fluently on the Subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, the Improvement of our Domestic Industries requires the serious attention of our countrymen. The circumstances of the country have materially changed, since the introduction of English Education. Our women, as well as our men, are advancing in education and civilization.

We are not what our forefathers were half a century ago. Our diet has undergone a change, which we know not how to express. In several instances, our children are accustoming themselves to English food and drink. Our domestic Industries, therefore, require to be improved under a new model. Our Orthodox brethren do not like what their heterodox friends express a desire for.

There is now, therefore, a conflict of opinion as to the course to be pursued under present difficulties. Those difficulties will go on increasing, as we advance in education, and endeavour to imitate modes of European living. Whether such a mode is adapted to a tropical climate, is a matter of consideration. Any how, we should adopt ourselves to the times, in which we live. There are some people who wish for a compromise. How that compromise is to be effected, we know not—the question of expense stands in the way.

Then again, there are diverse races and creeds inhabiting in India. People, who take different diets and have different modes of cooking their food, also, have different modes of clothing themselves. How all these can be reconciled is another difficult matter. The people of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, and those of the Panjab differ from one another in various ways. What will suit one class, cannot suit another.

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

class. Men of different religious persuasions, have, different modes of life.

What I would say, therefore, is that, we should adhere to our old modes, improving them as much as we can, according to our recently changed modes of life. But, at the same time, we should not entirely set aside the landmarks, which distinguish one class from another.

How, to improve our Domestic Industry is a practical question. It is one that requires practical solution. Much experience is essential to solve this difficult problem, and what I would urge upon you, is that you should set yourselves to work in right earnest, according to the light that is in you, and that in doing this, you should not forget that you should not, in any way, inconvenience yourselves, and create any unnecessary want that would tax your purse and impoverish you. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, the Chairman rose amidst cheers and made a nice speech. He thanked the lecturer for his interesting lecture, and blessed the Society.

The Hon'ble M. R. Ry. Panappakkam Ananda Charlu, Vidia Vinada, Avergal, Rai Bahadur, B. L., C. I. E., Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, having proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved after 6 P.M. (Vide, the Indian Mirror, the Bengalee, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 24th January, 1902.

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, on Wednesday, the 5th February, 1902, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of the Rev'd J.H. Jennings, M.A., Professor of the Bishop's College.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman introduced Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay), to the Meeting and asked him to proceed with his Third lecture to the Society on—

The Industrial Exhibitions :—

The learned lecturer, Mr. S. P. Kelkar, who, on rising, was received with cheers, dwelt upon the Subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, he simply wanted to make some suggestions as to the manner, the Industrial Exhibitions should be arranged in this country, so that, the main object in holding such Exhibitions would be served. He said the method in carrying out institutions like this vary according to circumstances. Industrial Exhibitions, in civilized countries, have become an institution of long standing, and so their methods also have become suited to their present circumstances. This institution is comparatively a new institution in our country, and, therefore, our methods must also be somewhat different according to our circumstances.

He said, he had seen one Exhibition that was in Bombay in 1872, the one held in Calcutta, in 1883, and he also saw the Grand Paris and Glasgow Exhibitions very recently held in France and Scotland. Besides these, he had also seen smaller Exhibitions held in Poona and the one that lately held here in Calcutta.

He then described the methods of European Exhibitions. He gave some interesting descriptions of the Grand Paris Exhibition. The European methods, he said, have become very simple in these days. They advertise the Exhibition, fix the place and the date, and the exhibitors send their things at their own cost, keep their agents at the Exhibition to explain the merits and their exhibits to the spectators. Even they pay for the ground, they occupy in the Exhibition. People also go in large numbers to see the Exhibitions, and from the fees, collected from the spec-

Manufacturers also send their respective articles with the object of showing their merits to the people, and giving them a chance to compare Jurors examine the articles and award medals or prizes. But, in our country, these methods, Mr. S. P. Kelkar said, would not be sufficient. Our artisans are ignorant and poor. They do not know the importance of such Exhibitions, and, if they do, they can not afford to send their articles at their own cost and pay for the ground they occupy. So, the leaders should take proper measures to collect different articles manufactured in our country. They should procure information as to the processes, in which these articles are produced, and put the information before the public, so that some intelligent persons may find out the ways to make these articles at a much reduced cost, and improve the quality where there is room for improvement.

If it be found not practicable, to collect such information about every article, let one particular industry be selected, and information collected, as to its working, and steps taken to improve that industry by putting prizes for the improvements effected by more skilled workmen.

If we can succeed in improving only one industry every fifth year, and even every tenth year, it will be a sure gain. Mere show is also, necessary item in the Exhibitions, as it attracts people to see them and thus contribute their mite to the cost, but that is after all not so important. Our attention should be directed more towards usefulness, and, our methods ought to be suited to attain our object. (Cheers).

After the lecturer had resumed his seat, the Chairman asked Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Zemindar, to speak something on the Subject.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, in response to the Chair, then rose and said :—
Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

The learned lecturer, Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay), is not unknown to you. He has gained a reputation far and wide. His lecture on the Industrial Exhibition was a very interesting one, and Mr. S. P. Kelkar was the fittest man to speak on the Subject. I, too, have had some experience of the Industrial Exhibition.

The first time, in my life, when I came in contact with the Industrial produce of this country, was in the year 1850. A Committee was then formed in Calcutta, to collect goods for the London Exhibition of 1851. This Committee had for its President, Sir Lawrence Peel, and Dr. McClelland, Inspector-General of Hospital, was its Secretary.

The Committee hired a portion of the spacious building of the Bonded Ware House. In the third floor of the building, all goods were exhibited, that were collected before being shipped to their destination. I happened to be employed under this Committee and, consequently, I had a chief hand in preparing a Catalogue of all the goods that were sent. The Catalogue was printed and despatched to London.

Amongst other innumerable goods, the Silver filagree works of Cuttack chiefly attracted attention. The works were greatly admired by those, who saw them for their fine workmanship. As works of Art they were most beautifully executed. The clay toys of Krishnagar, though very cheap, formed a group, which attracted a large number of admirers. The Naut-girl, the Durga Pujah, the Oil-mill drawn by bullocks, the Court-yard of the Maharajah of Krishnagar, which is beautifully decorated on the occasion of festivals, presented a sight that was worth-seeing. The Jubbulpur Carpet, manufactured by the inmates of the Jail, greatly attracted the notice. The Mirzapur Carpet, also, were products of great skill. The Dacca Muslin, one could not help admiring for its fine work's workmanship. It was so thin and light that a piece, measuring ten yards, was found to be packed in a small tin tube. The gorgeous shawls of Cashmere, also, found the

These and other articles indicated that, there were Indian Artists in the country, who could produce the finest staples. But, the chief difficulty that lays in the way of the poor Indian Artizan, who toiled day and night with the sweat of his brow, could not find a ready market for his produce.

The poor people lived from hand to mouth, and in several instances, they could not recoup themselves sufficiently of the cost of the materials, which was spent in producing the articles, on which they were engaged.

The next Industrial Exhibition, that was held in Calcutta, was the collection of goods, that were exhibited in the Bonded Ware House. These articles were collected at considerable expense for the Paris Exhibition of 1855. As these articles formed the component parts of those, which were previously collected for the London Exhibition of 1851, and were identically the same as those sent home before, I need not re-capitulate them here.

The next, or the Third Industrial Exhibition was held in the grounds of Belvedere. At this time, His Honor Sir Cecil Beadon, was the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. At this Industrial Exhibition, a very large number of animals bred in this country—consisting of goats, cows, &c., besides, the products of hand-looms and of manual labour, formed the chief articles of the Exhibition.

The Fourth Calcutta International Exhibition was held in the year 1883, on the Maidan, just before the Indian Museum. At this time, His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Lord Ripon, K. G., P. C., G. C. S. I., G. C. I. E., was the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, and His Honor Sir Augustus Rivers Thompson, K. C. S. I., G. C. I. E., was the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. It was, indeed, a very grand one. Lord Ripon had a fine word for those, who sent their goods to this Exhibition. His Excellency greatly encouraged all classes of Artizans, for the very hard toil, which they had to undergo in producing different specimens of manual labour.

The last, or the Fifth Industrial Exhibition, which was held in Beadon Gardens, in December, 1901, in connection with the Indian National Congress, in 1901, went to show that we, the Indians, were not deficient or wanting in producing works of manual labour, that would find a ready market in different parts of the world. But, the chief difficulty was that, there was a keen competition carried on by different countries, in producing articles, which were not worked out by the hand, but, were the products of machinery, worked by steam. And the result was the cheapness of the latter, compared with the price of those produced by manual labour.

I need not detain you long, but, I hope and trust that, the deep interest, which Mr. S. P. Kelkar is endeavouring to create in this country for indigenous products, will go on increasing from year to year, and will be attended with the most beneficial result.

It is, indeed, a pity that His Excellency the Viceroy was not present there, as the Exhibition was got up by the Congress Committee. In that case, Lord Curzon might have seen and satisfied himself with his own eyes, that we, the Indians, were not slow in seeking to promote our best industries. As the highest problem of life was the bread problem, and we, the Indians, must continue to be poverty-stricken and starve, until, we can find ourselves the ways and means, by which we may compete with the products of other peoples and countries.

The best way to make a Nation rich and great is to make it understand and work for itself. So that the resources of the Motherland was fully be developed, and these resources locally employed by means and appliances not of the hands, but, of the steam, so that we might not be thrown back in the race, which other countries and nations, in the face of the globe are trying to run in these days of competition.

Mr. S. P. Kelkar gave us his experiences, of Industrial Exhibitions, which he might have seen and examined with his own eyes, not only in India, but, in the Continent, which he had visited solely with the object of making himself acquainted with the means and appliances with foreign nations and countries make use of in producing articles in the different departments of Art and Industry.

With these few remarks, I beg now to resume my seat (Cheers).

After him, Rai Sarat Chandra Banerjee Bahadur, M. A., Babu Srish Chandra Biswas, B. L., of the Alipur Bar, and two other gentlemen spoke a few words on the Subject. They all thanked the lecturer for his interesting speech.

The Chairman then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. In the course of which he said that, what he might say, would be impromptu, as he had no idea that he would be honoured by being asked to take the chair, or, should be called upon to speak that evening.

He was very interested to hear the lecture, given by Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay,) on the subject of Indian Art and Industries. What the lecturer had said was very much to the point. He was rejoiced to see that young Indians were taking an interest in the support of Indian Industries. How grateful he was to the learned lecturer for his able lecture, based on study as it was upon considerable and experience. (Cheers).

As he had very recently come to India, he had few experience on the Subject. He was disappointed to find at Cawnpur, when going through the Native parts of the city, that the shops full of European goods, of screws from Germany, and bangles from Austria, &c. &c.

He thought a great pity, that Indian Industries should die out. He thought India must face facts and although the old Indian methods of work and art might be more picturesque than European methods, yet, they were unable to cope with Western Machinery. Consequently, India should adopt the methods of the West.

One defects in Indians was, perhaps, want of interest in their work. It seemed to him India had many advantages over Europe; Viz:—It was a fertile country, always warm or, nearly always, While the Europeans had to spend much on clothes, food, furnishing houses, &c., in this respect, the Indians had many advantage. He thought there was reason why he should be able to hold his own. He then congratulated the Society on the success it had achieved. (Cheers).

With the customary votes of thanks to the chair and the lecturer, the Meeting separated at 7 P. M. (Vide the Bengalee; the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 6th and the Indian Mirror, 23rd February, 1902.

As announced in the local papers, the public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Ripon College, 60 Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 6th February, 1902, at 4-30 P. M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, Editor of the Pengalee, Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, &c., &c. There was a large gathering.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay) to deliver his fourth lecture to the Society on—

The Art of Weaving:—

The learned speaker dwelt upon the subject for more than an hour, in the course of which he said that, the Art of Weaving requires to be improved in as much as there is a good deal of competition going around us. Our home products do not find a ready sale in the market, as foreign goods are being imported, in large quantities, and entering the field offering cheaper rates, with a view to induce buyers to take them up. This is one of the chief reasons, while our Arts and Industries are suffering so greatly, and needlessly. This

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

Because, if we fail to improve our appliances, which are used in weaving, we should labour hard and work for days, before we can produce a single article. The cloth, we manufacture, costs a great deal of labour, and is, therefore, costly, and, so we can scarcely compete with the produce of the English Mill, which is comparatively cheap.

The looms, we use, are exactly the same, which our fore-fathers used centuries ago. The plough, which is employed for the purpose of preparing the land, and rendering it fit for cultivation, is also the same, as our fore-fathers used. There had been no change, no improvement since then.

Other countries and nations are improving their tools and appliances. We should keep pace with them, before we can hope to improve our position and prospect. We would lag behind the race, if we remain in-active, indolent, and do not put our shoulder to the wheels, and thereby help ourselves.

In that case no body will come to help us. The country and the nation will be impoverished. All our moneys will go to foreign countries, which import commodities for our daily consumption. Our own people will consume the produce of other countries, and neglect that of their own country, which will cause ruin and degradation. This is a condition of things, which cannot too much be deplored. But, for all these, we ourselves are responsible.

The lecturer then illustrated his Subject by Diagrams, which were highly interesting and instructive.

The Chairman then summed up. He complimented the lecturer on his excellent speech, and lamented the decay of the Indian Industries. He was much pleased with the lecturer for his clear elucidation about the Art of Weaving, and the different sorts of texture, &c., and deeply deplored the degenerated condition of Indian Weavers and their manual productions, as the Dacca Muslim, which was once the pride of all the Europeans. He spoke highly on the Subject for nearly half an hour, and concluded with hearty hopes for Mr. S. P. Kelkar's future success in the matter.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M., with a customary vote of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, the Bengalee, 7th, the Indian Daily News, 8th February, 1902)

—:o:—

As previously announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Muhammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 29, Mirzapur Street, on Friday, the 14th March, 1902, at 3 P. M., under the presidency of Khan Bahadur Shujat Ali Beg Sahib, Representative of Her Highness the Nawab Begum Sahiba of Murshidabad, C. I. The Meeting was fairly but influentially attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Zemindar, and Government Pensioner, to deliver his lecture on :—

The Thugs :—

The lecturer, who, on rising, was received with cheers, dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that, as dacoities are now being committed in parts of the country, I think, an account of the Thugs, whose ravages predominated upwards of three-fourth of a century ago, cannot fail to be interesting.

My object in bringing the subject prominently before the public is :—

- (1) To show the blessings of English Rule,
- (2) The security of life and property, which we enjoy under that rule.
- (3) The measures adopted by Government, from time to time, to put down those budmashes,

- (4) The necessity which exists to take early steps to capture the gang, who are now committing dacoities to the dismay of the people.

The more we enquire, and have an insight into the ancient customs and religious rites of the different Indian Races, the necessity of educating and enlightening, the people becomes the more and more manifest.

The Thugs infested the North West and the Central Provinces about a century ago. They were a real terror to the people, as they carried on their depredations without the least compunction, and killed bodies of men, women and children and looted them.

Murder sanctioned by Religion ! Thuggee properly defined amounted to this ! Can anything more appalling be conceived ? What a painful illustration does it afford of the depravity of human nature, of the influence of ignorance and superstition upon a people ! It strikingly contrasts the Indian with other civilized races. The more the facts to which I will have occasion to allude, the more will the people be forced to admit that the Government which has suppressed it, is a real blessing, a curse, as it was, all over the country. Indeed, no Government in the world can render a people prosperous, contented and happy, unless it is administered upon the catholic principles of equity and justice unbiased by race antagonism.

Upwards of three-fourths of a century ago, the Thugs infested the length and breadth of the land. They so disguised themselves, that it was very difficult to discover that they were a race of people, who imbued their hands with human gore. Woe betide the unwary traveller, who chanced to fall in their way ! Nothing could save the victim from their clutches. Like the ferocious animals of the wild forests, they pounced upon their prey and killed them. In their diabolical attempt, they were generally not unsuccessful. They formed themselves into organized bodies, large detachments of which frequented the most crowded marts and thoroughfares.

Places of public worship and of holy pilgrimages, where innocent people congregated, times without number, for the performance of religious rites were visited by them. The Thugs cultivated the acquaintance of these credulous people. First they began to mix with them, then sit with them, then ate with them, and then began to please to and fascinate with songs. They tried to enter into their feelings. In short, they did every thing that human ingenuity could devise to enlist their love and affection.

They concealed their object with sedulous care and attention. They volunteered their services to act as their guide, councillor and friend. They carried their nefarious trade, with impunity, for centuries. Rapine and plunder was their avowed vocation. In accomplishing their end, they were prompted by the worst motives of inhumanity. They strangled their victims. No one, that fell into their hands, could survive to tell their sad tale. They not only robbed him of all his treasures, but, that most precious of all treasures—his life. Take my all, but not my life, he prayed. This is the impulse of nature which proceeds from the heart. This was made with a vehemence, an imprecation, which cannot fail to move the most hardened nature. But, with the strangler, the cries, lamentations and tears of his victim were of no avail. To these, he turned a deaf ear. He is trained in the inhuman work.

The Thug generally pursues the weary solitary traveller, who might be found proceeding in his journey, without a companion or friend. But, when he chances to meet with a rich victim, his procedure is very shrewd. He pursues him and his force, with the most skilful care. He directs their movements with the skill of a General, leading his army into the field. He recites his woes and sufferings to his victim, with whom he cultivates the utmost friendship. He says that he and his men had proceeded to a very great distance, and were now returning home. He feigns as a trader, describes his followers as his attendants. He haults with his victims and moves with their movements. He goes on in this way for days and nights, until the time is ripe for action, when a signal is given, so that, the whole body might be strangled into death. Sufficient care being taken not to allow a single person to escape. Hence, the Thug eluded the notice of the Detective Police, that was employed to detect him. To the English people the body of stranglers were not known for more than half a century after their ascendancy in this land.

Accounts of men women and children, disappearing all of a sudden, were brought to the notice of the Authorities by the relatives and friends of the victims. Enquiries were then instituted, but, they could not be found. The difficulty was to trace the strangler, when strangling itself was not known. Secrecy was the great secret of his success. A strangler served as a novice with his father, uncle, brother or kinsmen, when proceeding in their foul expedition. He was then initiated in the trade.

In the papers, published in the year 1836, under the title of Ramaseena or a Vocabulry of the peculiar language used by the Thugs, with an introduction and appendix, descriptive of the system of that fraternity and of the measures adopted for its suppression, it is stated that "they, the Thugs consider a Buska is capable of forming a gang of Thugs out of the rude materials around him in any part of India, and a Thug, who has arrived at this degree of proficiency, ought not, therefore, to be left at large. A novice, they think could do nothing, if left to himself, and, he might, therefore, be not left at large without much danger to society, if he had no leader."

The degree of a Buska or leader was held in much esteem by the Thug. The degree of courage and moral torpitude, requisite for the attainment of this post, is great.

A Thug first learns to accustom himself to scenes of most cold-blooded murder, before he can lay any claim to this distinction. "They, (the Thugs), are first employed as Scouts, then as Shemsheres, or holders of hands, and lastly, as Bhurtohus or stranglers. When a man feels that he has sufficient courage and insensibility for the purpose, he solicits the oldest and the most renowned Thug of the gang to make his Chela or disciple. The Thug agrees to become his Gooroo, or Spiritual preceptor; and when the gang falls in with a man of respectability, but not much strength, he tells his Gooroo that he is prepared, with his permission, to try his hands upon him. While the traveller is asleep with the gang of their quarters, the Gooroo takes his disciple to a neighbouring field, followed by three or four old members of the gang. On reaching the spot chosen, they all go to the direction, the gang intends to move, and the Gooroo says: "O! Kalee! Konkalee, Bhadra Kuleel Oh Kalee, Mohikaleel if it seemeth to Thee fit that the traveller, now at our lodging, should die by the hands of this—thy slave! If they have the token within a certain time, say half an hour, it signifies Her sanction. But, if they have no sign, then some other Thug would put the traveller to death and the candidate for honor waits for another opportunity.

A Novice was thus enlisted in the service of the stranglers. Their body increased in strength, and numbers gradually, by large accessions from their families, and those of their relatives. The device resorted to maintain secrecy, was not a little

The Thugs, having a religion, as other savage people, addicted to their habits and customs, had recourse to it in enlisting the services of additional members to their body.

They knew and felt that no other tie was stronger than that of Religion. They knew and felt that all worldly ties might give way before other considerations, influenced as mankind is by the force of extraneous circumstances, in all their actions in this life. In this, they were not mistaken. The confidence, they reposed in their comrades, after the formulee of Religious ceremonies, had been gone through, was never betrayed.

The way, in which the Thugs strangled their victims cannot be better illustrated than by accounts of the murders, which we will quote from the papers already referred to.

These are the confessions of the leaders of the gang, admitted as King's evidence, for the suppression of this crime by the British Government.

The following account of the murder of a Munshree and his family is indeed heart-rending:—

"We fell in," said Chutter, a leading Thug, "with the Munshree and his family at Chapra, between Nagpur and Jubbulpur, and they came on with us to Lucknow, where we found that some companies of a Native Regiment, under European Officers, were expected the next morning. It was determined to put them all to death that evening, as the Munshree seemed likely to keep with the companies. Our encampment was near the village, and the Munshree's tent was pitched down to us."

In the afternoon, some of the Officers' tents came on in advance, and were pitched on the other side, leaving us between them and the village. The servants were all busily occupied in pitching them. Nurkhan and his son Sati Khan, and a few other, went, as soon as it became dark to the Munshree's tent, and began to sing and play upon guitars as they had been accustomed to do.

During this time, some of them took up the Munshree's sword, on pretence of wishing to look at it. His wife and children were inside, listening to the music. The Thirnee or signal was given, but, at this moment, the Munshree saw his danger, called out Murder, and attempted to rush through, but, was soon seized and strangled. His wife, hearing him, ran out with the infant in her arms, but, was seized by Gubbu Khan, who also strangled her, and took the infant. The other daughter was strangled in the tent. The grooms were, at the time, cleaning their horses, and one of them, seeing his danger, ran under the belly of a horse, and called out Murder. But, he also was soon seized and strangled with all the rest.

As soon as the signal was given, those of the gang, who were idle, began to play and sing as loudly as they could, and two vicious horses were let loose, and many ran after them, calling out as loudly as they could. So that, the calls of the Munshree and his party were drowned, and were of no avail.

What these stranglers did with the little infant is, unfortunately, not stated. But, there cannot be the shadow of a doubt, that the poor creature shared the same fate with its wretched parents!

Those, who are acquainted with the history of the banditti, that infested European countries, in ancient times, or, of the Ducoits that were the dread of the Indian Villages, till very modern times, cannot but be aware that they generally spared the lives of innocent children. They had, besides, every regard for the female Sex. These, they seldom, if ever, destroyed.

With the Indian Thug, the case was quite the reverse. He was callous to all feelings of humanity, and like without distinction, or the

We will cull an instance of very daring strangling, in which Nawab Jibni Khan, the uncle of the Nawab of Bhopal, and his party were murdered. They were pursued stage after stage, for days together, until the Thugs had gained their entire confidence.

They conducted themselves throughout the affair, with a degree of circumspection, that was not calculated to excite the least suspicion of their design. Their shrewdness and cold courage contrasted most strikingly with the credulity of the old valiant soldier. His experience in the field was of no service to him, in the moment of his danger. He was taken quite un-awares. He was completely duped. His murderers took advantage of his being inordinately addicted to the use of intoxicating drugs. He was at last assassinated! It was a dastardly act.

"It was, on my return," said Shaikh Invent, another noted Thug, "from the first expedition, which I made with my father to the Deccan, when I was fifteen years of age, and about thirty-five years ago. We were a gang of about Eighty or Ninety Thugs, under my father Hinga, and some of the Deccan Chiefs lodged in the Masseleum, outside Elichpur. Two of our leaders, Gumbu and Laljee, on going into the Bazar, fell in with the grooms of the Nawab Jibni Khan, the uncle of the Nawab of Bhopal. Wazir Muhammet Khan, who told them that their master had been with his son, and his two hundred horses in the service of the Nizam of Hyderabad, and having had a quarrel with his son, he was now in his way-home to Bhopal."

"They came back and reported, and Sadi Khan, and Khulul Khan, and other leaders of notoriety, went and introduced themselves to the Nawab, pretending that they had been to the Deccan, with the horses for sale, and were now on their way back to Hindustan. He was pleased with their dress and appearance, and invited them to return the next day, which they did, and the following day he set out with as many of our gang, as it was thought safe to exhibit. He had two grooms, and a mare with a wound in the neck, and a pony. The slave girl's duty was to prepare for him his daily portion of Subjee, and he told us that he had got the name of Jibni Khan, from the quantity of that intoxicating drug, which he was accustomed to drink.

We came in together three stages, and during the fourth stages we came to an extensive jungle, this side of Dobba, in the Baitool District; and on reaching a water course at about 9 O'clock, Khulul said, "Khan Shaib, we have had a fatiguing journey, and we had better rest here, and take some refreshment." "By all means," replied the Nawab, "I too feel a little fatigue, and will take my Subjee here. He dismounted, laid his sword and shield upon the ground, spread his carpet and sat down on it. Dulal and Khulul also sat down by his side, and while the girl was preparing her portion, of which he invited these two men, as our supposed chiefs, to partake: and the grooms were engaged with the horses, and the troopers were smoking their pipes at a distance.

It had been determined that the Nawab should be first secured, as he was a powerful man, and, if he had a moment's warning, he would certainly have cut down some of the gang, before they could secure him.

Lalji also went, and sat near him, while Gomani stood behind, and seemed to be much interested in the conversation. All being now ready, the signal was given, and the Nawab was strangled by Gomani, while Lalji and Duli held his legs. As soon as the others saw the Nawab secured, they fell upon his attendants, and all were thus strangled, and their bodies were buried in the bed of the water course. On going back to Elichpur, Gomani sold the Nawab's Shawl for Eight Rupees, when it was worth

We will now give another extract of a very remarkable strangling. The Thugs looked upon it as an exploit, distinguished above many others, for the many number of persons were perished together.

It is characteristic also of the combined action of the Thugs, for the victims, in this instance, were no less a personage than Ghyvan Singh,—the youngest brother of Ghorab Singh, Commander of the Fort of Nagpur, and a large number of followers. Ghyvan Singh was commissioned to raise recruits from Outh and he was attended by nearly three scores of valiant Sepoys in the service of his masters, the followers of the Nagpur Army. For this purpose, they had a large treasure, as bounty money, to enlist the services of the men. The prize was very tempting.

The Thugs were determined to run the gauntlet, and to exact black-mail from them, fearless of consequences—Undaunted they pursued and succeeded in over-ruling them. Their leaders were applauded for the tact, with which they accomplished their abominable object. It is called the Sixty Soul Affair, as sixty persons having been strangled together. The murder of Ghyvan Singh was doubtless a very cold-blooded affair.

In making the enquiries, Captain Robertson said, "I was informed of a still more frightful murder, which took place under Govilgore, a few years before, of few hundred recruits that had come from some place in Govilgore, and were pitched in tents, below the foot of a Fort. A quantity of the treasure was under their charge, and they halted for the night. But shortly after, One thousand men, disguised as discharged Sepoys, came up and said, "they were from Hindustan, and wanted service" and encamped at night in the same place, but, in the following morning, there were none to be found of latter. The Five hundred recruits were all lying strangled.

The Thugs, not only carried their nefarious trade on land, but, also, on the river. They plied in boats in large numbers, and after strangling their victims, threw the dead bodies into the stream, which carried them away. Not only men, but, women, were adopted in the art of strangling. The Thug women were also very skillful in strangling helpless women.

We will here relate an instance of female Thuggee which occurred in the winter of 1847, between Allypore and Mathura. We have condensed it from the Household Wards, in which a full account was given of this most wretched and diabolical affair.

An young and lovely girl, of extraordinary beauty and rare accomplishments—the only daughter and heir of a rich Native banker, was strangled with a thin cord by an old decrepit miserable woman, in the hey day of her joy and happiness, whilst she was proceeding to the house of her husband, for the consummation of her marriage. After she had proceeded to a certain distance, she was overtaken by an old woman. She ordered her driver to stop, and the old woman was taken in her vehicle, as she said that, she was proceeding to Mathura to see her grand-daughter for the last time. Her story moved this young girl. And, as she was relating her sad tale, the former fell asleep. At midnight, the old woman, threw a thin cord round her neck, and she was thus easily strangled!

The perpetrators of this murder were soon captured at Bulandshir in 1848, and the female Thuggee thus confessed this amongst other murders.

From this year, the attention of Government was drawn to the mis-deeds of the Thugs, and they were gradually captured and death with summarily, and the country was freed from the ravages of these Demons in human shape.

After the lecturer had finished his Speech, the Proprietor and the Head Master of the Mahammed. Laik's Jubilee Institution spoke a few words on the subject.

The proceedings to a

He complemented the lecturer for his instructive speech and gave an interesting account of how a body of Thugs was captured, upwards of forty years ago, in the North-Western Provinces, with the help of a detachment of soldiers, that were merely placed at the disposal of one of his personal friends by the Government. The soldiers were proceeding disguised in a body, with a bride-groom, in the form of a marriage procession. The Thugs were ensnared and captured. His address was deeply appreciated.

With the usual vote of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer, the Meeting terminated at 5-30 P. M.

Proceedings of Meetings of the Calcutta Literary Society held in honor of the Coronation of His Most Excellent Majesty King Edward VII, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, &c., &c.

On Saturday, the 9th August, 1902, at 1 P.M., the Calcutta Literary Society, commenced to distribute Alms to the poor, in commemoration of the Coronation of His Imperial Majesty King Edward VII, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, &c., &c., &c. Large crowds of people had assembled on the occasion, and Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, gave copper coins to those, who were begging for alms. The crowd was orderly. They dispensed with joy, and as they passed along the streets, they blessed His Majesty the King-Emperor of India.

In the afternoon, an Open Air Special Meeting of the Society was held at the Wellington Park, Wellington Square, to offer thanksgiving to God, for His Majesty's speedy recovery, and to celebrate the Coronation. There was a very large and appreciative attendance on the occasion. Hindus, Mahamedans, Christians and other sects of people, which testified to the loyalty and devotion to the Throne.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Vice-President of the Society, offered thanksgiving to God, and addressed the Meeting thus :—

"Lord! We are assembled here to-day to offer our humble thanksgiving to Thee, for the speedy recovery of His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India, to enable His Imperial Majesty to pass through the ceremony of His Majesty's Coronation." (Cheers.)

"When the un-expected news arrived here, that His Majesty was seriously ill, and consequently the Coronation was unavoidably postponed, the whole country was drenched in anxiety, sorrow and grief. We prayed for His Majesty's speedy recovery in Temples, Churches, and Mosques, according to different ways and forms."

"To-day is a day of great rejoicing with us. Lord! Thy Will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven! We are Thine humble servants. We approach Thee in all humility and prayer. We fervently pray that His Imperial Majesty and the Royal Family may live long, and enjoy health, peace and prosperity!" (Cheers)

"This is an occasion of great rejoicing to all

The Ninth of August, 1902, will be remembered by us all, and engraved in our heart of hearts! (Cheers.) Let us express our gratitude to the King of Kings, for the Coronation of His Imperial Majesty." (Cheers.)

"This noon, His Majesty has been crowned, and, therefore, His Majesty's subjects in England are observing this day in festivities and illuminations in various ways. The scene presented at the Grand Coronation Hall, where His Majesty's Allies, the Ministers of the Churches, the Peers of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the representatives of the Colonies and the Indian Nobles, Chiefs and Princes have assembled and surrounded His Majesty's Throne, can better be conceived than described." (Cheers.)

"We have assembled here to-day to congratulate His Majesty, on this auspicious event. Numberless Meetings are being held and festivities given and alms are being distributed. The poor also are being sumptuously fed, in different parts of His Majesty's Extensive Dominions. We cannot observe a better method of celebrating the event, and expressing our feelings of joy to the Throne on the present occasion." (Cheers.)

"Let the Almighty God make our King-Emperor as loved and honored as His Majesty's late illustrious mother was! Let His Majesty's reign be prosperous and peaceful! May His Majesty's life shine like a brilliant star amid the gloom, and may God bless our Noble King!" (Cheers.)

"I must here state that the Calcutta Literary Society has this day distributed alms to the poor, and will feed them to-morrow afternoon, at the premises of the Society, No. 24, Nimtola Street, in commemoration of this auspicious event. I have no wish to detain you long. We must disperse now after giving Three Cheers for His Majesty the King-Emperor, and as many Cheers for Her Majesty the Queen Alexandra, Empress of India, and the Royal Family." (Cheers.)

A flag containing the likeness of Their Majesties, recently imported, were exhibited, at the Meeting, and the decorations in the flag greatly pleased the audience.

The large assembly dispersed with shouts of joy (Vide, the Englishman, 10th, the Statesman, 12th, the Bengalee, 10th and 12th, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, August, 1902.)

The Life of

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar was born in the middle of August, 1830. The day was a rainy one. It flooded in torrents.

As time rolled on, he came up to five years of age, when he was placed under a Gurumahasaya, for instruction. The Gurumahasaya was the dread of the neighbourhood. The fee for each lad was four to eight annas a month, and the Gurumahasaya's income being poor, he was always sulky.

At the age of seven, he was told off to the school of David Hare. In those days, the name of David Hare was a by-word in every house-hold. At this time, there were only three private schools in Calcutta, besides, the Hindu College, Hare School and Dr. Duff's School.

The three private schools mentioned, were owned by Mr. John Sakes, an East Indian gentleman, at Bowbazar; the second, by Mr. Sherborne, at Jorasanko; and the third, by a Bengalee gentleman, named Babu Netai Charan Sen, at Phear Lane. The room, in which the last named school was situated, still exists.

The principle subject of study was the Vocabulary. Prince Dwarka Nath Tagore received his education at the school of Mr. Sherborne and Babu Kissen Mohan Mullick was educated at Babu Netai Charan Sen's school.

The last named gentleman, on his retirement, wrote a pamphlet, giving an account of the early history of commerce in Bengal. The pamphlet derived its chief interest from the information culled from the minutes of the Members of the Board of Revenue and the Collector of Customs, which was replete with information, regarding our early trade.

The school of David Hare competed in fair terms with the Hindu College, although its staff of teachers received their education there. Babu Uma Charan Mitter was the Head Master of the school of David Hare. Babu Durga Charan Banerjea, (the illustrious father of our renowned orator Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, B. A., Editor of the Bengalee, &c.), was Professor of English, and Babu Radha Madhav Das, Professor of Mathematics.

Each of these three gentlemen received a small monthly allowance. Babu Uma Charan Mitter was subsequently employed as a Banian in a mercantile firm. Babu Durga Charan Banerjea was possessed of such retentive memory, that whilst teaching Shakespeare, he did not consult his notes. Babu Radha Madhav Das solved problems in Mathematics, which sometimes startled Mr. Rees, Professor of Mathematics in the Hindu College.

To the three Indian teachers, mentioned above, the school of David Hare owed its success. We have interspersed with a description of this life, the principal events of the period.

It was an unforeseen circumstance which compelled him to leave the school of David Hare. The late Babu Mati Lal Seal of Calcutta founded the Seal's Free College. The conversion of Indian youths moved the feeling heart of Babu Mati Lal Seal, and to prevent the conversion of poor boys, who were educated at Missionary institutions, that he commenced to give secular instruction free of charge.

It was not only this circumstance, but, another event which made him take the step without scruple.

At this time, Indian lads were sometimes treated harshly by the teachers of the College. Babu Mati Lal Seal remonstrated against this treatment. To this, he thought, he received no friendly reply. The Revd. Dr. K. M. Banerjea was employed as a junior teacher in the Seal's Free College, the Jesuit Missionaries being employed as senior teachers. In course of time, he was obliged to leave the Seal's Free College, owing to its removal to a great distance from his house, in the northern part of the town.

Now, he commenced to receive his education at the General Assembly's College. He completed his course of studies at the private residence of Dr. Duff, Dr. Ewart, and Dr. Smith, who gave instruction to the boys for two hours daily, in the morning on alternate days. Dr. Duff taught Milton; Dr. Ewart, Bacon's Essays; and Dr. Smith, Bacon's Novum Organum.

Soon after, he got an appointment in the office, that was opened under the Board of Revenue, for the London Exhibition of 1851. Sir Lawrence Peel was the President, and Dr. McClelland, the Secretary, and Baron Doweans, the Assistant Secretary of this Committee. This was a temporary office, and he lost his appointment after a few months.

Then, he was employed in the office of the Military Commission, which recommended the abolition of the late Military Board, and the Board was accordingly abolished by Lord Dalhousie. Mr. C. Allen, being the President of this Commission, he had the opportunity of making his acquaintance.

Afterwards, he obtained an appointment in the Asiatic Society of Bengal, where he had great leisure, and devoted his spare time to the study of the Asiatic Society's Researches. Dr. Rajendra Lala Mitra was, at this time, employed as Librarian of the Asiatic Society. Subsequently, Mr. Charles Allen got him a high appointment in the Military Accounts Department, then called the Commissariat Audit Office, under Colonel G. Newbolt. He served under the Commissariat of Colonel Newbolt from time to time.

In course of time, the work of the Commissariat was placed under two different departments; viz:—(1) Commissariat and (2) Medical. Dr. Butler was appointed Examiner of Medical Accounts and he got Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar transferred from the Commissariat Examiner's to his own office. In time, he was appointed to the office of Registrar, on a monthly salary of Rupees four hundred.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar owed his success in life to his appointment. We have omitted to mention that he was possessed of a taste for literary habits. He was fond of contributing articles to the several newspapers of Calcutta. The Hindu Intelligencer, edited by the late Babu Kasi Prasad Ghose of Cornwallis' Square, was the first newspaper, which opened its columns to his contributions.

Subsequently, the Hindu Patriot was founded by several ex-pupils of the Oriental Seminary, in which son of the Subarnabaniks of Pathuriaghata and Babu Harish Chandra Mukerjee took a conspicuous part. The latter named gentleman was the Editor of the Hindu Patriot, and, indeed, he was a true patriot. He devoted his life, his wealth and his talents to the cause of the poor. Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar joined the staff of this paper.

One incident, in connection with the editorial management of the Hindu Patriot deserves special mention. Babu Harish Chandra Mukerjee was employed in one of the higher grades in the Military Auditor-General's Office. There appeared an article against the Military authorities. A Military Officer saw the Auditor-General and asked whether the Editor of that paper was employed in his Office. Babu Harish Chandra Mukerjee was sent for, and he at once said that he was the Editor of the Hindu Patriot, and that he was responsible for the article in question. Although, he was not authorized to mention the name of the writer. After some conversation on the subject, he left the room, and sent in his resignation. His resignation was not accepted.

On his death, the proprietorship of the paper was made over to Babu Kali Prasanna Sinha of Jorasanko, by the intercession of the late Venerable Pandit Eshwar Chandra Vidyasagar, C. I. E. Babu Kali Prasanna Sinha purchased the Good-Will and the plant of the paper from the widow of Babu Harish Chandra Mukerjee. After some time, the Hindu Patriot was transferred to the British Indian Association. Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar continued in the staff of the paper with Rai Krista Das Pal Bahadur, C. I. E., who was appointed Editor, and the late Babu Kailash Chandra Bose also joined the staff of the paper.

In the meantime, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar used to contribute articles to the Englishman, and the Bengal Harkara. Lastly, he was requested by Babu Keshab Chandra Sen to contribute to the Indian Mirror, then a weekly paper, the organ of the Brahma Samaj of India. Babu Keshab Chandra Sen and Babu Pratap Chandra Mazumdar used to contribute religious articles to this Journal, and Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar wrote articles on secular subjects.

Afterwards, Babu Keshab Chandra Sen founded the Indian Reform Association and Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar was appointed Secretary, with Mr. K. C. Sen as President, and Mr. P. C. Mazumdar as Vice-President of that body.

Sometime after, the Brahma Marriage Bill was brought before the Legislative Council. Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar contributed an article in the Calcutta Review, which Sir Roper Lethbridge, K. C. I. E., inserted in the quarterly number of the year, in which the Bill was passed.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, in this article, reviewed the memorials submitted to the Legislative Council by the Adi Brahma Samaj and the Brahma Samaj of India: pro. and con. The Memorial, submitted by the Adi Brahma Samaj, was supported by the opinions of learned Pandits. The counter memorial, submitted by the Brahma Samaj of India, was supported by the opinions of the Venerable Pandit Eshwar Chandra Vidyasagar, C. I. E., and other learned Pandits of Calcutta, Nadiya, Krishnagar and other places, setting forth that the Bill was permissive, not a coercive measure.

After his retirement, he started the Indian Public Opinion, which was highly spoken of by the Englishman and other newspapers, also, by Mr. Digby, who took great interest in Indian affairs. The Englishman complimented the paper as containing twelve pages of readable matters, including the editorial and the selections which were well chosen. Mr. Digby, also, in complimenting the Journal, remarked, that the paper "commanded his admiration. It was put together with much skill, and reflected credit on all concerned."

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar subsequently devoted the latter part of his life to the work of the Calcutta Literary Society. He translated in English the learned lectures delivered in Hindi and Bengali by His Holiness Paramhansa Jagatguru Sri Sankaracharya Raj Rajeswar Sankarasram Swami Maharaj of the Holy Temple of Dwarka and Swami Nityanandji Saraswati of the Panjab.

The Twenty-seventh Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great éclat, at the quadrangle, of the Rifon College, No. 60, Mirzapur Street, on Friday, the 13th February, 1903, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Ranjit Sinha, Rajah Bahadur of Nashipur.

The Meeting was largely and influentially attended by the Members of the Society, Graduates and under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, and other respectable gentlemen of the suburbs.

On the motion of Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, Land-holder and Government pensioner, seconded by Sett Hira Lall Jahuri, Rajah Bahadur Ranjit Sinha of Nashipur was voted to the Chair amidst shouts of applause.

On the Chairman's taking his seat, the Vice-President of the Society said that the present Anniversary Meeting of the Society should have been held in the beginning of January, 1903, but, circumstances, over which we had no control, compelled us to postpone it till this day—The venerable old mother of our worthy Secretary, Babu Sham Lall Day, was all of a sudden indisposed. The disease gradually took a serious turn, and unfortunately the venerable lady breathed her last on Monday, the 9th February, 1903, at 12-55 P. M., as you will find Babu Sham Lall Day is still mourning! We all condole with him on his ir-repairable loss. May the Soul of the old lady rest in peace in heaven!!

Rather than inconvenience, Rajah Ranjit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur and Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, Mr. Day thought it proper that the Anniversary Meeting should not be deferred any longer, and we meet here to-day accordingly. I will not detain you long; but, I request the Chairman to open the proceedings of the Meeting.

The Chairman having asked the Secretary to read the last Annual Report, Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, addressed the Meeting thus :

Address by the Secretary :—

Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen,

Before commencing the usual proceedings of the Twenty-seventh Anniversary Meeting of the Society, I beg to convey my sincere thanks to those, who have been kind enough to condole with me in the sad bereavement, which has sustained by the death of my old revered mother.

The Society begs to express its heart-felt sorrow caused by the melancholy death, in March 1902, of one of its oldest and illustrious members—the Right Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, Baronet, M. F. G.C.S.I., C.I.E., D.C.L., LL.D., who joined the Society on the 15th September, 1881, or upwards of twenty-one years ago! The Right Hon'ble gentleman took great interest in the welfare of the Society till the last days of his life.

A letter of condolence was duly forwarded to the Dowager Lady Temple, C. T., on the 20th March, 1902, to which the following reply was received :—
From H. B. the Dowager Lady Temple, C. T. :—

Hampstead, London. N. W., 7th April, 1902.

The Dowager Lady Temple is deeply grateful for the kind expressions of sympathy and appreciation of her dear Husband that she has received.

She greatly regrets that the number of letters renders it impossible for her to answer each individually and hopes that this acknowledgment may be accepted instead.

The Photograph is sent separately.

In September 1902, Kumar Radha Prasad Roy of Posta was snatched away by the cruel hand of death, at the prime of life. A letter of condolence was sent to his cousin, Kumar Hari Passad Roy to which the following reply was received :—

From Kumar Hari Prasad Roy of Posta :—
Calcutta, 24th September, 1902.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, and to tender my thanks to you and the other members of the Society for the expression of condolence in our sad bereavement.

To Babu Sham Lall Day,
Secretary, Cal. Lit. Society.

Yours faithfully,
Hari Prasad Roy.

Gentlemen, we have also to record with regret the premature death, at the early age of twenty-three, of Kumar Srish Chandra Sinha Bahadur of Paikparah Raj, in November following. The Kumar Bahadur very recently inherited the vast estate of the late lamented Kumar Grish Chandra Sinha Bahadur, and was enrolled as a Member of the Society since 5th January, 1901. He left behind him a mother, a widow and two infant sons to mourn his loss! He took great interest in the prosperity of the Society. May his Soul rest in peace!

A letter of condolence was forwarded to his cousin Kumar Srish Chandra Sinha Bahadur, on the 21st November, 1902.

The Office of the Society was closed for one day, on each occasion, to mark its respect and esteem for the illustrious deceased.

The Society was established in the year Eighteen hundred and Seventy five, and now we are celebrating its Twenty-seventh Anniversary. Its main object is to hold friendly gatherings of both communities, and to discuss Social, Literary and Scientific subjects, the Society has been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform.

I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of its various public meetings, published in the leading local newspapers, bear ample testimony to them.

The Twenty-sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 15th January, 1902, at 5 P. M., under the presidency of Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, landholder and Government pensioner, when Mr. S. P. Kelkar of Bombay delivered a lecture on Technical Education and Foreign Travels. The Meeting was largely and influentially attended.

Besides the Twenty-sixth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the following lectures were delivered during the session, 1902; Viz. :—

(1) On the Improvement of our Domestic Industries by Mr. S. P. Kelkar of Bombay, under the presidency of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick, M. B. ; C. M. ; R. C. S. ; Fellow of the Medical Society of London ; Member of the British Medical Association and Chelsea Chemical Society, &c. &c., at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Shanker Ghose's Lane, Cornwallis' Street, on Wednesday, the 22nd January, 1902, at 4-30 P. M.

(2) On Industrial Exhibition by Mr. S. P. Kelkar of Bombay, under the presidency of the Revd. James H. Jennings, M. A., Professor, Bishop's College, at the hall of the City College, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, on the 5th February, 1902, at 4-30 P. M.

(3) On the Art of Weaving by Mr. S. P. Kelkar of Bombay, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Nath Banerjee, B. A., Editor, Ben at the premises of the Ripon College, No. 60, Mirzapur Street, on the 6th February, 1902, at 4-30 P. M.

(4) On the Thugs by Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, landholder and Government pensioner, under the presidency of Khan Bahadur M. Sujat Ali Beg, Representative of Her Highness the Nawab Begum Sahiba of Murshidabad, C. I., at the hall of the Mahammel Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 29, Mirzapur Street, on the 14th March, 1902, at 3 P. M.

(5) An Extraordinary Open Air Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the Wellington Square, on Saturday, the 9th August, 1902, to offer thanksgiving to God for the speedy recovery and to celebrate the Coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII., King-Emperor of India. Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar addressed the large assemblage of Hindus, Mahamedans, Christians, and other sects of people, which testified to their loyalty and devotion to the Throne.

The Reports of proceedings of all these public meetings were published in the local newspapers and have formed an appendix to the consolidated printed Report of the Society.

Whilst regretting the melancholy death of several of its prominent members, the Society has equal reason to rejoice on the speedy recovery and Coronation of His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India, which is a source of un-mixed gratification to all of His Majesty's subjects throughout the Empire, connected as His Majesty is by close ties of love, affection and esteem to the people of this country, which His Majesty personally visited in the year Eighteen-hundred and Seventy-five,—the year of the foundation of this Society,—or upwards of a quarter of a century ago, and the reminiscences of which are still cherished with the fondest of recollections by those, with whom His Majesty came in contact.

The Society sent the following telegram to the Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general of India :—

Kindly convey Society's respectful Congratulations to His Excellency and His Majesty on His Majesty's recovery and Coronation.

The following message, in reply to this, was received from His Excellency's Private Secretary :—

In this entertainment the poor people, who were sumptuously treated, were greatly delighted and blessed Their Imperial Majesties—exclaiming, Long may live the Emperor and the Empress of India.

(Vide. the Enlishman, 10th, the Statesman, 12th, the Bengalee 10th and 12th, and the Amrita Bazar Patrika, August, 1902.)

Seven days after, 17th August, 1902, an Evening party was given to the friends and admirers of the Society, in honor of Their Majesties' Coronation, at which they were richly treated.

After the reading of the Annual Report of the Society by Babu Sham Lall Day, the President and Secretary to the Society, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Dr. Sarat Chandra Ghosh to deliver

Importance of India to the Empire :—

Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly an hour. He said: Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen,

It affords me sincere pleasure to be present here on this occasion and see such a large and respectable gathering around me. It shows the high regard, in which the Calcutta Literary Society is held by the citizens of Calcutta and the suburbs. (Cheers.)

The subject of this day's discussion is the Importance of India to the Empire. We can look at this important question from three points of view:

viz:—

(1.) India's commercial value to England.

commercially, India affords the best market for English manufactures. Manchester and Sheffield had reaped their stately piles of fortune on the brisk business they carried on with India in cotton and steel goods. Yet, the trade was not one-twentieth of what it would be, if the people of India had been prosperous and not famine-stricken. It was the duty of the Indians to improve their own manufactures, so that India might get richer. (Cheers.)

If India could establish factories of their own, the people would get cheaper articles of as good quality as English goods. Therefore, every encouragement should first be given to Indian Industries. The rich people ought not to grudge a little extra expense to help the growth of Indian Industries, which, when well developed, would cheapen the market.

At present, the difficulty was that the infant industries had to compete with the industries of Europe and America, developed after many years of careful nursing by high personages and the State.

Princes, Zemindars and rich men could do a great deal by inducing retail dealers to go in for Indian-made goods.

Dr. Mullick then went on to say that, during his tour of inspection, to enable him to study the moral and material condition of India, when he got to Ahmedabad, the cloth manufacturers said that, they could produce as good articles as Manchester, and sell them cheaper, but, for the iniquitous Duties of the Government.

They also complained that, our countrymen, specially Princes and Zemindars, did not instruct their subjects and tenants, who were engaged in trade to expose for sale Indian goods.

Dr. Mullick was certain that we could do much in this direction, for there were many buyers, they could get home-made goods, they would avail themselves of those goods in preference to English goods. At present, Europe and America reaped the advantage.

He would not deny that India had reaped several lessings from England, but, at the same time, it must be admitted that India had conferred manifold advantages on England.

Next, turning to the Military question, Dr. Mullick said that, India kept at her own cost a part of the English Army. She also had a large Indian Army, which fought many England's battles.

Somaliand, Malta and Afghanistan saw Indian troops helping to fight England's battles there.

The constant Frontier skirmishes taught the British Army strategy, which was an advantage to England, but India could not afford to pay the heavy costs, as it was one of the poorest countries in the world.

The next factor was the Finance of India to the British Empire. England has been enriched by the vast wealth, which this country has been sending England year after year.

He then dwelt upon the Agricultural Produce of India. Indian Exports of Jute and Cotton have been aiding Manchester and Sheffield. England is a manufacturing country. Where would Manchester and Sheffield be, if jute and cotton were not exported England?

He continued that India looked large before the world during the last Delhi Durbar, as the seat of gorgeous pageantry, but, to furnish the trappings of the tamasa was the least part of her importance in the Empire. The man in the street gladly said that the British Empire was the largest in the world and over it, the Sun never sets.

His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Lord Curzon, G. M. S. I., G. M. I. E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, had fitly called India the pivot of the British Empire. India could not be separated from her people. If India occupied such an important position in the Empire, the Indians had a right to share in the privileges of the government of the country. This was a point, which the rulers of the land ought to take into consideration.

India was by far the largest customer of English goods. A recent estimate showed that England had been enriched to the extent of nearly Five hundred Millions Pounds, during the last thirty-eight years. But, this was not all. England supplied English stores for Government and the people for ships, railway, &c. It was a pity that the income of the average Indian was so little. There were many causes at work, one of which was the drain of money to England, whilst England exports £ 6-10, Canada £3, and Australia £19, per head. India exports only 5 sh. per head.

He thought, if England gained so many advantage from India, England, on her part, also ought to make the people of India happy and contented, by giving them extended power in governing their own country, and also by employing them in the higher departments of the State, for education has largely spread, and nothing could be worse than to arouse ambition, which is not satisfied.

On grounds of equity and justice, Dr. S. K. Mullick said that, these concessions were necessary in these days of progress and advancement. (Loud Cheers.)

The speaker then went on to state how India provided England with billets for aristocrats and commoners. If the English lad was clever, he became a Civilian, with prospects of becoming everything but a Bishop. If he was not so, he found a safe sanctuary in the Police. (Laughter.)

There was a tendency to narrow down these openings to Indians. If he said that every one had a fair chance under the Union Jack, then he must admit Indians into this services in the freest manner possible, consistent with the hardest of tests to be shared and shared alike by the competitors ir-respective of nationality.

Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick concluded that he was close upon a quarter of a century in England, and gave several instances eulogising the spirit of justice, which animated the stay-at-home Englishman. He appealed for the same in India.

The last point was the efficiency, which India taught the Empire. The soldiers were constantly taught practical tactics by the small Frontier Wars, and the Civilians retired at a comparatively early age, with brains filled with experience and pockets bloated with money. There was thus lost to India, both in money and experience. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman, in a few appropriate and eloquent words, congratulated Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick on his excellent speech. He thanked Dr. Mullick especially for his reference to the services, which he, the Chairman, had rendered to the country, as a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council. He also congratulated the Society and its indefatigable worthy Secretary, Babu Sham Lal Day, on the success with which his labours had been crowned. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved at 6-45 p.m., after the usual vote of thanks to the Chair and the lecturer.

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, No 13, Mirzapur Street, on Tuesday, the 17th February, 1903, at 5 P.M. The hall was densely crowded. Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, F.R.C.S., London, M.B.C.M., Fellow of the London Medical Society, Member of the Chelsea Chemical Society, Member of the British Medical Association, &c., &c., &c., was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, in introducing the American Lady lecturer Swami Abhay-ananda of Chicago, to the Meeting, said that his task was a mere formality, because, every body knew, by reputation, the American Lady, Swami Abhay-ananda of Chicago.

He said that it was a matter of great pride to them to reflect that their Philosophy should have travelled not only throughout India, but, that it had crossed the ocean wide and converted some of the best thinkers of Europe. To-day was presented the proud spectacle of India standing before the world, as one of the best leaders in higher thought. India may well be proud of her mastery over the west, for, like the ancient Grecians, she, though conquered by arms, remained victorious in brains. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked the American Lady Swami Abhay-ananda of Chicago, to deliver her lecture on—

The Relation between God and Man:—

The learned lady lecturer delivered her speech for upwards of an hour, during which, she was applauded. The lady said that the Sphinx on the mountain path slips the wanderer on his way, and proposes its riddle. What is man?—Whence does he come? and Whither does he go?

The same questions the Sphinx proposes from age to age, since the beginning of time, which man has, ever since, exerted himself to answer.

What is man?—Again, we may turn to the Sphinx and hear the answer it gave. King Assurals enquiring what and who he was?—I am the sum total of ancient wisdom. I am the synthesis of man. I have a brow that thinks. I have a breast that heaves with love. I have the lion's claws for the fight, and bull's hips for labour. I have the eagle's wings to ascend to the light.

Whence does man come?—In answer to this, the Hindu Shastras inform us that Nara, a portion of Narayana, was the Eternal Man, having no beginning, no end. Nara and Narayana are the displayed forms of the undisplayed. (Cheers.)

Equipt with this knowledge, we are led to suppose, man as being co-eternal with God. We should investigate his nature and destiny by process of Deduction, instead of Induction, (i.e.,) from cause to effect, from simple to complex.

God is One, without a second. He is Essence, and He is Substance, and Substance implies Form. For, unless Substance is also Form, it is only an ideal of the entity, of which nothing can be predicted. The Form or substance in God is the human part of His Nature, which endowed with inherent productive powers, brings the wonderful universe into being.

The universe, therefore, is the body of God, and this body is composed of two entities, the Perishable, which is the gross forms or bodies, and the Imperishable, which is the Spirit of the individual Soul, which abides in the bodies.

Sri Sri Krishna explains, thus:—“There are two beings in this world, O Arjuna, the Perishable and the Imperishable. All creatures or bodies form the Perishable, and the immutable Spirit abiding in them is called the Imperishable.”

“But another, the Highest Being, is designated the Supreme Spirit, who pervading the three worlds sustains them,—the Eternal Lord.”

And transcend the Perishable, and am even above the Imperishable, I am celebrated in the Peda, as the Supreme Being. (Bhagbat Gita, 75, v. 16, 17, 18).

Man, therefore, and the rest of the universe constitute the body of God. He is of God, but, is not God, not any more than his own body is himself. Individual Soul is the mould of the Supreme Atma, but, it is inseparable from, and co-exist with the Supreme Atma. Man exists for the glorification of God, for he traverses the sea of life, passing from one phase of evolution to another, last, returns to its own source and knows himself be re-united with God.”

“The Universe”, says the Shastras, “was created by Vishnu God, from His smile, springing from overflowing of His love. The universe, therefore, and Man, the highest being in it, are the concrete “smile of Vishnu”, and a full measure of His love. In other words, man, who is the subtle and imperishable being in the universe, is the beloved of God and one with God—one in two and two in one (Cheers).

In the beginning of things, God, the Supreme Atma, having entered Time and Space, functions of Purusha, in connection with Prakriti, the matter of which forms came into being. Prakriti, which the last term of man and the mode of God, claim all the attention, interest, love and self-sacrifice Purusha. Man, in that form, is the beloved of Universal Spirit,—the Iswara, or Sri Krishna. Both travel side by side, bound in love, both pass from one state of existence to another, the Iswara ever helping, sustaining, raising and serving individual Soul, until, after ages of evolution transformations, both attain the effulgence of Parama and the crowning glory of perfected Love. This “Whither Man goes”.

Let us carry ourselves to that picturesque description of the conflict between the Kauravas and Pandavas, when Nara is called Arjuna, and Narayana has become Sri Krishna. To the mind of the attentive student, the relations between God and Man are minutely described and explained. Arjuna, the Eternal Man, has reached that stage of evolution when he must war against evils, both within and without, which have grown like creepers and had clutched to his being.

His own close relatives stand as the foe on battle-field, and the war is one, in which his existence is at stake.

Sri Krishna is the Charioteer of Arjuna. He illuminates the battle-field, for the free and successful operation of his warrior. He directs the car to right and to left, ever shielding Arjuna from the shafts of the enemy. He stakes his own life and, over again to rescue Arjuna from imminent death had presented his own Dharm-weapon to Vaishnava weapon of Bhagbatas, offering his life to save Arjuna, the Eternal Man,—his Beloved from Eternity. (Cheers.)

After the lady lecturer had finished, Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lady lecturer for her eloquent and instructive speech. The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chairman and the learned lecturer. (Vide, Calcutta Times, 18th February, 1903).

As previously announced in the local papers public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 23, San Ghose's Lane, (Gurukul's Street), on Wednesday, 18th February, 1903, at 5 P.M. The Meeting largely and influentially attended.

On the motion of Babu Jona Candia D. Secretary, Subitri Library, seconded by Babu S. Chandra Mukherjee, M.A., Editor of the Daily Sakar, Narayan Singa, General, Chief Secretary Sirmoor-Nahan State, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

After Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, Chairman asked the American Lady Swami Abhay-ananda of Chicago, to deliver her second lecture to the Society on—

The Nature of the Mind of Man:—

The lady lecturer delivered her speech for upwards of an hour, in the course of which she said that, the universe existed for the sake of man. The Sun sheds its light and spreads its beams for his sake. The flower blooms, the bird sings for his sake. The sea rolls its waves and billows, the storm rages and convulses nature, all for his sake.

The universe is a huge symbol, waiting for the reading of man; it is a mirror in which, like Psyche of the Greek, man looks at himself and recognises himself.

In order to understand the Nature of the Mind of Man, we should first consider the following two facts; viz:—

- (1) That man is eternal, co-existent and co-eternal with God,
- (2) That he is now placed in this world, to live and move in it, to grow, unfold, and achieve a mission in it.

To respond to these duties, man's organism, the physical, the mental and the spiritual, is constituted just as the universe is a wonderful and perfectly harmonious whole, so, the organism of man is, for the universe is the microcosm of which man is the faithful likeness. In the great book called Nature, given to us for study, man, in exploring her realm, is merely seeking to know himself by looking at him-self, as reflected in the mirror of nature.

In accordance with modern Scientific experiment and investigation, which is only the corroboration of Scientific facts, known in Ancient India, and mentioned in the Shastras, man is constituted with two separate mind and consciousness, which function, each in its particular sphere of action, co-operate, for the achievement of results.

One of these two, consciousness is, the real being Nara, the eternal man, possessed of all his inherent Divine powers and omniscience, and, also, bearing the creation of gross tendencies, collected in his peregrination, through ages of existence in connection with the Material World. This consciousness is the silent, ever-watching, sleepless being within us, the Nara, the real man, speeding on his mission of experiences and the gathering of fruits thereof, traversing ages, wandering in space, bound for the side of, and union with God, wherefrom he started for the journey.

The other consciousness, (the lower), is an instrument for the perception and the cognition of the external world, which the higher consciousness has in remote time, projected out of itself, to be instrumental for the acquiring of terrestrial experiences. We may compare these two consciousness to a capitalist and a work-man, one working for the benefit of the other, more than for his own benefit.

The lower consciousness, being the factor for greatest activity, is by nature positive, and corresponds with the Tajal Element; the higher consciousness being relatively non-active, its mission of its functions being away from the surface of the organism, is by nature negative and corresponds with Apas Element. One is acted upon by the Solar Force, the other by the Lunar one, and like these two great luminaries, one is silent, while the other is in operation.

These two mental phenomena, the two consciousness of mind, are operating through two distinct sections of the physical organism of man, each of which has a great centre of Force, called the brain. The brain and the cerebro-spinal nerve system constitutes the operating instrument of the lower consciousness, and are engaged in the service of self-preservation of the Ego, and, the furthering of man's self-interest. That consciousness, by the means of its instrument, goes forth into the world as a merchant engaged in trade, seeking for what is beneficial, and appropriating and taking cognizance of all external phenomena, and then reporting to the higher consciousness. This lower mind being simply an effect, or a mode of the higher one, is destroyed with the body.

The higher consciousness, also, possesses its physical instrument, which is the abdominal brain, otherwise called the Solar Plexus, and its innumerable ramifications, the sympathetic nerve system. The cerebro-spinal nerve system, the organ of the Lower Mind, spreads along the surface of the human structure, its mission being to function in the external world. The organ of the higher consciousness, the Solar Plexus and sympathetic nerve system, on the contrary, spread in the inner part of the human being, for its mission is to nourish and preserve the physical body, so that, it may be fitted to undergo experiences by which the Light of the Soul, which encircles that consciousness, may increase in power and purity.

These two consciousness and their respective physiological instruments divide man into two great natures, viz:—(1) That of the "Intellect" and (2) the "Heart". By that of the Intellect is unfolded self-assertion, or the last term of Egoism; by that of the Heart is cultivated self-surrendering sympathy and love. The former is connected with rights, justice and the hard facts of life; it is the seat of Reason—the latter is ignorant of these, because, its appreciation of man's mission on earth transcends all these, and reaches the domain Divine of Eternal love. This consciousness is the seat of Intuition. Both minds are seats of knowledge, but, in the Lower it is acquired, whilst in the Higher it is innate. The knowledge of the former is well defined by the Sanskrit word "Gyan"; that of the latter by the word "Vigyan" or knowledge, which is the direct vision of the Spirit.

The physiological organ of the Higher Consciousness, the sympathetic nerve system, is under the direct influence of the Lunar current, and the five modifications of this current called in ancient Lore, the Tatwas, which course, each in succession, within the human body every two hours five Gharis, swaying the body and mind to the irresistible vibrations of the primordial colours, which have built and since preserved the Universe.

The Lower mind is under the jurisdiction of the Solar current and its course, both positive and negative, of twenty-four hours' duration. The Ancient Lore, which is deeply corroded by new science, tells us how man is acted upon by the influence of the sun entering one by one the zodiacal signs in the heavens. The Lower Mind being in Effect is merely a reflection, or rather a reflective power. For this reason, the Shastras compare it to water which reflects upside down. The Lower Mind perceives things and cognizes them as they appear, not as they are in reality; and it perceives them through its own peculiar light. Objects, as presented to the consciousness, have no colors (etc.), they are neither good nor bad, neither blissful, nor woeful. The Lower Mind reacts them and endows them with its own light, which is its mental state at that time; for is it not a fact that an object which is held as propitious by one man, can be held as inauspicious by another? The Mind is ever going out to mirror itself in the lake of nature, and then returns to itself, carrying home the narrative of its external experience.

It is an aphorism of Western Psychology that "Sensation" is the result of "Perception". The converse, however, is true for "Perception" is only the result of "Sensation", for when the idea of an object is not present in consciousness, it cannot be perceived externally by the senses, whose rallying point is the Lower Mind.

Philosophies, which teach the subduing of feelings, and the curtailing of emotions in man, are aiming at the temporal destruction of the higher consciousness which is the seat of Love and of Religion, and which is Nara, the real man, working out his terrestrial mission by means of Divine Principles. The emotional nature is easily led astray, and that explains the existence of the Lower Mind, the seat of reason by which and emotions are restrained, for the Higher consciousness is the boat, launched on the sea of life, and the Lower consciousness is the rudder that leads it along the proper path.

Both consciousness are necessary for man in the human shape. He is well equilibrated, who knows how to keep the Lower and Ambitious Mind within the limits of its own sphere, and to use it as a bridle to direct the sometimes reckless Higher Consciousness, so that, he may normally function on the human avenues of reason and on those of intuition. The finding of the dead centre, the point of equilibration is the object of all Philosophies and systems of Religion, (Cheers.)

As previously announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Metropolitan Institution, (Bow Bazar Branch), No. 187, Bow Bazar Street, on Thursday, the 19th February, 1903, at 5 P. M., under the Presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Gopal Krishna Goekhale, C. I. E., Bombay Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council. The Meeting was densely crowded.

The Hon'ble Chairman, having taken his seat, asked Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary, to the Society, to read the Proceedings of the last Meeting.

The Secretary having done so, and its proceedings being duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked the, American Lady Swami Abhayananda of Chicago, to deliver her third lecture to the Society on :—

Soul Migration and Evolution:—

The lady lecturer spoke on the subject for more than an hour, in the course of which she said that there are different classes of people, who hold different opinions regarding the Migration of the Soul. In Europe, Asia and America divergent views are held on the same subject. In India, the Munis and Rishis of old, who are believed to have been inspired by their incessant devotion to the Deity, hold positive views on the subject. Those views which, the Vedas inculcate, are regarded with an intensity of belief by the learned Pandits of India, which can find no parallel in history.

What becomes of us after death?—is a question, that is inseparably connected with our existence. No other question is dearer to our hearts, and no other question has been asked a greater number of times. It has been the theme of Poets and of Sages, of Priests and of Prophets.

Kings on the throne have discussed it. Beggars in the streets have dreamt of it, still, the interest in the question has grown the greater. Solution after solution has come out, and satisfied many a heart, with hopeful conclusions, but, still the question, if often asked,—What becomes of us after death?

The Sages and the Saints have declared for one or the other view, and asked the erring mankind to consider their respective conclusions.

The whole Christian world is waiting for the Great Resurrection Day, and the whole Hindu world, believing in the results of the mighty labors of the ancient sages, whom they believe to have seen God, incorporated with God, is waiting on the idea of the Transmigration of Soul, and, gradually, its emancipation from all earthly bonds, and then the blissful state of unification with Him, from whom they have come. The Sun sheds its rays, and, as if, with the waving shades, draws them all towards Him.

Whence we came, and where are we to go? is a most important question in life.

Why one is happy and the other miserable? This is a matter of deep meditation. Buddha, standing on the Niranjana River as if echoing the voice of God, declared unto the suffering mankind, thus :—

Ye ye, suffering men and women of this little earth, know the results of thy Karma, that toss you up and down from birth to death, and from death to birth. Try to emancipate thyself from all the bondage of desire. Come up in re-nunciative love for thy brethren, and, at last, when the Nirb comes, you are in Him!"

"We are from God, and so, we must go again Him, is the surest of all problems on earth. O present is determined by the past, and the future will be by the present."

The Soul knows of no destruction. It comes from God, and will rest in Him. We are born Sin, and shall unite with Him, according to the results of our Karma.

The Soul will go on revolving or reverting back from birth to birth, and from death to death, until the time comes, and takes us to that state of eternal bliss, from which there is no return. (Cheers.)

A person, who has spent a religious and sacred life, is believed to have secured his abode in Heaven. God rewards those, who deserve His love and kindness.

The universal belief is that, God is kind and loves his disciples, (i. e.), those, who trust in Him give up all earthly desires, and know nothing but God, adore nothing but God, spend their lives in the service of God, and take a pleasure in doing good to his country and fellow-brethren. Persons of this class are, after their death, destined to repose in God. Their Souls find a resting place in Heaven. (Cheers.)

The human Soul is eternal, perfect and infinite. Death means only a change from one body to another.

Is there no escape then?—

In ancient time, the cry that went up from the bottom of the heart of despair reached that merciful God, and words of hope and consolation came down and inspired a Vedic Sage, and he stood up before the world, and, in triumphant voice, proclaimed the glad tidings to the lade world, thus :—

"Hear ye children of immortal bliss, I have found the way out. I have found Him, who is beyond all darkness, all delusions, and knowing Him alone, you shall be saved!"

How sweet rings the declaration of the mighty Swami Vivekananda, when we turn our ears to that glorious voice, which, on the American platform addressed :—

"Allow me, to call you brethren, by that sweet name heirs and sharers of immortal bliss, you are the children of God."

Sinners and eternal Hell—It is a sin to call a man sinner. It is a standing libel on human nature.

"Come up O lions! and shake off the delusion, that you are sheep—knowing Him and seeing Him, your Soul is free from all migration, and you are He! When we shall feel that day—that in Divine mercy; the entire world is free from bondage! no more transmigration! all embalmed in Him! (Cheers.)"

Says the Venerable Swami in his eloquent and touching words,—and what a consolation to the bereaved and painful hearts of men and women of all earth—Silly fools. Call you sinners, and tell you sit down in a corner and weep; foolishness, wickedness and down-right inhumanity to say—you are sinners!

You are all God—If you dare stand on that force—mould your whole life on that. When you help a poor man, do not feel the least pride. You are the Soul of the Universe. You are the Sun and the Moon and the Stars. It is you that is shining in the land.

Whom are you going to hate or fight?—Know that thou art He, and model your whole life, according to that and no more. You are grovelling in darkness, until, you know Him. Knowing Him, you will escape from Death. (Cheers.)

(Vide, the Bengalee, 20th February, 1903.)

An interesting ceremony held by the Calcutta Literary Society, in honor of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick's marriage with the youngest daughter of Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law :-

As announced in the local papers, a public meeting, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Saturday, the 4th April, 1903, at 4-30 P.M., to meet Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, (of Malancha, Echapur and Calcutta), F.R.C.S. (London), M.B.C.M., (Edinburgh), Fellow of the London Medical Society, Members of the Chelsea Chemical Society, the British Medical Association, &c. &c., &c.

There was a large and influential gathering. Upwards of eight hundred gentlemen were present, and the hall was crowded to suffocation. Upon the table, there were beautiful nosegays, bouquets, &c.

There were music and songs, and harps and guitars and one sixteen dulcimers played together by dexterous men. Professors, like Mr. Anulya Dhone Bhattacharyya sang, and sweet accompaniments impart a very melodious tune with Jaltaranga—seventeen metallic water-cups proportionately rang in the best harmonious cadanza. Trimbels, armoniums and songs made a pleasant feeling, and touched the entire audience and a charming sensation prevailed.

On the motion of Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-president of the Society, seconded by Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sarada Charan Mitra, M.A., B.L., (one of His Majesty's Judges of the High Court), was voted to the chair amidst deafening cheers.

The Hon'ble Chairman, in opening the proceedings of the meeting, addressed the audience thus :-

Gentlemen, you are all well-aware of the object of this meeting. Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick requires no introduction, for, he is a prominent member of the Hindu Community. (Cheers.)

It might, however, interest you to know that he comes of high lineage. He can trace his ancestry through a long line of illustrious fore-fathers. His great ancestor, Purandar Khan, (the latter word being his title), has left behind him an un-dying reputation. He was the Prime-Minister of Hussein Khan, the greatest Mahamedan King of Bengal, in the Fifteenth Century, and wielded much power. For, Hossein Khan's father was Purandar's father's servant. He rendered eminent services to the province. (Cheers.)

The Mahamedan invasion dominated the policy of the province, but Purandar's ability made him the King-maker of his time.

We are grateful to Purandar Khan for a far-reaching social Reform. For, it was he, who founded the present stem of Kulinism amongst Dakhin-Kari-Kayastas, and the Kayastas of to-day owe a heavy debt of gratitude to Dr. S. K. Mullick's great ancestor. For, it was this Social Reform, which have elevated these Kayastas to the position, which they now occupy. (Cheers.)

Dr. Mullick's career proved there was much in the cory of heredity. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, to read the proceedings of the last meeting.

The Secretary having done so, the proceedings were duly affirmed. The Hon'ble Chairman then asked the Secretary to read the Address of Congratulation prepared for presentation that day to Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick.

The Secretary, accordingly, read the following Address, which was nicely printed in gold and on parchment :-

Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick (of Malancha, Echapur and Calcutta), F. R. C. S., (London), M. B. C. M. (Edinburgh), Fellow of the London Medical Society, Member of the Chelsea Chemical Society and the British Medical Association, &c., &c.

Dear Sir,
We beg to congratulate you on the auspicious occasion of your marriage with Miss Sisir Kumari Ghose, the cultured daughter of our distinguished countryman, Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, which took place, with great éclat, on Wednesday, the 11th March, 1903.
We are deeply touched that you have married according to the rites and tradition of the Hindu Shastras. By doing so, you have kept yourself within the pale of Hindu Society, amongst the Kayastas of which, your great ancestor, Purandar Khan of immortal memory, was such a brilliant leader, for, he was not only a Social Reformer, but, practically, the King-Maker of Bengal in the Eleventh Century.

You remained and studied Twenty-five years in England, and travelled in other foreign countries during which period, you rendered invaluable services to India. We hope, that the married life, on which you have just entered, will prove a source of un-mixed happiness to you.

May God bless you and your newly married bride with long life, peace, happiness and prosperity.

Gobin Chandra Dhar,
(Society's Vice-President).
Satis Kumar Banerjee, B. A.
(Rector, Mitra Institution)
Sham Lal Day, (Founder-Secretary of the Society).

After the Address had been read, the Hon'ble Chairman handed over the same to Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, amidst deafening cheers.

Mr. Satis Kumar Banerjee, B. A., then presented a richly embossed gold-locket of the best oriental workmanship, to Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, on behalf of his friends, for the admiration they entertained for him. In doing so, he said, that it had given him great pleasure in presenting a Gold Locket to Dr. Mullick, as a token in memory of the celebration of Dr. Mullick's marriage. (Cheers.)

In acknowledging the Address of Congratulation and the Gold-Locket, Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick rose, amidst cheers, and made the following speech :-

Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen :-if I am not able to command the felicity of language, which the occasion requires, please ascribe it to the emotions of the moment, which overpower me, and, not to a want of gratitude, on my part, for nothing is dearer to me than the appreciation of my countrymen. (Cheers.)

It is true that the green-eyed monster has ever been a part and parcel of public life, whether, we view with our mind's eye, the rise and the downfall of the Pariahs, or, of the time of Romulus and Remus, or, the Kaleidoscopic changes of our own times.

The swarlings of Pariahs may have their place in the affairs of life. At any rate, if they do nothing else, they serve to make one appreciate the more, the fidelity of the noble St. Barnards.

Gentlemen, you have referred to my marriage having been celebrated under the rites of our ancient Hindu Shastras. When it was open to me to adopt other professions of faith, when in the eyes of some of my friends, who were more loud in their declaration, than in their arguments, I was guilty of retrogression amounting to heresy, and, when I ran the risk of being ostracised from the bosom of their society; when I say, I was conscious of these factors, I must have had a very strong reason for going counter to the former. My reason is simple enough, I believe, that each one of us occupies a place in the economy of the universe with a distinct mission.

We are here not altogether for our-own-selfish ends, but, to promote so far as it lies within our more or less limited powers, to further the advance of our people (Cheers.)

The spirit of nationality is the sheet anchor for the maintenance of the greatness of a nation and social and political changes were correlated. In our country, there was much room for improvement.

If those of us, who had visited the West, on our return, set ourselves up as a distinct sect and made ourselves the butt end of not wholly undeserved contempt, we lose that influence over our community, which was so essential to progress (Loud Cheers.)

Tempora mutantur nos ab illis mutantur.

Times change, and we change with the times, is an ancient Roman Motto. But, accepting changes in our society was a very different thing from giving up all that was best in the inheritance of ages, in the phantom pursuit of some of the so-called modern improvements. Changes must be on the line of least resistance. We want Revolutions by Reforms, not Reforms by Revolutions (Cheers.)

The England's returned members of our country were neither necessarily the best members of Indian Society, nor, was it a fact, that those of our people, who had not visited the West, were ipso-facto in any way inferior as creatures of God, to those, who had been to the West.

The England's returned people would do more lasting good to the orthodox community by utilizing their expanded ideas in reforming from within, than by attacking the Hindu defects from without. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, in conclusion, I have to offer you and the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society our united cordial thanks for the fine Address of Congratulation, which you have been good enough to present to me, this afternoon, and for the pretty gold-locket, which you have presented to my wife. (Cheers.)

It will for ever remain one of our proudest possessions and locked within it the sweet fragrance of memory of this vast and respectable assemblage, and bind us to you in ever-increasing affection and regard for the days, which the inscrutable decree of an Almighty Power may vouchsafe to us. (Applause.)

Dr. Mullick cited several instances in support of his statement. He spoke for about half an hour.

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Mr. Lalmohun Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, to address the meeting.

Mr. Ghose, who on rising was received with deafening cheers, then addressed the meeting thus :—

Mr. Justice Mitter and Gentlemen, I should have preferred to remain silent spectator on this occasion, but, it is impossible for me to decline to respond to the call of the chair. (Cheers.)

At the same time, I scarcely know what to say. I have celebrated this wedding and taken part in the following festivities, with feelings of a mingled character.

At a similar demonstration in my own native town of Krishnagar, I almost broke down, when I endeavoured to give expression to the conflicting emotions that surged within my breast. (Cheers.)

I remember, how nervous I felt, years ago, when in my green salad days, I stood up before a great British audience, under the presidency of one of England's greatest orators; but, the nervousness that I felt at Willis's Rooms, in 1879, was nothing in comparison to what I felt on Sunday last at Krishnagar. (Cheers.)

Therefore, Gentlemen, having grown wiser with experience, I shall not again undertake the same rash experiment. I shall only say one aspect of the question, which may be considered controversial; as you all know this wedding has taken place, according to the rites of our ancient Hindu Religion. (Cheers.)

It is possible, that I may be taken to task for this, by some of my more radical friends. If so, all I can say, in reply, is that I take a broad and liberal view of these matters. I have an equal respect and veneration for all the great religions of the world (Loud Cheers.)

To the stern and critical eye of the Philosopher, there is scarcely any religion, which, either in its dogmas, or, in its traditions, does not present some features savouring of superstition (Hear, hear).

But, there is underlying them all an undying principle, which has swayed the minds of mankind in every age and in every clime. Viz.—That of an Almighty Providence ruling the destinies of this universe. I do not desire to make any invidious comparisons. But, if I have to make a choice, I prefer to cling to what has been the religion of my fathers for thousand of years. (Loud Cheers.)

"I prefer to dwell among mine own people." There is no other aspect of the case, to which you, Sir, have made a passing allusion; and it is this—that, if by conforming to our time-honored social observances and ceremonial rites, we can do something to remove the differences and the mis-understandings, which, at one time, threatened to create an artificial gulf between those of us, who might undertake a voyage to Europe for educational or other purposes, and the rest of our community—if we can do this, we shall have achieved something substantial towards the promotion of the welfare of our common country. (Loud cheers).

Gentlemen, once more I thank you heartily for the honor you have done to my son and daughter. (Loud Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the meeting thus :—Gentlemen, he never intended and not intend to give a speech. Speech-making in public was not in his line, though as a Vakil, he used to make speeches in court, to induce learned Judges to give A's property to B., and C's property to D) (Laughter.)

It was Mr. Lalmohun Ghose's province to make speeches in public, as well as in Court, when he thought of inducing judges to declare criminals innocent (Laughter.)

He said that he was not a social reformer, and also never intended to influence public opinion by speeches. He was told that the Kavasta Sabha of Calcutta had something to do with the marriage of Dr. Mullick.

But, that was not the case. The Kavasta Sabha of Calcutta has nothing to do with it. Their idea of the amalgamation of different classes of Kavastas was still in embryo. But, he could not take the opportunity of expressing his own sentiments with reference to the marriage of Dr. Mullick, with Mr. Ghose's daughter. About nine years ago, he caused the celebration of his own son's marriage with a grand-daughter of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Chandra Madhab Ghose.

He and Dr. Mullick were both Dakhin Rarhi Kaystas. Justice Ghose belonged to the Bangaja class. What was the justification of these marriages. He could not find any objection to these marriages. The matter might be looked at from the following three points of view; Viz.—

- (1) Religion,
- (2) Society,
- (3) Fashion.

As regards Religion, the three main doctrines of the Hindu Marriage are :—

- (1) You must marry in the same Barna (Caste).
- (2) You must not marry a girl of the same Gotra and Prabara.

(3) You must not marry a girl within the prohibited degrees of affinity—(i.e.) the seventh and the fifth. None of these rules have been violated in the above marriages.

If these rules are observed, there can be no objection, from a religious point of view, to inter-caste marriages.

Next, from a social point of view, he looked at the matter as one of recent usage. It is a matter of history that the Bangaja and Dakhin Rarhi Kulins were descended from the same ancestors, who were invited in the Eleventh Century by Rajah Adisura, from the North-Western Provinces. The same Makaranda Ghose belonging to the Saukolin Gotra, was the common ancestor of the Ghoses in the two classes. So was Dasarath Bose of the Goutama Gotra of the Boses. Dr. Mullick and the Boses of Malikhian, in the east, were descended from the same person, Dasarath Bose. The ancestors of all Mitters was Kali Dass Mitter. In those days, means of communication between the different parts of the country were few, and the result was that marriages became rarer and rarer between the different sections of the same community, on account of distance in residence. But, it was not until, the end of the Fifteenth Century, that different system of kulinism were adopted in the different parts of the country, and the distinction between Bangaja and Dakhin Rarhi became marked. It was the period of renaissance both in the East and the West, the discovery of America and the fall of Constantinople that led to the revival of literature and revolution in religion in Europe.

But, causes, un-known to us, led to similar revival in India. It was, at this time, that religious revival took place throughout India, and Sri Krishna Chaitanya was one of the great heroes. It was, at this time, that Dr. Mullick's great ancestor Purandar Khan became the Prime-Minister of Hussein Shah, and introduced the present system of Kulinism, which goes by his name urindur. In the East, the old system of Ballal with slight modifications was retained.

But, notwithstanding the difference in the two systems of Kulinism among the Dakhin Rarhi and Bangajas, they were catholic enough and intermarriages were not rare. Several families of the Bangaja Kayastas, who settled on the west of the Bhagiroti, or, in Calcutta, were incorporated in the Dakhin Rarhi class. There was no serious objection and there could be none.

To a Dakhin Rarhi, the preservation of Kulinism depended upon the marriage of his eldest son only. But, he could marry his daughters and other sons, in such a way, as he liked, provided, he acted according to Hindu religion. But, we are more conservative now-a-days. It is a fashion. And fashion should change as utility and convenience require.

The marriage of Dr. Mullick is thus essentially Hindu. Dr. Mullick had shown us an example, which ought to be followed by others. I believe, that precepts and speeches are of little use in this country, as elsewhere, if they are not followed by action. Action is what we want, and Dr. Mullick and Mr. Ghosh deserve the praise of their community for the example they have set. (Cheers.)

Mr. Ghose, though a Bangaja, has married his daughter to a Dakhin Rarhi Kayasta, and Dr. Mullick has accepted his bride from the Bangaja Kayasta community, and the marriage has taken place in a strict Hindu style. (Cheers.)

After the Hon'ble Chairman had resumed his seat, the ceremony came to a close at 7 P. M., with votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and Mr. Lalmohun Ghose, Bar-at-law, proposed by Kumar Mahendra Lala Mitra, (son of the late Rajah Dr. Rajendra Lala Mitra, C. I. E.), which was carried by acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved with sweet music and songs.

Thanks giving Meeting held by the Calcutta Literary Society, in honor of the First Anniversary Coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward VII, Emperor of India, &c., &c.

As announced in the local papers, the Society convened public Meeting, to commemorate the First Anniversary of the Coronation of His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India, at the hall of the Mahammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 29, Mirzapur Street, on 9th August, 1903, at 4 P. M., under the presidency of Rajah Indra Karan Sahib of Hyderabad-Deccan.

The hall was densely crowded by Mahamedans, Hindus and other sects of His Majesty's subjects.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the Coronation Meetings held by the Society, in honor of His Imperial Majesty King Edward VII Emperor of India, in August, 1902, which were duly affirmed, Babu Satish Kumar Banerjee, B. A., Rector, Mitra Institution, addressed the Meeting, in English. He said :—

Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen,

The Anniversary of a Sovereign's Coronation ought to be made by every true subject—the occasion of loyal demonstration. In meeting here that afternoon, therefore, on the occasion of the First Anniversary of our King-Emperor's Coronation, we are doing nothing out of the way, but, only a very pleasant duty. (Cheers.)

Every one, who, like myself, had the privilege of being present in the Coronation Durbar held in Delhi, in January 1903, can bear testimony of his own experience to the fact that, loyalty with the Indians is neither an abstraction, nor reducible to the affairs of every day-life, nor even a word of mouth, but, a thing of the heart. By what lies the Indian people feel themselves drawn towards their Sovereigns has been proved times without number. It was proved both when Queen Victoria the Good was alive and when Her late Majesty died. (Cheers.)

It was once more clearly proved by the loud hearty and prolonged cheers, with which the Duke of Connaught was greeted in the Delhi Durbar, as the representative of the Royal Family. Nothing, but, personal attachment to the Sovereign could have animated that feeling in the breast of so many thousand of people at the same moment. India's loyalty is an axiom, and, it was a day as regrettable as it was to-day to establish it by proofs.

Why, in fact, if the essence of loyalty is contentment and gratitude, should we not be loyal?—Have we not much to be grateful to the British Raj for? Have we not peace, justice and progress secured to us? Are not our person, property and domestic relations safe under the British Raj? And, are these not with the millions of India? Sufficient reason why they should be content grateful and loyal.

Coming to the disputed field of politics. Do we not find that a very reasonable policy is being followed in ruling us? Are we not being trained to fit ourselves for higher spheres of usefulness? Are we not, (with certain restrictions), allowed the same privileges of serving the Government with the conquerors themselves?

There would, unfortunately, be no want of persons, infinitely better acquainted with the politics of the country than I, who choose to hold the opposite view in these matters. But, they cannot deny the propositions, on which the loyal contentment of the Indians has been made to rest.

It is common to speak of our loyalty as based on selfishness. But, so long as loyalty is a virtue. I, for one, should not think of being so nice, as to inquire whence it springs, before I should welcome it.

To speak the truth, we have an interest in seeing the British Government in India perpetuated. Centuries of subjection and foreign yoke have crushed governing capacity, out of one Indian race after another, till the mass of the Indian people to-day have been rendered unfit to take charge of themselves. And, were the British protection to be removed from us to-day, I should not wonder if what happened to Britain when the Romans left it, should happened to India. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Quazi-Mandaz-Ud-din-Ahmed, B.A., Rector of the Mahammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, was asked to address the Meeting, in Urdu. He said :—

Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen,

This is a very happy occasion. The Ninth day of August 1902, will always be remembered by us. People of all classes, Hindus, Mussulmans, Buddhists, Jains, &c., all should rejoice on this auspicious day. We are glad that a high personage, the Hon'ble Syed H. Bilgrami of Hyderabad-Deccan had presided at a meeting held in this hall, for the support of widows and orphans, last year.

We are still more glad that Rajah Indra Karan Sahib of Hyderabad—Deccan had graced this hall with his presence. We are all thankful to him for having taken the chair, and, we hope, that other great personages will follow his example. (Cheers.)

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, was then asked to address the meeting, in Bengali. Mr. Dhar said :—

Rajah Bahadur and Gentlemen,

We have met here this afternoon to commemorate the First Anniversary of the Coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII. King of England and Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

This is a day of general rejoicing with us. It is a matter of great satisfaction to know, that His Imperial Majesty, after ascending the Throne of England, on the 9th day of August, 1902, has been enjoying good health, the love and good wishes of all classes of subjects—English or alien. (Cheers.)

This day, last year, the Calcutta Literary Society held an Open-Air Meeting, at Wellington Square Park, at which, all classes of people, Hindus, Mahamedans, Christians, &c., were present to take part in the meeting. They testified to the esteem they had for His Majesty the King-Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

At that Open-Air Meeting, he addressed the assembly in English, congratulating His Imperial Majesty's speedy recovery and offering thanks-givings to the Almighty God to enable His Majesty to take part in the Coronation Ceremonies, which had consequently been delayed for some weeks, owing to His Majesty's sudden illness.

The Calcutta Literary Society then fed a large number of beggars and distributed alms to the poor. An Evening Party was also given at the premises of the Society in commemoration of that auspicious occasion.

The Society also passed a Resolution and forwarded an Address of Congratulation to His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India, to which the following reply was received :—

From His Most Gracious Majesty King-Edward VII., Emperor of India, &c., &c., &c :—

All these will be found printed as accompaniment to printed Proceedings of the Society, for the year 1902.

The Vice-President of the Society then expressed satisfaction to see people of all classes Hind Mahamedans, Christians, &c., taking part in that day proceedings.

The enthusiasm which prevailed, and the extempore lectures delivered in English, Urdu and Bengali testified the veneration entertained by the people to His Imperial Majesty.

The Rajah Bahadur, who on rising was received with cheers, then said that he was much obliged to the Society for the honour it had done to him, in asking him to preside on that occasion. He expressed his thanks to all present. He wished the Society every success and expressed his devout loyalty to His Majesty the King Emperor of India, before resuming his seat, amid deafening cheers.

An interesting ceremony held by the Calcutta Literary Society to celebrate the Fifty-fifth Anniversary Birthday of Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law :—

As announced in the local papers, a public Meeting, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the Classic Theatre, 68 Beadon Street, on Thursday, the 17th December, 1903, at 6-15 P. M., to meet Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, the President-Elect of the Nineteenth Indian National Congress, &c., &c., and to commemorate his Fifty-fourth Birthday Anniversary, or, rather to celebrate the Silver-Jubilee of his political life.

The public mustered strong, long before the appointed hour. The pavilion was over-crowded, the compound and the street were densely crowded, there being upwards of three thousand persons of all creed, color and caste, who had come to do honor to Mr. Ghose, and the gathering on the stage, where the proceedings were held, was respectable.

At 6-15 P. M., the Hon'ble Nawab Syed Mohammed Sahib, C. I. E., Madras Representative of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, and Chairman Congress Reception Committee, Madras, with Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, and a number of Barristers entered the hall amidst deafening cheers.

Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick proposed that the Hon'ble Nawab Syed Mohammed Sahib, C. I. E., Madras Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, do take the chair. In doing so, Dr. Mullick said, that it was customary on all such occasions, to introduce the Chairman to the audience but, he hoped that before such an enlightened assembly in which all the colleges were represented, he need make no such introductory speech.

He expressed satisfaction that they had got a Mahomedan Member in the Supreme Legislative Council, this year. The Hon'ble Nawab Sahib was a very fit substitute for the Hon'ble Rai P. Ananda Charlu Bahadur, C. I. E. who had held the Hon'ble Membership so creditably and for so long a time. (Cheers).

He hoped that the earnestness and activity of the noble Nawab Sahib will largely be followed by his co-religionists. (Cheers).

He then apologised to the audience, on behalf of the Hon'ble Nawab Sahib, that as he was deeply engrossed in political affairs, and had not much spare time at his disposal, he would not speak much on the occasion.

The proposal was seconded by Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society and carried with acclamation.

The Hon'ble Nawab Sahib then took his presidential chair, amidst deafening cheers.

The Founder-Secretary to the Society having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked him to read the Congratulatory Address, prepared for Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law.

The Founder Secretary to the Society then read the following Address:—

LALMOHAN GHOSE, Esq.,
Barrister-at-Law, &c., &c., &c.

Calcutta.

SIR,
The Calcutta Literary Society desire to congratulate you on the auspicious occasion of your Fifty-fifth Anniversary Birthday, and offer their cordial wishes on that auspicious occasion. They are happy to find that you have more come forward to plead the cause of the teeming millions of India. (Cheers.)

On the 17th December, 1849, (or, Fifty-five years ago), you were born at Vikrampur, in the district of Dacca. A student, you had a brilliant career, bringing home the prize every year, and all the encouragement you received from your father, who was a strict disciplinarian, "take care, you do the same next year, or you will hit."

At the Entrance-Examination, you passed in the 1st division, gained a First Grade Scholarship, and stood 1st in English in the whole University, and to-day one of your proudest possessions is a silver-watch, which you brought out of your scholarship. (Applause.)

You proceeded to England for the Bar, and next to your legal studies, you devoted the greatest attention to literature. After qualifying yourself for the Bar, you rendered to our country invaluable services. (Cheers.)

You had been to England four times, sacrificing your professional emoluments, so that, you might gain for our countrymen, which were denied to our countrymen.

Your successful efforts in Repealing the Vernacular Press Act, and in opening the Covenanted Civil Service to the Indian Youths, deserve our best thanks.

The Agitation, which you had set on foot, about a quarter of a century ago, regarding the Reduction of the Duties, the Raising of the Limit of the Income Tax, the Separation of Judicial and Executive Functions, the Repeal of the Arms Act, the Granting of Legislative Powers to the Indians, the Admission of Indians to the Army, the Lessening of the Tribute paid from the Indian Princes to England, and the dire effects of this, and the Excessive Military Expenditure, all these have been appreciated. These subjects form the nucleus of our National Reform Programme. (Cheers.)

For the fourth time, you proceeded to England, in connection with the famous case of Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, Editor of the Bengalee, and the Ilbert Bill. A section of the British people, finding in you the qualifications requisite for a Parliamentary honours, elected you as their candidate. (Cheers.)

We are informed, that you were not only elected unanimously, but such was the enthusiasm, which prevailed in that country to the accepted principles, governing the Elections, you were nominated the Liberal Candidate for Greenwich, by the local committee, without even the leaders of the Liberal Party being consulted on such a momentous question, as you were the First Indian Candidate. (Hear, Hear.)

We regret, that the Home Rule Bill, which was then the deciding factor in English politics, went against the Liberal Party, and necessarily led to your defeat!

It is, however, a matter of satisfaction to us, that your views triumphed, at last, and your opponent, shortly after, was compelled to resign his seat in the House of Commons, saying that he was mistaken in the attitude, which he had adopted, as regards the Home Rule Bill. He further said that the "Action of Her Majesty's Ministers had made it plain that the arguments of my opponent (Mr. Ghose), were right and I was wrong. Under these circumstances I can no longer support Her Majesty's Government."

In India, you have ever been an inspiring example to our countrymen. On no occasion of National Importance, have you declined to speak out on our behalf, particularly in connection with the Jury-Notification Bill, and it was your speech, which nipped that measure in the bud. Sir Charles Elliot, K.C.B., in England, retraced the other day, his share in the Notification.

We recall, with pleasure, that we were the earliest to offer our congratulations to Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, and Mrs. Mullick, soon after their marriage, at a public meeting, convened by the Society, held in their honour at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Saturday, the 4th April, 1903, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sarada Charan Mitter, M.A., B.L.,—a meeting to which we had the pleasure of welcoming you, also (Cheers).

We take this opportunity to congratulate you, on your having had for your beloved son-in-law, one in whom we all take such just pride as our countryman, and who has already cut such a figure in England and India, both by his professional abilities and by his love of country and untiring energies on her behalf. (Cheers.)

We, as a literary body, fully appreciate your high literary abilities. Your translation in English Verse of our Grand Hindu Poem Meghnad will raise our literature on the estimation of those, to whom it has hitherto been a sealed treasure. (Hear, Hear.)

The versatility of your genius, which the late-lamented Right Hon'ble William Ewart Gladstone, M.P., admired so much, will enable you to complete your other great work on Nepolian Bonaparte and the Times of the French Revolution. We look forward to the publication of these two works with great pleasure. You are not only a scholar, but, if we may be allowed to add, one of the greatest criminal lawyers of our country. (Cheers.)

We heartily wish you God-speed on your journey, in a few days, to preside at the Nineteenth Indian National Congress, at Mumbai,—the Hindu and Muslim population of which look upon you as the most valiant champion of the National cause. (Cheers.)

Sir, there is none, who values you and your spirit of self-sacrifice, more than we do, and we wish you a long and prosperous life, to enable you not only to help our country here, but, by returning to England, and in the very Sanctum Sanctorum of the British Executive, viz:—the House of Commons, by your matchless eloquence (Cheers).

After the reading of the Address was over, the Hon'ble Chairman and Mr. Lalmoohan Ghose were garlanded by the Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society, and a loud applause. A sweet song, suited to the occasion, was then sung, which greatly pleased the audience.

The Hon'ble Chairman then rose, amidst cheers, and thanked the Society for the honor it had done him by voting him to the chair. He congratulated the Society on its meeting there, to commemorate the Fifty-fifth Birthday Anniversary of Mr. Lalmoohan Ghose, and the Madras Congress Committee, on the choice selection they had made in electing Mr. Ghose as the President of the forthcoming Nineteenth Indian National Congress. (Cheers.)

He was a veteran in the field. He appealed feelingly to the public of Calcutta, and, especially, his co-religionists to forget the petty party-spirit, that they supposed to have been existing between the Hindus and the Muslims, and to muster strong in Madras this year, and to heartily co-operate with their fellow-countrymen, in making this year's Indian National Congress, a complete success. (Cheers.)

He concluded by again thanking the Society, as well as the assembled public, for the most cordial welcome they had accorded him that evening.

The Hon'ble Chairman then called upon Babu Baid Nath Mukerjee, B. A., to address the Meeting:—

Babu Baidya Nath Mukerjee, B. A., then addressed the assembly thus:—

Hon'ble Nawab Bakidur and Brethren,—I desire to add my feeble voice to join with you in expressing our hearty felicitations, in commemorating the Fifty-fifth Birthday Anniversary of our distinguished countryman Mr. Lalmoohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law.

Indeed, the whole Nation rejoices in the participation of such a happy event. It is our special privilege, ay, the most sacred duty to honour the great man of our country,—to appreciate their work, their sterling merit and to do homage to all that is noble, all that is admiring in the character that has been set before us (Cheers).

I congratulate you, Gentlemen, that you have at length come forward to honour the true great men of your country. It is too well-known, and it is not for me to stand up to descant at length on the utility of celebrating the Birth-day Anniversaries of eminent personages, who have made indelible marks, promoted the cause of their country, and have sacrificed whatever is dearest and nearest to their heart, for the sake of ameliorating the condition of their fellow-brethren. (Cheers).

Ah! the institution of Birth-day Celebration is hoary with ages! Let not this Institution die out with this single commemoration. It is practised in all civilized lands, and it is dear and sacred to every genuine patriot. Let us then, Gentlemen, in a spirit of respect and genuine enthusiasm, acclaim vive la Lalmahan Ghose in this day—the Birth-day of our revered friend Mr. Ghose.

Gentlemen, I earnestly beseech you, in all seriousness, that you should carry with you the impression that you have come here to give a certificate to this talented Indian patriot. No, you cannot do that—On the other hand, by honouring Mr. Ghose, you simply honour yourselves. Mr. Ghose's life is an object-lesson to us. (Cheers).

Let us, in the spirit of all weakness, sit down at his feet, and learn to imitate his modesty, his sweetness of temper, his un-assuming manner, his quiet and amiable disposition, his self-sacrificing spirit, his courage and independence, his ardent desire to serve his country, and all the other ennobling virtues of his head and heart. (Cheers).

I feel, Gentlemen, that it would not be easy for me to give you even a very faint idea of innumerable never-to-be-forgotten and important services that Mr. Ghose has already rendered to his motherland. (Cheers).

I, therefore, confess, Sir, that I am absolutely unfit to discharge this task. But, Gentlemen, if ever the time will come, and I fervently pray to God that, that time may soon arrive, when the proper history of the political agitation in England and India be written, I am certain, that the name of Mr. Lalmahan Ghose will be accorded a most prominent, and a most conspicuous place. (Cheers).

It is true that, now-a-days, we hear much about the British Congress Committee, which does noble attempt to acquaint the British public with the grievances of the Indian people and arouse their interest on our behalf. But, there were times when no such Committee existed, when, it was Mr. Ghose alone, who undertook the noble,—this sacred task, and we all know, Gentlemen, how magnificently and how nobly he discharged it. (Cheers).

The late Mr. William Ewart Gladstone, M. P., the late Mr. John Bright M. P., and other eminent politicians of Britain and of all parties have been led to take interest in the Indian affairs through the efforts—the glorious efforts of only one man—and, that man was no other than our own beloved Mr. Lalmahan Ghose. (Cheers).

Gentlemen, it was Mr. Lalmahan Ghose, who was the first, among the Indians, to knock at the gates of the British Parliament, and, indeed, Mr. W. E. Gladstone, M. P., sent him his own carriage in support of Mr. Ghose's candidature. (Cheers).

It is no exaggeration to say, and, I hope, you will all agree with me, and certainly it is not my intention to disparage the merits of others in saying this—that in modern times, with the only exception of Mr. Keshub Chandra Sen no other Indian has been treated with such marked attention, with such warm cordiality of feeling by the leaders and statesmen of Britain, as it has been the lot of Mr. Lalmahan Ghose to enjoy. (Cheers).

Unquestionably, and without any doubt, Mr. Ghose is a man in a Million. The Chorus of acclamation that did burst forth on all sides on receiving the cheering intelligence of his being elected President of the Nineteenth Indian National Congress, did, but, feebly and too faintly represent the intensity of feelings and sentiments entertained by his countrymen in the deepest recesses of their hearts. (Cheers).

Let us, Gentlemen, say in unequivocal language, and, in no uncertain strain, that we all wish him God-speed in his holy mission, and let me exclaim once more, before I sit down, at the highest pitch of my voice, Success for the Nineteenth Indian National Congress and eternal glory for its President, Mr. Lalmahan Ghose. (Cheers).

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Mr. E. P. Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, to address the Meeting.

Mr. E. P. Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, then rose, in a nice little speech said that, as every one was too anxious to hear Mr. Ghose, he would say but a few words. He, dilated on Mr. Ghose's versatile genius, described him as a politician, orator, lawyer, and so on; if not rarest, at least rare merit.

He asked the Mahamedans to forget the differences and disagreement, they supposed to be existing between the Hindu and themselves, and to co-operate them in every matter, as children of the same par. (Cheers).

Next, came Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar. He said that he felt peculiar pleasure in commemorating Fifty-fifth Birthday Anniversary of Mr. Ghose, and a Calcutta public to muster strong at the Howrah Railway Station, on the Twenty-fifth day of December 1903, at 9 P. M., to see Mr. Lalmahan Ghose of Madras. (Cheers).

The Hon'ble Chairman then called upon Lalmahan Ghose to address the Meeting.

Mr. Lalmahan Ghose's Speech:—

Mr. Lalmahan Ghose then rose, amidst loud prolonged cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. Politics was left untouched, but, what spoke on his own literary works proved most interesting.

Mr. Ghose said, Nawab Sahib and Gentlemen:—
I am deeply touched by the warmth of your welcome. Although, I am an old political stager, I confess this is the first time, in my life that, I find myself stand before the foot-lights. (Laughter).

Gentlemen, I tender you, my hearty thanks for the Address, which you have been good enough to present me on this—my Fifty-fifth Birthday, and, for the flattering terms, in which you have been pleased to refer to my humble services, on behalf of my beloved country.

Before touching on any of those matters, which now be said to have almost become ancient history, I desire to express a hope, that my countrymen, in excess of their kindness, may not prove to be very exacting task-masters, and that they may not expect from me activity and energy of my younger days.

In an open letter addressed to me in the columns of the Indian People of Allahabad, last week, in which the writer almost makes me feel humiliated by his too flattering estimate of my past services, he takes objection to my talking of my advancing age and retirement, or, complete retirement, from public life.

When I first referred to this subject, a few months ago, in my native town of Krishnagar, some of my friends there seemed also to take the same view. In fact, to all these kind friends, I would venture to say that, it is not always fair to estimate a man's age merely by number of years, that has passed over his head, I would also remind you of the homely English saying, that a woman is as old as she looks, and a man is as old as he feels. (Loud Laughter).

Gentlemen, you have yourselves adverted to the fact that the Madras Congress Committee has done me the honour,—the highest honour that our countrymen can confer on anybody,—of inviting me to preside at the ensuing Nineteenth Indian National Congress. (Cheers).

You will, perhaps, excuse me, if I refrain from dealing with the political questions, which we shall have to discuss at length at Madras, within a few days. You have all to be satisfied that I had to go to England more than once on Political Missions. I can only say that, to me, it is a labour of love. (Loud Cheers).

I shall take only this much credit to myself on each of those occasions, I honestly endeavour to do the best of my power, to place the opinions of my fellow-countrymen before the British Nation. (Cheers).

In connection with those Missions, I had also the opportunity of making the acquaintance of some of the foremost statesmen in England. I shall always be glad to remember, that I had the high honor of supplying W. E. Gladstone with the facts, which he made use of with such masterly effect in his great speech against the Home Rule Bill. (Cheers).

A speech which left the impression on all his hearers, including even myself, that he had made this question, his life-long study—and, which rendered the Repeal of that Act, inevitable, when the Liberal Party came back to power. (Cheers.)

Then, again, after the formation of the Liberal Ministry in the year 1880, when a mixed deputation of Indians and Members of Parliament and other influential Englishmen waited upon Lord Hartington, (now, Duke of Devonshire), then, Secretary of State for India, we had the satisfaction of eliciting from His Lordship, an expression of opinion, though made with some reserve, in regard to several important questions of Indian Administration, including among others, the principle of popular representation in our Legislative Councils, which then, for the first time, came within the range of practical politics, and, which, since then, has been recognised by Act of Parliament, and, of which we have already received the first instalment, although, it falls short of our legitimate expectations. Nor, is it less significant that one of the immediate and direct results of the great speech of Mr. John Bright, M. P., at the Willis' Rooms, in 1879, was the establishment of the Statutory Civil Service.

Well, Gentlemen, even these three instances of success, which have been the results of our political work in this country, and in England ought to satisfy the most pessimistic of our friends, that Constitutional agitation is not without its uses, and, therefore, our National Congress worked upon proper lines has a great future before it (Loud Cheers.)

You, Gentlemen, have also referred to my candidature for Greenwich and Deptford. It is, true indeed, that I was not successful, but, there are some failures, which, in the long run, produce more far-reaching results than many a brilliant success, which appeals more directly to the imagination. (Cheers.)

In the first place, if I may venture to quote from memory, the eloquent words of Lord Ripon, (Cheers), when presenting to me an Address, on behalf of the Liberals of Deptford, it was a striking and convincing proof that the English people there, at any rate, were ready to greet on terms of equal friendship all portions of Her Majesty's subjects. (Loud Cheers.)

It was a most appropriate answer, which the people of England could give to the appeal, which we were then making against the extra-ordinary outburst of racial prejudice, which, at that time, characterised the utterances and writings of so many of our Anglo-Indian friends. (Laughter and Cheers.)

Secondly, If I myself could not enter the House of Commons, I have, at least, the satisfaction of knowing that I paved the way for others, and that, after my Liberal friends at Greenwich and Deptford had set the example, for, according to the French, proved c'est le premier pas qu'on fait. (It is the first step that is difficult), other constituencies followed their generous example, so that, two of our countrymen have already sat in Parliament. Such has been the glorious results of my failure. (Loud Cheers.)

You, Gentlemen, have also been pleased to refer to some humble literary labours, in which I am now engaged, and from which my countrymen have resolved to drag me again to the stormy sphere of politics. I regret, that the fact has leaked out before my labours have come to a conclusion. (Laughter.)

But, since it has leaked out, I must plead guilty to the soft impeachment. (Laughter.)

As regards the sketch of the Great Napoleon Bonaparte, upon which I am now engaged in ordinary circumstances, I could not but feel that, it would be an act of great presumption on my part, (No, No), even to follow the steps of these illustrious men, who have inscribed their names in the scrolls of fame. (Cheers.)

But, with many and obvious disqualifications, I have at least, one qualification, which no European historian however eminent, can possess.

As an Asiatic, I am perfectly free from those national sympathies and antipathies, which, however unconsciously are, bound to exercise a powerful influence on the judgment of the most distinguished historians. (Cheers.)

With reference to the translation of our Meghnad Badh. In Verses, I wish, it had been undertaken by abler hands.

My only object is to prove to the cultured classes of the English people, that we have in our Bengali Literature, works, which prove that we are not a nation of savages, and that we have not lost the intellectual power, which is the glorious inheritance of the entire Aryan race. My translation was a very feeble attempt, but, it would give some idea of what they could do. (Loud Cheers.)

In response to enthusiastic calls, Mr. Ghose then read the following few passages, from his translation of Meghnad Badh, which were listened to with rapt attention.

CANTO I.

Say, Muse, who led the fierce out sallying hosts
What time the brave Birbahu's mighty shade
Freed from its bonds of clay, untimely winged
Its way to Yama's gloomy realm? Who then
To that proud height was raised anointed chief
Of all his hosts by Lanka's King? And say
What arts, what spells did Lakshman use to foil
Great Meghnad's matchless might ne'er foil'd before
And thus from terror freed the Thunder God
Who, though enthroned above the fleecy clouds
Turn'd pale and trembl'd at his dreaded name
Aid me, Divine Saraswati, that didst
Unloose of old Valmiki's sacred tongue
When in the forest glade the fowler shot
The feathery pair on amorous dalliance bent
And at the sight of that remorseless dead
The bard with sudden inspiration filled,
Poured forth those strains that still enchant the world,
Bestow some portion of that grace on me
That gave the out-lawed thief the foremost place
Among the tuneful throng. Thy powers who can tell?
What wonders canst thou not achieve?
The magic touch of thy celestial wand
Transforms the rankest weeds to balmy shrubs
With fragrant flowers adorned. Unworthy I
To seek such grace. But since the helpless babe
And he of all her sons who loath of gifts
Can boast requires a mother's care the most,
Goddess of Song and silv'ry speech instruct.
Thy lisping child, the loftiest heights to climb,
Of high heroic deeds to sing. Thou, too,
Thou soaring fancy, lend thy wings that borne
A loft by thee, I might, perchance behold
Some visions of the mighty past and weave
A fairy wreath of choicest flowers, enrich
My land's sweet tongue and yield Bengal's sons eternal joy.

Then Lanka's King with sacred water brought
From distant Ganga, laves the Prince's brow,
The troops exulting shout, the trumpets blew;
The Royal Herald thus announced the glad Event:—"Thy eyes, fair Lanka, swim with tears,
Thy hair dishevel'd and thy soul distraught
With woe. Thy jewell'd crown and all the gems
That used to deck thy lovely form now lie
Abandon'd on the floor. But rise, fair Queen,
Shake off thy grief, Lo! Lanka's radiant Sun
Appears in all his glory to dispel
The darkness of thy long protracted night.
Of woe, Behold! the mighty hand that grasps
The bow, the echoes of whose deafening twang,
When heard in heav'n blanch Indra's cheeks with fear,
Behold the quiver full of deathful darts
Unerring as Siva's avenging bolts;
Behold the manly form, the matchless grace
That Lanka's fairest maiden's love to gaze upon;
Behold Meghnad, thy darling chief,
Hail, fair Mundodari, who gavest birth
To that renowned prince, hail Karbbur King;
Hail thrice blest Lanka, nurse of heroes brave!
Repeating echo—daughter of the skies,
Proclaim with all thy thou sand tongues the news
The glad news, that the invincible chief
Great Indrajit now arms in Lanka's cause,
With fear let Raghuv tremble in his tent.
Let that foul traitor, scandal of his race
Bibheeshun, with his country's foes allied
Let him and all the savage jungle hordes
This wandering chief hath brought from Dunduk's woods
Let them in fear and trembling wait their fate:
Loud strains of martial music fill'd the air
And shouts of triumph rose on every side, &c., &c. (Cheers.)

(The extracts were highly appreciated:—)

Mr. Ghose concluded by saying, Gentlemen, again I thank you most heartily for the very kind words you have spoken of me, and for the cordiality of your reception, this evening.

The speaker then resumed his seat amidst loud and deafening cheers. The Meeting dissolved at 9-30 P. M., with hearty votes of thanks to the Chair and the guests.

HISTORY OF THE STATE OF MYSORE.

His Highness Sir Krishna Raj Wadiar Bahadur, Maharajah Sahib of Mysore, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, &c., is a Ruling Chief, and one of the Premier Princes of India.

On Wednesday, the 4th June, 1884, His Highness was born. Succeeded to the Gadi, as a minor, (on the death of his late illustrious father, Maharajah Sir Chama Rajendra Wadiar Bahadur, G.C.S.I., who died of Diphtheria, during His Highness' short visit to Calcutta, on Thursday, the 27th December, 1894), and was installed by His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron George Nathaniel Curzon of Kedleston, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., P.C., F.R.S., J.P., C.L., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, on Wednesday the 6th August, 1902.

The State is divided into eight districts, each in charge of a Deputy Commissioner. The Maharajah Bahadur has qualified himself for the responsibilities of his position, under the guidance of Sir Donald Robertson, and his tutor, Mr. S. M. Fraser, C.I.E. A great achievement of the State is the practical completion of the Over-Power Scheme, the first of its kind in India.

The success of the Gold-Mining of Kolar is perhaps due as much to the wise and liberal laws, which regulate it as to the richness of the district in the precious metal; while the Principality is being opened out in every direction by railways under State-control, or with State encouragement.

The forests of Mysore produce sandal-wood, in vast quantities, which gives a yearly revenue to the State of one lac of Rupees.

His Highness belongs to a Kahotriya-Hindu Rajput family, whose ancestors went to the south, in very early times, from Dwarka, in Kuthiawar. Of these, two brothers, named Vijayaraj and Krishnaraj, appear to have settled in the Ashtagram division of the Dominions of Mysore, towards the close of the Fourteenth Century; and one of them married the daughter of the local Palegar, or, Baron of the village of Hadanaru, after saving her from an illness, under compulsion with a neighbouring Chief of inferior caste, and, by this means, established his rule in those parts.

From 1399 to 1422, A.D., this chivalrous hero, who is known in the history of Mysore, as Yedu Raya, ruled over Mysore and, was, afterwards, succeeded by his son, Here Bettud-Chamraj.

The grandson of the latter was a Rajah, named Here Chamraj - Arberah, meaning six-fingered, in allusion to physical peculiarity; and the six-fingered Rajah's son was Bettud Chamraj II., in whose time, the Fort of Mysore is built on the site of a village, formerly called Puragere, and was given the name of Mahesh-asura, Buffalo-town, from Mahesh-asura, the buffalo-headed demon destroyed by the goddess Kali-Mata. These Rajahs were called adiars, or, Wodeyars of Mysore - Wodeyar being a plural, or, honorific form of Odeya, Kanarese for Lord.

Bettud Chamraj was succeeded by his two sons, in turn. The younger, Bola Chamraj, is said to have been named Bola, or, the Bald, because, he had been made Bald by a stroke of lightning.

His grandson, Raj Wadiar, Ninth Rajah of Mysore, was the greatest and most successful of all these early adiars. He reigned from 1578 to 1616, and, in the year 1609-10, he seized the strong fortress of Seringapatam, then held by a lieutenant of the Kings of Vijayanagar, on the Tungabhadra, had previously, in 1588, been overtaken by the alliance of the Mahomedan Chiefs of the Deccan, and the descendants of the Vijayanagar dynasty taken refuge at Penukonda, where the family ultimately became extinct. So that, Rajah Wadiar of Mysore, and his descendants, having obtained possession of the important strategical position of Seringapatam, rapidly increased their power and thus extended their Dominions.

The process of aggrandizement continued down to the time of Rajah Chikka Deo Rajah Sahib, who died in 1704. His grandson was Rajah Dodda Krishna Rajah, reigned from 1713 to 1730, who was then succeeded by his son and his grandson.

The long reign of this last Prince, Chikka Krishnaraj, from 1734 to 1765, was hardly more than nominal, during this period, the famous Mahomedan Haider Ali rose to power, and ultimately, became the Sovereign of the State of Mysore, retaining the Maharajah as a puppet-Prince.

Haider Ali's splendid military powers, immensely increased the Mysore Dominions, and made the State, the greatest in Southern India, and its Rulers, the most formidable potentates in the whole country.

Of the Maharajah Chikka Krishnaraj's two sons, who nominally succeeded him, one was strangled by the orders of Haider Ali, and the other died childless.

Haider Ali then, in order to retain the shadow of a Hindu Dynasty, permitted the third wife of Chikka Krishnaraj to adopt a young kinsman, named Chamraj.

Not long before the fall of Tippu Sultan, the son of Haider Ali, and the conquest of Seringapatam by the British, on Saturday, the 4th May, 1799, Chamraj had died in captivity; and when the British Government resolved that Mysore should revert to the control of the family of its ancient Rulers, an infant son of Chamraj, by name Krishna Raj Wadiar, was placed on the Gadi of Mysore.

During the minority of Maharajah Krishna Raj Wadiar, from 1799 to 1810, the State was successfully administered by a Dewan, the famous Purnaiya, a Brahmin statesman of great ability. The affairs of the State, however, fell into disorder, after the retirement of Purnaiya; and the rule of Maharajah Krishna Raj Wadiar terminated by the British Government, assuming the direct administration of the country in 1831; retaining the Maharajah, as the titular sovereign.

On Sunday, the 18th June, 1865, Maharajah Krishna Raj Wadiar adopted as a son and successor the young prince—the late Maharajah Chama Rajendra Wadiar, who was the third son of Chikka Krishna Araso, a scion of the Madakota Branch of the Royal House. The adoption was sanctioned by the Government of India, in April, 1867; and, on the death of Maharajah Krishna Raj Wadiar, on Friday, the 27th March, 1868, the late Maharajah Sir Chama Rajendra Wadiar was duly succeeded in his place, and installed on Wednesday, the 23rd September, 1868, and invested with full power, at the age of eighteen.

Maharajah Sir Chama Rajendra Wadiar was carefully educated under a British Officer as guardian, and became an enlightened Ruler. The young Maharajah proved himself, in every way, so deserving of the position, that in 1881, it was resolved that the Sovereign power should be restored to him, and on Friday, the 25th March, 1881, the Rendition—the term has become historical—was carried out by the installation of the Maharajah, as a Ruling Chief, when the British Chief Commissioner handed over his office to the Dewan, or, Prime-Minister of His Highness.

The resources of the State of Mysore were greatly developed during His Highness' reign. His Highness was one of the greatest personages in Indian history, and, subsequently, made a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India by Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, Empress of India.

Since His Highness' lamented death, on Thursday, the 27th December, 1894, Her Highness Vanivila Sannidhana Kamparajam Mani Avaru C. I., Maharani Regent of Mysore, acting for the youthful Maharajah Krishna Raj Wadiar Bahadur, G.C.S.I., and aided by the able Dewan Sir Sheshadri Iyar, K.C.S.I., who had so long possessed the confidence of the late Maharajah Bahadur abundantly justified the Rendition.

The good administration of the State, which had been firmly established under the rule of Sir Ma Cubbon and his successors, as Chief Commissioners of Mysore, has been maintained and improved. Notwithstanding that the State has been devastated by one of the most terrible famines, ever known that of 1877-78, and by several very serious droughts, its general advance in prosperity under the Maharajah's rule has been marvellous.

His Highness the late Maharajah Bahadur had the advantage of being assisted by several Indian statesmen of the first rank and of the highest abilities; the place of the late Dewan, Mr. Ranga Charlu—who was himself an administrator of no mean power—having been taken, very fortunately, by His Excellency, the present Prime Minister Sir K. Sheshadri Iyar, K.C.S.I., by whose aid, the Maharajah Bahadur attained an administrative success, not surpassed in any part of the Indian Empire, British as well as Feudatory.

In all the ordinary duties of an Indian Government, in the administration of justice, in the collection and expenditure of the revenue, in the protection afforded to life and property, in public instruction, in sanitation, public works, it is admitted that the Government of Mysore can compare not unfavourably with that of the Province under direct British rule.

In some highly important respects, in the development of communications, in female education, in precautions against famine, in the encouragement of mining and other industries, and, in the fostering of habits of Local Self-Government among the people, it is held by many, and, apparently with some reason, that the State of Mysore is ahead of most of the States of India.

It is States like those, which proclaim to the world, that the capacity to govern and administer large tracts of territory is, by no means, lost, or unknown to the inhabitants of this land of primal civilization.

In His Highness' administration, His Highness is assisted by a Dewan, and two Councillors. Sir V. Madhava Rao, C.I.E., is His Highness' present Dewan and Prime Minister.

The famous School at Mysore City, that is known as Her Highness the Maharani's Girls' College, in which about four hundred girls, belonging to the families of some of the highest castes in Mysore, receive a liberal education, largely from Professors of their own sex and rank in life, undoubtedly represents by far the most successful attempt that India has seen to put the ladies of India on the same intellectual level with their husbands and brothers.

His Highness has made extensive tours through India and Burma, and visited all the pearls of His Highness' State, to the great benefit of His Highness' people. His Highness is a good polo-player and all-round sportsman. He was a prominent figure at the Delhi Durbar, and at the great Review, held on that occasion, led His Highness' Imperial Lancers in the march past.

His Highness came to Calcutta, for the first time, in December, 1906, and, on the 1st January, 1907, His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India, has graciously been pleased to mark His Majesty's high sense of His Highness' worth by conferring on His Highness the Distinction of the Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

The area of the State of Mysore is 29,305 square miles, almost equal to that of Scotland.

The population of Mysore amounts to five millions, chiefly Hindus, but, including 200,484 Mahomedans and 29249 Christians; and the annual Revenue of the State of Mysore is about two crores of Rupees.

The State maintains a Military Force of one thousand one hundred and seventy-three cavalry, three thousand four hundred and twenty-five infantry, and ten guns, besides, an Imperial Service Corps, for the special service of Frontier defence.

As a Ruling Chief, His Highness ranks third amongst the Indian Princes, next to His Highness the Nizam Sahib of Hyderabad-Deccan, G.C.S.I., and His Highness the Maharajah Gaekwar Sahib of Baroda State, G.C.S.I., and is entitled to a salute of Twenty-one guns.

The Arms displayed on the banner of the Maharajah of Mysore, which was unfurled at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the 1st January, 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, as Empress of India, were—Arms—Murrey, (the Indian Bhagwa), a garur berunda (sacred double-headed eagle), displayed argent, beaked and armed or Crest. A lion passant, carrying an antelope's head Supporters—Saivas (yali), elephant-headed tigers, sable, armed and unguled.

proceedings of the Twenty-Eighth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held, with great eclat, at the Quadrangle of the Ripon College, No. 60, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 7th January, 1904, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick, F. Gentlemen,

The Society begs to record its heart-felt sorrow caused by the melancholy death of the Rev. Dr K. S. Macdonald, M.A., Fellow of the Calcutta University and late President, Calcutta Literary Society

He died on Thursday, the 30th July, 1903, at a sudden! He had worked up to 11 A.M., on the date of his death, when he suddenly complained of his illness. He laid himself down in his bed never to rise again!

At midnight, he passed away to that region from whose bourne no traveller returns! His death is mourned by a large circle of friend and relatives! The Society offered its sincere condolence to his bereaved family!

It is with profound regret that I have also to announce the lamentable deaths of the under mentioned noblemen, who were distinguished members and well-wishers of the Society; viz. :—

- (1). His Highness Sir Godoy Naraiyan Gajapat Rao, K.C.I.E., Maharajah Sahib of Vizagapatam,
- (2). His Highness Amir-ud-Dowlah, Said-ul-Mulk the Hon'ble Sir Mohammed Ameer Hasar Khan, Mamta Jangh, K.C.I.E., Fellow of the Calcutta University, and Rajah Sahib of Mahammadabad-Sitapur Estate, in Oudh,
- (3). Maharaj-Kumar Gyaneswar Singh Sahib (uncle of Maharajah Bahadur of Durbhanga)
- (4). Maharajah Sir Narendra Krishna Bahadur, K.C.I.E., of Sova Bazar, Calcutta.

Letters of condolence were forwarded to the bereaved families of the deceased, and the Office of the Society was closed for one day, on each occasion, to mark its respect and esteem for the lamented illustrious deceased!

The Society was established in the year Eighteen hundred and Seventy-five, by the humble individual, who is standing before you, and Gentlemen, to-day are celebrating its Twenty-eighth Anniversary.

Its main objects are to hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities, to discuss social, literary, and scientific subjects, and the Society has been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform (Cheers).

I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of its various public meetings, published in the leading local newspapers, bear ample testimony to them. (Cheers).

The Twenty-Seventh Anniversary Meeting of the Society was held at the quadrangle of the Ripon College, No. 60, Mirzapur Street, on Friday, the 13th February, 1903, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Ranjit Sinha Bahadur, Rajah of Nashipur, when Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick, F.R.C.S., who had gone to prosecute his studies in England, and stayed there for upwards of twenty-five years), delivered an impressive lecture on the Importance of India to the Empire, before a large and influential gathering.

This was a very momentous question, and Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick solved it in a most admirable manner. The cogency of his arguments and his eloquence were fully appreciated. A report of his speech will be found appended to the Annual Report of the Society, for the year 1903.

Besides, the Twenty-seventh Anniversary Meeting of the Society, the distinguished American physician Swami Abhyananda of Chicago, (who has thoroughly studied the Hindu Shastras, and takes a active interest in Indian Progress), delivered successively the following three lectures to the Society; viz. :—

1. On the Relation between God and Man, at the hall of the City College, No. 13, Mirzapur Street, on Tuesday, the 17th February, 1903, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick, M.B., C.M., F.R.C.S., Fellow of the Medical Society of London, Member of the British Medical Association and Chelsea Chemical Society, &c., &c., &c.

2. On the Nature of the Mind of Man, at the hall of the Metropolitan College, 24, Shankar Ghose's Lane, in Cornwallis Street, on Wednesday, the 18th February, 1903, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Sardar Narain Singh Sahib, Chief Secretary, Sirmoor-Nahah State.

3. On Soul Migration and Evolution, at the hall of the Metropolitan Institution, (Bow Bazar Branch), No. 187, Bowbazar Street, on Thursday, the 19 February, 1903, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Gopal Krishna Gokhale, C.I.E., Bombay Representative of the Governor-Generals' Legislative Council.

All these lectures were published in the local news papers and will be found in the usual place in the Society's last Annual Report.

They contain profound research and penetration, of which it is impossible to speak too highly.

An interesting ceremony was held by the Society, with great ecstat, at the Albert Hall, College Square, on Saturday, the 14th April, 1903, at 4-30 P.M., in celebration of the marriage of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick with Miss. Sisir Kumari Ghose, the youngest cultured daughter of our distinguished country-man, Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose, Barister-at-Law, which took place on the 11th March, 1903, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sarada Charan Mitter, M.A., B.L., Judge of the High Court. The Meeting was densely crowded by respectable gentlemen of the Metropolis and suburbs.

This Meeting was especially distinguished by the manner, in which Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick, Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose, and the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Mitter addressed it.

The last named Hon'ble Gentleman specially eulogised the marriage being conducted in the Orthodox Hindu Style. He gave a precise account of the ancestry of Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose and Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick.

Mr. Ghose descended from the celebrated Makaranda Ghose, and Dr. Mullick from Purandar Mullick, who was then the Prime-Minister of Hussein Khan, King of Bengal.

Both Makaranda Ghose and Purandar Mullick were two Kayasthas, who accompanied the five Brahmins of Kanauj, invited by King Adisur, from the N. W. Provinces.

(5). Then came that Grand Meeting, in commemoration of the First Anniversary Coronation of His Imperial Majesty King Edward VII., Emperor of India, which the Society celebrated at the hall of the Mahammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 29, Mirzapur Street, on the 9th August, 1903, at 4 P.M., (being the date of His Majesty's Coronation in England in 1902), under the presidency of Rajah Indra Karan Sahib of Hyderabad-Deccan, who had then honored Calcutta with a visit.

At this Meeting, Hindus and Mahamedans of all classes were represented. This was rather an unique feature. It indicated the deep loyalty of His Majesty's Indian subjects to the Throne.

Babu Satish Kumar Banerjea, B.A., Rector, Mitra Institution, Mr. Quazi Mamtaz Uddin Ahmed, B.A., Rector, Mahd. Laik's Jubilee Institution, and Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, addressed the audience on Loyalty in English, Urdu and Bengali languages, for the benefit of the different classes of the audience.

(6). The Sixth Meeting, (which was also a very grand meeting), was celebrated the Fifty-fourth Birthday Anniversary of our illustrious countryman, Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose, Barister-at-Law.

This Meeting was held at the Classic Theatre, Beadon Street, on Thursday, the 17th December, 1903. The night was dark and the immense crowd, which numbered upwards of four thousand persons, consisting of Noblemen, Doctors, Barristers, Solicitors, Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University and people of all classes, testified to the immense popularity of Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose, Barister-at-Law.

How many persons were obliged to return home, disappointed, it is not possible to calculate, as the street was crowded from one end to the other.

Reports of the addresses, delivered on the occasion, have appeared in the Bengali of the 18th and 20th and the Anrita Bazar Patrika and the Hindu Patriot, of the 18th December, 1903.

The following is a summary of the business translated, during the year 1903; viz. :—

In conclusion, the Society begs to offer its thanksgiving to the Great God, for the manifold blessings, which His Providence has showered upon it, during the last Twenty-seven years of its existence, and I now fervently hope, that by the blessing of Providence, the Society may go on prospering its career of usefulness for many years to come. (Cheers.)

After the reading of the Annual Report of the Society, by Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, which was duly confirmed, was over, the Secretary, turning to the lecturer, the Hon'ble Professor Dr. Ram Krishna Gopal Bhandakar, M.A., Ph.D., C.I.E., Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, said:—

Hon'ble Sir,

We accord you to-day our cordial welcome here.

This is the first time that you, Sir, the great Sanskrit scholar and leader of thought in Western India, have come to our midst. Scholars are not travellers. You have seldom been out of the Bombay Presidency.

When we remember, that you are now in your Sixty-sixth year, we cannot but consider it a rare good fortune to have the opportunity of welcoming you in our midst. (Cheers.)

I hope the Calcutta public, in general, and specially the educational and literary association of the town, will take advantage of your presence here in honoring themselves by honoring the world-renowned scholar of India. (Cheers.)

Several European Universities have, long ago recognised your rare scholarship by showing upon you their highest academical honour. (Cheers.)

The Chairman, Dr. Sarat Kumar Mallick, then addressed the meeting thus:—

Gentlemen,

I am sure that I but echo your sentiment when I say, that the Twenty-eighth Annual Report, which has just so ably been read by my friend, Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, shows a period of great activity and progress of the Society, during the year 1903. (Cheers.)

The Society is, I believe, the oldest of its kind in Calcutta, and in the past, it has always striven to kindle the torch of knowledge and keep it alive. (Cheers.)

To-day, we have met here to celebrate its Twenty-eighth Anniversary, and to hear one of the most erudite of modern scholars. For, the Hon'ble Dr. Professor Ram Krishna Gopal Bhandakar, M.A., Ph.D., C.I.E., &c. Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council, has been Vice-Chancellor and LL.D., of the Bombay University, bears high reputation, both as a scholar and educationist. (Cheers.)

With all deference to the previous speaker I am bound to say that education and learning did not begin after the contact of India with Europe, but, long ago, in the dim and distant beginning of time.

It is now a matter of common knowledge, that India led the van in civilization. Her philosophy and her learning had attained a high pitch.

Gentlemen, I shall not presume to introduce the Hon'ble Dr. Ram Krishna Gopal Bhandakar, for, he is already well-known to you. His scholarly reputation has been, a sufficient introduction. (Cheers.)

Let us now hope that the Hon'ble Dr. R. G. Bhandakar, who has been nominated by the Government, in succession to our great champion the Hon'ble Dr. Justice Guru Dass Banerjee, will give the University Bill, the consideration, which it deserves, and introduce into it those amendments, which affect us most vitally. (Cheers.)

As a champion of the popular cause, we have no doubt, that he will do his duty manfully by the people. (Cheers.)

The Chairman, then addressing the Hon'ble Dr. R. G. Bhandakar, said, Sir, we give you a most cordial welcome here. I shall not be guilty of the presumption of introducing you to the audience, but, allow me the pleasure of introducing the audience to you. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked the Hon'ble Dr. R. G. Bhandakar to deliver his lecture on—

The Progress of Indian Society in Ancient Times:—

The Hon'ble lecturer then rose, amidst cheers, and made an impressive speech for nearly an hour. He said that we were descended from the ancient stock of the Aryan Race, and there is Aryan still running in our veins.

The Aryans, as a people, were the most advanced nation in the face of the globe. They cultivated literature and science to the utmost of their ability. The ancient Inscriptions in the Sanskrit language still to be found in pillars of old buildings, bear abundant testimony to our advancement in ancient times. (Cheers)

We had customs suited to the taste, and the progress, which we had made in the cultivation of the Sanskrit and Pali languages.

We all know that the Sanskrit was the root of all languages. In the Sanskrit are contained sources of wisdom, the legacies left by our ancestors, for the edification of their children's children. No one can surpass the Hymns, contained in the Vedas, composed by our progenitors,—the Munis and Rishis of old. (Cheers.)

Those Hymns still form the admiration of the world. The late Right Hon'ble Professor F. Max Muller, M.P., found a solace in those Hymns, which he could find no where else.

The Germans and other European Races are, at the present moment, studying the Sanskrit with greater eagerness and zest, than we, the Hindus, are doing now.

We had intermarriages, for which we are contending now. A Brahmin could marry a Sudra girl, without violating the social laws, which governed the Hindu Society in ancient times.

Our daughters received their education in the same way, as our sons at the present time. All the qualities which constitute the greatness of the English people at the present moment, we possessed, in an eminent degree, in ancient times. Our women also possessed then greater freedom than they do now.

We are degenerated and fallen, and fallen we shall remain, until we can fully appreciate the discoveries made by our fore-fathers in Science.

Our architecture still forms the admiration of the world, and what more. Our Philosophy and our Religion, in which our fore-fathers received their inspiration from heaven. The Devotion and the Devotion to God, the Creator of the universe, formed the climax of our ancient aspiration.

The lecturer was heard with rapt attention throughout. He sat amidst loud plaudits of applause.

After the Hon'ble lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. Jnan Chandra Rai, B. L., in a few appropriate words, proposed votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned speaker, which were carried by acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M.

(Vide, the Bengalee, 8th January, 1904).

As announced in the local papers, the Second public Meeting, for the session, 1904, convened by the Society, was held at the Curzon Theatre, No. 91, Harrison Road, on Friday, the 8th January, 1904, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Raj Krishna Dutt, Zemindar and Secretary to the Calcutta Kayastha Samaj. The Meeting was largely and influentially attended.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary of the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Gabin Chandra Dhar, Land-holder and Government Pensioner, to speak a few words on—

The Improvement of the Bengali Language and Literature :—

Mr. Dhar spoke eloquently on the subject for nearly a quarter of an hour. He said that upwards of half a century ago, we had few newspapers, published in the Bengali Language, and few books written in that language, as at the present time.

The only newspapers, we then had, were the Sangbad Pravakar, the Samachar Chandrika, the Rasraj and one or two others.

The Bengali language and literature owed their present position to the exertions of the late Babu Akhay Kumar Dutt and the Venerable Pandit Eshar Chandra Vidyasagar, C.I.E. (Cheers).

The former gentleman edited the Tattabodhini Patrika, with the help of our venerable countryman Maharshi Devendra Nath Tagore, and the latter greatly helped him in conducting that journal.

The learned Pandit and Mr. Dutt wrote several books in the Bengali language for the use of our schools. The Tattabodhini Patrika, in those days, contained several elaborate articles, on subjects of social and religious reforms. Pandit Madan Mahan Tarkalankar wrote the Sishubodha, which formed the text book in Government Colleges and Schools.

Rai Bankim Chandra Chatterjea Bahadur, C.I.E., published several novels and dramas in the Bengali language. He took for his guidance the method followed by writers of English Novels. Sakuntala and Sitar Banabas, written by Pandit Eshar Chandra Vidyasagar, took the public by surprise, when they made their appearance. They attracted the admiration of all, who took an interest in the improvement of our mother tongue.

Whilst the late Pandit Eshar Chandra Vidyasagar, Babu Tarini Charan Chatterjea, Babu Raj Krishna Banerjea and others were engaged in writing Bengali books, for the use of our Colleges and Schools, Rai Bankim Chandra Chatterjea, then devoted his time and energy in bringing out Bengali Novels, which formed the attraction of the Bengali reading public. Novel writing was then unknown to us. The plot, the design and the way, in which human character was caricatured, was foreign to us. Durgesuandini and Bisha Brikha charmed the public for a long time. (Cheers).

After him, several Bengali writers appeared in the field, with the object of promoting a taste for the cultivation of the Bengali language, when Babu Hem Chandra Banerjea and the late Mr. Michel Madhu Sudan Datta cut a conspicuous figure in the field of Bengali literature. They distinguished themselves as poets of no little renown.

Our Kalidas, who was called the Indian Shakespeare, by such a high authority as Professor F. Max Muller, found many imitators, and now we have many books written in the Bengali language, or translations of English books in that language, for the use of our Colleges and Schools.

We have treatises on Geometry, Geography, Arithmetic, History, Physical Science, Medicine, et hoc genus omne. The drama forms no exception. The stage supports many dramatic writers in the Bengali language. We have, for instance, notabilities in such men, as Babu Amrita Lal Bose, Babu Grish Chandra Ghose, Babu Rajkrishna Roy and others, who are well-known to the theatre-going public.

Then the lecturer Babu Amrita Lal Bose, Manager, Star Theatre, made his appearance in the meeting and, therefore, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar thought it proper not to proceed any further as he justly remarked that he should like to hear the hero of the afternoon addressing the audience.

So, the Chairman asked Babu Amrita Lall Bose to deliver his lecture on—

The Improvement of the Bengali Language and Literature :—

Mr. Bose rose amidst deafening cheers, and spoke eloquently on the subject for more than an hour. He amused the audience by his sarcasm and exhorted those present to study and write in the Bengali language. Bengali language and literature, he said, when properly cultivated, would lead to the regeneration of the country. Accustomed, as he was, to manage theatres and to lead theatrical performances, he was in his merry mood, as he was delivering his speech.

The learned lecturer commenced that it was the fashion in all ages and all countries to ignore the present in favour of the past, and consequently, we now and again meet with expressions, delivered either in the columns of our Journals, or, from the platform that the Bengali literature was degenerating. (Cheers).

My own humble self went to school at a time, when, through the patriotic and heroic exertions of the sainted Vidyasagar, Babu Akhay Kumar Dutt, Pandit Madan Mahan Tarkalankar and their other illustrious colleagues, the Bengali prose was assuming a literary shape, Naturally, the first products of the new literature took the form of school books. Then with Tek Chand Tagore, (the late Babu Pearu Chand Mitra), and Hutam, (the late Babu Kali Prasanna Sinha), dawned the age of fiction, which, in later year, was elevated to the rank of elegant writing by the late Rai Bankim Chandra Chatterjea Bahadur. His writings gave to the Bengali world the spirit and force of English thought in the most delightful dress of Sanskrit, Rhetoric and Belle's letter. (Cheers).

Though the verses of Kali Dass, Kirti Bas, Mukunda Ram Chakerberty and Bharat Chandra are unique specimens of original poetry in our language, yet, it has Ranga Lall Banerjea, who, in his heroic poem of Padhini, first instilled a force quite new to Bengali versification.

The crowning effect of the existence of a living language, in versification, was given by our Michel Madhu Sudan Dutt, in his new creation of a Bengali blank verse.

Mr. Ramesh Chandra Dutt has done his best in dressing historical events in the garb of fiction, while in the law of drama, Pandit Ram Naraiyan Tarka Ratna, Rai Dinabandhu Mitter Bahadur, Babu Mana Mahan Bose, Maharajah Sir Jatindra Mahan Tagore, Babu Jatirindra Nath Tagore, Babu Grish Chandra Ghose, Babu Sisir Kumar Ghose and Babu Hara Lall Mitter have each worked not only as sappers and minors, but, also as victorious generals. The degeneration of which, we took of, is merely the spurious coinage and forged bank notes, the issues of which are almost the inevitable followers of the sterling gold and the negotiable currency.

In every department of Science, Literature, Art and Finance, whenever something original and real are discovered and appreciated by the public, common place imitations and illegal coinage, as a rule, become the products of the press, &c.

It is not a hopeful sign of the better appreciation of our language and literature, that not on our own countrymen, who have finished the education in English Universities, both of the country and Europe, have enrolled themselves devoted students of their country's literature, but also have set up as writers in the different branch of Science and Literature, and thus, without any great hope of much pecuniary remuneration. May I ask who has paid Messrs. Ramesh Chand Dutt and Ramendra Sundar Trivedi enough for the time and labor, they have given in the preparation of the admirable works, that delight and instruct the minds of our brothers and sisters the present day.

But, above all these, it is a very hopeful and healthy sign that journals, like the Pioneer, lend its long columns in noticing the humble works of the present speaker, and the Englishman of Calcutta regrets that there is not a competent review in the Bengali language, through the medium of which, an Englishman may select books for the study of the Bengali language.

My friends! your rulers must understand the language, in which you laugh and weep, the language, in which you pray, lie prostrate, and preach, at the feet of the powers for your elevation religious and social, political and financial. If Chinaman approaches you, bewailing about some great grief, from which he has recently suffered you may, perhaps, from the hurried and jumble delivery of his speech, may take it for a querulous controversy; one must understand the language of a people to love them, must be able to appreciate their literature, in order to esteem them. The Hindus would have yet remained barbarians in the eyes of Europeans, but, for the existence of a library of worm-eaten manuscripts inscribed in Sanskrit characters.

So then, Gentlemen, your literature is flooded with the loving waves of Vaishnavik Poems. So then, Kasiram and Kirtibas, Kabikankan and Bharat Chandra were your countrymen, and they were, in no way, inferior to the Chaucer and Popes, Wordsworths and Byrons of their country, and then Englishmen will learn to give you their esteem.

So then, your Vidyasagar and Akhoy Kumar Dijendra Nath and Ramesh Chandra, Dina Bandhu and Grish Chandra, Kali Prasanna and Chandi Nath, Purna Chandra and Suresh Samajpati are not much below in the scale of literary latitude to the Johnsons and Addisons, Emersons and Macaulays, Scotts and Dickens, Molliers and Sheridans of the West. Place before the eyes of our English Rulers, one Drama in Bengali, like Sakuntala, one Historical poem, like Raghu Vansa, one work on Philosophy, like Panchiadasi or the Yoga Vashistha.

So then, Sirs, the versified imagination of our Hem Chandra, the living pathos of Madhu Sudan, Vidyasagar's melody in prose, our Bankim's Philosophy in fiction, and you will have achieved a triumph in the hearts of Englishmen, that twenty thousand congresses, with all their fiery speeches delivered in conventional phrases, can never hope to do. The Bengali language and literature, he said, when properly cultivated, would lead to the regeneration of the country.

In conclusion, Sirs, I beg to offer my thanks to Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society as conductor of this vast Meeting, for his love of the literature and language of his dear mother country, and for the opportunity, he has this day given us of such a sympathetic and loving association (Cheers).

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. Ramkesh Mustaphi spoke a few words on the subject, which also pleased the audience.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting and proposed votes of thanks to the speakers of the evening.

Babu Bhuban Krishna Mitter, Zemindar, having proposed votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer, which were carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved at 7 P.M.,

(Vide, the Bengalee, 9th January, 1904.)

As announced in the local papers, the Third Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the Unique Theatre, No. 9, Beadon Street, on Thursday, the 21st January, 1904, at 5 P.M., before a large and appreciative gathering. Dr. Sarat Kumar Pallick, F.R.C.S., (London), M.R.C.M., Fellow of the London Medical Society, Member of the Chelsea Chemical Society, Member of the British Medical Association, &c., &c., was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, in introducing Rai Sarat Chandra Das Bahadur, C.I.E., to the Meeting, said, that he had a pleasant duty to perform in introducing the celebrated traveller and explorer, whose name was not only known in India, but, so throughout the whole civilized world. His connection with the literature of the day was unique, and the Government had not been over-diligent in recognising his un-matched services. (Cheers.)

Affairs in Tibet were assuming Imperial dimensions. An expedition was on its way to Tibet, which, he had no doubt, would be a success. But, he hoped that the Exchequer would be spared as much as possible. He thought that expeditions beyond the Frontier of India, would be carried out entirely, at least largely, at the expense of the Imperial Government. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, with regard to the necessity of the present expedition to Tibet, it was for others to say, but, so far as the expense of the expedition was concerned, the people of India had a right to a voice in the matter.

The late Right Honble William Ewart Gladstone, M.P., who was one of the politicians, who brought the high principles of religion into politics, and the fairness to contribute no less than Five Millions Sterling towards the late Afghan War.

He then asked Rai Sarat Chandra Das Bahadur, C.I.E., of the Bengal Educational Service and Member of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, to deliver his first lecture to the Society on—

Tibetan Language and Literature :—

The lecturer rose amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for upwards of two hours. His lecture was very interesting, and instructive and heard with rapt attention.

The lecturer said that Thon-mi, the son of Anu, one of the Ministers of King Srongtsan Gampo, introduced the art of writing in Tibet. He studied Sanskrit first, under a Buddhist Brahmin teacher, named Lokikara Datta, and latterly, under several eminent Buddhist professors of Magadha for many years; and, after acquiring a thorough knowledge of the sacred literature of the Buddhists, returned to Tibet, where he was cordially welcomed by his illustrious Sovereign.

During his residence in Magadha, (A.D. 630—650), he enjoyed high reputation as a scholar and holy man, and was called by the name Sambhota, or, the excellent Bhot, (i. e.), a native of Tibet, which was known to the Indians by the name of Bhot.

He wrote several treatises on the newly-formed written language, besides his celebrated grammar in verse, which all beginners in Tibet commit to memory.

During the reign of King Srong-tsan Gampo and his immediate successors, translations of Sanskrit books were occasionally made in Magadha by Tibetan students, studying at Nalanda, but, no regular attempt was made to translate the sacred books into Tibetan.

At this period, the thirty letters with four diacritical vowel marks, which Sambhota had introduced from Magadha, and which he had shaped partly after the form of some of the Wartula characters of Magadha, were found adequate for the conveyance of thought in writing.

Then the language of Tibet was in its infancy and free from words either of Indian or Chinese origin. Csoma de Körös, the great Hungarian scholar of Tibetan, wrote, more than ninety years ago, regarding the origin of the Tibetan character, in the following terms :—

The Tibetan Alphabet itself is stated, (by Tibetan Grammarians), to have been formed from, (the form of), the Devanagari, prevalent in Central India in the seventh century.

On comparing the form of its letters with those of various ancient Sanskrit inscriptions, particularly that at Gya, translated by Mr. (afterwards Sir Charles Wilkins), and that on the columns at Allahabad, translated by Captain Trevor and Dr. Mill, a striking similitude will be observed.

During the reign of King Thisrong Dautstan, Buddhism was made the State Religion of Tibet and the Bon fetich religion was suppressed by Royal edicts, and Himavata, the country of snows, attracted the attention of the Indian Buddhists. Santi Rakshita, one of the professors of the Buddhist University of the Nalanda, visited Tibet, where he was appointed the spiritual adviser to the King. King Thisrong embraced Buddhism with that earnest devotion to religion, which marked the character of Asoka. He was determined to follow in that monarch's footsteps in the propagation of his adopted creed.

At the advice of Santi Rakshita, he founded many religious institutions in Central Tibet. Not satisfied with the religious works of minor importance, which he had already done, the King desired the Indian Pandit to introduce Buddhist monasticism in his kingdom. In order to help Santi Rakshita in this important work, the King invited Acharya Padma Sambhava, a native of Udyana, (modern Kabul), who was, at this time, travelling in Magadha.

With the help of these two Indian Pandits, the King founded, in about 740 A. D., the famed monastery of Sam-yea, after the model of Odontapuri Vihara, (modern Behar), of Magadha, which was destroyed by Baktyar Khilji in 1203 A.D. He richly endowed this monastery, and provided it with spacious accommodation in buildings, designed in the Magadha fashion, for the residence of one hundred and eight Indian Pandits.

The two Indian Pandits commenced the introduction of Buddhist monasticism, by initiating seven Tibetan young men into the order of Bhiksha.

After the completion of Sam-yea, the King invited many Buddhist Acharyas from Magadha to conduct the work of translating Buddhist sacred books into Tibetan.

During the reign of this king and his successors down to the accession of the apostate Langdarma to the throne of Tibet, the work of translation was carried on with vigour.

With a view to make Sanskrit accessible to the Tibetan and also to save the Tibetan student desirous of learning Sanskrit, the trouble of an Indian journey and residence, the Tibetan Lochavas, (scholars of Sanskrit), wrote commentaries on Sanskrit Grammars and translated Sanskrit Dictionaries into Tibetan.

The works of the best authors of ancient India, including those of Valmiki, Vyasa, Panini, Indra, Chandra, Kalidasa, &c., were also translated. It is worthy of remark that a tongue, which in its nature was monosyllabic, when written in the characters of a polysyllable language, like Sanskrit, had necessarily to undergo some modification.

The result of these two opposite forces, operating on the Tibetan, was its conversion into a dissyllabic language. The tongue of the Tibetans being unaccustomed to pronouncing polysyllables and combinations of several consonants with one vowel, phonetic rules to help in pronunciation were formed, and though they were not written down by the Tibetan authors, for the guidance of students, they were handed down orally.

The Chinese professor San than Sanssi, who visited Sam Yea, at the invitation of King Thisrong Deutsan, was so much struck with the capacity of the Tibetan characters to express Chinese words with their curious intonation and phonetic peculiarities, that he undertook both to transliterate and translate some of the Chinese works into Tibetan and certain Tibetan works into the Chinese language.

The work of translation of Indian authors, both sacred and profane, Buddhist or Brahmanical, was carried on with full vigour by the Sakyapa hierarchs, during the whole of the Thirteenth Century—when Buddhist Pandits of Magadha and Bengal took shelter in Tibet.

He concluded by saying that the country was very poor. Polyandry was prevalent. The eldest son took a wife. All the other brothers were not married, but, they lived with the wife of the eldest brother. Delai Lama was the Pope of Tibet. Buddhism was the prevailing religion. The country was surrounded by mountains, some 21,000 feet high. They were covered with snow.

The lecturer then satisfactorily answered the following questions put to him by the audience ;
Viz :—

- (1) How the lecturer journeyed to Tibet?
- (2) Whether any original work had been published by the Tibetans,
- (3) The form of Government in Tibet,
- (4) Polyandry in Thibet,

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the lecturer.

The Rev. Mr. FARQUHAR then proposed votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer, which were carried with acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved after 7 30 P.M.

(Vide, the Statesman, and the Bengalee, 22nd January, 1904)

As announced, in the local papers, the Fourth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Society, was held at the Unique Theatre, No.9, Beadon Street, on Thursday, the 4th February 1904, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Swami Upadhyaya, (who is well-known for his learned discourses on Hindu Philosophy, delivered in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceeding of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Mr. R. Palit, of Howrah, to deliver his first lecture to the society on—

How to approach God :—

The learned lecturer dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour, and the lecture was very interesting and impressive.

The lecturer, after making a few observation with regard to the good works done by the Calcutta Literary Society, paid eulogium to the excellent services done by Swami Upadhyaya in India and in England towards the propagation of the truth of Hindu Religion.

The speaker then said that English education, with an outward gloss of material progress had brought in its train, two influences in India one tending to a love for the worship of matter in all its aspects, and the other, tending to foster a spirit of hatred, in the minds of our youngmen in all things Indian.

He then traced the successive stages of development in the worship of God. In doing so, he observed that, "God is enthroned in the heart, and is to be approached in Spirit. The dawning of this truth certainly marked a new era in the history of man's spiritual progress".

The ancient Aryans of India lighted up the sacrificial fire, and poured their libations upon it in the hope, that in some inscrutable manner, all their offerings would go up to Indra and the other gods, and would help to propitiate them.

The ancient Jews approached Jehovah with burnt incense and the fat of rams. The orgies connected with the worship of the gods and goddesses of ancient Greece and Rome, are too well-known to need description. Thus, the idea of worship, prevalent in the ancient world, was gross and material.

In some instances, as in the case of human sacrifices of ancient India, they were horribly cruel and barbarous. Considering the origin and the nature of all modern conceptions of worship, was it not the commencement of a new era, in human thought, when God was first conceived to be enthroned in the heart, and when his adoration in spirit and love came to be regarded as the fittest worship?

God enthroned in the heart,—meditate upon this solemn truth. Is it all poetry—the exuberance of devotional feeling, or, is there any substantance of truth beneath it? In what sense is He enthroned in the heart of man?

Science shows that this material world of ours is resolvable into a number of forces, and these forces again tend to resolve themselves into one energy.

But, this conception of force or energy, by its very nature, is spiritual. This leads to the truth that eternal world has sprung from, and is upheld by the will of God. Does the expression God enthroned in the heart, means that, God is the origin and upholder of our spiritual nature, as He is of material nature?—It means something more. He is specially enthroned in the heart, in two senses, vis :—

- (1). It is there that we discover a moral Government, of which He is the Governor. There we discover new joys and new sorrows, which are unknown to purely material nature and which lift us far above the rest of the animal kingdom. It is in the heart alone that we can hold conscious and direct spiritual intercourse with God.

A plant is kept alive by the joint operation of the sap from beneath, and light and air from above. There is nothing supernatural or miraculous in this. The meeting of Aspiration and Inspiration is as natural and constant, as the meeting of flame and current of air. The flame feeds upon the air-current, so, the latter closes round it and supports the former.

Similarly, human aspirations feed upon Divine inspiration and wherever the former is present, the latter is also present.

In bringing his lecture to a close, Mr. R. Palit observed that, it would be a glorious day for India, when her sons would be able to realize the importance of the worship of God in Spirit and Love.

May God hasten that day, when the diverse nations of India, forgetful of their animosities, would rally round the banner of Spirit and Love, and approach Him in all humility and love. (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman, Swami B. Upadhyaya, made a few eloquent and deep observations on the subject, with the usual fervour of his eloquence.

He said that the Hindu Scriptures had laid down the path to the attainment of Divine Knowledge. The Vedic Mantra, Lead me from unreality into reality : lead me from darkness into light ; lead me from death into immortality ; shewed the different stages in the path.

The first stage consisted in being led from unreality into reality. What is unreality?—asked he. Nature, as an object of enjoyment, was, according to him, the great un-reality. There was neither fraud nor deception in the apprehension of things by the senses, but, it was our desires which imposed upon them an unreal character. Desires led to conflict and isolation. It was our likes and dislikes, which separated one object from another, and thus prevented us from perceiving the allness of God.

It was, therefore, necessary to get rid of our desires. The way to be free lay, he said, in worshipping certain objects of nature as symbols of Divinity. Those objects, which were good and great, which satisfied our desires to some extent by their beauty and goodness, but, generated in us a feeling of awe and veneration, were, he pointed out, only fit for veneration.

The Sun, the Ganges, the Peepul tree, the cow, and such other objects, which existed only for the good of man, manifested the nature of God in a pre-eminent way. They were, therefore, to be looked upon as special objects of devotion.

To counteract the power of desires and passions, which always exclude one object from another, things, which are good, beneficent and solemn, were set apart for being worshipped as the special appearances of the Supreme.

By this method of symbolic worship, the spirit of peace would pervade our souls and the exclusiveness arising from passions and desires would disappear, thus making our minds ready to perceive the all-ness of the Eternal. And when one reached this stage of peace and tranquility, one would be fit to stand before God, without the intervention of symbols. That was the second stage, the Chairman said, the sphere of light, in which the devotee was led from the darkness of symbols into the luminous abode of the Divinity. Thence came deathlessness and immortality ; such was the way, as laid down by the Hindu Scriptures, to approach God.

With votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer, the Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P.M.
(Vide, the Englishman and the Amrita Bazar Patrika, 5th February, 1904).

As announced in the local papers, the Fifth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Society, was held at the quadrangle of the Ripon College, No. 60, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 11th February, 1904, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, land-holder and Govt. Pensioneer.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Babu Panch Cowri Banerjea, B.A., Editor Rangalaya, to deliver his lecture on—

Higher Education :—

The learned lecturer dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that the object of High Education, at the present time, is so far as it was taught in our colleges and schools was that the young learner might, in course of time, become a Solicitor or a Pleader, or, a Medical Practitioner or an Engineer. But, when this object was lost sight of, and the Professors of our colleges and schools impressed upon their young students, the importance of looking up some thing high, that they should cultivate a love for their countrymen, then our country would rise.

After the speaker had finished, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

Babu Akhaya Kumar Chatterjea, M.A., having proposed votes of thanks to the Chair and the lecturer, which were carried with acclamation, the Meeting dissolved at 6 P.M.

(Vide, the Indian Mirror, 13th February, 1904).

As announced in the local papers, the Sixth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Mahammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 29, Mirzapur Street, on Tuesday, the 16th February, 1904, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Babu Premtosh Bose, B.A.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Mr. R. Palit of Howrah to deliver his second lecture to the Society on—

God knowable or Not :—

The speaker dwelt upon his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention.

His able exposition of Western Philosophy and his elucidation of the Hindu Shastras combined to make a deep impression in the minds of the audience. In his peroration, he made an appeal to the audience with these words. "Arise my brethren, I adjure you in the name of God Almighty, in the name of common sense and reason, in the name of your primitive scriptures, in the name of all that is nearest and dearest, to try to recognise the Parabrahma of the primitive Scriptures.

Shake off the slumber that has come upon you by drinking too much of the intoxicating flattery administered to you by the Pantheists of Western Culture. Open your eyes and see that the Parabrahma of the primitive Scriptures is not the God of Pantheists and agnostics.

In bringing his lecture to a close, Mr. R. Palit observed, that the unknown cause or primal force is, in the first place, an ever-active principle. Indeed, it would not be force if it were passive and transient, or, if it were not at work, continually un-interruptedly, and ceaselessly.

The idea of rest, or, inaction is obviously incompatible with our idea of force ; and, therefore, to represent force as anything, but, an active principle, is Psychologically absurd.

All Nature proclaims its ceaseless activity, as if from the house-top. Every object of nature is in a flux, perpetually changing its internal mechanism and external form, throwing off and taking in molecules, and thereby producing in itself a ceaseless change of arrangement and shape, of proportion and color, or, what may be called its inner life and outer appearance.

Human consciousness, more-over, is a flux, perpetually changing from one stage to another, never being in one and the same state for two moments, and no two states being absolutely the same.

When we look around, we see nothing, but the un-interrupted, un-intermittent activity of force ; and, when we shut our eyes, the same thing is noticeable.

We are, therefore, justified, both on physical and metaphysical grounds, in representing the primal force, as not merely existent, but, persistent, in its activity as an ever-active principle.

The force, moreover, is a moral agent, not merely a material entity of the ponderable or imponderable species. Professor Baden Powell's Syllogism, or, string of undeveloped Syllogism is irrefutable.

Arrangement or adaptation implies the subserviency of means to ends, and subserviency of means to ends implies moral causation. In every department of Nature, we notice arrangement of the most beautiful kind, adaptation, orderly movement, and methodical development.

We cannot contemplate its order and beauty, without being instinctively led to pre-suppose the co-ordination of adequate means to contemplated ends. But, the ideation and choice of means, without which, such co-ordination can seldom be explained, are mental operations ; and the conclusion, to which we are irresistably brought, is that the force, to which creation is to be traced has a mind, intelligent and voluntary ! (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, some gentlemen made a few appropriate remarks on the subject.

With votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer, the Meeting dispersed.

(Vide the People and the Pratibasi, 17th February, 1904.)

As announced in the local papers, the Seventh Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the hall of the General Assembly's College, No 3, Cornwallis' Square, East, on Wednesday, the 17th February, 1904, at 6 P.M., under the presidency of the Revd. James M. Morrison, M.A., D.D., Principal of the General Assembly's College.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Revd. Chairman asked Rai Sarat Chandra Das Bahadur, C.I.E., of the Bengal Educational Service and Member of the Asiatic Society, Bengal, to deliver his second lecture to the Society on—

Pekin and the Structure of the Chinese Language :—

The speaker dwelt upon his subject for upwards of two hours. The first part of his lecture dealt with the city, its ruins, famous walls and places.

Later on, he proceeded to explain the structure of the Chinese Language, and warned his hearers not to suppose that the Chinese had a system, of Alphabet like our own.

A paper was then produced with two different sets of characters for the same words—the ancient and the modern. The same words, said the lecturer, are pronounced differently, in different parts of the Empire, but, the written characters are everywhere the same, and are legible to every literate Chinese.

He traced the growth of the hieroglyphic characters to nearly thirty centuries before Christ, and then illustrated on a black board how the Chinese represented a concrete thing and a thought.

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. Dass very courteously offered himself to be questioned with relation to China, an offer, which was availed of by a large number of his hearers.

The Revd. Dr. Morrison, M. A., in his address, mentioned that the lecture delivered by Rai Sarat Chandra Das Bahadur, C. I. E., was extremely interesting and very ably done. The learned lecturer was very kind to have allowed his audience putting any questions relating to the subject ; this was an unusual privilege, seldom enjoyed by the audience. The subject may appear to be very dry, but, is very important and interesting.

The Chairman could not but mention what struck him most during his visit to Canton and Peking. There he heard that boys are taught only to articulate sound ; when a man approaches a Chinese School, he hears nothing, but, an uproar and confusion of sounds.

The system of examination was very peculiar, boys are kept under strict Police supervision, and are not allowed to go home for several days, till examination is finished. The candidates take their food there, and during the day, write on boards which serve the purpose of bedstead at night.

The Revd. Chairman then paid a warm tribute to the patience, courtesy and erudition of the learned lecturer, and fully bore him out by a partial recital of his own experience of the Chinese in Hong Kong.

Votes of thanks, having been proposed to the Chair and the learned lecturer, which were carried with acclamation, the gathering dispersed at 9 P.M. (Vide, the Bengalee, 18th February, 1904.)

Sixty-third Birthday Celebration of His Majesty the King-Emperor of India :—

The 8th Public Meeting for the session 1904, of the Society, was held at the College Square, on Monday, the 27th June, 1904, at 5 P.M., to celebrate the Sixty-third Anniversary of His Majesty's Birthday.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, land-holder, Government Pensioner and Vice-President of the Society, gave an extempore address, congratulating His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward VII. Emperor of India, on His Imperial Majesty's attaining Sixty-third Birthday Anniversary.

He said that Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and worthy Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, had that day distributed alms to the poor, in honor of His Imperial Majesty's 63rd Birthday.

"We ought to be grateful to His Majesty for the blessings of peace, which we enjoy, and he expressed a hope, that the Tibet Mission will soon come to a satisfactory conclusion and that there will be no further loss of human life.

The Babu concluded with a prayer that His Majesty and the Royal Family may live long, and enjoy the blessings of health, happiness, peace and prosperity.

The following telegram was then forwarded by the Society to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Viceroy and Governor-General of India :—

"Our—Society—held—open-air—Meeting—in honor—of—King's—Birthday—Kindly—convey congratulations—to—His—Majesty."

is Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Viceroy and Governor-General of India has graciously been pleased to give us the following reply :—

Telegram, No. 33734.

Dated, Simla, 28th June, 1904.

the Founder-Secretary, | From
Calcutta Literary Society, | The Private Secy., Viceroy,
Calcutta. | Simla.

I am desired to thank you for your telegram of yesterday. (Vide, Hindu Patriot, 29th, Englishman, Amrita Bazar Patrika, Hindu Patriot, 30th June, and Indian Mirror, July, 1904.)

The Ninth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the Clifton Square Park, on Thursday, the 28th July, 1904, at 6-30 P.M., to commemorate the Thirteenth anniversary death of the late Venerable Pandit Iswarandra Vidyasagra, C.I.E., when Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, delivered an empore address.

He spoke for nearly a quarter of an hour, in the course of which he said that, he was glad to inform the assembly that public meetings were being held that afternoon in several parts of the town, in honor of the late-lamented venerable Pandit, who was a man, whose like we shall never see again. He was born of poor parents, and won the highest position in society, by the dint of his perseverance and energy. He was esteemed by all who knew him. As a benefactor, philanthropist, social reformer and a friend of the poor and helpless, his name will never be forgotten. (Cheers.)

(Vide, Amrita Bazar Patrika and Hindu Patriot, 29th, 30th, 1904.)

As previously announced in the local papers, the Tenth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held, with great clat, at the Unique Theatre, No. 6, Beadon Street, on Tuesday, the 1st August, 1904, at 5 P.M., to commemorate the Second anniversary Coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII., King of Great Britain and Ireland, and Emperor of India, under the presidency of Rai Baikunth Nath Bose Bahadur, Dewan of His Majesty's Mint in Calcutta.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder of and Secretary of the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, asked Mr. Anand Chandra Rai, B.L., to deliver his lecture on Loyalty. The speaker dwelt upon the subject for nearly a quarter of an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention.

He was followed by Mr. Jitendra Nath Mullick, B.A., Dr. J. N. Sinha, B.A., and Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society.

All the speakers laid stress upon the fact that the loyalty of the Indian people was not lip-dip, but, it was ingrained in their very nature.

Mr. J.N. Mullick said that loyalty is inherent in the Hindus, even from the earliest period of the Nation's History. Our idea of a King is very high and noble, and we regard the King, not as a mere man, but, as a demi-god, sent out by our benign heavenly Father, to regulate our life in this benighted world. (Hear, Hear.)

What we were in the Golden Age, and what we were in the Middle Age, we, still, are at the present age. We, therefore, ought to vow before our King, in all reverence and humility. We saw His Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, on the occasion of His Majesty's visit to this country in 1875, as His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

After all the speakers had finished their speeches, Mr. K. C. Bose entertained the audience with several songs from Gramophone, which greatly pleased the audience.

The Chairman then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He said :—

"Gentlemen, I must express my thankfulness to you, for having, at the instance of my honored friend to the left, (Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar), thrust this greatness upon me, by electing me the Chairman of this Meeting, though I cannot congratulate you upon your choice.

I can, however, un-hesitatingly congratulate the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, on the idea of which this public Meeting is the outward manifestation.

While Meetings are being held in different parts of the town, and in different seasons of the year, to celebrate the memory of our departed great, it is, but meet, that Meetings should be held to commemorate the living present, the anniversary of the reign of one, who is not only the embodiment of greatness, but, the cause of greatness in others, our august Sovereign, to whom we owe our life, both individually and as a nation. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the Chairman of a Meeting is expected to throw some light on the subject, under discussion.

But, fortunately for me, loyalty is a subject, which needs no light to be thrown upon it. The sentiment is ingrained in the very constitution of the Hindus. It is a part and parcel of their religious creeds, and the demonstration is one, in which all British subjects, irrespective of their political creeds and religious differences, can heartily join. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then thanked the Gentlemen, who had entertained the meeting with the Gramophone, and the Authorities of the Unique Theatre, for allowing the premises to be placed at their disposal.

He sat amidst cheers, reciting the following lines from Henry Canery's Song, which goes by the name of the National Anthem :—

"God save our gracious King,
Long live our noble King!
God save the King!" &c.

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned speakers.

(Vide, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 10th, and Englishman, 11th August, 1904.)

A Letter of Congratulation was also forwarded to His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, to which the following reply was received :
Balmoral Castle.

August, 31st, 1904.

"The Keeper of the Privy Purse, presents his compliments to the Founder-Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, and writes to acknowledge the receipt of his letter of the 11th instant to the address of the Comptroller and Equerry to King Edward VII., Emperor of India.

The Keeper of the Privy Purse begs to inform the Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society that his letter shall be submitted to the King, on His Majesty's arrival at Balmoral."

The Founder-Secretary,

The Calcutta Literary Society,
24, Nimitola Street, Calcutta—India.

As previously announced in the local papers, the Eleventh Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, to congratulate the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., of Faridpur, on his election as an Hon'ble Member of the Legislative Council of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, came off, with great clat, at the Curzon Theatre, No. 91, Harrison Road, on the 21 August, 1904, at 4 P.M. Mr. Lal Mohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, was voted to the chair, amidst deafening cheers.

There was a large gathering of Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, in spite of the foul weather, and, among others, the following gentlemen were present :—

The Hon'ble Mr. Gopal Krishna Goekhale, C.I.E., Bombay Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council; Mr. S. P. Sinha, Bar at-Law; Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick; Babu Ramendra Sundar Trivedi; Babu Kaliprasanna Bhattacharjee; Babu Jnan Chunder Roy, B.L.; Babu Jogesh Chandra Banerjee; Kaviraj Upendra Nath Sen; Pandit Sakham Ganesh Deuskar, and others.

Punctually to time, the Chairman, with Dr. S. K. Mullick and the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., made their appearance, amidst hearty and loud cheers, and the proceedings of the meeting began.

Letters, excusing their absence, owing to ill health, were also received from Sir Gurudas Banerjee, Kt.; and Nawab Syed Amir Hussain, Khan Bahadur, C.I.E., late Presidency Magistrate.

Babu Sham Lal Day, Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the letters received from Sir Gurudas Banerjee, Kt., and Nawab Syed Amir Hussain Khan Bahadur, C.I.E., excusing their absence, and the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Secretary garlanded the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L. The Secretary then read out the following Congratulatory Address, prepared for presentation to the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L. :—

To

The Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., (of Faridpur), Member of the Legislative Council of
His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, &c.

Honored Sir,

The Calcutta Literary Society most heartily begs to congratulate you, on your election and nomination to the Legislative Council of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

You have always taken a deep interest in public movements, calculated to promote the welfare of our countrymen.

Those, who happened to come in contact with you, have always been touched with the suavity of your manners and the courtesy, with which you have invariably treated them. The younger generation have always found you ready to help them in the prosecution of their studies.

You received your early education in the Barisal Zillah School, and won the esteem of your teachers, who moulded your intellectual and moral character with such success. You passed the M. A. examination of the Calcutta University in the year 1875, and won the B. L. Degree in 1878.

The germs of these high qualities, which distinguished your early career, fully developed themselves in after-life, when you entered the Bar, at Faridpur, where you soon occupied the foremost place amongst its members.

In the year 1880, you were a Member of the "Old District Road Cess Committee," and, afterwards, became its Vice-Chairman, and continued in the office for two years, viz. :—from 1883 to 1885.

On the establishment of the Local-Self-Government, you were elected by your countrymen to be a Member of the District Board of Faridpur, and you held the office for seven years, viz. :—from 1886 to 1902. You were twice the Chairman of the Faridpur Municipality for about 12 years.

During the time of your Municipal Administration, Faridpur got a novel Water filter, which the Government of Bengal recognized with appreciation, and, for which, the late-lamented Sir John Woodburn, K.C.S.I., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, paid a high tribute to you. It is also due to you that Faridpur, at present, possesses the benefit of a Hospital and a Town Hall of its own.

Your connection with the Indian National Congress is well-known throughout the country, and one of the incidents, in this connection, is noticed in the "Imperial Rule in India." You were also the President of the Burdwan Conference in 1899.

You successfully led the movement against the Legal Practitioners' Bill, which threatened the independence of the Mofussil Bar, and seriously affected the interest of the Mofussil public.

Again, in 1894, when the independence of the Bengal Municipalities was threatened by the Mofussil Municipal Amendment Bill, your efforts materially contributed to the abandonment or modification of the most objectionable features of that Bill.

The people, to mark their approbation of your meritorious services, have now elected you to be a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, and the Government has cordially ratified the people's choice by nominating you to the Bengal Council.

We, but, echo the consensus of public opinion, when we express our sincere hope, that in you, we shall ever find a sturdy champion of popular rights in the Bengal Legislative Council.

We are daily confronted with new political problems, but, we doubt not that representatives, who, by their past services, have won the confidence of the people, will be equal to every occasion, and go on steadily working for the betterment of our country.

May God bless you with a long life. May peace and prosperity be your constant companion, and may the Omnipotent One continue to endow you with those virtues, which have made you such a strong champion of our country, and gained for you such deep love from our countrymen. (Cheers.)

The Address was then handed over to the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., by Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, amidst cheers.

Mr. Lalmohan Ghose's Speech :—

The Chairman then rose, amidst tremendous cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He said :

"Gentlemen,—I consider it a special honor to be asked to take the chair this evening, and to welcome, in your name and on your behalf, our esteemed friend the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., (Cheers). And to congratulate him, on the recognition that his services have, at last, met with at the hands of his countrymen. (Cheers.)

In the midst of a busy and successful professional career, and, notwithstanding the heavy and incessant demands upon his time, he has never hesitated, whenever opportunity has offered, to place his great abilities, his unique experience and his sound and mature judgment at the service of his country. (Cheers.)

Ambitious only to be useful, he has never sought to startle the world, or, to set the Ganges on fire by preaching new-fangled and ill-digested theories. (Hear, Hear.)

Undismayed by temporary checks and failures, he has steadily persevered in the discharge of his public duties, and has shown throughout a quiet tenacity of purpose, which might well serve as a pattern, and a model to our young men, (Hear, Hear). If they have the sagacity to perceive and the modesty to acknowledge, that there must be something like a continuity of policy, if we are to bring the national work to a successful issue. But, I do not, by any means, imply that our young men should blindly follow their elders.

What I do mean to say is this, that you should not allow any unhealthy craving for novelty, or, notoriety, to induce you to repudiate the policy, that has been hitherto followed; for, allow me to assure you that, it is just as dangerous to break away with too sudden a wrench from the traditions of the past, as it is for a new pilot, who takes over charge of a vessel from another, to be in too great a hurry, to alter the course, navigated by his predecessors, before he has himself had sufficient time to study the chart and to make himself acquainted with the various circumstances, which ought to guide his judgment.

At the same time, I am ready to concede that, although, our general policy is, in my humble opinion, altogether unexceptionable, still, it is possible that in the execution of that policy, we may not have been always free from mistakes.

If you can avoid the errors into which we have fallen, if you can improve upon our methods, suiting them to the changing circumstances of the times, the glory will be all your own. But, unfortunately, within the last few months, a new and alarming cry has gone forth.

It has been said that a subject race has no politics,—(Oh! Oh! and Cheers)—that we are much better off, in various respects, than several European nations, (Oh! Oh! and Cheers.) that political rights and privileges will all come in the fulness of time, and that as we can not hustle ourselves into a nationality, let us give up what has been called political agitation. (Oh! Oh! and Cheers.)

I do not know whether to take these gentlemen seriously or not. Indeed, we have already been told that, it is entirely owing to our inability to appreciate recondite epigrams and the higher flights of sarcasm, that we are disposed to attach a literal meaning to these pronouncements, (Laughter.)

I am reminded of a humorous story in one of Dickens' Novels. One member of the Pickwick Club happened to call another a humbug, whereupon there was an uproar until, it was explained by the offending member that he did not use the word in its ordinary sense, but, had merely intended it to bear a purely Pickwickian construction.

It may be that the preachers of the new doctrine, following the example of that famous club, might not choose to use language in its ordinary acceptation. (Laughter.) since men, who are placed in responsible positions, are not expected to play the role of the mysteryman, or, to in a purely Lickwickian sense, the general public excused, if it takes them to mean what they say.

has every one the presence of mind, or, the ready dispose of these questions by a simple, but, at the time, effective observation, such as was made by an old friend of mine, whom, I am glad to see present evening, although, I will not call up his blushes said that it was quite within the bounds of possibility a new school may be right, but that, for his part, he require a great deal of proof, before he could come to a conclusion, that more than one generation of our men, from Ram Mahan Roy downwards, have been only and egregiously wrong, and that divine inspiration suddenly dawned upon the half a dozen or a dozen men, who had come forward as the saviours of the det these circumstances, and considering that truth the monopoly, either of the old, or, of the young, it not be altogether amiss to consider the question for moment on its merits.

be that as it may, the man, who has no possible of earning his own livelihood, has only three courses to him; Viz :—

1stly), He may beg alms of his neighbours, who, if able inclined, might relieve his necessities out of own abundance, this is the mendicant policy.

2ndly), He may accept his destiny, lie down by the side of a ditch, and welcome a more or less lingering

m. (Laughter.) This is the policy of absolute inaction.

3rdly), If he is too proud to beg, and too tenacious to give it up without a struggle, he might follow the ple of the Knights of the role of olden times, and help himself with the strong hand this policy of force.

Now, assuming that there is some analogy between the a famishing man and the political condition of a ct race, I do not think that there is, in all India, a man, out of a lunatic asylum, who, in his wildest as, would advocate a policy of force.

regards the second alternative, namely, abstention political agitation, for fear of irritating the Governor, in other words, the policy of the "apke waste," ugh, there may be some among us secretly inclined direction, I feel sure that, for very shame, they will ture to make so humiliating a confession.

efore, what is left to us, excepting the policy of ational agitation, which is now contemptuously called mendicant policy? (Cheers.)

find, that these mystical "mantras" alone are not sufficient to captivate the public mind, some of the prosaic supporters of the new school have condes-ed to tell us that, what they really mean, is this, that, there are such important subjects, as the industrial ement, to engage our attention, we are not justified in ing away our energies upon purely political questions.

shall not pause to make more than a parenthetical against the artful use of the phrase "fritter away," begs the whole question. But, I shall only observe there are other subjects, besides the industrial question, are of equal important, such as that of education, higher education and that of the masses. (Hear, Hear

one has ever supposed that there is any antagonism between these subjects and politics. Does any representative of the new school suppose, that he can altogether dissociate the industrial question from politics? If he does, it betrays a woeful ignorance of our past history. (Cheers.)

We had many flourishing industries, which were delicately killed, in the interests of British trade, by the operation of the iniquitous taxes.

What has happened in the past, may take place again-

if following the new doctrine, you were to be indifferent, while history was repeating itself and legislative fetters were being forged for your new industries, then your last would be worse than your first. (Hear, Hear.)

But, be that as it may, is there any justification for saying that our public men have taken no interest in these questions? When an Excise duty was imposed upon our Cotton industry or, when a deadly blow was aimed at our educational system, can any one say that our public men stood by, with folded arms, and looked with indifference? Considering that all these important subjects are directly effected by legislation, they seem to me to be only subdivisions of the broader heads of politics.

To my mind, they are like the columns of a moving army, which, to ensure the success of the general plan of campaign, must march abreast of each other converging upon one common point of concentration. But, then, we are also asked what has political agitation done for us?

The question has been repeatedly answered. But, no one is so deaf, as he who will not hear.

If our superior critics will condescend to study history, they will find that, even in a self-governing country like England, and so late as the 19th century, it took them years and years of agitation, before they could bring away great political reform to a successful termination. It took them more than sixteen years to pass the Reform Bill into law.

The Corn Laws, which, ever since they were passed in 1815, convulsed all England, and led to innumerable tumults and disturbances, and, although, the question was subsequently taken up by the Anti-Corn Law League—the most powerful political organisation of the century, led by such men, as Cobden and Bright, (Cheers), still, it was not till 1846, that these obnoxious laws, affecting as they did the food of the people, were at last repealed.

Lastly, the Catholic Emancipation Bill took more than 25 years of sustained agitation, and even, now, it is not a final measure, for, there are some offices from which Roman Catholics are still excluded.

Well then, Gentlemen, if, in free England, the democracy led by men, who have left their mark in history, have still to go through these arduous labors, with what reason can you expect us in India, to find a royal road to success. But, have our own labors been altogether barren of results?

It is no doubt, true, that our protests have not always met with a sympathetic hearing.

But, it is equally true that our efforts have, more than once, met with singular success.

The sudden creation of the Statutory Civil Service was the direct outcome of our agitation in England. In the days of Lord Lytton, when the Vernacular Press Act was passed at one sitting of the Legislative Council what was it but our persistent agitation, that paved the way for its ultimate repeal?

When, about twelve years ago, the lives and liberties of the people of Bengal were threatened by the Jury Notification, what was it but the concerted action of the men, now contemptuously called political mendicants, and their united and firm protest, now sneered at, that preserved this province from a tremendous danger? Where were our critics then? I was surprised to hear the other day that the hostility to the old policy is carried so far in certain quarters, that they actually look askance at the expansion of the Legislative Councils and even insinuate that they should be boycotted.

If this were the opinion only of some very youthful gentlemen, we might afford to smile at it. But, what are we to say, if such an opinion is shared or encouraged by men who ought to know better? You all know, Gentlemen that when the Indian Council's Act first came into operation some of us sought and obtained the honor of the suffer-ages of our fellow-countrymen.

If, any of these men say, I myself were to be so oblivious of the past as to say of those, who are now occupying a similar position, that they are scrambling for the sweeping of the legislative table, what would you think of me? Would you not feel inclined to say with the poet:—

"Who would'nt laugh if such a man there be
"Who would not weep if Atticus were he."

In conclusion, Gentlemen, let me beg of you not to adopt any new theories, merely because of their novelty; not to mistake marsh lights for guiding stars, not to be led astray by a will'o' the wisp, shine it never so brightly from a distance; not to think it worthy of yourselves to sneer at and belittle the work of your predecessors, but, honestly to take up that work from the point, at which they are obliged to stop; to surpass them in energy and perseverance, to achieve greater success than has fallen to our lot, and thus promote the cause of national regeneration. (Loud Cheers.)

Babu Baidya Nath Banerjee then spoke a few words, recounting some of the services of the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L.,

The Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar's Speech :—

The Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar then rose, amidst loud and continued applause, and spoke, in his usual grand style, for upwards of an hour. He said :—

Mr. Ghose, the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, the Hon'ble Mr. Goekhle, friends and countrymen!

Both health and words fail me, at a moment, when I have most need of them. To say that I feel overwhelmed with your kindness would not adequately express the depth of my feelings, while to protest that I thank you most heartily, would still leave something unsaid, lying in the innermost depth of my heart.

The outburst of generous sympathy, with which the recommendation by the District Board of the Dacca Division has been received by the public, and the numerous messages of warm congratulations, which I have received from different parts of the country, were in themselves sufficient to overcome hearts, even much stouter than my own.

But, Gentlemen, believe me to say that, it has surpassed the wildest dream of my life, to find myself received with open arms by an august assembly like this, headed by a veteran leader of hundred fights, (Cheers), in the heart of this great metropolis.

Most of us, here present, are born of the people, and what higher ambition can we have than to work for the people? (Cheers).

The dumb cannot complain and must, therefore, always remain a contented people.

* * * * *

Gentlemen, I again thank you for the great honor you have done me this evening, and I fervently wish for the success of the Calcutta Literary Society. (Loud Applause.)

A vote of thanks to the Chair was proposed by Babu Jnan Chandra Rai, B.A., B.L., in a nice little speech, Mr. L.M. Ghose returned the thanks, and said that it was a mere labour of love to him and that he deserved no thanks at all for a work so dear to his heart. He then declared the Meeting closed. (Vide, Bengalee, 23rd and 27th August, 1906.)

As previously announced in the local papers, the Twelfth Public Meeting, for the session, 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the General Assembly's College, No. 4, Cornhill's Square, on Wednesday, the 7th September, 1904, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Mr. N.N. Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, F.R.S.L., Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Editor, Indian Nation, Principal, Metropolitan College, &c., &c., &c.

The Meeting was largely and influentially attended.

After Babu Shan Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Professor T. L. Vaswani, M. A., (Formerly, Senior Fellow, Sindh Arts' College), to deliver his lecture on :—

The Hindu Ideal :

The learned professor dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour. He was heard with rapt attention. Here is a short syllabus of the lecture :—Universal Humanity has evolved three distinct types of civilization, according, as either Nature, or, Man, or, God has been made the controlling norm, the regulative and constitutive Idea of Experience. These three types are, Viz :—

(a) Cosmcentric—Here thought and life are controlled by the idea of Nature. The ancient Greek, who loved to live in a Vision of Beauty, that slumbers in the universe, and the modern student of science, to whom Nature supplies a sphere of conquest and a realm of utilities, these two illustrate the first type.

(b) Anthropocentric :—

Some of the varieties of this type are :—

- (1) Spartan civilization—controlled by the feeling Patriotism,
- (2) Roman civilization—dominated by the desire dominion and conquest,
- (3) The Eighteenth Century Aufklauring—smitten spirit of analysis and logicalness chopping—standing, and reaching its true resultant in the French Revolution, well-characterised by Carlyle, as Scap clad in hell-fire.

(c) Theo-centric.

The varieties of this type are :—

- (1) The Hebrew civilization,
- (2) The European civilization, during the Middle Ages,
- (3) The Hindu civilization.

The last, however, is differentiated from the first by the fact that, whereas both the Hebrew and the Christian of the Middle Ages, interpreted the theos as supreme, the Hindu interpreted the deus as the spiritualities of the Universe. And this, it is, which gives a clue to the secret of the Hindu Ideal.

Hindu civilization—felt the pressure of the unseen spiritual. Hindu thought has ever been in quest of Absolute unity, the unconditioned, the all—conditioned. The notes of this Unity, according to Hindu thought,

(1) Immanence :—the Divine dwells in the universe. He is not an exile from creation. In the heart of the holy, in the mind upright and lowly, God lives ever. He flings the lights of His glory on the world outside.

(2) Transcendence—the Divine dwells in the universe. But, the Universe does not exhaust His life. The error of those, who level against Hindu thought charge of Pantheism.

Really speaking, the Hindu is not a Pantheist, Pan-en-theist, or, rather a Theopantist. On this account it is that the Hindu speaks of the Universe as Maya. This does not mean, that the Universe is an Illusion, a mere shadow-shape. He does, but mean, that the Universe though having existence, has no subsistence. The Atman upholds the Universe. It is this fact of the absolute dependence of the world on the Absolute, which is expressed by the Hindu Doctrine of Maya.

Add to this, the further thought that this Immanent Transcendent Unity is not only Thought, but, also Love—seeking to heal the heart of human kind, and yet, the analysis of the Infinite of Hindu Thought.

II. Hindu Ideal applied. This Ideal, because a concrete, rich Ideal did not dwell in the ether of Ideas, but, by an immanent necessity reflected itself in concrete activities and institutions of the Ancient Aryans. And then, this Ideal appeared as the Ideal of self-sacrifice or Dharma.

The West of to-day is wedded to the Ideal of individual self-assertion. Hence, the anarchy of imperialism and the cruel statism of modern Europe. Hence, the clangs of arms, the cries of woe, as, if the Heavens had abdicated their Rule.

The Ancient Aryan, however, living in the vision of the Universe, set before himself the Ideal, not of Self-assertion but of Self-abnegation; not of Rights, but of Duties. Ideal of Dharma, or, Self-sacrifice, controlled the conduct of the Ancient Aryans. Thus :—

(a) Elevation,

The Teacher was not a hired mercenary, but, a labourer in the vineyard of the Lord. Vidya was to be dispensed as a free gift.

(b) Hindu House-hold.

The joint family system—what was it, but, a witness to the truth, that each must bear the burden of all?

(c) Hindu Marriage :—

The life of the Hindu wife was meant to be one of Recreation, of service,—of sacrifice. Not the romance, but the service of love was the true tie between the wife and man's. This is illustrated by the stories of Matu and Sita Devi.

The Hindu again looks upon marriage as a sacra not as a civil affair. Hence, he cannot reconcile himself to the Idea of Divorce. The West of to-day, however, begun to interpret Marriage, as a civil affair, and the institution of Monogamy, as not based on any moral or spiritual laws, but, on the economic, physiological, and social

Hindu Motherhood :—

Mother's life is but perpetual ministry of self-sacrifice.

Hindu Widowhood :—

The Hindu widow was meant to be a sister of mercy. The pressure of the unseen was felt here also; the dear departed one was believed to dwell in the unseen universe, on his account, it is that the Hindu cannot reconcile himself to the idea of widow re-marriage.

Thus, the learned Professor illustrated by the Chinese, called the Philosopher's wife.

Hindu Politics :—

The Hindu Rajah was equally a servant of Dharma—as Sri Ramchandra and Dushmanta.

Hindu Politics were controlled by the wisdom of the Rishi. The European Politics of to-day are controlled, by the people, but, by a close Plutocracy.

The Hindu Ethics :—

Not more the Ideal of Renunciation, of actionless action, as its influence felt here; witness teachings of the Gita; renovation, such the teaching of Hindu moralists is possible through world-negation.

Hindu Devotion :—

Words may express aright the feeling of the Hindu to see and possess the purest one, to be at one with the One.

Return to the Hindu Ideal, the one hope of the millions. Tremendous are the forces trying to wrench us from this Ideal to-day. The Hindu Ideal, however, is re-created in the light of Modern thought—re-enforced inspiration of Modern life. The Hindu Ideal is the bed-rock, on which Modern India may build her new Greatness. The death of the Hindu Ideal means, the funeral pyre of India. The longevity of the Hindu Ideal makes one entertain a joyful hope, that the Ishwara, has watched over and guided so long the evolution of India, has reserved her for a glorious future in the new age. The Hindu Ideal, which is the torch of the Divine Revelation, will still be the light of the New Age in India, young with immortal youth and fair with the glory of Ishwara—India crowned with many glories and with many beauties, at last, shall meet the Divine One, whom she hath sought so long; and she shall lay her glories and splendours as a sacrifice at the lotus-seat of the Lord, He—the Paramatman,—whom she has adored. One-in-all, shall open an epochal period in the history of the Race—a period, for which the world is waiting. (Cheers.)

At the conclusion of the lecture, the Chairman wished Shri Brahma Bandhab Upadhyaya to speak a few words on the subject.

The Swamiji thanked the lecturer for his eloquent and active speech, and exhorted the audience to make the Hindu Ideal the form of thought and life. He pointed out, unconsciously, India was living that Ideal—that the thought, which should inspire every Hindu, was sought, that India was meant to be the teacher of the world.

The Chairman then rose and addressed the Meeting for some time. He, after thanking the lecturer, and congratulating the audience, on having heard an address, at once active and interesting, proceeded to point out how before the Greek had formulated it, the Ancient Hindu proposed to himself, the maxim—know thyself. The solution of this problem of self-knowledge was by Hindu sought in self-realization. This Self, which Hindu sought to know, was, by him, interpreted as including both, Body and Mind. This was the true Self of the Hindu Ideal. He pointed out that the West, by its arts and investigations, bearing upon the outer, the material, could only supply the means, but, never the true Self of Existence.

The West might teach us how to prolong life and enjoy its pleasures. But Hindu Ideal, alone, could supply the true end, which is self-realization.

After the learned Professor had finished his speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting for nearly a quarter of an hour. He agreed with the lecturer and thanked him for his very able speech.

The Meeting terminated at 7 P.M., with votes of thanks to the Chairman and the learned lecturer.

(See, Telegraph newspaper, 8th, and Englishman, 9th, September, 1904.)

As previously announced in the local newspapers, the Thirteenth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Duff College, No. 74, Nimtola Street, on Saturday, the 17th September, 1904, at 4 P.M., under the presidency of Mr. Mohini Mohan Chatterji, M.A., B.L., Attorney-at-Law. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary of the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked His Holiness Paramhansa Siva Narayan Swami to deliver his first lecture to the Society on :—

The Teachings of this World :—

The Venerable Paramhansa, in the course of his eloquent lecture, which lasted upwards of two hours and a half and which was listened to with rapt attention, said :—

Gentlemen, it is meet that all, who profess any religion, should cast aside all thoughts of glory and disgrace, of triumph and defeat and selfishness, collective and individual, and with peace at heart and sobriety of understanding come together in a spirit of amity, and with discrimination hold fast to the True substance, who is the Supreme Being—the God worshipped by all.

Let all men seek God to be worshipped by all, and truly know who and where He is. Is He formless and attributeless, or, has He forms and attributes?—Is He the truth?—or, is He falsehood?

Knowing Him truly, let them seek refuge in Him, and do the works, really pleasant in His sight. If God is worshipped without knowledge, as to who He is, and works are done in His name, without knowledge of what pleases Him, then the manifold evils that sadden the heart of man and darken his days, will not take their flight, and peace will not come to abide among men. Of this, there is no doubt.

God has established a relation between means and ends, which it is man's duty to observe. To attempt a severance of that relation can only result in pain. If the end, in view, be to reduce a solid object into ashes, or, to illuminate a dark place, recourse must be had to fire, the God-appointed means to that end.

If, instead, the earth, air or any other element is sought to be bent to the work, the end will never be gained and suffering alone will be the lot of him, who attempts the impossible. The efforts of man avail naught against the law, established by God. Each object in creation can only act in the exercise of the powers, vested in it, by God.

It is, therefore, the first and foremost duty of you all to know, who you are, in reality; and what is your expression in nature or manifest existence and who God—the Dispenser of All Good, really is, and what is His expression in Nature.

Is He un-manifested or expressionless?—Or, is He manifested or expressed? Is He the truth?—Or, is He falsehood? If you say, He is falsehood, then mark this:—Falsehood is falsehood to all, and at all times. Falsehood can never be truth. It is impossible for creation, good or evil, or any thing at all, to proceed from what is naught—from falsehood. If, through ignorance, you should say, God is falsehood, then you, your faith, and your works, good and evil, all things, in short, are false, having no existence, either visible or invisible.

If you say Truth, then Truth is one and secondless. Truth is for ever Truth, and, can never be Falsehood. Truth is Truth to all. Truth is visible Truth, and invisible Truth. Truth merely changes its forms and conditions. He that is Truth, is self-manifest, and, by His own will, is visible and invisible, the cause, the subtle or spirit and the gross or matter, including all that moves and moves not, the male and the female. He is infinite and imperceptible, and His expression is light.

To indicate His two different aspects, two different pairs of words are applied to Him—the Almighty, whose expression is light,—viz :—visible and invisible, attributeless and attributed—manifest and un-manifest, and so forth.

In the latter aspect, He is inconceivable and indescribable. Neither intellect, nor speech can reach Him, as you yourselves are beyond the reach of both, in a state of dreamless sleep. With that aspect or condition, creation has no connection, except, as a negation; no action or movement can arise therein or therefrom. When you awake then only you are a part of creation, desirous of attaining happiness, and avoiding suffering. In the same way, the all-comprehending complete Being expressed as light, with His infinite powers carries on the infinite operations of this universe, and causes the same to be carried on. This Being expressed or manifested as the light, known to us pre-eminently, as the Sun and Moon is the Father, Mother and Teacher and Soul of the Universe. He is the Author and Remover of this world, and its good and evil. From Him proceeds all that moves or moves not—the male and female.

In the whole, infinitude of space, none else beside Him is, was, or will be. It is not possible for another to be. This is true beyond doubt, or denying. Of this all-comprehending Supreme Being, the Veda says that the Sun is His eye, or intelligence. The Moon is His mind, or affections. The Sky is His head, Air, the life-breath, Fire, the mouth. And Water fills the passages in His body, and the Earth is His feet. These different limbs of the Supreme Being are called, differently, astrological planets, gods and goddesses, the eight forms of Siva and so forth. Besides, these limbs, no other gods or goddesses are, or can be.

The reason, why thirty-three millions of gods and goddesses have been imagined by the Puranists is that, out of the different powers or limbs of the Deity, the bodies and faculties of creatures have proceeded.

Imagining different Gods as presiding over or forming the different organs of sensation and action, the numerous hosts of gods and goddesses are conceived as existing.

From each God, or, power or limb of the Supreme particular classes of objects, as also actions or movements within and outside of man are generated, resulting in good or evil to him.

From the limb earth, comes food, flesh and bone. Without the earth, Hindus, Moslems, or, Christians, even, if they could have a physical frame, would die of starvation. From the limb water, comes rain, and men can drink it, or bathe in it, and from it the bodily juice is formed. The want of a glass of water, in time of need, leads to death.

From the limb fire, proceeds hunger and thirst, and the digestion of what is eaten and drunk, and it works the organs of speech. Without fire, the railway steam-engine and other like forms of machinery would be impossible.

The limb air is the life-breath that courses through the nostrils. Its complete absence, for a moment, causes certain death, and its partial inactivity, the loss of the sense of touch. The limb, Akasa which divides the position of one object from another, constitutes the faculty of hearing. Its absence would cause all things to cohere into one mass, and produce deafness in all.

The Light, known as the Moon, is God's mind, which, as the mind of man gives rise to the thought of Mine and Thine, and all concepts of possibility and resolution. If the mind becomes, in any degree, inactive, man becomes incapable of studying. Be it the Veda, the Bible or the Koran.

In unconscious sleep, when the mind ceases to work man ceases to be intelligent. The Light, known as the Sun, the intellectual eye of God, is the intelligence in the brain, which, through the eye, perceives the world of form and colour, and is discriminating between Truth and falsehood.

When this limb withdraws the active light from the eye, that is to say, merges into its cause, unconsciousness rules supreme.

When the living-light dawns on the brain, then consciousness returns to the living body, and carries on the work of life. This Being—the All-comprehending God, whose expression is the Light, known as the Sun and Moon, is the world's beneficent Father, Mother, Teacher and Soul, who, through time, without beginning, has worked the world's good.

All men, Hindus, Moslems and Christians have turned their faces away from Him. And attracted by the vain, un-substantial appearances, or seeming, known as wealth, power and enjoyment, men find their days darkened by discord, envy and hate. Hence has flown the conception of religion as a belief, and not a perception, as an imagining and not the substance, reality, or truth.

As the infant, nourished by the mother's breast, is appreciative of the mother's love, so is man, nourished by the different limbs of God, the Mother of the Universe, the all-comprehending light, perceived by man, as the Sun and Moon, is in-appreciative and un-grateful.

Far from feeling His love they are proceeding on way to destruction, while laughing Him to scorn, they do not consider—what other Father is in the range of existence, beside Him!

If neither this universe, nor what transcends mind and speech, be your Religion, Books of Religion and of Worship, then what are they, and what is the substance that you indicate by the words Religion, the Kora Bible, the Veda, and so forth.

It is self-evident that nothing but this Universe what transcends mind and speech can possibly be. Never was, is, or, will be.

If none of these, what can your God be to find whom Jesus, Mahomet, Rishis and Prophets, together the bodies of words? Are those words, Religion and Religious Books? Are these the names of the creators of those words?—When nothing is, but Universe, and what transcends mind and speech, Religion and Books of Religion must be comprised by these. If not, they are naught.

If you say, that paper and ink are Religion and of Religion, then, all the papers and ink, in the world are Religion and Books of Religion. If sound, the sound that fills the space are these. If, of knowledge of truth, these be the names, then, as the One-Supreme Being, who unites in Himself this Universe, and transcends mind and speech, is the one, only all-comprehending Truth, they cannot be different from Truth. This being so, where is there room for your mutual contention and strife? Men, led away by their individual and collective selfishness, rebel against the rule of God and work the world's woe and their own.

They know not that, in reality, Religion and Books of Religion are the Supreme Being, who comprehend this Universe, and, that, which transcends mind and speech. They work not for the world's weal, but, fight about words and find misery alone, as their lot. (Chaitanya)

After the venerable Svami had finished his speech, the Chairman brought the Meeting to a close, commending the words of the learned Paramhansa to the attention of all present. He thanked the venerable lecturer for his eloquent and instructive speech.

With votes of thanks to the Chair and the venerable Svami, the Meeting dissolved with music and song 7 P. M.

The audience was so much pleased and convinced by the venerable Paramhansa's teachings, that they spontaneously made obsequence to him, when he was passing in his carriage.

(Vide, Amrita Bazar Patrika and Hindu Patrika, Englishman and Telegraph Newspaper, 20th September 1904.)

As previously announced in the local newspapers Fourteenth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the Albion Theatre, No. 6, Beadon Street, on Monday, the 13th September, 1904, at 5 P. M., under the presidency of Mohini Mohan Chatterji, M. A., B. L., Attorney at Law. The Meeting was very largely attended.

After Babu Suman Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary of the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked His Holiness Paramhansa Siv Narayan Swami to deliver his lecture to the Society on—

God and Man's Duty in this World :-

The venerable Paramhansa dwelt upon his subject upwards of an hour, and he was listened to with attention. He said :—Men and women, of all nations, creeds, cast aside all thoughts of glory and dis-tri-umph and defeat, individual and collective selfishness, listen to these words with peace at heart and serenity of mind, and understand the true meaning thereof, so that the world's sufferings may end and creation find peace.

human beings, gifted with intelligence, whereby known from falsehood, and good from evil. This distinction from the brute creations. Else, how man from a beast?—They both feed, propagate

If any one tells us that, though alive, we are dead ghosts, shall we, without thinking, shriek: are ghosts—we are ghosts!

Crow is accused of flying off with our ears, shall we the crow, without feeling for our own ears first? In manner, is it right for us to believe all, we hear? Soul, the Visible and the Invisible, the animate, inanimate, truth and false-hood, duty and evil; and as to peace—fight against one another in the fury? Must we not pause and ponder over what the touching the matters mentioned?

Man, who knows what really is, his wisdom, and alone have peace. Let all men search after ally is—the true Being. To Him, who, self, transcends the real or truth and the un-falsehood, are applied in the Scriptures, and, according to the ways of men, two sets of expressions, such truth, reality, or Being, and the false-hood, un-reality, being. Of these, non-being is, for all, non-existent.

From non-being, nothing can come.

Soul, the visible and invisible, the animate and the inanimate, Deity and evil cannot be non-Being. Secondless Being can never be non-Being—From its own standpoint, or, in itself, cannot be evil, the visible and the invisible, the animate or inanimate, Deity or evil. None of these names is applicable from that standpoint, or, in itself. According to fiction of forms, attributes, and modes of existence—the same substance, or Being is called God, Soul, and the other names.

A transcendent formless, attributeless aspect, no form, or qualities perceptible to be called God, or, Deity or Evil. Each one of us can see this, if we in attention to what we are in deep, dreamless, unconscious sleep. In that condition we are what we are. Now not if we are, or, God is, nor any good or evil. We awake we know we are. God is, Deity, and evil. In the opposite aspect of Being, God, Soul and evil are present before our eyes. In the gross form, is perceptible to all our senses, God and Soul, are. In the subtle form, God and Soul are Light, or, of God? This truth is embodied in the concluding of the holy Gayatri—Om apah Jyoti Raso Mritam. The all-comprehending Supreme Being Brahma—water or savour that creatures enjoy, and the light or Deity.

Water, through modifications, comes the earth, and metals, vegetables and physical bodies of all, which constitute the objects of enjoyment for individual. The Light, manifested in existence—the Sun and Moon, is the Spirit of Immortality and in creatures as the Soul.

In its complete aspect God comprehends the two aspects—spoken of, expressed and transcendent, and is Deity.

His duty must be according to his needs. What are his needs?—His needs are two-fold; Viz:—Temporal or External, Spiritual or Internal.

What needs he Spiritually?—The direct perception of God, Soul—as One. This is the consummation of existence. Without this perception, man's troubles never end, and peace will never be his!

Direct perception is the very highest glory and joy. What are his temporal needs?—He needs relief from hunger, thirst, cold and heat, disease and infirmity. Man's temporal needs are based upon his nature, which nothing can change.

His duty is accordingly two-fold; Viz:—Temporal, Spiritual.

Therefore, the duty of every man and woman, and of boys and girls, from tender infancy, inculcate the duty of wisdom, so that, hate, strife and contention may find no place in their hearts, so that, when they grow up, they may be, in the language of this country's Scriptures, Equal-sighted, i.e.:—looking on all creatures, as their own souls, and the forms of God and working for the happiness of all, as for their own.

It is necessary that children should be taught the appropriate remedies for distempers of the body, the proper selections of food, as to quantity and kind, the preservation of the strength of body and mind, by avoiding shameful abuses.

Some useful knowledge should be taught them whereby they can, in time, earn their own living and maintain others in peace and health, so that, none may lack what life needs.

With great care, they should be taught to preserve natural cleanliness, not conventional purity, of body and speech, and of all articles of use, and the whole of the surroundings, in fact, of earth, water, fire and air.

For his Spiritual welfare, man needs neither opinion nor rituals. Desiring the spirit of truth or direct perception, that sets him free and gives Salvation to him, bow down to the all-comprehending Supreme Being, transcendent and yet manifested as light.

Let him call on Him inwardly by the simple formula Om Sat-Guru,—the real Being and teacher; Om, or God the all-comprehending Supreme Being. Let him make offerings in that form of God, which is called fire, of things sweet to taste and smell, so that, the purity of all things moving and inert, may be maintained, and man's body remain undefiled. Do this and do naught else. Thus, acting all men, prince and peasant, will gain the true end of existence—temporal and spiritual.

For God will then, out of His own goodness, remove the world's burden of woe, and the whole creation will rejoice in exceeding joy. If you leave this undone, and do all else, by whomsoever enjoined, the creation will, as now groan in pain. This is true, without doubt or question.

If you use your limbs and senses in obedience to God's law, the exertion gives pleasure, and the end is gained. If you act contrarily, you are foiled of your end, and overtaken by suffering upon suffering. If, transgressing the law of God, you desire to see with your ears, sight is denied you and the effort is painful. If you seek to walk on your head, a like fate is yours.

If, instead of tilling the earth for food, you till the empty air, all of you, Hindus, Muslims, Christians, and others will starve. If you seek to quench your thirst in fire, you may lose your life, but, your thirst will stay. If you resort to light else but light to remove darkness, you may fall into a pit, but the darkness will not lift. To every end, be it temporal or spiritual, there is an appropriate means which none may set aside.

To nourish and sustain the physical body, food and drink are necessary. Without these, your health and strength will soon begin to fail. But, who shall nourish and sustain the subtle essence, called Soul?—Om, the All-comprehending Supreme Being, the Giver of All Good, whose expression is Light—the Sun and Moon. He will crown you with strength, wisdom and true perception. In union with God you will abide in ever-lasting joy.

In the aspect, called cause or substance, there is neither preservation, nor destruction. What is, is for ever. The true worship of God, consists in fulfilling with discrimination, the needs of the gross or material, called the body and the subtle, or essence, called the Soul. Thus, in all things, receiving the truth, attain to supreme joy. (Cheers.)

Om Santi!—i.e. Be the peace of God with you all. After the venerable Sri Sriji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words and thanked the lecturer.

With votes of thanks to the Chair, and the venerable lecturer, the Meeting dissolved at 7 p. m.

(Vile, Englishman, 28th, Telegraph, 29th, and Hind Patriot, 30th September, 1904.)

As previously announced in the local Newspapers, the Fifteenth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Sankar Ghose's Lane, Cornwallis' Street, on Wednesday, the 5th October, 1904, at 4-30 p. m., under the presidency of Pandit Sati Chandra Vityabhushan, M. A., Professor of Sanskrit, Presidency College, Calcutta. The Meeting was very large and well attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary, Calcutta Literary Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked His Holiness Paramhansa Siva Narayan Swami to deliver his Third lecture to the Society on—

What is God.

The venerable Paramhansa very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour, and he was listened to with rapt attention. He said :—

Gentlemen, cast aside all thoughts of glory and disgrace, triumph and defeat and social and individual selfishness. Listen to these words and understand the true meaning thereof ; so that, you may know the God—you worship. With true knowledge, establish your hearts on Him and abide in everlasting joy—as joy itself.

The light, that is true knowledge, is in all men and, by God's grace, it can discover all that is hidden. But judge not according to appearances or the opinions of men. Run not after the crowd, because, some one says it has flown off with your ears. Feel for the ears first. Consider, what is it men call intelligence. You see its works. By its presence, you know you are and can distinguish objects.

But what is it? You do not know. If this intimate entity is not known, how can any thing else be truly known? You are intelligent in the present moment ; but, in dreamless slumber, you are unintelligent or unconscious. What is absent then? The body remains, as it now is ; the breath of life, in its regular pulsation, keeps the blood in motion and the body from death. All is as before, but one thing alone is wanting—i. e. light or intelligence.

Is this intelligence visible and manifest, or invisible and unmanifest? These are the only possible aspects of existence. If it is unmanifest, it is beyond the reach of thought and speech ; as is the case with you in the unconsciousness of deep slumber.

Then vanishes the thought I am ; and the thought God is, or the world is non-existent, if possible, in a greater degree. Discrimination or perception of distinct objects being intelligence itself, it cannot be where discrimination is not. Intelligence, thus, is not the invisible, and unmanifest. If it is visible and manifest, there need be no difficulty in its ascertainment.

Vast and limitless, as the universe is, it consists of a definite and limited number of elements or principles, corresponding to our senses and faculties. From this point of view, the most Holy Scriptures of this country teach that the whole universe is one Person, called Virat, or the Great Lord, whose various limbs are the earth, water, fire, air, akasa and light or manifestation, in its dual aspect of warm and cold—Sun and Moon. This Person, including you all, male and female, and all that is moving or moveless, is eternal, self-existent, and complete.

Religious controversies of the world rage around questions relative to the nature of this Being. By the mental process of abstraction, some separate His substance from His powers and attributes as also the external manifestation of His existence. Rejecting all manifestation as illusory, they receive and declare the one attributeless, actionless, transcendent God. Others, neglecting the external, as created and perishable, proclaim the God of Theists, unifying the substance with the powers and attributes. Others, again, repudiate the one substance as an abstraction, accept the external alone, wholly or in part, endow it with intelligent attributes, and range themselves under the different standards of Pantheism and Polytheism. But, He remains what He was, is, and for ever will be—the Complete Being—while men reap the whirlwind of sorrow and suffering, having sown the wind of contention and hate.

If intelligence is manifest, it must be comprised within what are called the limbs of Virat. If you say, it is earth, it is nothing but your flesh and bones ; if water, it is your blood, serum, and the bodily juices ; if fire, your powers of digestion and utterance ; if air, your breath of life ; if akasa, it is the openings in your body, seemingly empty.

If you say, it is light, the discussion comes to an end ; the light of the world is seen as the light within. If the combination of the five elements be taken to be intelligence, then mark this :—Your own body is that combination. In unconscious, dreamless slumber, the same body and breath remain, and yet intelligence is withdrawn. Who is, then, your intelligence, that is, yourself as known to you !

Not knowing intelligence within, you look upon Light as the sum of all individual intelligence, as unintelligence, disregard the great sources of light—the Sun and Moon as inferior, un-intelligent existence. Whose is the power active within you as the thought I am, and by the drawal of which, that thought vanishes in dreamless sleep.

You do not see, that He, who, as external light, is manifesting the universe of names and forms, manifests within the thought I am. External light being withdrawn, see nothing ; but, the thought I am persists. But when light is withdrawn, from within your body, this thought disappears, and you are plunged in dark unconsciousness.

The breath of life alone preserves your body from corruption, as the spirit of wine preserve a body dead. Labor and the rest are the law of the universe, which even the life-breath follows. It is alternately in the left and right nostrils ; thus divided, the life-breath watches over the body, as sentinels, with periodic check and watch over a fort besieged. When life-breath goes, the body dies. Herein lies the difference between sleep and death.

This is spiritual blindness that you see within intelligence, but not light and outside light, but not intelligence. And this blindness is the source and spring of all sufferings. But, light is intelligence, and intelligence is light. The same Person is light and intelligence.

He is within and without, the complete Being. As He sees thus sees truly. This true sight is wisdom and wisdom is peace. He, that lacks true sight, lacks wisdom and without wisdom, there cannot be peace.

Seek refuge in Him ; and perceive the identity of what is without and what is within, by examining them within you. What is not in you, is nowhere, and what is anywhere within you. You have seen that the five elements or forms form your physical body and life. But, you do not know what you call yourself, your mind or feelings and your intelligence. The cold light, called the moon, is the mind, relates things to you as mine and thine, and so warm light, called the sun, is the intelligence. Our God, as light, is ruling the world ; inside, the same God, as yourself, is discriminating between truth and error. See with the eye, hearing with the ear, smelling with the nose and tasting with the tongue.

Of you, the three states, Viz :—waking, dreaming, unconsciousness, daily alternate. You are in the form, when awake ; in the moon form, when dreaming ; and in the form of darkness, when unconscious in sleep. As in all these conditions, you are the same person, one and changeless—so, the one light, including the called you, remains the same, whether as the sun, moon, or darkness—manifest and unmanifest, immanent and transcendent. The one person, including you all, is complete, comprehending, eternal, self-existent, impartible and indivisible.

Think not of any superiority between the manifest and unmanifest, as possessing attributes or devoid of attributes. The Being is what He is. His aspects are two, Viz :—manifest and unmanifest, and the other pairs of opposites. In the unmanifest, invisible aspect, He is the cause ; in the manifest, visible aspect, He is the effect. The cause cannot be the effect without the effect, nor can the effect be the effect without the cause. In the unmanifest aspect, He does not manifest in the aspect of manifestation or light, He does all, done, spreading out as the names and forms, which are taken to be the universe. The substance, in relation to names and forms, is called the cause. In Himself, the all-comprehending, complete Being—He is what He is. So, cast aside all doubts, and find peace in Him. Santi i. e.—The peace of God be with you all. (Chaitanya.)

After the venerable Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the venerable Swamiji for his very able and instructive speech.

With votes of thanks to the Chair and the venerable lecturer, the Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P.M.

(Vide, Hindu Patriot, 6th October, 1904.)

As previously announced in the local newspaper, the Sixteenth Public Meeting, for the session 1904, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the City College, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, 6th October, 1904, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Mohini Mohan Chatterji, M. A., B. L., Attorney-at-Law. The Meeting was largely attended.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked His Holiness Srimat Paramhansa Siv Narayan to deliver his Fourth lecture to the Society on:—

What is Truth:—

The venerable Paramhansa very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly two hours, and he was heard with rapt attention. He said:—

Hindus, Moslems and Christians, Pandits, Moulvis and others, cast aside all thoughts of glory and disgrace, hatred and strife, of individual and collective selfishness. Mark well, these words, and seek after the temporal and ritual well-being of all men and your own.

Men, in reality, know not God, Religion and the Books of Religion. Quarrelling over the Veda and the Bible, the Ran and the Puran, they fancy, that the God, worshipped by the one, is not the God, worshipped by the other. Thus thinking, they fall under the power of hate, strife and mutual recriminations and wander in the mazes of unrest lost. They do not reflect what Religion really is, what the Books of Religion really are, and Who God really is—what the substance really is, which is called by the name of God. He, who has not true discrimination between substance and form, cannot have true wisdom. And, without wisdom, where is peace? From discrimination comes wisdom, from wisdom peace.

It is the duty, therefore, of all human beings to reflect on the nature of the substance, which is indicated by the name Religion, the Books of Religion, or the God worshipped. The substance can only be apprehended by discrimination between what passes away and what abides ever.

Consider, then, whether the substance, indicated by these names, is itself formless and devoid of attributes, or, possessed of both. If the former, then, it is the transcendent Deity, beyond the reach of mind and speech. The mind mindeth Him not, the speech speaketh Him not. Where thought dieth and speech groweth dumb, how is reflection or discrimination?

Even now, when your faculties of mind and speech are locked in deep, dreamless slumber, all thoughts of Self, Religion and Books of Religion, of God worshipped, of plurality and nothingness—the very thought of existence and non-existence—are not.

When you awake, and mind and speech are set free, then comes the reflection concerning Religion, Books of Religion, Self and God. From this, you can see that, reflection and discrimination cannot be, where mind and speech are not; that is to say, these are in that, which has no mind and attributes.

That, which has form and attributes, constitutes the vehicle of thought and sense—mind and speech. This vehicle unites with what transcends mind and speech in

All-comprehending Supreme Being. He, in reality, our Religion, our Books of Religion and the Object of our worship.

Is neither this universe, nor what transcends mind and speech, be your Religion, Books of Religion and the Object of worship, then, what are they and what is the substance by you indicated by the words God, Religion, the Koran, Bible, the Veda, and so forth? It is self-evident that nothing but this universe, and what transcends mind and speech, can possibly be—never was, is, or will be.

Gentlemen, what can your God, Religion and Religious Books be, if neither of these is to find Jesus, Mahomet, his Prophets and Paigambers, strung together bodies of words, God, Religion and Religious Books? Or, are these names of the transcribers of those works?—When nothing is but this universe and what transcends mind and speech, then God, Religion and Books of Religion must be apprehended by these. If not, they are naught.

If you say, that paper and ink are God, Religion and Books of Religion, then, the whole of the papers and ink, record offices, are God, Religion and Books of Religion.

Sound, then, the sounds that fill space are these. If knowledge of truth these be the names, then, as the one Supreme Being, Who unites in Himself this universe, and what transcends mind and speech is the one, only comprehending Truth, they cannot be different from Him. This being so, where is there room for your mutual contention and strife?

Men, led away by their individual and collective selfishness, rebel against the rule of truth and work the world's woe and their own. They know not that, in reality, God, Religion and Books of Religion are the Supreme Being, Who comprehends this universe, and that which transcends mind and speech. They work not for the world's weal but, fight only about words, and find misery alone, at their lot.

Men know not God, though, He is their own. Not knowing God, they hold fast to the opinions of men about God, Religion and Holy Books, surrendering freedom of the soul to sectarian dogmas and practice touching the food, wherewith to nourish the body and the garments wherewith to clothe their nakedness.

Each religion, each sect, belauds what is its own and decries what is another's. Each seeks to drag the other to the path, by imagination traced, which it calls its own. Of God, each makes its peculiar property which, save for its leave, none else may claim.

God remains what He is, has been, and ever will be and men gather from the thorn-bushes of hate, contention and strife, the fruits of suffering, sorrow and sin. Forgetful of their own blindness, they stretch out their hands to those they call blind.

If a physician, who knows not his craft, hurts the body he would heal, the King condemns him and the people cast him away. Think ye, God has no terrors for those who destroy a soul by His hand made? Better to be ignorant than wise in one's own conceit.

It behoves us all to reflect what in reality is the God we worship, the Religion we follow, the Book we believe in, the sect we belong to, and the practice we observe. Wherein lies the difference we condemn in those, not our mind?

Ye, proud men of intellect, pause and ponder. Ere the body was born, what knew ye of God, Parameswar, Alla, Parabrahma and the legion of other divine names? What knew ye of the books, or the tongues of men? Even this ye knew not that ye were, much less that God was.

No one is born with the wisdom, of which he boasts. Naked were ye born in mind as in body. Ye have learned to clothe your minds with impressions, as you bodies with garments, but, understanding from you is far away. And, now with your intellects, diving down into the bowels of the earth and soaring into the empyrean of heaven, ye seek to unsceptre the Almighty hand.

What know ye, when this tiny spark of light within you is obscured in dreamless sleep? Many a dog may lie on your lips and a cancerous cripple expose your nakedness. The intellect will not reveal the time, your limbs will wither in sickness, or your lives be despoiled by death.

Daily is seen the glowing mind, the burning intellect laid low by a woman's glance, the glitter of gold or the empty praises of the popular tongue. Must not very shame then, wash away your pride and humble your hearts? Your minds are confused, your senses are led astray by the juggler's art. With what ye measure the measureless might of the Almighty God? He alone is the master, and holds the key to the Truth which is Himself.

Sages and Saints, Prophets and Paigambers, Avatars and Incarnations, men say, light their paths. But, what know they of the Truth in their own hearts? Each dreams his visions true and knows not the dreams of another man.

The dreams shall die, but the truth shall abide for ever. The teacher teaches what he is taught, the prophet says what he can hear, the incarnation fulfills his end. But, God lives everlastingly, the same without change, and He is the Truth.

What men hear in childhood, they believe in youth and retain to the end, scattering woes and gathering pain as the price of false fidelity. The dualist and the non-dualist, the believer in a formless God, and in a God with form, the professors of nature and of nothingness, are all captives to the figments of their own minds.

Blessing their own impressions as truth and damning those of others as falsehood, they bear the brand of suffering on their souls; while Truth, one and secondless, dwells impenetrable in its own serenity. Let men, of all conditions, colours and creeds, approach with humble and prayerful hearts, and join in the quest of truth.

What exists, is true ; what seems, is false. 'The All-comprehending Supreme Being, whose expression or manifestation is light, is the only truth. Besides Him, all else is false, for the reason that it is not. The thought that the many are distinct and different from the Supreme being, is false ; that the many are one and God, is true.

The truth is true to all and for ever, the false is false to all and for ever. Without the perception of truth, there is no wisdom. Without wisdom, no peace. The wise man, having realized the one Soul in all, seeks to give his own peace—God's peace to all, so that all may abide in joy for ever.

It is the duty of all men to find the true being or substance. What is the God men worship? Consider these words, and receive the truth. If He is formless and without attributes, He cannot be spoken by speech or thought by the mind, nor can He be sensed by any of the senses.

In Him, the three conditions of consciousness and unconsciousness and semi-consciousness of dreaming cannot be thought in Him is impossible. In a state of unconsciousness, when mind and speech are suspended, no thought or reflection can exist. When that condition is replaced by consciousness, mind and speech emerge into activity and each one follows his previous impressions.

If your God, by any name called, has forms and attributes, then remember, He that is formless and devoid of attributes, is Himself, through time without beginning, expressed or manifested, as the universe before you, including yourself.

This is the manifested God, whom the ancient people of India used to call Virat, the Great Lord. The Sun is His eye, the Moon His mind, and Fire is His mouth, and the senses and their appropriate objects, (commonly called the elements), are His different limbs.

He, that is beyond forms and attributes, is all these forms and attributes. The many are but one and the one is secondless. All beings are but His limbs and members. In Him and by Him arise the aforesaid three conditions, which constitute the sphere of our existence. Beyond Him, nothing is.

If your religion, your Book, your sect, and your distinctive marks and vestments be real, they must be formless or have forms. In either case, they cannot be many. The formless cannot be subject to division. That which has form, must be a limb or member of the Great Lord. If they be any or all of these, how can they be many? The same earth, that is in you, is in all the rest? Every one of the divine limbs is universally present, not divided by creed and class ; the limbs are but one, as forming one indivisible whole.

If, again, the physical body is your Religion, Book, or Sect, you can see, the same material constitutes the body of all ; if the mind and senses, it will be the same. If the individual soul [jivatma] is these, see, then, the one God is manifested in all as the individual soul. All souls are but the sparks of that one Divine Fire. If none of these be, they are not at all.

Therefore, cast aside all hate and uncharity ; bursting the bonds of sectarian, religious and social selfishness, search out and hold fast to God, who is truth, and work the world's weal and your own. This is Salvation, this is Nirvan and this is Mukti. Om Santie : The peace of God be with you all? (Cheers).

After the venerable Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words, and thanked the Swamiji for his eloquent and instructive speech.

With votes of thanks to the Chair and the venerable Swamiji, the Meeting dissolved at 7 p. m. (Vide, Hindu Patriot, 7th October, 1904.)

As previously announced in the local Newspapers the Seventeenth Public Meeting, for the session 1894, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held, with great clat, at the Minerva Theatre, No. 6, Beadon Street, on the 20th November, 1904, at 8 A. M., under the presidency of Khan Bahadur Shujat Ali Beg, Representative of Her Highness the Nawab Begum Sahiba of Murshidabad, C.I. The Meeting was very largely attended.

The Chairman having read a letter from His Highness the Maharajah Gaekwar Sahib of Barada State, G. C. S. I. (one of the illustrious Members of the Society), regretting His Highness' presence at the Meeting, owing to His Highness' other engagements, Babu Sham L. Day, Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, (held at the hall of the City College, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 6th October, 1904 at 5 P.M.), which were duly confirmed.

The Chairman then asked His Holiness Srimat Janghansiv Naraiyan Swami to deliver his Fifth lecture to the Society on—

What substance is meant by the name God.

The venerable Parabrahma very ably dwelt upon subject for nearly an hour, and he was heard with attention. He was eloquent throughout the delivery of his excellent speech. He said :

Men of diverse religious sects contend against one another, touching the Duality and non-Duality of the Godhead, the procession of the Universe from the Deity, formlessness or corporeality, and other like themes. Rancour and hate, with which the fight is fought, trou the mind with vexations manifold. Therefore, lend you readers—Hindus, Moslems and Christians, Pandit Moulvis and others,—hold fast to the God, who is transcending aside all vain and selfish thoughts. In peace, heart and sobriety of understanding receive, with discernation, the truth touching the matters set forth. Search the commandments of God, who is the only true religion, and by fulfilling them, achieve the world's weal which is your own.

Of those, who profess a faith in God, some say that all-comprehending, Omnipotent Supreme Being is formless and, therefore, nothing that has form is to be respected. While others maintain that God is to be worshipped as possessed of forms and, therefore, the formless is not worth of worship. There are certain other cognate topics, that require consideration, so that, the truth may be reached to receive. Some say, that this visible universe, with that moves and all that moves not, has proceeded from a portion of the Deity. Others assert, that there was, in beginning, something distinct from God, wherewith the world was created. A third class again hold, that God alone was, and nothing else was, in beginning ; the creation sprang up in His mind and creation started its existence.

In order to arrive at a correct conclusion, it is necessary in the first place, to ascertain the reason why God is to be omnipotent, all-comprehending and one. God comprehending in Himself all forms and the formless, names, attributes, and actions as well as the individual being, is one, impartible, omnipotent, and infinite. Leaving out the individual being, His name, form, attributes and actions, the Supreme Being, call Him God, Al Iswar or Parabrahma, cannot be All-comprehending Omnipotent. Comprehending this visible universe, with its members, in the shape of the earth, water, fire, air, as the Sun, the Moon, the stars, the lighting, and so forth, all individual beings, as well as what is formless, is All comprehending, Omnipotent and One. In this infinitude of Being, how can there be any other Existe All-comprehending, Omnipotent or not?

In calling a tree all-comprehending and possessed all attributes, you necessarily include in it the root, branches, trunk, fruit, leaves, and so forth, as also qualities of sweetness, bitterness, and the rest. By leaving out a single one of these, the tree cannot be all-comprehending, or possessed of all attributes ; such a proposition would render the conception of the tree imperfect and incomplete. Similarly, by including in Him the whole of this Universe, moving and moveless, names, forms, attributes, and powers, as well as what is formless. God is all-comprehending or potent, and one. If any limb of the universe or quality or power, is left out, the God-conception becomes defective and incorrect. Therefore, the formless can be all-comprehending or omnipotent without that which has form, nor the latter without the former.

Concerning the theory of creation, which supposes God, by His omnipotence, has, out of nothing, that is to say, what is unreal, created this world, and given it appearance of reality, it is to be seen that, if by His creative will, out of the unreal, God has brought this world being, it will go back into the unreal or nothing, when so wills.

Gentlemen, what has come out of the unreal, will go back into it. If the world has proceeded from the real, it will ain for ever. It would only change its aspects. From the domain of the senses, it would change into the region of mind-perception, and thence into the condition of cause, and yourselves arise the conditions of waking, dreaming and aimless slumber.

If you, who are included in creation, are un-real, then, faith, works, wisdom, and the God you worship, are un-real. What is un-real and false can never know what is real and true.

The real alone can know the real. Children of earth, who are real, are themselves real, and so, are faith, works and wisdom. From un-real parents, real children can only be born. The sprout must follow the nature of the seed; the contrary is not possible. From real God, an unreal creation cannot spring forth.

What is really intended by saying that God is real and would un-real, if this—our conception of the world, as something distinct from God and yet real, is false. By way of illustration, if water is taken as the substance and real, notions of bubbles, ice, clouds and the rest, as distinct hues from the water, must necessarily be false.

In reality, underneath the various theories of creation, concealed one and the same truth. That God, following His resolution, expresses or manifests Himself as creation, by His will, He creates in Himself the appearance of world, whereby, what were nought are, or, that a portion of Himself, He fashioned into the world—of these notions the such is precisely the same.

According to all these statements, the material of which the world is made, as well as that, by which it is made, is the Will of God: the whole world is but God's will, the sharpness of the sword is not distinct from the sword, so, this world, which, in reality, is God's will, is nothing different from God.

If you had all, not proceeded from God, and partaken of His nature, then why should He have lovingly provided all your wants? He gives food to your hungry mouths and water to your thirsty lips. He has given you means for your nakedness and medicines for your bodily aches. He has expressed Himself as the light of heaven, to dispel the darkness of your ignorance and to remove all needs, temporal and spiritual. No one does this, but Himself. If He had not been your own, and you His, once would have come all your love and veneration for Him and your ceaseless desire for willing service in His name.

Let the children of God, casting aside all un-charity and contention, unite in His love, and achieve their own salvation and the world's good. The Father of many children, loved and obeyed by them all, will, with abundant love, increase their joys through time and eternity.

But, men have forsaken their God, the children know not their own Father; and, hence, flow all their woes. Search ye after God, henceforth, with discrimination. Without discrimination, Truth is not perceived. Without knowledge of truth, there can be no wisdom; and without wisdom, no peace. Oh! Santi, (i. e.) the peace of God be with you all (Cheers.)

After the Venerable Swamiji had finished his speech, the Chairman brought the Meeting to a close, with a nice little speech. He dilated upon the merits of the venerable Swamiji, and proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, for his interesting and instructive speech.

Several Bengali songs were then sung by Babu Amulya Charan Mukerjee, which enchanted the huge audience.

The Meeting dissolved at 10 A.M., with votes of thanks to the Chair and the venerable Swamiji.

(Vide, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 21st, and Hindu Patriot and Telegraph Newspaper, 22nd, November, 1904.)

The Inaugural Meeting was presided by Pandit Satish Chandra Vidya Bhattacharya, M.A., Professor of Sanskrit, Presidency College, Calcutta, with a nice introductory speech. He expressed his very great pleasure to preside at such a joyful Meeting and He solemnly prayed to God for its entire success.

The Meeting terminated at 10 P.M., with a sumptuous feast to the distinguished Ramayan Party and others, interested.

TO SHAM LALL DAY, Esq.,

Founder and Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society,

SIR,

No. 24, NIMTOLA STREET, CALCUTTA.

As I have long been known to you, in connection with the Calcutta Literary Society, I have thought it fit to attach your portrait to the printed Report of the Society, with a short sketch of your life, and the genealogy of your ancestors.

Your life has chiefly been devoted to the work of the Society, and you have taken no employment like your worthy fore-fathers, either under Government, or, in a Mercantile Firm.

It is a blessing that you were born of respectable parents, who had an independent means of livelihood. Your venerable father, the late Babu Radha Nath Day, (who was born in May, 1819, and died on Monday, the 18th October, 1897, at 9-30 A.M., at the ripe old age of seventy-eight), was well-known, as the proprietor of the oldest and respectable firm of Messrs Day & Company, General Merchants, Commission Agents, Printers, Publishers, &c., &c., &c.

The Firm was first established by your grand-father Babu Gora Chand Day, in the year 1795, or, upwards of a century and ten years ago, under the name and style of Gora Chand Day. When your father took charge of the firm, he altered its name into that of Day & Company. Your father was the first Indian, on this side of India, who made direct indents for books, &c., from foreign countries. The Main Firm was located at No. 10, Dalhousie Square, East, Calcutta.

The Entrance-Course of the Calcutta University for the year 1872, and many useful school books were published by the Firm of Messrs Day & Company, which rendered immense service to the education of Indian Youths.

In recognition of your father's services, the Government patronized the Firm of Messrs Day & Company, and with permission, your father used the words "By Appointment to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and His Excellency General the Right Hon'ble the Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in India, &c., &c., &c."

You were born on Wednesday, the 19th September, 1850, (or, 4th Ashwin, 1267 B. S.). At the early age of five, you were sent to the Ahmerpetla Government-Aided Banga Vidyalaya. In 1869, you were transferred to the Calcutta Government Sanskrit College, afterwards to the Hare-School, and thence to the Hindu-School, and, finally, to the General Assembly's College.

When a boy, you had a tendency for literary pursuits. At the early age of fifteen, you established a Literary Society, (under the designation of the Calcutta Literary Society), in the year 1875, in commemoration of the visit to Calcutta of His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, then, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

The Society was first located at the Calcutta Government Normal School, (then situated at No. 83, Upper Chitpur Road, Jorasanko), with its first President, Babu Gopal Chandra Banerjee, Head Master, Calcutta Government Normal School, Babu Nabo Gopal Mitra, Editor, National Paper, as Vice-President, you as its Secretary, with a council of three members.

The Society had its second President the late Revd. Dr. K.S. Macdonald, M.A., Principal, Duff College. He was succeeded by the late Mr. Mahendra Nath Bhattacharyya, M.A., B.L., (Author of several works), and lastly, by his brother Dr. J. N. Bhattacharyya, M.A., Law Examiner of the Calcutta University. The office of the Society has been located at No. 24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta since the year 1885 and the Institution has been flourishing during the last Thirty years.

You also established Four Schools, under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society. One at No. 50, Nanda Ram Sen's Street, Sova Bazar, called the Calcutta School, on the 1st March, 1883; the second, at No. 196, Bow Bazar Street, called the Calcutta School, Bow Bazar Branch, on the 24th July, 1884; the third, at Haraganj Road, Salkea, (Bowrah), called the Calcutta School, Salkea Branch, on the 20th November, 1885; and, the fourth, at No. 81, Pranasi Ghose's Street, called the Calcutta School, Jorasanko Branch, on the 5th April, 1886.

These Institutions rendered great service to the cause of education, a large number of poor and indigent boys being admitted there not only free, but, who, also, received free board and lodging, for nearly a decade, in which about Thirty-two-thousand Rupees were spent.

The Society owes its present prosperity only to your indefatigable labors. I had the honor of being present at many of its meetings and worked as its Vice-President for years, and can fully testify to your zeal, in the cause of Indian progress.

I need not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Calcutta Literary Society, the printed proceedings of its various public meetings, in Calcutta, published in the leading local news papers, and in the Report Books of the Society for the last thirty years, bear ample testimony to them.

The Letters of Congratulation, which you have received from the distinguished Members of the Calcutta Literary Society and other illustrious personages, on the auspicious occasion of your marriage, held on Monday, the 7th June, 1885, (or, 25th Jaista, 1303 B. S.), at the age of twenty-five, and the Letters of Condolence, which you have received on the melancholy death of your illustrious father, on Monday, the 18th October, 1897, (or, 14th Kartik, 1304 B. S.), and that of your venerable mother, on Monday, the 9th February, 1903, (or, 26th Magh, 1309 B. S.), testify to your respectability and character.

These letters will be found printed in the Anniversary Proceedings of the Society, published for the years 1886, 1897 and 1903 respectively. (Vide, Report Book, Part II, page 4 and page 45; & Part VII., page I.).

I wish you a long, happy and prosperous life and hope you will continue your good work for many years to come, when the people will appreciate more your labours in the cause of education.

Yours Sincerely

Gobin Chandra Dhar

Vice-President, Calcutta Literary Society,

(Now a Govt. Pensioner),

Minister's Secretariat Department.

The Letters were heard with attention.

Gentlemen, it is with profound regret, I have to announce the death of the following Members of the Society, during the year 1904, viz.:-

Pandit Jogendra Nath Vidya Bhushan, M. A., B. L.
Editor, Arya Darsan, and Babu Rama Nath Ghose, Zemindar of Calcutta.

The Office of the Society was closed one day on each occasion, to mark its respect and esteem for the deceased.

The Calcutta Literary Society was inaugurated in the year Eighteen-hundred and Seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, and, it is with considerable satisfaction, I find, that it has continued to exist for the last Twenty-nine years, by the grace of God—a fact, on which we may all well congratulate ourselves. (Cheers.)

The Objects of the Society are to hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities, and to discuss Social, Literary and Scientific subjects. The Society has been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled under one common platform.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of various Public Meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary historical and antiquarian interest. (Cheers.)

THE CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY.

I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of its various public Meetings, published in the leading local newspapers, bear ample testimony to them. (Cheers.)

Now, the grateful thanks of the Society are given to its illustrious Patrons, for their taking unabated interest in its welfare; to the Gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its various public Meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasion; and to the Members of the Press for publishing its proceedings, from time to time. (Cheers.)

In conclusion, I fervently pray, that by the blessings of Providence, the Society may go on prospering in its career of usefulness, year after year. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, which was duly confirmed, the pupils of the Industrial Home and School for the Blind entertained the audience with another song.

The Hon'ble Chairman, Nawab Fatch Ali Khan Kazilbash Sahib, C.I.E., the Panjab Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, then rose amidst cheers and addressed the assembly, in Urdu, for nearly half an hour. He congratulated the Society and wished the Institution every success. The Hon'ble Chairman said:—

"Gentlemen, first of all, it behoves me to express my sincere thankfulness to the Patrons and Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, who have been so kind as to nominate me their Chairman, at this their Twenty-ninth Anniversary Meeting. (Cheers.)

I thought, at first, to deliver my short address in English, but, as all present here are exclusively Indians, have preferred to speak to you, in my own Native tongue,—Urdu. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, this is not the first time, that I have come to your midst, as a Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, but, previous to this, I had to come here to take part as a Representative of the Government of the Panjab, in a Commission, during the administration of the Most Hon'ble the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K. G., P. C., L. D., G. C. S. I., G. C. I. E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, in 1888. (Cheers.)

On both these occasions, I had had ample opportunities of observing the manners and customs of our brethren of Bengal, who have made greater progress in the field of education, than their fellow-subjects in other parts of India, and my stock of knowledge and information on various subjects has been added to. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, here, in Bengal, there are more colleges and schools, which impart a great deal of instruction than in the Panjab, and, therefore, I feel happy, at the reflection, that to my mind, the work, pursued here, is both agreeable and delightful. Here, there is no distinction between the rich and the poor, who receive instruction from their teachers. I know it, for certain, that in the Panjab, more attention is now paid to education, than in former years. (Cheers.)

The Western education has produced such healthy impression upon your minds that, in spite of your deep and perfect command over every branch of knowledge and art, you have based all your actions upon the commendable virtues of modesty and humility; and so, have rendered yourself just examples of the saying that knowledge is an efficient supporter. (Cheers.)

To convince you of this, I would cite before you a few proofs from my personal observations, which will assure you of the truth of my assertion.

Though you, Gentlemen, have attained the highest possible perfection in Western education, yet, you have not suffered it to produce any baneful effect upon your national life.

I find most of the people of Calcutta dress themselves in the same manner and style, as their fore-fathers, two centuries ago; and, they have not let any thing foreign, such as coats, pantaloons, &c., intrude upon their native mode of dress.

Consider the case of our Ruler—the British Nation. How long they have been in intercourse with the people of India—yet not a single example can be cited of

A far more creditable thing, which I have observed among you, is the preservation of the zenanna, or, suruah system, which has been observed by the people of this country. (Cheers.)

On the other hand, the inhabitants of the other parts of India have already brought forward much changes in their own customs and manners, and are altering them more and more daily to such an extent, as to render themselves just objects of pity, in some respects or other.

They have not only introduced changes in dress and food, but, have even tried to do away with the praise-worthy custom of the zenanna, nay, they are mightily engaged in the efforts to remove all its traces.

Our Reverend Prophet has admonished us to dress ourselves in the garb of our own nation, so that, we may easily be distinguished from other nations, or, tribes, to acknowledge the unity of God, to cherish brotherly feelings towards each other, and have fair dealings with every tribe, every community, living on the face of the globe, and to have the same regard for the weak and woe of others, as those of our own.

But, it is a matter of great regret that, now-a-days, every act and every sentiment has become tinged with feelings of discord and dis-union.

There was a time, when, according to the observation of the past sages, mankind bore the same relations to one another, as the different parts of the same body; but, now-a-days, the true, but, sorrowful picture of the time, is given in the proverb, that people are enemies unto one another.

So, I am much gratified to find, that people have assembled here with brotherly regard and feeling, irrespective of nationality and religion, for the common good; and, I hope, that this example will be followed by the inhabitants of other parts of India. (Cheers.)

It is now the duty of every one, calling himself an Indian, whether he be a Mahomedan, or, Hindu, Brahmin, or, Syed, Vaishya, or, Sudra, Christian, or, Jew, to unite with one another for the good of his fellow-citizens, to endeavour with heart and soul to do good to them, and to give currency to those things, which form the basis of progress and advancement. (Cheers.)

It should be the aim and object of every individual to see, that his countrymen may have happy and prosperous lives, and, under the patronage of benign British Rule, may achieve manifest excellence and perfection in education and commerce, in professions and handicrafts, and all other branches of human art. (Cheers.)

Now, I pray to God, with all my heart, that the indefatigable Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society, Babu Sham Lal Day, who has ever been working, will live long, and continue his pleasing duty, the work of public good, to which he has devoted his life, body and soul, for the last twenty-nine years. (Cheers.)

In conclusion, I beg to thank you again for the honor you have done me, and it is my earnest prayer that the Calcutta Literary Society may live long. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Paramhansa Sib Narayan Swami to speak a few words on the, Present Day Problems:—

The learned Paramhansa, who, on rising was received with cheers, then addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour.

He was cheered many times, and, he was heard with rapt attention throughout. He sat amidst loud plaudits of applause.

After the Swamiji had finished his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman rose amidst cheers, and made a nice little speech. He thanked the venerable lecturer for his interesting discourse and blessed the Society.

Mr. J. C. Rai, B. L., in a few appropriate words, having proposed votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the Venerable lecturer, which were seconded by Mr. J. N. Roy, Barrister-at-Law, and carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved after 6 p. m.

Telegram No. 33734.

Dated, Simla, 28th June, 1904.

To	From
The Founder-Secretary ,	Private Secretary, Viceroy,
Calcutta Literary Society,	Simla.
Calcutta.

I am desired to thank you for your Telegram of Yesterday.

(Vide, Hindu Patriot, 29th; Englishman, Amrita Bazar Patrika, and Hindu Patriot, 30th June, and Indian Mirror, 1st July, 1904.)

Gentlemen, we have assembled here to-day to commemorate the Sixty-fourth Birthday Anniversary of His Imperial Majesty Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

It gives us peculiar pleasure to do so, as the past year was one of peace, plenty and prosperity, and the arduous works, on which the Government of India was engaged, were brought to a happy close. (Cheers.)

The Tibet Mission closed during the year, and the Government was placed in a position, in connection with that State, which it has good reasons to congratulate upon. (Cheers.)

The Cabul Mission, which started during the year, has also been a marked success. Our relations with His Highness Amcer Habibullah Khan Sahib of Afghanistan have been placed on a footing such, as the Government had expected. Thus, then, our relations with Foreign States have been brought to a happy conclusion. We ought to be grateful to His Majesty for the blessings of peace, we enjoy. (Cheers.)

Now, then, since peace negotiations are being talked about between Russia and Japan, we hope, that the disastrous War will soon be brought to a happy termination, and that there will be no further loss of human life, and thereby peace, prosperity and plenty will pervade the world.

His Imperial Majesty—our beloved Emperor—will have to take an important part in the peace negotiations, no doubt. His Majesty was one of the first, who proposed such a conclusion of the War.

Our Emperor is always peaceful. His Majesty's mind is often full of peaceful thoughts and His Majesty hates war and bloodshed, unless, His Majesty is dragged into it by un-foreseen events, and, by the part, which His Majesty's Representative have to play in distant and remote provinces of His Majesty's vast dominions.

We all feel grateful to his Imperial Majesty, for His Majesty's peace-loving tendencies. When the Ruler of one State is brought face to face with the Ruler of another State, in frightful struggle, the world is filled with blood-shed, carnage and heaps of ruins pervade the most habitable portions of the world, which formerly shed a lustre to the Ruler of the province, over which he held sway.

Gentlemen, allow us to take this opportunity of announcing that, as Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales are coming out to India, in the coming cold weather, we shall be happy to accord Their Royal Highnesses our most cordial Welcome. (Cheers.)

We beg now to congratulate His Imperial Majesty, on the conclusion of His Majesty's Sixty-fourth year, and, hope, that God will bless His Majesty and His Royal Family with long life, peace, plenty and prosperity, and be a source of comfort and solace to His Majesty (Cheers.)

With three hearty cheers for His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India, and with three more cheers for His Royal Family, the Meeting was closed." (Cheers.)

A Message of Congratulation was also forwarded to His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, to which the following Telegraphic Message, in reply, was received :—

HISTORY OF COCHIN STATE.

The Rajahs of Cochin State belong to a noble Hindu Family of pure Kshatriya caste, and claim to hold their territory in direct descent from Cheraam Perumal, the last of the rulers, according to tradition, of the territory, stretching from Gokaru, in North Canara, to Cape Comorin, the southernmost point of India.

Nothing is known of the subsequent history of Cochin State till the advent of the Portuguese, except that there is constant strife between its rulers and the neighbouring chiefs, especially the Zamorin of Calicut.

In 1502, the Portuguese were allowed to settle in the town of Cochin, and in the following year, they built there fort. In the wars with the Zamorin of Calicut, they rendered effective aid to the Rajahs of Cochin State.

In 1663, the Dutch ousted the Portuguese from the town of Cochin, and settled there on the same terms as the Portuguese.

In 1759, or, about a century later, when the Dutch power began to decline, the Zamorin of Calicut invaded the State of Cochin, but was at last expelled with the aid of the Rajah of Travancore, who obtained certain portions of Cochin State, as a reward for this service.

In 1776, Hyder Ali of Mysore, invaded the State of Cochin, when the Rajah agreed to acknowledge his suzerainty, and pay tribute to him. The State, accordingly, remained tributary to Hyder Ali of Mysore, and, subsequently, to his son, Tippu Sultan, until the peace concluded by the latter with the British in 1792, when the claims of Mysore over Cochin State were transferred to the British Government.

In 1791, a Treaty had been concluded with the Rajah, by which he had agreed to become tributary to the British Government for his territories, which were then in the possession of Tippu Sultan, and to pay an annual subsidy of one lac of Rupees. After the peace of 1792, the island of Chetuvu Manopuram was leased to the Rajah for ten years.

In 1808, Paliyath Achian, the hereditary Chief Minister of Cochin State, entered into a conspiracy with the Minister of Travancore to assassinate the British Resident, and raised an insurrection against the British power. This was suppressed, and a fresh Treaty was concluded, by which the Rajah agreed to pay, in addition to the previous subsidy of one lac of Rupees, an annual sum equal to the cost of one battalion of native infantry, or, 1,76,037 Arcot rupees, making an aggregate annual payment, in six equal instalments, of Rupees 2,76,037.

The disposal of the subsidy and the distribution of the force, maintained by it, whether stationed within, or about, the State were left un-reservedly to the British Government.

The other provisions of the Treaty were similar to those of the Treaty concluded with the Rajah of Travancore, 1805.

The Rajah, also, engaged to hold no correspondence with any foreign State, and, to admit no Europeans into his service, without the sanction of the British Government, who might dismantle, or, garrison any fortresses in his dominions.

On the other hand, the British undertook to defend the territories of the Rajah against all enemies. The subsidy was, subsequently, reduced to Rupees 2,40,000, being one-half of the estimated Revenue of the State. At a later period, it was fixed at two lacs of Rupees, payable in ten equal instalments, which is its present amount.

Rajah Ravi Varma, who succeeded to power on the death of his brother in 1855, received in 1862, the right of option for himself and successors. Rajah Ravi Varma died in 1864, and, was succeeded by Rajah Sir Rama Varma, G. C. S. I., in 1871, was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

In 1855, by an agreement with the British Government, known as the Interportal Trade Convention, the State agreed to abolish the tobacco monopoly, and the system of inland transit duties, to equalise the rates of Customs duty at its seaports, with those obtaining at the ports of British India, and, to sell salt within its limits, at the prices ruling in the neighbouring British District of Malabar. In return for these concessions, the British Government guaranteed to the State the payment of a minimum customs and tobacco revenue of Rupees 1,10,500 a year. This convention was not in the form of a formal agreement.

In 1869, a slight adjustment of the boundaries was effected between the Cochin Darbar and the Madras Government. The modification is explained in a Notification, dated, the 6th October, 1870.

In 1902, the Shoranur Cochin-Railway, which was constructed by the State, was opened for traffic. The Rajah ceded to the British Government full and exclusive power and jurisdiction, except sovereignty, over the lands lying within the State, which were, or, might hereafter be, occupied by that railway.

Rajah Sir Rama Varma died in 1888, and was succeeded by his brother Rajah Sir Vira Kerala Varma, born in 1846, who, whilst heir-apparent, had been created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. On his death, in 1895, his cousin, the present Rajah Sir Rama Varma, G. C. S. I., succeeded to power.

His Highness was born on Monday, the 27th December, 1852, and ascended the Musnud on Wednesday, the 23rd October, 1895. His Highness is an accomplished Sanskrit and English scholar, a keen sportsman, and, takes a personal interest in every branch of the administration of the State. His Highness has inherited the noble qualities of His illustrious ancestors and has been distinguished for loyalty and liberality.

On Tuesday, the 22nd June, 1897, His Highness was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, on the auspicious occasion of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, Empress of India.

On Thursday, the 1st January, 1903, His Highness was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. His Highness is now fifty-four years of age. In the State of Cochin, as in the Travancore, the line of succession is through the female branch of the family. His Highness' heir is his nephew, Prince Rama Varma, Elaya Rajah of Cochin, who was born on Saturday, the 9th September, 1854. The Prince is now fifty years of age.

Jurisdiction over European British subjects in Cochin State has, with certain restrictions, been given to the Cochin courts.

The armorial bearings of the family are a pelican with umbrella, lamp and couch, or, chank-shell (emblematic of progress, protection, purity and prosperity).

The area of Cochin State is 1,361 square miles, the population, according to the Census of 1901, is 8,12,025, chiefly Hindus, with about 33,000 Mahomedans and 136,000 Christians, and the gross revenue of the State is about two lacs of Rupees.

The State maintains a military force of sixteen cavalry, three hundred and twenty-seven infantry, nineteen gunners and four guns. The Chief is entitled to a salute, (hereditary), of seventeen guns.

The political charge of Cochin is held jointly with that of Travancore by the British Resident in Travancore Cochin.

The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and Seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, when His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward VII., Emperor of India, visited these shores, (as His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales), and has gone on prospering from year's end to year's end, and to-day, by the blessing of God, we are celebrating its Thirtieth Anniversary. (Cheers.)

The objects of the Society are "to hold friendly gatherings of the European and Indian communities, and to discuss social, literary and scientific subjects" and the Society has thus been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of the various public Meetings, published in the leading local newspapers for the last Thirty years, bear ample testimony to them. (Cheers.)

(Vide, Indian Daily News, Statesman, 23rd, and the Telegraph, 24th January, 1906.)

The Calcutta Literary Society celebrated the Empire Day, at College Square, on Thursday, the 24th May, 1906, the day associated with the birth of Her Majesty the late Queen Victoria the Good. A respectable gathering had assembled on the occasion.

The National Weaving School, (established, under the auspices of the National Fund Committee, in the premises of the Indian Sangit Samaj, which is situated at No. 209, Cornwallis' Street, from 10th day of December, 1905), exhibited some fine specimens of Dhuties and Chadars, which were woven by its pupils. These products attracted admiration of those, who saw them.

It is worthy of note that the articles, not only reflect great credit on those boys, who produced them, but, also on those, who superintended their manufacture.

This, indeed, is a good sign of the times, and, we have every reason to hope that, our young men will be able successfully to compete with the products of other nations. Now, that a beginning has been made, we hope for the best.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary of the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, held at the hall of the Chowdhery Mahammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 20 Mirzapur Street, Calcutta, on Monday, the 22nd January, 1906, at 5-30 P.M., under the presidency of Khan Bahadur Shujat Ali Beg Sahib, Consul of Persia, which were duly confirmed, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, delivered speech, chiefly dwelling upon the virtues of Her Majesty the late Queen Victoria, and the blessings which India derived during Her Majesty's long and beneficial reign. References were made to the great loyalty of the people to the visit to India of His Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, in 1875, then as His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales.

Mr. G. C. Dhar said:—Gentlemen, we have assembled here to-day, to commemorate the Empire Day. (Cheers.)

This day, the Twenty-fourth of May, will always be remembered throughout His Imperial Majesty's vast dominions, as Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria's Birthday. (Applause.)

This day is a day of great rejoicings to all His Imperial Majesty's subjects. Her Majesty the late Queen Victoria's illustrious name is imprinted in the heart of every body, and the people here and everywhere cherish Her Majesty's name with the fondest of recollections. (Cheers.)

His Majesty's reign has been distinguished by a long career, which has been productive of the most beneficial results to Her Majesty's subjects in India, or in the Colonies, or elsewhere. (Cheers.)

In the year 1905, Her late Majesty's illustrious grandson, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, accompanied by His Royal Highness' beloved Consort, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, honored our country with their Royal Highnesses' visit, and the people exhibited tokens of gratitude to the Throne of England. (Cheers.)

We are grateful to His Royal Highness for the speech, which His Royal Highness delivered at Guildhall, in which His Royal Highness admired the loyalty and devotion of the Indian people, and said that, "the strength of England lay in the sympathy of His Majesty's Indian subjects." (Cheers.)

The Indian people are ever distinguished for their loyalty and devotion to His Majesty's Throne. (Cheers.)

The past year will be a memorable year in the annals of Indian history. It will long be remembered for more reasons than one.

His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Earl of Minto, G.C.M.G., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., was appointed Viceroy and Governor-General of India. During the short period of His Excellency's tenure in this country, His Excellency has given indications of His Excellency's affection and concern for the welfare of the people of India. (Cheers.)

His Excellency has appointed the Hon'ble Justice Sir Madhav Ghose, Kt., to officiate as Chief Justice of Bengal, in succession to the Hon'ble Justice Sir Francis Bleaney, Kt., K.C.I.E., although there was a precedent for the appointment of the late Justice Sir Romesh Chandra Mitra, Kt., to officiate as Chief Justice of Bengal, during the administration of the Right Hon'ble the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., P.C., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., M.P., the then Viceroy and Governor-General of India, to the entire satisfaction of the Indian people. (Applause.)

His Excellency has been pleased to appoint the Hon'ble Dr. Justice Asutose Mukerjee, M.A., F.R.S.S., to be the Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, in succession to the Hon'ble Sir John Sedlar, K.C.I.E., although, in this instance, there was a precedent in the appointment of Sir Gurudas Banerjee, Kt., M.A., D.D., F.U.C., in that high office. (Applause.)

More over, this Hon'ble Gentleman has been appointed President of the Committee for framing Regulations, relating to the University of Calcutta. The Committee charged with formulating the new regulations which meet daily under the presidency of the Hon'ble Dr. Justice Asutose Mukerjee, M.A., F.R.S.S., F.R.S.E., in the Civil Secretariat at Simla, are expected to finish their work by the end of June next.

His Excellency the Viceroy has graciously been pleased to appoint Mr. S. P. Sinha, Barister-at-Law, to be the Advocate-General of His Majesty's High Court, in succession to the Hon'ble Mr. L. P. Pugh, Barister-at-Law, for the first time in the annals of our country. (Cheers.)

Also, another Indian gentleman, Mr. N. Haldar, Barister-at-Law, to be the Clerk of the Crown in that Court. (Cheers.)

For the appointments referred to, our warmest thanks are due to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Earl of Minto, P.C., G.C.M.G., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India. Indeed, all this augurs well for the future of our country, the prospects of which, we must confess, are promising. (Cheers.)

The utterances of the Right Hon'ble Mr. Morley, Secretary of State for India, in the House of Commons, giving indications of a change in the attitude of the Home Government towards the people of this country, have been a source of sincere satisfaction to us. (Cheers.)

The establishment of the Bengal Lakshi Cotton Mills at Serampur, on the limited liability principle, for the manufacture of cloth and the weaving of yarn will, it is hoped, give an impetus to the cause of Indian progress.

The National Fund Committee has established the National Weaving School, at the premises of the Indian Sangit Samaj, No. 209, Cornwallis' Street, in which our boys are being taught the art of weaving and spinning. This indeed, is a matter of congratulation to every well-wisher of the country. (Cheers.)

The Weaving School was opened on the tenth day of December, 1905, under the management of Babu Pravash Chandra Mitra, (the grandson of the late Rai Dinabandhu Mitra Bahadur), who is most anxious to promote the welfare of the people, and is taking great interest in the affairs of the Institution. It has already deputed three office students, Viz:—One, to Mourbhanj, where a Weaving School has been opened, under the auspices of His Highness the Maharajah Bahadur of Mourbhanj.

The Second, Lucknow, where a similar school has been established, under the auspices of the Hon'ble Rai Sri Ran Singh Bahadur, a distinguished Zemindar of the place.

And the third at Lowhajang, in Mynensingh, under the auspices of the Bryan Samity, which has opened a Weaving School, for training the young men of the place. (Cheers.)

At the Main School lessons are given on dyeing, drawing, engraving, carpentry, taping and knitting.

The Managers of this Institution will house Moffussil students, and Rai Kumar Mannatha Nath Mitra Bahadur (the grandson of the late Rajah Digambar Mitra Bahadur) has very kindly agreed to defray the expenses of boarding, lodging and other charges of ten students, at present, from the month of June 1906. (Cheers.)

For all these, we ought to be thankful to those of our leaders, who are taking an active part in these works with a view to better the condition of our country. Indeed we have every reason to rejoice on this day—the twenty-fourth day of May, 1906—being the Birthday of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, Empress of India. (Cheers.)

With Three Cheers for His Majesty the King-Emperor of India, and three more cheers for His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Earl of Minto, G.C.M.G., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, the Meeting dissolved.

(Vide, Englishman, Indian Daily News, Statesman, Amrita Bazar Patrika, and the Telegraph, 25th May, 1906)

The Calcutta Literary Society convened an Open-Air Meeting, at Wellington Square Park, on Friday, the 1st June, 1906, at 5 P.M., to celebrate the Sixty-fourth Anniversary of the death of the late Mr. David Hare.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, addressed the Meeting, and spoke feelingly for half an hour. He said :—

Gentlemen, we are met here this afternoon, the 1st day of June 1906, to celebrate the Sixty-fourth Anniversary of the death of David Hare. This morning, all the papers should have come out with a black border, especially, those edited by Indian gentlemen, as a day of general mourning observed by all the admirers of the late philanthropist, out of respect to his memory. The country owes its present educational strata to the self-sacrifice of Mr. David Hare.

About three-fourths of a century ago, Bengal was immersed in deep ignorance. There were few English schools for the education of Indian youths, even in Calcutta, the Metropolis of British India.

When the late Mr. David Hare came to Calcutta, several European traders had established Firms in the city, in which they are still carrying on a flourishing business. Some of them have made immense profit, and retired with large fortunes. At that time, the city of Calcutta was looked upon as the golden-calf, which yielded large returns to those employed in active pursuits. David Hare, instead of treading in their footsteps, followed a different course. And, although, he had first established himself as a watch and clock-maker in the street, which still goes by his name, he took upon himself the task of educating the people and established a school, which is called the Hare School.

In this Institution, education was imparted free, and this was a great advantage which the inhabitants enjoyed with great alacrity. Those, who could not afford to send their children to the Hindu College, blessed David Hare for his spirit of self-sacrifice (Cheers.)

He brought a large fortune with him, consisting of stock to enable him to open his shop. But, fortune-making was not congenial to his nature. As an Englishman, he was born a philanthropist. His inner nature impelled him to work for the regeneration of the Indian youths.

Hare School was opened in College Square, in a building, owned by the late Rajah Brajendra Narayan Roy, at which the Cathedral Mission College now stands. The success of the Institution may be judged of from the fact, that its pupils fairly competed with those of the Hindu College. The former were educated under the supervision of Babu Uma Chand Mitter, Head Master, Babu Durga Charan Banerjea, (father of our renowned townsman Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea, Editor of the Bengalee), and Babu Radha Madhav Bose, Professor of Mathematics.

Mr. David Hare gave bats and balls to the students of the Hindu College, with whom he took a pleasure to play the cricket after school hours.

David Hare devoted his energy, his time, and his fortune to the education of our young men. After he had spent all his fortune, he was appointed by Government to be a Judge of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes. He now commenced to spend his salary to defray the expenses of his favorite school. He was so fond of his boys that he used to play with them.

This day, Sixty-four years ago, he breathed his last, and his remains were accompanied by a large number of boys to his tomb, in College Square, where they wept bitterly, as if, they had lost their father and mother!

(Vide, Englishman and Statesman, 2nd June, 1906.)

The Calcutta Literary Society convened an Open-Air Meeting, at Cornwallis Square, on Friday, the 29th June, 1906, at 7 A.M., (being the date appointed for the official celebration of His Most Excellent Majesty's Birthday), to celebrate the Sixty-fifth Anniversary Birthday of His Majesty the King of England and Emperor of India.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting held in Wellington Square, on Friday, the 1st June, 1906, at 5 P.M., in honor of the Sixty-fourth Anniversary of the death of the late Mr. David Hare, which were duly confirmed. Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President, addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He said "Gentlemen, on Monday, the 26th June, 1905, at A.M., the Calcutta Literary Society convened a Public Meeting, at the Wellington Square Park, and distributed alms to the poor, in honor of the Sixty-fourth Anniversary Birthday of His Imperial Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

A Message of Congratulation was that day forwarded to H. Excellency the Right Hon'ble Lord Ampthill, G.C., the then Off. Viceroy and Governor-General of India, which the following Message, in reply, was received :—

Telegram, No. 30987.

Dated, Simla, 28th June, 1905.

To Calcutta Literary Society.
Calcutta.

From Private Secretary, Viceroy
Simla.

"I am desired to thank you for your Telegram Congratulations on the Birthday of His Majesty King-Emperor."

(Vide, Englishman, Indian Mirror, 1st July, and Teelgr 30th June, 1905.)

Gentlemen, We have assembled here to-day to celebrate the Sixty-fifth Birthday Anniversary of His Imperial Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

This day will be observed throughout all His Majesty's Dominions, as one of great sanctity of all His Majesty's subjects, ir-respective of creed, color, or caste. (Cheers.)

The Calcutta Literary Society will observe it with solemnity, distribute alms to the poor, and feed those, who are in want of food, as a token of its loyalty and devotion to the Throne of England. (Cheers.)

We have been observing this day without any pomp or show or ceremony, since the year His Imperial Majesty ascended the Throne, on Wednesday, the 23rd January 1901, of what is the greatest power in the world. No other Nation can boast of such civilized institution, as the English in the face of the globe. (Cheers.)

America has been amassing vast wealth by imitation and following in the footsteps of the English people. I do not, by all this, mean to show that we glorify ourselves, but, in all that which conduces to His Majesty's glory, there any power in the world that combines in its constitution a monarchical, democratical and republican form of Government? England has a Parliament, the constitution of which has led to all its greatness. In that Parliament the Lord and the Commoner have the same voice in the administration of the country.

If the Lords wish to promote their own aggrandisement without injuring the interest of the people, the latter do not grudge the step, which they take with the intention of gaining their object.

What we all want is the greatest good of the greatest number. This forms the basis of all successful administrations. It was the other day that a high English functionary made the remark that "solid foundation of every Government must rest upon the contentment and sympathy of its subjects." If the Government do not lose sight of the fact, that in the promotion of the happiness of the people lies the greatest prosperity of a kingdom. When the people are contented and happy, they do not grudge to bear the burden of any taxation that may be imposed upon them. When a famine, war, or pestilence break out, the people come forward with all the means in the possessions and help each other in their dire necessity.

The treasury is full, the exchequer is not in want of means to replenish its coffers. The recouping of the chasm that takes place in the resources of the Government becomes an easy task.

Gentlemen, now we all earnestly pray to the Good God—the Arbitrer of All Events—to pour forth His choicest blessings upon His Imperial Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, so that, the country may ring in abundant prosperity and all that is enjoyable from one end of the country to the other. (Cheers.)

With three hearty cheers for His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India and with three more cheers to His Royal Family, the Meeting dispersed. (Vide, Journalist & Indian Daily News, 2nd July, 1906.)

A Letter of Congratulation was also forwarded to His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, on the auspicious occasion of His Majesty's Sixty-fifth Anniversary Birthday, to which the following acknowledgment was received :—

From the Right Hon'ble the Field-Marshal Earl Roberts, Baronet, M.P., K.G., K.P., V.C., G.O.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., D.O.L., LL.D., Commander of the British Forces in England, &c., &c., &c :—

Englemere, Ascot,

Beiks, 25th July, 1906.

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the instant, and in reply to state that I have forwarded the address of Congratulation to His Majesty, to General Dighton Probyn, Keeper of His Majesty's Privy Purse.

The Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society, Calcutta -India.

Believe me,
Yours very truly,
Roberts, F. M.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the Metropolitan College, 22, Sanker Ghose's Lane, in Cornwallis' Street, on Friday, the 13th July, 1906, at 5 P. M., when Babu Ambica Prasad, B. A., delivered a lecture on :—

The use of time—

For a large and respectable gathering. He spoke for only an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention. He said that early hours, and a regular distribution of time devoted to the various tasks, that have to be gone through, are absolutely indispensable to our performing those tasks, to credit to ourselves, and with satisfaction to the public. Upon the due economy of time, we confess that we lay much greater stress than it appears to us to be at all useful. And, we entreat you, Gentlemen, and more especially, the juvenile portion of you, to lose not a day in commencing the formation of a regular habit.

A man, who has for years been in the habit of rising at seven in the morning, feels no more difficulty in rising at that hour, on any particular day, than an indolent man does in dragging himself reluctantly from his bed an hour or 2 later. What bad habit has done for the one, good habit has done for the other; and a habit, which is conducive to health, prosperity and good reputation, ought surely to be the ambition of every young man, who wishes to give satisfaction to society.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, 13, Mirzapur Street, on Saturday, the 26th July, 1906, at 5 P. M., when Babu Anamohan Bose, M. A., delivered a lecture on :—

The Advantages of Conversation—

For a large and respectable gathering. He spoke for only an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention. He said that conversation calls to light what has been lodged in the recess and secret chambers of the soul. By occasional hints and incidents, it brings former useful notions into remembrance. It unfolds and displays the hidden treasures of knowledge, with which reading, observation, and study had before formulated the mind.

By mutual discourse, the soul is awakened, and allowed to bring forth its hoards of knowledge, and it learns how to render them most useful to mankind. But, a man of vast reading, without conversation, is like a miser, who lives only for himself.

In free and friendly conversation, our intellectual powers are more animated, and our spirits act with more vigour in the pursuit of unknown truths. There is a sharpness and sagacity of thought that attends it, beyond what we feel whilst we are shut up in retirement.

It does often happen, that in free discourse, new thoughts are stringently struck out, and those seeds of truth sparkle and blaze through the company, which, in calm and silent reading, would never have been excited.

By conversation, we both give and receive this benefit. In conversing with geniuses and learned men, we bring our sentiments to the test, and learn in a more com-raised against them. What defects there are in our schemes, and how to correct our mistakes. What advantages are not so easily obtained by private meditation, for, self-love, as well as the narrowness of our views, tempts us all to pass too favorable an opinion on our own schemes, whereas the variety of geniuses will be a source of pleasure to mankind.

Another considerable advantage of conversation is, that it furnishes the student with a knowledge of men, and the affairs of life, as reading, furnishes him with book-learning.

A man, who has lived all his days among books, may have amassed together a heap of ideas, and still be a mere scholar, which is a contemptible sort of character in the eyes of the world.

A hermit, who has always been shut up in his cell, in a cottage has contracted a sort of habit, which the sooner it is given up the better, as all his airs and behaviour have a certain awkwardness in them, but, these awakened airs are worn off, by degrees, in company with educated men, the rest is filed and brushed off by polite conversation.

The scholar then becomes a citizen, or, a gentleman, a neighbour, or a friend. He learns how to dress his sentiments in the finest colors, and to set them up in the clearest light.

Thus, he presents his ideas to public inspection. He makes use of them in the world, and he improves his theories by practice.

The Calcutta Literary Society convened an Open-Air Meeting at Beacon Square Park, on Thursday, the 9th August, 1906, at 7 A.M., to celebrate the Anniversary of the Fourth Coronation of His Imperial Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, Baba Gobin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, addressed the meeting for nearly half an hour, in the course of which he said :—

"Gentlemen, we have met here this day to celebrate the Anniversary of the Fourth Coronation of His Imperial Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India (Cheers.)

The past year has been one of continued peace, for which our thanksgivings are due to the Almighty Father of the Universe. There was one regrettable event, we refer to the famine, which visited Barisal and the surrounding districts.

Although, the Government did not see the necessity of opening there a Famine Relief Fund, for the purpose of mitigating the distress of the poor, yet, private charity overflowed from all quarters, to relieve the unfortunate men and women, who were afflicted with penury and want.

There is one circumstance, which cannot fail to be gratifying; Viz :—

That the horrors of the famine were not so severely felt by the advent of timely help to the people, as on previous occasions.

May His Imperial Majesty live long, and enjoy with His Royal Family the blessings of peace, health and prosperity (Vide, Englishman, 10th August, 1906.)

A Letter of Congratulation was then forwarded to His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, to which the following reply was received :—

From His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII.
King of England and Emperor of India, &c.:

Balmoral Castle,

3rd September, 1906.

Sir,

Lord Wenlock has forwarded to me your letter of the 9th of August, and I have had the honor of submitting it to His Majesty the King-Emperor.

The Secretary of
The Calcutta Literary Society,

I am Sir,
Your Obedient Servant
Kjollys.

A public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, 13, Mirzapur Street, on

Asutose Banerjee, M. A., delivered a lecture on :—

The Life of the Revd. Dr. Alexander Duff—

He spoke for nearly an hour, in the course of which he said that the Revd. Dr. Alexander Duff, (son of James Duff), was born on the 25th April, 1806, and was educated at Maulin, Kiskimichael and Perth. In 1822, he was admitted into the University of St. Andrews. He prosecuted his studies with the utmost vigour, and distinguished himself in all the branches of learning taught in the University, but, especially in Latin and Greek, for which he had natural predilections.

In his classical studies, he had the advantage of attending the important lectures of Professor Hunter, one of the best Latin scholars of the day, in Scotland. But, the man, to whom he was most indebted for the development of his intellect, and the formation of his character, was Dr. Chalmers, who joined the University, in November, 1823, as Professor of Moral Philosophy.

When twelve years old, the Revd. Dr. Alexander Duff was presented by his father with a purse of only twenty pounds, as the sum which he could spare for his son's education.

Before that sum had all been spent, he obtained, by his diligence, a scholarship in the University of St. Andrews; and, thus, he was enabled to prosecute his studies till he took his Degree of Master of Arts.

After finishing the Arts curriculum, he entered the Divinity Hall of St. Mary's College, as he had resolved on becoming a Minister of the Gospel.

Being invited by the Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland on Foreign Missions, to become their First Missionary to India, he was ordained in 1829.

In October, 1830, the Revd. Dr. Alexander Duff, having previously married Miss Drysdale, embarked with his wife and sailed for India. In those days, the power of steam had not been opened up, and the only passage to India from Europe was that discovered by Vasco-de-Gama, three centuries ago.

The ship struck on a small island, about thirty miles to the North of Cape Town, and became a perfect wreck. But, though the ship was lost, the passengers were all saved—but, they were barely saved. The Revd. Dr. Alexander Duff lost a choice collection of books, chiefly classical and theological, about eight hundred in number.

The only two volumes, recovered from the ocean, were a copy of Bagster's Comprehensive Bible, and a copy of Metrical Version of the Psalms of David, used in the Presbyterian Churches in Scotland.

The second ship, in which he sailed, met with a similar fate. It was overtaken by a cyclone, at the mouth of the River Hooghli, and was dashed ashore, and the Revd. Dr. Alexander Duff and his newly married wife landed in Calcutta, on Thursday, the 27th May, 1830, with an inconveniently slender wardrobe.

On his arrival in Calcutta, there was peace throughout the whole of the Indian Empire. He had been charged by the Committee of Foreign Missions in Scotland to found a College in Bengal.

On Tuesday, the 13th July, 1830, he opened the General Assembly's Institution. His life, from the day on which he set foot on Indian soil, till the day of his final departure in 1863, was a life of ceaseless labour and untiring application. Besides, his labors in the General Assembly's Institution, he sat daily for hours in teaching Hindu boys, the elements of knowledge.

From 1834 to 1840, he remained in his native land, for the benefit of his health. But often he made there speeches, collected money, and labored hard, in organizing his mission. In 1835, he was made a Doctor of Divinity.

He was in India again from 1840 to 1850, and again from 1856 to 1863; made extensive tours in the course of missions. In 1854, he travelled in the United States of America and made constant speeches. He was made L.L.D., in New York. He travelled in south Africa in 1864.

In 1867, he became the first Professor of Evangelistic Theology at the Free Church College, Edinburgh.

In 1873, he was twice made Moderator of the General Assembly of Scotland. He died on Tuesday, the 12th February, 1890, at the fine old age of eighty-two.

On his arrival in Calcutta, the resident Members of the Calcutta Literary Society gave a grand reception to Dadabhai Naoroji, Esq., President of the Twenty-second Indian National Congress, &c., and presented the following Address of Welcome, at the premises of the Society, No. 21 Nimitola Street, on Monday, the 24th December, 1906, at 9-30 A.M., before a large and appreciative assembly of upwards of two thousand persons, who had gathered on the occasion.

The Calcutta Literary Society presented a gala appearance. The premises being very tastefully decorated with flags, festoons, flowers and evergreens. There were inscriptions and posters, in large numbers, prominently displaying in suitable Mottos:—Welcome Grand Old Man, Welcome Dadabhai Naoroji. Long Live India's Grand Old Man, and so forth.

Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, F.R.C.S., (Lond.), M.B., C.M., (Edinburgh), Fellow, London Medical Society, Members, Chelsea Chenedical Society, the British Medical Association acted as Chairman of the Meeting. Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji was garlanded and flowers were showered on him.

Babu Sham Lal Day, Founder-Secretary to the Society, then read the following Address:—

To Dadabhai Naoroji, Esquire, M. P.,

We have long held Your Highness in highest regard for the unflinching devotion to a very high standard of duty. We may, without presumption, add that the people of India, as a whole, has risen in the estimation of the world by Your Highness' brilliant conduct and achievements as a Ruler.

India's modern history is largely written in the rapid improvement, which has taken place in the State of Baroda under Your Highness' fostering care. We have been struck by Your Highness' cosmopolitan tastes and the benefits, which have thereby accrued.

Your Highness has taken courage in both hands, and the result has surpassed all expectations. The industries, which have sprung up in the State of Baroda, are a beacon of the future. The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, when His Most Excellent Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, visited these shores, (then as His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales), and has gone on prospering from year's end to year's end. (Cheers.)

The Objects of the Society are :—to hold friendly gatherings of the European and Indian communities, and to discuss literary and scientific subjects, and the Society has been the means of bringing together the Rulers and Ruled in one common platform. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, it is a matter of congratulation that the Calcutta Literary Society has passed through Thirty years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm. Now, the Society's progress has been such as cannot fail to be gratifying to its Members. It has done much useful work during the last Thirty years of its existence.

Since the date of the foundation of the Society in 1875, it has been able to organise hundreds of Meetings, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Majesty's subjects ; and by so doing, it has achieved a fair measure of success. (Cheers.)

When lectures on subjects delivered in the English language, had been well-nigh exhausted, the Society invited one of the most learned men of the city, and those, who sided it, to deliver lectures in Hindi and Bengali, on obscure subjects.

The Thirtieth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Chowdhery Mohammed Laik's Jubilee Institution, No. 9, Mirzapur Street, on Monday, the 22nd January, 1906, at 5:30 P. M., under the presidency of Nawab Shujaat Ali Khan Bahadur, Consul-General for Persia, when Professor T. L. Vasvani, M. A., of the Metropolitan College, and, who was for some time Senior Fellow of the Sindri College, spoke a few words on the Present Day Problems.

(Vide, Indian Daily News, Statesman, 23rd, and the Telegraph, 24th January, 1906.)

Besides, the Thirtieth Anniversary Meeting, the Society held Eight Public Meetings, during the session 1906 : viz :

(1) The Society convened an Open-Air Meeting at College Square, on Thursday, the 24th May, 1906, at 5 P. M.,—the day associated with the birth of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria the Good,—to celebrate the Empire Day. A respectable gathering had assembled on the occasion.

The National Weaving School exhibited some fine specimens of Dhuties and Chadars, which were woven by its pupils. The products attracted the admiration of those, who saw them there.

Babu Gabin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, delivered a speech, chiefly dwelling upon the virtues of Her Most Excellent Majesty the late Queen Victoria, and, the blessings, which India derived during Her Majesty's long and beneficial reign.

References were made to the great loyalty of the people to the visit to India of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales.

(Vide, Englishman, Indian Daily News, Statesman, Ananta Bazar Patrika, & the Telegraph, 25th May, 1906.)

(2) The Society convened an Open-Air Meeting at Wellington Square Park, on Friday, the 1st June, 1906, at 5 P. M., to celebrate the Sixty-fourth Anniversary of the death of the late Mr. David Hare.

Babu Gabin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, addressed the Meeting, and spoke feelingly for half an hour, on the life of the late Mr. David Hare.

He said that as a pupil of the late Mr. David Hare, he must confess, with gratitude, that the seeds, which, were sown in the minds of the youths, were, afterwards, found to germinate and produce very good results. Some of the foremost leaders of our Society were indebted for their education in that educational Institution. I will only cite one instance : viz :—the late Babu Ram Gopal Ghose was educated in the school of the late Mr. David Hare. (Cheers.)

(Vide, Englishman, and Statesman, 2nd June, 1906.)

(3) The Society convened an Open-Air Meeting at Cornwallis' Square, on Friday, the 29th June, 1906, at 7 A. M., (being the date appointed for the official celebration of His Most Excellent Majesty's Birthday), to celebrate the Sixty-fifth Anniversary Birthday of His Majesty Edward VII., King of England and of Emperor India.

(4) The Society convened a public Meeting at the hall of the Metropolitan College, 22 Sankar Ghose's Lane, in Cornwallis' Street, on Friday, the 13th July, 1906, at 5 P. M., when Babu Ambika Prasad, B. A., delivered a lecture on the Use of Time.

(5) The Society convened a public Meeting at the hall of the City College, 13, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 26th July, 1906, at 5 P. M., when Babu Manamahan Bose, M. A., delivered a lecture on the Advantages of Commerce.

Gentlemen, our Society is a literary Society from the beginning. It has nothing to do with politics ; and, therefore, expects, the sympathy of all, who take a lively interest in literary pursuits, as the country can really push onwards in the march of civilization and advancement, which it so much stands in need of. (Cheers.)

There are many societies in the Metropolis, but the Calcutta Literary Society is the oldest, except the Mahamedan Literary Society.

Gentlemen, I am now extremely glad to announce it to you, that, at the request of its several Members, the Calcutta Literary Society has, at last, been able with considerable labors and difficulties, and at a great cost, to re-publish, in a condensed form, all the Proceedings of its public Meetings held since its foundation, in 1875, or, for the last thirty-one years, in Nine Volumes, foolscap size. The Volumes will, no doubt, be much serviceable to the present generation of our countrymen

The Society records its appreciation of the kindness of the Editors of the English and Vernacular Newspapers who have found space in their columns to publish the proceedings of its various Meetings, and other doings of the Society since its foundation, in 1875. (Cheers.)

May God bless all the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, and those, who detest to scatter thorns in the path of progress, who devote their lives in the good work of promoting the true interest of their Motherland
(Cheers.)

In conclusion, the Society begs to offer its thanksgiving to the Great God, for the manifold blessings, which His Providence has showered upon it, during the last Thirty-one years of its existence, and now, I fervently hope that, by the blessing of Providence, the Society may go on prosperous in its career of usefulness for many years to come. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary of the Society, had finished his Report, for the year 1905-06, which was duly confirmed, the Chairman, after thanking the Society for the honor it had done by inviting him to preside on the occasion, and wishing the Institution every success, addressed the assembly for upwards of half an hour. He chiefly dwelt on,

Indian Literature :—

The Chairman said :—
Gentlemen, as the object of the Calcutta Literary Society is to further intellectual culture, by adopting all possible means for spreading the literature and scientific education, I hope, that this Society will have the sympathy

The oldest literature is ours, and we can boast of our literary achievement. The Vedas are the richest mines of wisdom.

Although, the period, in which the Vedic literature made their appearance, can seldom be estimated, still, there can be no question as to the antiquity of this ancient literature.

Gentlemen, the estimate of the Vedic antiquity, generally current amongst European scholars, is based on the assignment of arbitrary periods of time to the different strata, into which the Vedic literature is divided, and, it is believed, that the oldest of this strata could not, at the best, be older than 2,400, B.C.

It has been shewn by Indian scholars, that all such estimates, besides being modern, were vague and uncertain and, that the astronomical sentiments, founded on Vedic literature, supplied us with far more reliable data, for correctly ascertaining the ages of the different periods on Vedic literature.

These Astronomical statements, it was further shewn, unmistakably pointed out, that the vernal equinox was in the constellation of Mriga, (about 4,500, B.C.), during the period, Vedic Hymns, and that it had receded to the constellation of Krittika, (about 2,500, B.C.), in the days of the Brahmins.

Mr. S. P. Kelkar, (of Bombay), in a recent number of the journals of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, has mathematically worked out the statement, that the Taittiriya Brahmin—that Brehaspati, (the Planet of Jupiter), was first discovered, when confronting, or, nearly occulting, the Star Tishya, and shown that the observation was possible only in the year 4,650, B.C.

All these evidences tend to prove the antiquity of Vedic literature, and the fact is fairly established, that long before the germination of European civilization, the Hindus had a literature of their own, full of wisdom and rich, in every branch of knowledge, (i. e.), Theological, Astronomical, Medical, Spiritual and Temporal. (Cheers.)

But, the sole object of this grand old literature was to diffuse the religious education among the Aryans of ancient India, and, thereby, to elevate them in the scale of civilization, to ennoble them both in mind and heart, and, above all, to teach them the ways of Salvation. (Cheers.)

In Vedic literature, there are clear and unmistakable indications, that there is an instinctive hankering in the human soul, to look through the glorious display of never-changing Nature, something, which never changes, which is Eternal and Perfect. (Cheers.)

In this hankering, we begin to recognise the inherent relation in the Infinite and Perfect. This recognition of our Psychic relation with the Eternal and Infinite has very lucidly been established and explained, subsequently, in the Vedantic literature, generally known by the name of Upanishads. (Cheers.)

But, the Brahmatatwa, which is mysterious and unknowable, even to the brightest savants of Western Philosophies, was clearly comprehensible to the Indian Seers, is a fact, fully established in the Upanishads.

The literature revealed before the world, the solution of the great problem of life and death, the grand reflection, that supplanted the grand instinct of the Vedic period. The whole process of growth was a miracle—the force, that was verminating our literature and transcending the glorious phenomena of Nature, was rising from Nature's to Nature's God, was evidently a Divine one.

In the child, there was more than childishness, for his whole man-hood was there in the germ. So, the Divine seed of Vedic literature was slowly and surely developed into a vast tree of knowledge, in the shape of the Upanishads, which is recognised to be a glory of the intellect of our ancient Munis and Rishis, by the savants of modern Europe and America.

Then came another period of evolution in our Sanskrit literature, with a language changed to a very great extent, in form, in grammar, and, none the less, in respect of metres and matters.

Sanskrit literature was busy enough to prescribe for us the rules and regime of our daily life, both temporal and spiritual. The Ramayan and Mahabharat gave us the concrete examples in the shape of ethical biographies, nay, world, that the Eternal and Infinite is not Shapeless—has a Shape of His own—full of joy and full of life and He reveals Himself in this Shape, before the Bhakt to satisfy their Spiritual hankering; as they are not satisfied with a mere vague existence, seek to see His Beautiful Form, and want to enjoy His company.

The sublime sentiment of "Love Divine" has been shown before the world in our Puranic literature, of which the Srimat Bhagbatam is the fore-runner. (Cheers.)

This is an idea, quite original and a grand one in the whole history of the religious literature of the world, a fulfillment of our Psychical hankering, and, this has been taught in the sacred literature of India.

What more can a mortal aspire to?—The idea is grandest of the grand, most beautiful of the beautiful, most sublime of the religious ideas, which are fully developed such, as the human soul can conceive.

Our literature has been pervaded with religious sentiments, although, our lyrics and epics, our drama; novels are full of religious fervour. But, in spite of their highest aim, they are not, in any way, inferior to the excellence of any literary production, of any other nation in the world.

They are exquisitely beautiful in diction, mellifluous in their rich phraseology, and agreeable to the ear in their unsurpassed rhyme and rhythm.

Avigyan Sakuntalam,—the most beautiful drama of great Poet Kalidas, has won for it a world-wide reputation even Goethe, the fastidious German critic, has paid respectful homage to this immortal work.

The aim and object of the European dramatist are earth and earth-bound only, their tragedies are nothing, if not effusions of the lower passions, that rankle in the human heart; they are neither lofty, ennobling nor edifying.

But, our dramatic literature aims at object higher, lofty. It transcends the objects that are earthy, soars above, and, tends to show their readers a world, which is sweet, serene, beautiful and peaceful.—There is no struggle for existence, no rancour or malice, no troubles or calamities and turmoils, that infest and embarrass this doleful domain of misery and struggles.

So, you see, our literature has a christening and salutary influence on our Society. It prepares us for the Spiritual world. It elevates us in the scale of civilization. It gives high and noble aspirations. It raises our mind above all worldly cares and anxieties. It purifies the innermost core of our heart and spiritualises it, in spite of all the worldly temptations and attractions, and frees us from all worldly troubles and miseries.

Dealing on these points to a great length, the Chairman Dr. R. M. Chakraverti, urged his audience to take scientific education, in which this nation lacks very much, and which, he hoped, would raise the present generation of our countrymen, in the estimation of the Western race, and tend to remove the disadvantages and inconveniences, which we are suffering from, owing to the Scientific advancement and competition of foreign nations.

The Bengalis, he said, are recognised as the most intelligent race in the world. The time is coming, when they will stand foremost, and top the list of all the competitors of the world, in every branch of works, whether literary or scientific, ethical or political, civil or military, social or religious.

Let us work, then, he exclaimed, with fervour and enthusiasm and eloquence, let us work with head and heart, jointly and individually, for the speedy consummation of our destined end. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved after 6-30 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, Englishman, 8th, Statesman, Indian Mirror, Banda Mataram, 9th, and the Ananda Bazar Patrika, 17th January, 1907.)

As previously announced in the local Newspapers, the Calcutta Literary Society convened a Public Meeting at hall of the City College, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, Thursday, the 7th February, 1907, at 4-30 P.M., under the presidency of Mr. Jadu Nath Banerjee, B. L., Pleader at the Sealdah Court of Small Causes. The Meeting was

The proceedings of the Meeting commenced with a song by Mr. Hem Chandra Sen, Professor of Music, City College, Calcutta.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, first addressed the Meeting, thus :—

Address by the Secretary :—

Chairman and Gentlemen,

Before we begin the proceedings of the day, I have to express my deep sorrow, at the sad death of one of our beloved countrymen, Mr. Kali Charn Banerjea, M.A., B.L., Registrar of the Calcutta University, &c., which melancholy event happened on Wednesday, the 6th February, 1907, at 5-30 P.M., at his Calcutta residence, No. 20—8, Bar's Lane !

For some time passed, Mr. Kali Charn Banerjea was bedridden in his bed, and, although, latterly, very little hopes were entertained for his recovery, his friends and relatives, who constantly watched him, never thought that his end would come so soon !

He died at the age of 59 years, 11 months, and 28 days ! His remains were removed on the afternoon of Thursday, 7th February, 1907, from his residence to the Scottish Burial Ground, at 4 P.M., and the Funeral Cortege was expected to arrive at the Cemetery at 5-30 P.M., where, it was expected, a large number of his admirers would be present, tokens of their esteem, regard, and love for one, who did much for them !

Mr. Kali Charn Banerjea was a prominent figure in almost all the public movements, that made for the good of the country. He was well-known to all. He has left a large circle of friends and relatives, with numerous children, and a large family to bemoan his loss, at a time, when the country required his services, for the advancement of causes calculated to elevate our nation !

He was a good speaker. He always eloquently advocated measures calculated to push our countrymen forward, these days of competition !

He was a renowned pleader of the Calcutta High Court, Registrar of the Calcutta University, and Law lecturer of St. Albert, City and Ripon Colleges !

He was very much liked by his pupils, who always looked upon him as their friend and guardian. His talents fairly competed with those of the Presidency Judge, who attended the Law lecture there !

There was a sight worth-seeing ! As if, those present mourned the loss of a father or mother, who was dear and dear to them ! The heaving was immense, and those, who looked on it, cast a sad and lingering look behind them ! Tears were seen trickling down their eyes, on the awful occasion !

The following Resolutions were then read and adopted in solemn silence :—

"That the Calcutta Literary Society beg, to record its deep sorrow, at the sad death of one of its most esteemed countrymen, the late Mr. Kali Charn Banerjea, M.A., B.L., late Registrar of the Calcutta University, and who was well-known to the public, and who, by his eloquent lectures and addresses, electrified the audience !

That this Meeting offers its respectful condolence to the bereaved family of the late illustrious deceased in the hour of severe affliction !

That a copy of the Resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved family of the late illustrious deceased !

The Founder-Secretary to the Society then read the proceedings of the last Thirty-first Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held at the Classic Theatre, No. 68, Beadon Street, on Monday, the 7th January, 1907, at 5 P.M., which were duly confirmed.

The Chairman then introduced the venerable lecturer I. Peebles, M.D., the distinguished American Spiritualist, the Meeting, in a few well-chosen words, and asked him to deliver his first lecture to the Society on—

Hypnotism and Spiritualism :—

The learned Doctor, who, on rising, was received with cheers, then very eloquently dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention. He said :—

(No. 1.) Mesmerism, under some name and some form, is as ancient as the pyramidal hieroglyphs of Egypt, the cuneiform inscriptions of Assyrian antiquity, the oracle-temples for healing in Epiros, ancient Greece, all the way down to the mediæval ages to Mesmer, that distinguished physician, who made marvellous cures through the interposition of hands, and an unflagging will.

Though traduced by the medical fraternity of his time, his name and fame will live immortal in the pages of history.

While France, Germany and England had been honored with illustrious Scientists, and students at the shrine of the occult, no one gave so much lucidity and practical philosophy to the subject, as that distinguished Austrian Scientist, Baron Von Reichenbach.

As early as 1844, when I was poring over Greek and Latin dictionaries, and hunting over Hebrew roots, not of the least use to me now, Reichenbach was investigating and experimenting with crystals and magnets, and studying the effects of the two different poles of the magnet, as applied to nervo-sensitives.

He proved, that there was not only polarity in the human body, vitality and polarity in the hand, the one, under certain conditions, being positive, the other negative, but, he showed, that there was an aural emanation, luminous or grayish, corresponding to the moral status of the person, encircling the body, and he further discovered, that in the mesmeric process of healing, a white flimsy substance streamed off from the finger's ends, modified in efficacy, largely by the human will.

The human brain is a biological battery, the white and grey substances, corresponding in a way to the zinc and copper, in the electric battery, and the brain, so willing, sends magnetic currents and telegraphic communications, through the intertwining network of nerves to all parts of the physical organization ; and, here we catch a glimpse of what is denominated into suggestive healing.

(No. 2.) The Invisible aura :—

It is well-known, that every person is enveloped in an invisible luminous aura, an atmosphere, electric, or magnetic, attractive or repulsive, varying in quality, according to the vice or virtue of the individual.

It extends from a person by clairvoyant sensitives, from one to two, three, or even twenty-five feet and further, according to the potency of the will, and the moral dignity of the man ; hence, the common phrase, He is gifted with great personal magnetism. This aural emanation may be tested in various ways.

Mesmerism must not be confounded with terrestrial magnetism, or, electricity. They are very dissimilar. Electricity is evolved from a solid substance by friction and chemical action. It is more closely related to mineral matter than the delicate tissues of the human body.

It is useful in healing. Our earth is a spherical magnet, traversed by magnetic currents, and, if our bodies are correctly adjusted to these currents, especially, when asleep, we just as naturally get rest and strength therefrom, as buds and flowers get substance and crimson, or, gold colors from earth and sunshine.

(No. 3.) Quacks and Hypnotism :—

During a long medical practice in the old school, and later in both botanic remedies, and the psychic forces, I have never known a person injured by psycho-therapeutic mesmerism, but, have known thousands cured by it.

On the contrary, I have known many injured by hypnotism, especially those hypnotic tramps, who traverse America, giving hypnotic shows in drawing rooms and theatres. These should be shunned, as one would shun a den of slimy serpents.

That they have a smattering of hypnotic knowledge is admitted, but, their motives for money and mirth, often do irreparable injury. Hypnotism can excite, it can amuse, it can benefit in many cases, and certainly kills in such cases, as when reduced to Vendonism.

The serpent hypnotises, charms, and then devours the bird. Lion-tamers are hypnotists. The travelling Rarey, the horse-tamer, was a powerful hypnotist.

(No. 4.) Auto-suggestion:—

Auto-suggestion, which is self-suggestion, originating in the higher self, and, in line with Psycho-Therapeutics, is also a potent power in healing, and is allied to intuition, which, by the way, is the silent voice of the inmost spirit.

It is knowing. Knowing, without the process of thinking, and the more tedious process of reasoning. All the great regal-souled personages of the past, whose stirring words and noble lives have startled the world, were a fire, with intuition, auto-suggestion, and will power.

Nature is ever giving us hints. The oyster mends its shell with pearls. Would you heal yourself?

First, because, conscious of your own all-potent powers. Say, in yourself,—I am spirit—I am life—I am power—and, I have both the power and the right to remove this in-harmony from my physical organism—be removed?

I have a right to be well. I have right to enjoy life, and to make the most of it. This I will do.—This I am doing. I am King in my Soul-kingdom. I reign and will subdue the lower forces of my organization, and I will use my God-given powers, in healing and benefitting mankind, as well as myself, for we are all brothers. This is the spirit of Auto-suggestion.

All of these finer forces, suggestions, hypnotism, mesmerism and mind-reading point, directly to spiritualism, which is really the fruit of these mental blessings. Man is a spirit new, death relieves him of the flesh! (Cheers).

After Dr. J. M. Peebles had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words. He thanked the Society for the honor it had done him by inviting him to take the chair, on the occasion, and wished the Institution every success. He also thanked the venerable lecturer for his very interesting and instructive lecture.

The Meeting dissolved at 6 p. m., with votes of thanks to the Chair, and the venerable lecturer.

(Vide, Englishman, Bengalee, Banda-Malaram, Amrita-Bazar Patrika, 8th February, 1907.)

As previously announced in the local newspapers, the Calcutta Literary Society convened the Third Public Meeting, for the session, 1907, at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Sanker Ghose's Lane, in Cornwallis' Street, on Friday, the 8th February, 1907, at 4-30 p. m., under the presidency of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, (of Malancha, Echapur and Calcutta), F.R. C.L., (London), M.B. C.M., (Edinburgh), Fellow of the London Medical Society, Members of the Chelsea Chemical Society, the British Medical Association, &c, &c, &c.

The Meeting was very largely attended by the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University.

The Proceedings of the Meeting commenced with the singing of a Bengali song sung by Mr. Hem Chandra Sen, Professor of Music, City College, Calcutta.

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting held at the hall of the City College, No. 12, Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 7th February, 1907, at 4-30 p. m., which were duly confirmed, the Chairman, after introducing the venerable lecturer, Dr. J. M. Peebles, the distinguished American Spiritualist, to the Meeting, in a few well-chosen words, made a reference to the sad death of Mr. Kali Charn Banerjee, M.A., B.L., late Registrar of the Calcutta University, &c, which melancholy event took place on Wednesday, the 6th February, 1907, at 5-30 p.m., at his Calcutta residence No. 20-2, Sircar's Lane.

The Chairman addressed the Meeting thus:—

A Tribute to the Departed Great!

Gentlemen! We all meet here to-day, covered as we are, with deep sorrow and grief, at the sad death of one of our best men—the late Mr. Kali Charn Banerjee, M.A., B.L., Registrar of the University of Calcutta, Law Lecturer of the Ripon, City and Albert Colleges, &c, &c, &c, who, was well-known to every one of you, and the sad intelligence of whose death cannot but bring forth tears trickling down our eyes, as if we had lost a father, or mother, or brother, or sister, a son, or a daughter!

In Mr. Kali Charn Banerjee, we have lost one of the hardest of labourers in the vineyard of national progress!

His loss makes an aching void in the manhood of a race! I remember, vividly, the first time I met him was in the pandal of the Indian National Congress, 1900!

The frankness and simplicity, which are the hallmarks of all great people, were the first and foremost qualities, that made an impression on me. There was of that velvet ruffianism, which characterises the aspirants of these advertising days to National greatness.

When I heard, a few minutes later, his oration, in silvery and mellifluous tones, which so eminently distinguished him, bereft of heaving rhodomontades, billowy rhetoric, I imagined myself wafted back to Albert Hall, seated under the hypnotism of the best English orators!

Gentlemen! It may truly be said of him, that he pursued greatness—but, greatness, indeed, pursued him. He was not one of those, who paraphrased as saying, Early to bed and early to advertise, makes a healthy, wealthy and wise.

In the spirit of true Christian piety, he let not his hand know, what his right hand did! His religious conviction was not the expediency of the hour.

It was a deep and abiding faith in the sublimity and grandeur of his religion, and, if every Christian had lived his life through tempestuous ocean of mundane existence, as did the late Mr. Kali Charn Banerjee, M.A., the worshippers of faith and freedom, would amply cause to rejoice!

There is no gainsaying the fact, that, day by day, we are being confronted with a problem of a far-reaching nature—a problem, which, if not yet obtrusive in its manifestations, and, nevertheless, one of deep significance, and is the divorce of a spiritual, from the national life of the day.

One need not profess a particular faith to win the dominion of God. The portals of Heaven are wide open, and the charity of the Omnipotent is ample enough to envelope in its folds, all those, who are truly pious!

The life of Mr. Kali Charn Banerjee, M.A., B.L., is a grand lesson in this particular. The small voice of a deep religious conscience was ever his guiding lamp, and triumphs were the majestic and incalculable triumphs which Kings and Emperors seek in vain!

His halo was the brilliant effulgence, which surrounded all-sainted lives, and his memory will ever live, enshrined by all those noble qualities, which go to elevate the human, no less than the body spiritual!

The Nation, through him, has been enriched by a heritage. Let that heritage of a simple life be a pattern and an example to our race!

He then referred to Dr. J. M. Peebles, the distinguished American Spiritualist, as one, who had paid great attention to Spiritual matters, and, who had come all the way from America, to tell us his views on those interesting topics. He then asked the venerable lecturer to deliver his Speech to the Society on—

Progress of Races and the Destiny of the Human Soul:—

Dr. J. M. Peebles, who, on rising, was received with cheers, then very eloquently dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour, and he was listened to with rapt attention.

Dr. J. M. Peebles said, education should be the one theme in the world—if there can be only one word. By education he meant, a harmonious development of the material, physical and spiritual.

There was a discussion in America, as to whether America, or Asia was the older of the two. People held that the soil in America was older, as the mountains and rivers, and, also, human veins were older there.

In America, not long ago, a skull, with a flat nose and curl hair, was found sixteen feet under-ground. It was the skull of a Negro. But, when America had been discovered by Columbus, there were no Negros there.

He next referred to his visit to the Egyptian Pyramids, where he found a coffer, which he came to know was a national measurement.

He said a single granite there, which weighed nine hundred tons. But, these wonderful things were nothing compared to the stupendous progress, which the modern world had made in the march of knowledge.

Speaking about the different divisions in the Christian rich, preachers of which proposed to give, each of them a new Gospel, which, he believed, to be true, the venerable Dr. J.M. Peebles said that they should rather go to their own camps, and decide among themselves, which of the Gospels they should agree upon.

God was the only truth, and the things, which people saw and about that, they called matters, were sham matters. Visible, that he saw before him, was a heap of ashes. As rather gases, which vanished finally. The soul, body, the astral body was the aggregate, which the Atma was God, which cannot die.

The venerable Doctor continued, that he had now enjoyed, as he did, at the present time. He was a young man of fifty-five. Why?—Because, he lived rightly. He took no coffee, no wines, and nothing of the kind. He lived grains and cereals and vegetables.

Speaking of the Civil Wars, the venerable Doctor observed that Christians north, and Christians south fought in a resolution, that was worthy of the English name.

The venerable Doctor admired the life lived by the farmers of America, who were a very simple people, who had cattle, ordered farms, which they did not call cattle, my farms, but, our cattle, and our farms.

He heard people talking about Heaven. He did not know where it was.

He understood Heaven to mean nothing, but harmony. To enjoy Heaven, people must comply with the laws of nature. The world was a happy world. Of course, there was grief, sorrow and lamentations after death.

But, all this ensued from a false belief. People were preaching God, but, they could seldom reach him.

The venerable Doctor thought that, it was, because, they were proceeding on a definite plan. Men were all brothers, cause, they were sons of the same Divine Father.

The venerable Doctor felt in his room, every day, the presence of extraordinary unseen powers. A gentleman, the venerable Doctor stated, had asked him, how he knew that there was a life beyond the grave? To this, the venerable Doctor said, that he knew it by intuition, by his best judgment, and, also, by the testimony of people, corroborating his belief.

After the venerable Doctor had finished his speech, a number of interesting questions were asked to the Doctor, by the audience, some of which, with the answers, are given below :—

Q. How do you identify Spirits?

A. To good clairvoyants Spirits identify themselves, materialising themselves, giving their homes, and so on. When I bed, I call Spirits. Saying, come Spirits, shake me up. They do come and shake me up.

Q. Do Spirits live separate lives in the Spirit-world?

A. Yes, they do live in separate lives.

Q. Do Spirits fill space, like matters?

A. Matters do not fill space. Spirits are like points

Q. What is the relation between a lesser Spirit and the supreme Spirit—God.

A. The relation is that of father and son.

Q. Have you ever seen a Spirit?

A. Yes. I have seen a lot in materialised forms?

Q. Are you a believer in the theory of the Transmigration of the Soul?

A. I don't believe in the theory, that men are born again as men, jackals, dogs, birds, fowls, or, any other animal of a lower order.

Q. Where do people of bad character go?

A. They go, after their death, to gambling shops, rogues-shops, and, the nasty places in the Spirit-world, like that they frequent in this world.

Q. Is there any hell?

A. No hell. Heaven or hell is within one's own heart.

With the usual votes of thanks to the Chair and the venerable lecturer, the Meeting separated at 6:30 P.M.

(See, Englishman and Bengalee, 9th February, and Banda Mataram, 12th February, 1907.)

As previously announced in the local news papers, the Fourth Public Meeting, for the session, 1907, convened by the Calcutta Literary Society, was held at the hall of Chowdhary Mahammed Laik's jubilee Institution, No. 29, Mirzapur Street, on Tuesday, the 16th. April, 1907, at 5 P. M., under the presidency of Nawab Mirza Shujaat Ali Khan, Consul-General for Persia. The Meeting Nasir-ul-Mamalak Sahib was well attended.

Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, having read the Proceedings of the last Meeting. (held at the hall of the Metropolitan College, No. 22, Sanker Ghose's Lane, in Cornwallis Street, on Friday, the 8th. February, 1907, at 4-30 P. M., when Dr. J.M. Peebles, the distinguished American Spiritualist, delivered his second lecture to the Society on the Progress of Races and the Destiny of the Human Soul, under the presidency of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, which were duly confirmed, the Secretary addressed the Meeting thus:—

Address by the Secretary :—

Nawab Sahib and Gentlemen!

The Calcutta Literary Society regrets to record the sad death of His Highness Sir Jaswant Singhji, K.C.I.E., Thakur Sahib of Limbdi, and one of the oldest illustrious Members, who joined the Society, on Saturday, the 3rd. April, 1882, (or, nearly a quarter of a century), and took great interest in the welfare of this Literary Institution of Thirty-two years standing!

Last year, at about this time, His Highness lost considerable property, to the value of about Eighty lacs of Rupees, which were burnt to ashes by fire, and this year, His Highness breathed his last!

His Highness' death being mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives, who deeply share in the sad bereavement!

The following Resolutions, were then read and adapted in solomn silence :—

(1) That the Calcutta Literary Society begs to record its deep sorrow at the sad death of one of its most illustrious Members, His Highness the late Sir Jaswant Singhji, K.C.I.E., Thakur Sahib of the State of Limbdi, in Kathiwar, who was a Member of the Society, since Saturday, the 3rd. April, 1882, (or, nearly Twenty-five years), which melancholy event happened on Sunday, the 14th. April, 1907!

(2) That this Meeting offers its respectful condolence to the bereaved family of the deceased in the hour of severe late illustrious affliction!

(3) That a Letter of Condolence, with a copy of the above Resolutions, be forwarded to the bereaved family of the late distinguished Chief, at being deprived of their best friend and supporter!

The Chairman then asked Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal to deliver his lecture on—

The Life and Teachings of the late venerable Swami Vivekananda :

The learned lecturer dwelt upon his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour, and he was listened to with great attention, He said :—

The Life of the venerable Swami Vivekananda is so noble, and his teachings are so valuable, that though his death occurred a few years ago, a sketch of his life must for ever be fascinating.

Swami Vivekananda was born in Calcutta, on Thursday, the 9th January, 1862, in one of the oldest Kayasta Families, known as the Hathkholi Dutt Family of Calcutta.

While he was a child, he used to be called Vireswar, as he was born after a long and earnest worship of Siva, at Benares. When he entered school, his name was changed to Narendranath Dutt. He was educated at the General Assembly's College, Calcutta.

In 1884, he obtained the B. A., Degree of the Calcutta University. At an early age, he became the inseparable disciple of the late Sri Ram Krishna Paramhansa. It was at that venerable Sage's feet, that he learnt the great truths, to which he afterwards gave expression in words of imperishable beauty.

On Monday, the 16th. August, 1886, Sri Rami Krishna Paramhansa passed away! And soon after, Swami Viveka- nanda went alone to the Himalaya Mountains, lived there for six years, and attained that luminous spiritual perception, which distinguished him from other men.

Thence, he went to Tibet, and studied there Buddhism. He had a mind to attend the Parliament of Religions. And, so, in 1893, he was sent to America by His Highness the late Rajah Sahib of Ramnad, where Dr. Barrows put him down as the Representative of Hinduism to the Great Parliament of Chicago. He made a great impression there.

His opening speech brought him instantaneous fame, and he became the central figure of the Chicago Parliament.

The Svami, before the first year of his stay in America, had two American disciples, and made there Vedantism popular.

In 1896, he went to England, and during his three months stay there, he made the acquaintance of Professor Max Mullar, and had three disciples. He lectured there also on Vedantism.

On Wednesday, the 16th. December, 1896, he started for India, and made an extensive tour through Colombo, Almora, Kashmere, Lahore, Madras, and other countries, discoursing on Religious topics. Since that time, till the end of his life, his constructive work was simply wonderful.

He founded two monasteries, for training Brahmacharyas. One, about six miles north of Calcutta, and the other, in the Himalayas. He organised the Sacred Ramkrishna Mission, and settled the lives, on which it was to work for the betterment of the people of the land. During the great famine of 1897, he started the Ramkrishna Mission Relief Works, at various places in India.

Under such continued exertion, his health gave way, and, medical experts advised a short residence in England and America. So, in 1899, he again went to England and thence to the United States in America.

After a short stay at California, his health improved, and he again took up platform work. He established a Vedantu Society and an Asram, called a Shanti Asram, in San Francisco, which are now in a flourishing condition.

In New York, he accepted an invitation to attend the Congress of Religions to be held in Paris, in 1900. There he delivered lectures on Hindu Philosophy, in French.

From there he returned to India, with his health utterly shattered. But, his fiery nature could not brook the dictates of doctors, and, as soon as he saw works to do, he would be restless till it was satisfactory done.

In 1900, he came back to India, with broken health.

He started the Ram Krishna Sevasrama, for helping Sadhus. Another Asram was opened at Benares for teaching Brahmacharyya to the young people of India.

He also started a Training Home for students, called the Ram Krishna Pathshala. He also established the Ram Krishna Home of Service at Benares, to relieve the distress of the poor and the helpless.

Svami Vivekananda advocated foreign travel, as his following remarks make clear.

"We cannot do without the world outside India. The more you go out and travel among the nations of the world, the better for you and the country. The sign of life is expansion. We must go out, expand, show life, or, degenerate, foster and dies. There is no other alternative."

His views, on the improvement of Indian female education, elevation of the masses food, &c., should engage the serious consideration of our countrymen.

Svami Vivekananda was such a notable personage, of whom, any nation may well be proud of, and he has left a legacy of thought, which, it is our duty to use daily in the service of our beloved India.

On Friday, the 4th. July, 1902, he went into Mahasamadhi, at Belur Math, and passed away peacefully from the world of men, at an early age of Forty!

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. K. C. Ghose, B.A., spoke very eloquently on the subject for nearly a quarter of an hour. He, was listened to with great attention.

The Chairman then made a nice little speech for nearly half an hour, and thanked the speakers.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P. M., with hearty votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned speakers.

(Vide, Englishman, Indian Daily News, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 17th, and Indian Mirror, Bengalee and Bandu, Mataram, 18th April, 1907.)

The Calcutta Literary Society convened an Open Meeting at Beadon Square, on Friday, the 24th May, 1907—being the day associated with the birth of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria the Good, Empress of India, to celebrate the Empire Day.

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to Society, had read the Proceedings of the last Meeting held at the hall of the Mahammed Laik's Jubilee Institute, No. 29, Mirzapur Street on Tuesday, the 16th April, 1907, under the presidency of Nawab Shujaat Ali Khan Bahadur, Consul-General for Persia, which were duly confirmed, Mr. Gabin Chandra Dhar, the Vice-President of the Society, addressed the Meeting for nearly a quarter of an hour. He was heard with great attention. He said:

Gentlemen, we meet here to-day, to commemorate the Empire Day—the Birthday of Her Most Gracious Majesty the late Queen Victoria, Empress of India. (Cheers.)

Perhaps, no other personage ever sat on the Throne of England, who did so much for the welfare of Her Majesty's subjects than Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. Her Imperial Majesty reigned over Her Majesty's vast Dominions for a longer period than any other Member of the Royal Family. (Cheers.)

Her Majesty fully enjoyed the blessings of the people during Her Majesty's long and glorious administration. Her Majesty's name is still remembered with the fondest recollections. (Cheers.)

Her Majesty's name is associated with many acts of beneficence, which will long be remembered. At the present day, we, Her Majesty's loyal subjects, never pronounced Her Majesty's name, without offering benedictions upon Her Majesty's Royal name and upon Her Majesty's Royal Family. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India is looked upon as the representative of that Divine Being, who rules over the whole Universe.

Every body, in India, wishes that the reign of England might continue, so that, we might enjoy the many blessings, which Her late Imperial Majesty's Royal Family has conferred upon the people of India.

The people and Parliament of England always send and depute the most illustrious members of the aristocracy to rule over India, and we cherish the fondest affection for the interest, which England takes for our welfare.

The blessings of a subject-people are the only good things, which a foreign Ruler can expect from a subject-race, and, there is hardly any Indian subject, who does not wish that long may continue the sovereignty of Her Gracious Sovereign, so that, we might enjoy peace, plenty, prosperity and its accompanying good things, which might fall on the lot of a foreign people.

To rule a foreign nation, whose habits and customs of living and religion differ from those of the Sovereign, is a most difficult task, and, the way, in which the people of England have been discharging this task towards a subject-race, whom it has pleased Providence to place under them, indeed, surpasses our admiration.

But, what can we return for the gracious sovereignty of the English people over us, of their beneficent rule, but, our gratitude and loyalty, and this, we are pleased to say, no other subject-people does ever pay to a Ruler as we do from the inmost recesses of our hearts. (Cheers.)

No body regrets the anarchy, which is prevailing in the present time than we do, and no body wishes for the return of better days, and the entire subduing of that anarchy, which, indeed, can do no good, more harm than we can, at present, conceive.

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that the Calcutta Literary Society have been celebrating the Empire Day since His Most Excellent Majesty's accession to the Throne of England, and, we hope, we might continue to celebrate this day, from year to year. (Cheers.)

May God bless His Imperial Majesty with long health, peace and prosperity, and may His Divine Providence shower forth His choicest blessings upon India and its people. (Cheers.)

(Vide, Englishman, Indian Daily News, Indian Mirror, 25th. May, 1907.)

Gentlemen, His Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor of India is looked upon as the representative of that Divine Being, who rules over the whole universe. (Cheers.)

It is His Divinity, which headeth the body of a King. We revere a King-Emperor, whose tradition has come down to us from generation, and we have great regard and love for our Imperial Majesty.

It is, because, His Imperial Majesty Edward VII. is an illustrious son and heir of our beloved Queen Victoria, who ruled over us with a grace, peculiar to Her Majesty. We are all well aware that His Imperial Majesty represents a Royal House, whose like is not to be found elsewhere.

It is the tie of friendship that binds the two nations together, that makes us love each other, with a force peculiar to ourselves.

It is loyalty and devotion to the Imperial Throne of England that attaches us to a foreign people, who have made India what it is to-day.

No language can express our sincere attachment to the people of England. We owe to them all the blessings which we enjoy, with such ease and comfort. (Cheers.)

We have, no doubt, that our attachment will increase from year to year, as we grow up in age and wisdom. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, now we all earnestly pray to the Almighty Disposer of Events to pour forth His choicest blessings upon His Imperial Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

May His Imperial Majesty and the Royal Family live long and continue to prosper. (Cheers.)

As previously announced in Amrita Bazar Patrika, Bengalee, Indian Mirror, &c., the Calcutta Literary Society convened a Condolence Public Meeting, in College Square, on Thursday, the 1st. August, 1907, after 5 P. M., on account of the sad death of its venerable old President, the late Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the Meeting was very largely attended. Members of the Society, Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, friends and admirers of the late Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, President, Calcutta Literary Society, composed the bulk of the audience. Babu Baidya Nath Mukerjea, B. A., was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

Babu Sham Lall Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, addressed the Meeting thus :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen! We meet here to-day under the shadow of a great and mighty grief—a grief, which in its intensity, can only be paralleled by the acutest of domestic losses, and, which, in its extent, is not provincial—but national!

The Calcutta Literary Society extremely regrets to record the sad death of its old and venerable President, the late Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, who died on Friday, the 19th July, 1907, at 4 A. M., at his residence, No. 1, Sovaram Bysack's 1st Lane, Colutola Street, Calcutta, at his ripe old age of Seventy-seven! The Office of the Society was closed for three days, in honor of the memory of the deceased.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar was led up in his bed for a few days only, and, although, latterly, very little hopes were entertained for his recovery, his friends and relatives, who had constantly watched him, never thought that his end would be so near.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar was pre-eminently a self-made man. He rose from the humble rank of a clerk to the post of Chief Superintendent of the Army Medical Department, by dint of perseverance, honesty, and ability.

Along with the late venerable Pandit Ishwar Chandra Vidyasagra, C. I. E., Mr. Shama Charan Dey, and Mr. Nobin Chandra Sen, eldest brother of the late Mr. Keshab Chandra Sen, he was one of that band of patriotic workers, who founded the Hindu Family Annuity Fund, situated at No. 1, Mirzapur Street, which has done, and, is still doing, such excellent work for the benefit of Hindu widows and orphans. (Cheers).

He was a regular contributor to the Press of the day and the Indian Mirror is under no small obligation to him, for the ungrudging and valuable service he rendered to it, during the early part of its existence.

Only a short while ago, he contributed a very interesting paper on the late Lord Dalhousie to the pages of Mr. Malabari's well-known periodical, the East and the West.

During the declining period of his life, and even when age and disease had rendered it extremely painful and difficult for him to hold his pen, he would dictate to others, his views on the burning topics of the day, for publication in the press.

Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar was a man of sterling worth, whose strong common sense, combined with the transparent sincerity of his character, his un-questioned integrity and moral rectitude made him a valuable member of our Indian Community.

The following Resolutions were then read and adopted, in solemn silence!

(1) That the Calcutta Literary Society begs to record its deep sorrow at the sad death of its venerable President, the late Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, who died in his old age of Seventy-seven, on Friday, the 19th July, 1907, at 4 A. M., at his residence, No. 1, Sovaram Bysack's 1st Lane, Colutola Street, Calcutta.

Proposed by Mr. Gouri Sankar De, M.A., B.L., Fellow and Examiner of the University of Calcutta, Professor, General Assemblys' College, Vice-President and Member of the Calcutta Literary Society, &c., &c., &c.

Seconded by Mr. Sham Lall Day, Founder-Secretary, Calcutta Literary Society.

Carried unanimously.

(2) That this Public Meeting offers its respectful condolence to the bereaved family of its late President, Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, in the hour of severe affliction!

Seconded by Mr. Purna Chandra Sen.

Carried unanimously.

(3) That a copy of the above Resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved family of the late deceased!

Proposed by Mr. Hem Chandra Mukerjea, M.A., B. Member, Calcutta Literary Society.

Seconded by Mr. A. T. Mukerjea.

Carried unanimously.

(4) That steps be taken to raise funds for a Memorial of its late President, Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, in recognition of his great service to the Calcutta Literary Society, since the year 1897!

Proposed by Mr. Pratul Chandra Dutt, B.A., B. Member, Calcutta Literary Society.

Seconded by Mr. Sham Lall Day, Founder-Secretary, Calcutta Literary Society.

Carried unanimously.

Calcutta, 1st August, 1907, Baidya Nath Mukerjea, B. Chairman of the Meeting.

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, Indian Daily News, Indian Mirror, Ban Mataram, &c., 2nd, and Indian Mirror, 6th and 11th August, 1907.)

The Calcutta Literary Society convened an Open Air Meeting at Cornwallis' Square, on Friday, 19th August, 1907, at 7 A.M., to celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty Edward VII. King of England and Emperor of India. The Meeting was well-attended by all classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects.

Mr. Sham Lall Day, Founder-Secretary, Calcutta Literary Society, addressed the Meeting thus :—

Address by the Secretary :—

Gentlemen, my first duty is to welcome you all, and thank you for your presence here to-day. Allow me to thank you also for the honor you have shown by giving me the opportunity of speaking to you a few words. I am grateful that this honor has fallen upon me, when I see, around me, so many Indian friends, who could address to you much better than can.

A tribute to the departed great!

Gentlemen! Before we begin the proceedings of the day, allow us to express, at this Public Meeting, our deep and sincere regret at the sad death of His Highness Sir Bhawani Singh Lokendra Sahib, K.C.S. Maharajah of Datia, who was one of the oldest and illustrious Members of the Calcutta Literary Society.

His Highness was born in 1854, succeeded to the Gadi of the State of Datia, in November, 1857, joined the Calcutta Literary Society, as a Member, on Friday, the 16th November 1883, and continued to be an active member till the last days of His Highness' life.

His Highness received the Distinction of K.C.S. in 1898, and died on Saturday, the 3rd August, 1907, at the age of fifty-three!

Gentlemen! Thus you will see that His Highness' connection with the Society was for nearly a quarter of a century. His Highness' death is mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives, who share in the sad bereavement!

The office of the Society was closed for one day, in honor of the memory of the late illustrious deceased. A letter of condolence was duly forwarded to His Highness' bereaved family, on Thursday, the 8th August, 1907!

The Secy. then read the Proceedings of the Seventh Public Meeting, for the session, 1907, convened by the Society, in College Square, on Thursday, the 1st August, 1907, to express sorrow at the demise of its lamented venerable President, Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, who died on Friday, the 19th. July, 1907, at 4 A.M., at his ripe old age of Seventy-seven, his residence, No. 1, Sovaram Bysack's 1st lane, Nilotola Street, Calcutta. He said:—

Gentlemen! Standing here to-day, we miss the familiar face, whom we have seldom, if ever missed, any of the Society's Public Meeting—I mean, the Mr. Gobin Chandra Dhar, who acted as President of the Society, since the year 1897. In him, we have lost a friend and guide! May his soul rest in peace in heaven!

The Congratulatory Meeting:—

KNOLLYS.

The Calcutta Literary Society hopes to observe it with due solemnity and distribute alms to the poor as a token of loyalty and devotion to the Throne of England, for many years to come. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, with us, the Hindus, loyalty to the reigning Sovereign is not mere lip devotion, but, solemn and religious duty imposed by the Hindu Shastras, to which every true believer is expected to respond. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen! We are proud to think that His Imperial Majesty Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India, rules over a larger number of Hindus than any other Sovereign in the world, and we cannot but feel devoted and attached to the Throne for our peace, plenty, and prosperity. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the woe and affliction, which passed over India, at the time of His Imperial Majesty's last unfortunate illness, bear witness to the sincere loyalty and devotion of the millions of India. Even the humblest Ryot feels attached to the great and kind Sovereign.

Gentlemen! Never before was there such universal peace in the land! Never before was life and prosperity so secure! And never before were the people so happy and prosperous. Little wonder, then, that we feel attached to His Imperial Majesty's Throne with devotion and loyalty.

Rai Srinath Pal Bahadur, B.A., B.L., Zemindar, Merchant, and an illustrious Member

Born, Tuesday, the 17th November, 1857

Biographical Brief Sketch of RAI SRINATH PAL BAHADUR. B.A., B.L.,
Zemindar, Merchant, &c.

Rai Bahadur Srinath Pal, B.A., B.L., was born on Tuesday, the 17th November, 1857, corresponding to 3rd Aghran, 1264, B.S. He was chiefly educated in Calcutta, took his B.A. degree, in the Presidency College, whence he also passed the B.L. examination in 1883.

In 1883, he joined the Berhampur Bar, where, after practising for three or four years, became a Member of the Council of Management to the vast estates of the late Maharani Surnomoyee, C.I., of Cossimbazar, who was his aunt, (mother's sister).

Maharani Surnomoyee, C.I., who was held in high esteem as the personification of charity in Bengal, was the most illustrious representative of the distinguished House and made herself conspicuous by her liberality from the very beginning of her life. Her devotion to Religion was unexampled. The lady performed all sorts of rites and ceremonies in Orthodox Hindu style.

Maharani Surnomoyee, C.I., expressed kind words of encouragement and sympathy with the work and efforts of the Calcutta Literary Society. In her letter, No. 112, dated the 10th April, 1879, addressed to its Founder and Secretary, she concluded her letter thus:—Wishing the Society every success. And again, in her letter, No. 104, dated the 4th March, 1880, she wrote:—I am glad the Society is growing in worth and importance.

Rai Bahadur Srinath Pal was latterly appointed as the General Manager of the vast estates of the Cossimbazar Raj. The Rai Bahadur was the Chairman of the Berhampur Municipality for six years, and was also an Honorary Magistrate with powers to sit singly.

In recognition of his public spirit and the good management of the Cossimbazar Raj Estate, Government decorated him with the title of Rai Bahadur, in, or about the year, 1894.

The Berhampur Water-Works was inaugurated under his auspices and support, and the whole scheme was promoted by him.

After the death of the Maharani Surnomoyee, C. I., in August, 1897, he severed his connection with the Raj and lately, has settled in Calcutta, since 1902.

He owns a lot of Zemindaries in some of the important districts of Bengal. He also owns coal and mica mines and is an import and export merchant and is the proprietor of the well-known firm of Messrs. Yartin & Company. He spends considerable amounts of money in public and private charities every year. He is also a Director of one of the important Insurance Companies in Calcutta. He is also one of the Vice-Presidents of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce.

The peculiarity of Rai Bahadur's benefactions is that all classes of people, without distinction of caste, color or creed, have benefitted by them. His energy, untiring devotion to business, easy accessibility to persons of all classes and creeds, purity of life, and moral integrity, ungrudging help to friends and relatives are the most prominent features of a character of singular force. He is a distinguished Member of the Calcutta Literary Society, since Saturday, the 4th January, 1908, and always takes a deep interest in its welfare. The Rai Bahadur has a son and one daughter. The former by name Satyendra Nath Pal (born 1st November, 1895, corresponding to 16th Kartic, 1302, B.S.), is an Under-Graduate of the Calcutta University, prosecuting his studies in the Presidency College.

The Rai Bahadur is, as stated above, accessible to all. He is full of sympathy. A great personality he makes himself felt as soon as one comes in contact with him. He knows the needs of the poor, and he has the heart to supply those needs.

May God bless him with long life, health, peace and prosperity.

SHAM LALL DAY,
Founder and Secretary to the Society.

Kametaro Jijima, Consul-General for the Acting Consul-General for Germany and others, for their absence from the Meeting. The Founder-Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society then addressed the Meeting thus:

Address by the Secretary :—

Bahadur and Gentlemen,

I feel great pride and honor in welcoming you to this gathering. It betokens the interest of those, who have been called to the duties of their rank, wealth and position. It is indeed, a pleasure to see personages of your rank and position mixing with those of your countrymen, who are engaged in the noble work of helping to improve their prospects, which, indeed, is a duty obligatory on every one, and which, in the sunshine of happiness and prosperity, is the benign rule of His Most Gracious Majesty King of England and Emperor of India. As royal citizens, we ought to take an interest in seeing that nothing is left undone to what may contribute to the welfare of the Empire, and the happiness of those, who owe every thing to the munificence of their common

By commencing the usual proceedings of the Thirty-second Anniversary Meeting, allow me to express the sincere heart-felt sorrow caused by the melancholy death of our venerable President, the late Mr. Gobin Chandra who died on Friday, the 19th July, 1907, at 4 A.M., at his paternal residence, No. 1, Sovaram Bysack's 1st Colutola Street, Calcutta, at his ripe old age of 77 years.

He was led up in his bed for a few days only, and, finally, latterly, very little hopes were entertained for his recovery. His friends and relatives, who had constantly attended him, never thought that his end would be so near. He was born in the middle of August, 1830, became President of the Society in 1897, and continued the office till the last days of his life. He presided in many of the public and private Meetings, and always took great interest in the welfare of this Literary Institution of Thirty-years standing. The office of the Society was closed for three days, in honor of his memory.

With profound regret that I have also to announce the death of the under-mentioned noblemen and gentlemen, who were distinguished Members and Officers of the Society; Viz. :—

His Highness Sir Bhawani Singh Lokendra, K.C.S.I., Rajah Sahib of Datia, who died on Saturday, the 14th August, 1907, at the age of Fifty-three. His Highness joined the Society as a Member on Friday, the 16th November, 1883, (or, nearly a quarter of a century), and continued it till the last days of his life.

The office of the Society was closed for one day, in honor of the memory of the late illustrious deceased.

(2) His Highness Sir Jaswant Singhji, K. C. I. R., Thaker Sahib of Limbdi, who died on Sunday, the 14th April, 1907. His Highness joined the Society as a Member on Saturday, the 3rd April, 1882, (or, nearly a quarter of a century), and continued it till the last days of his life.

(3) Rajah Rangayya Appa Row Sahib of Nazvid State, who died on Friday, 20th July, 1906.

(4) Mr. Kali Charan Banerjee, M. A., B. L., Registrar of the Calcutta University, who died on Wednesday, the 6th February, 1907, at 5-30 P. M., at the age of 59 years, 11 months, and 28 days.

(5) Mr. Umesh Chandra Dutt, B. A., Principal, City College, who died on Wednesday, the 20th June, 1907.

(6) Rai Pasupati Nath Bose Bahadur, who died on Monday, the 9th December, 1907, at Simultola. He was a leader of the Kayastha community of Calcutta.

(7) Babu Manik Lal Seal, Zemindar, who died on Thursday, the 12th September, 1907.

If the President of the Society, the late Babu Gobin Chandra Dhar, had been living to-day, he would have gladly addressed you on the present occasion. The success of the work of the Society, measured by the number, substance and length of the speeches delivered at its various Meetings, has been great. But, to our extreme regret, he has untimely been snatched away by the cruel hand of death!

Gentlemen, the Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, when His Most Excellent Majesty Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, visited these shores, (then as His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales), and has gone on prospering from year's end to year's end.

Gentlemen, We have assembled here to-day to celebrate the Thirty-second Anniversary of the Calcutta Literary Society. It is a matter of congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm. I cannot allow this opportunity to slip away, without expressing my heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of events, for His unusual kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

Gentlemen, the objects of the Society are :—To hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities, and to discuss social, literary and scientific subjects, and the Society has thus been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform.

Gentlemen, since the date of the foundation of the Society in 1875, it has been able to organise hundreds of public Meetings presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects; and, by so doing, it has achieved a fair measure of success.

When lectures, on subjects, delivered in the English language, had been well-nigh exhausted, the Society invited some of the most learned men of the city, and those, who visited it, to deliver lectures in Hindi and Bengali, on abstruse subjects.

The Society has enrolled among its Honorary Members the flowers of the European and Indian communities.

I have the pleasure in submitting a synoptical Report of the transactions of the Society, for the year 1907 :—

The Thirty-first Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, at the Classical Theatre, No. 68, Beadon Street, on Monday, the 7th January 1907, at 5 p.m., under the presidency of Dr. Rasick Mohan Chakraverti, Secretary, Gouranga Samaj, Editor, Ananda Bazar Patrika, before a large and influential gathering upwards of one thousand persons, when the Chairman delivered an excellent speech on Indian Literature. Calcutta Literary Society.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of the various public Meetings, convened by the Institution, published in the leading local newspapers, for the last thirty years, bear ample testimony to them.

Gentlemen, our Society is a Literary Society from the giving. It has nothing to do with Politics; and therefore, expects, the sympathy of all, who take a lively interest in literary pursuits, as the country can really push forward in the march of civilization and advancement, which so much stands in need of.

The Society records its appreciation of the kindness of the Editors of the English and Vernacular Newspapers, who have found space in their columns, to publish the proceedings of its various Meetings and other doings of the Society since its foundation in 1875.

Now, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to its illustrious Patrons and Members, for their unabated interest in its welfare; to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its various Meetings and to those, who presided on the occasions, as well as to the gentlemen, who lent their hall for holding its Meetings. Cheers.

In conclusion, the Society begs to offer its thanksgivings to the Great God, for the manifold blessings, which Providence has showered upon it, during the last thirty-two years of its existence, from 1875 to 1907, and I earnestly hope that, by the blessings of Providence, the Society may go on prospering in its career of usefulness for many years to come. (Cheers.)

After Babu Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report for the year 1907, which was duly confirmed, the venerable Pandit Radha Swami Goswami entertained the audience with his sweet singing songs.

The Chairman then asked Mr. K. Choudry, (late of Manchester University), to read his paper on—

Socialism :—

Mr. K. Choudry then rose, amidst cheers, and very ably dwelt with his subject for nearly half an hour. He was heard with rapt attention. He said :—

Gentlemen, a system, which seeks to re-organise society on the basis of community of interest and of co-operation of labor for common good, is known as socialism.

The history of the movement dates from 1817 and Mr. Robert Owen, an Englishman, may be called the father of socialism.

In France, the movement declared itself during the Revolution of 1830 and its first and foremost advocate was Mr. Foutier.

German and Russian Socialism sprang into existence after 1850 and Mr. Karl Marx was the greatest exponent and founder of modern Scientific Socialism, of Jewish extraction. He was born in Germany and had a liberal education in Philosophy and History.

His ideal was not to subvert the existing political machinery and he was in favor of State compulsion and to abolish competition and class monopolies. He reduced Socialism to a system, which is, indeed, the basis of a Social Philosophy of the greatest importance to the present economic development of Europe.

The re-organisation of society, already referred to, on the basis of Socialism, can be achieved by the abolition of class distinction, by the collective control of the means of production, an equitable distribution of the produced wealth, and, lastly, the gradual introduction of much needed Social reforms.

The abolition of class distinction, based on the possession of property and wealth, can best be understood by a reference to the classes that now exist in Europe, where Scientific Socialism had its origin.

In Europe and, generally, in the West, there are three classes; viz :—

- (1) The capitalist, with whom is merged the Aristocracy, who never spin, nor toil, but, depend on the production of others.
- (2) The working-class, or, the producing proletariat, who were once termed as hewers of wood and drawers of water.
- (3) The middle-class, or the middle men of generally sedentary occupation, who act between the two.

These three classes are somewhat similar to our leisured-class, including the landed aristocracy, the merchant, princes, bankers, etc., the educated people, including lawyers, doctors, assistants and officials and the labourers, (i.e.) those, who depend on manual labor, including the village Ryots.

The first named class, in the West, attach an exaggerated importance to capital and enrich themselves on the profits of the industry or estates, which they control for their own interest, while the proletariat has to content himself with modest wages, his particular trade allows irrespective of the amount of profit his production yields.

The middle man generally enjoys a growing income, compatible with the prosperity of industries.

Worst, therefore, is the lot of the producers, who comprise almost eighty per cent. of European population, including their dependants.

They depend more or less on a maximum or fixed wages and has the risk of being thrown out of work when the trade is at its ebb.

To combat against in-security and generally to protect workmen, certain unions of trade have been formed in accordance with the principles of Socialism.

The objects of trade unionism is to bring about improvements in the conditions of labor, such as an increase of wages, or reduction of the working day, by means of limiting the supply of labor, &c.

When the employers are unwilling to grant them higher wages, than the prosperity of trade warrants, the weapon of the unionist is, of course, a strike, but, on the other hand, if the working men demand higher wages than the trade-warrants, or are unwilling to submit to a reduction of wages, when there is a depression in trade, the employers have recourse to a lock out; (i.e.) closing of the workshop.

In Lancashire, at present the industrial outlook is not very cheerful and the factory-hands are threatened with a lock out, if they persist in their present wage, which, according to the views of employers, the trade cannot stand. But, happily, the use of either of these weapons is becoming more and more obsolete, owing to the strict and satisfactory methods of conciliation recently adopted.

We may, therefore, expect a diminution in the number of industrial struggles in the future and Social peace before long will be a settled fact.

But, here, in India, many a decade will elapse, before industrial peace is possible, unless, the attitude, or, the policy of our present employers is greatly modified.

We all sincerely regret the recent Railway strikes and its disastrous consequences. In the opinion of the leading newspapers, they could have been avoided, if better sense prevailed in Clive street.

It seems, almost inexplicable that in a system of Railway, which is almost State-owned and State-controlled, that such a catastrophe is possible, notwithstanding the fact that the Socialists are staunch advocates of State-ownership and State-control of the means of transit, as one of the solutions of industrial difficulties; but, I suppose, this is a question for the politicians to answer.

The object of alluding to the latest Railway crisis is to show that we should give due recognition to the force of labour, which is slowly but inevitably declaring itself even in a backward country like India.

All the world own that the capitalists' aim at getting the maximum of labor for the minimum of wages, while the wage-earners are naturally inclined to get the maximum wages under most favorable conditions.

You will see, therefore, clearly, how the interests of the classes very often clash.

I need not go into the question of comparing the value of capital with that of labor, in the production of wealth.

From Mr. Adam Smith down to Mr. Marshall, we had dozens of Economists to solve it, but I am afraid the old theories have to be modified, especially in the solution of industrial question.

The theory, advanced by Mr. Karl Marx, is by far the most acceptable to the industrial world.

I mean his celebrated theory of surplus value, part of which, he advocates, should be paid to the workmen.

The surplus value means additional value, imparted to produce by labor and labor alone, after it is paid for in wages.

Take, for example, the commodity thread, better known as yarn. The raw material, out of which it is made, viz. cotton has its value enhanced, when it is spun into yarn, and, after the spinner has been paid his wages, necessary for the sustenance of himself and his family, there is still a surplus left, which is wholly appropriated by the capitalist.

I hope, you will all understand, that the value of cotton itself represents the capital, the capitalist has invested and that, as interest, on that capital, and for the risk he has incurred, in the investment of that capital, he is only entitled to a part of the surplus value, but, in practice, the whole amount goes to his pocket.

This very example also shows how indispensable is this class which produces and which was once despised as hewers of wood and drawers of water.

The same rule applies to unskilled labor, or, say, the labor of an agriculturist, which is so indispensable in this country, and, on which, we depend partly for our prime necessities.

Our ryot, who seems to many of our refined men as only a clumsy and illiterate villager, is certainly more indispensable to us than a clean-shaven professor, fresh from Oxford, for obvious reasons, and, yet, our so-called society scorns to think even of the existence of such a being except for the purpose of exploitation.

In Bengal, we derive our enormous wealth mostly from agricultural resources—but, how many of us do ever dream of ameliorating the lot of those, whose toil does often transform a barren-field into a green-pasture, and, but for whose labours, neither the vast expenditure of the Government would be possible, nor the burries and comforts, which the official and non-official classes, both Indian and European enjoy would be without their reach.

We boast of our Zemindars and their extensive Zemindaries. Are they not aggregate results of the sweating labors of our soil-workers? One would have thought our millions like those of England have some sort of protective or defensive weapons against landlords. Far from it, the Zemindars, on the other hand, it seems to me have means enough of protection against defaulting tenants and so forth.

Well Sir, I think, it is a positive shame—a lasting monument to our ingratitude, that things should be as they are, and that the millions, upon whom we depend so largely, should ever remain serfs of the soil, with no certain guarantee of daily sustenance.

True it is that we have no control over nature, and, we cannot, when we want make the heavens yield moisture for the nourishing of our plants, but, to a certain extent, it lies in human power to devise means of insurance, such as irrigation, etc.

But, unfortunately, we depend too much upon our Patriarchal Government for that. Assuming, for a minute, that the ryot has a right to be protected against drought by the State, which, by the way, is a glaring example of Socialism, as applied to the State.

Are we still to depend the landlord's heavy rent-roll, without contributing adequately to the improvement of the land, or the producers of wealth? What about the ryot's housing? What about their sanitary condition, and, lastly, what about their education?

Are we to depend wholly on the State, while the indolent aristocrat cools himself under Osler's fans in a lovely mansion attended by hosts of servants in the healthiest quarter of the town?

I do not deny that there are to be found considerate landlords, willing to do the needful and alleviate the misery of the ryots. But, their numbers, I am afraid, are few and far between.

I have already alluded to the collective control and ownership of our industries, as a means of social peace. I regret, our own industries are in their infancy, and it will, therefore, be idle to show how Socialism can benefit it. No doubt we have in Bengal a cluster of Jute Mills owned and controlled by foreign capitalists and I challenge any one to say that the lot of the Mill-hands therein engaged is altogether happy.

Had those mills been State-owned and State-controlled, the economic condition of Bengal would have been far better and more favourable to the growth of a vigorous manhood in the youths and boys employed in them.

We cannot pass this subject of the Bengal industries without reference to the tea-plantations. We must be thankful to the State, which has done away with the horrible injustice under which coolies worked as indentured Chinese in South Africa, and, I am told, there is still more room for reform there.

Does it even strike us to organise a mission to go round the plantations and see for ourselves how things are over there?

We all wish success to our blossoming cotton-industry of Central and South India, but the capitalistic regime there must have been at full pay, so as to warrant a Commission at the expense of the Nation, and, we all await with grave concern the result of that expensive Commission.

That Socialism is of incalculable boon to the people is proved by its State-adoption in parts of Australia and the whole of New Zealand with most gratifying results.

Freedom, education, bodily vigor and the condition of Colonial-life make the Colonist and his children quick, self-reliant and sanguine. Thus, by advance of collective energy it has so come out, that the individual Colonist is by no means intellectually stunted, but rather distinguished by courageous and sanguine spirit.

Instead of devising means, as Sir Thomas Moore says, by which the rich in the first place secure to themselves what they have amassed by injustice and wrong, and then to their own use and profit, at the lowest possible cost, the work and labor of the poor, we would have under a socialistic basis of our society collect in ownership of land and equality of conditions as checks to the growth of the idle class and wretched poverty of the proletariat. Universal education and all the latest methods of combating disease and decay would be employed for the common good of the people, instead of fortunes being wasted on race-horses and huge mansions which are hardly habitated; is it not high time that we not only denounce the present state of society and its concomitant evils? Go and visit the slums and bustees of our otherwise beautiful town and you will shudder at the appalling poverty of the inhabitants, the dirty and dangerous surroundings, which will make you sad for the neglect of those, who are in authority to do to them.

To some of our city-fathers, we certainly owe a deep debt of gratitude for public spirit and candour, but we expect much more from them, and the sooner they divert their attention from paving the Strand Road or raising the salary of this or that officer, the better will they discharge their conscientious duties to themselves and those who are responsible for their election.

Gentlemen, It seems almost incredible that our Corporation has been so slow in adopting Socialism in the improvement of this Metropolitan city, and yet we know that the Corporation is an embodiment, at least, in theory of the principle of Socialism or communism, for commerce is a household word for French Corporations; communism implies community of goods and abolition of private property.

Municipal trading has been recognised throughout Great Britain and her Colonies, as a first step to a collective ownership and control of local industry, but, here in Calcutta, the Corporation has only taken up a market or a slaughter-house as farms of Municipal trading enterprise.

One would have thought, with the powers, it is vested in, it would have borrowed the necessary money to buy under the gas and electric works and the huge network of railways, as well as many other cognate undertakings, which are now yielding huge profits and are controlled by handfuls of men, not often mindful of our interest.

The huge profits derived therefrom would not only be able to liquidate the debt, with interest, but a satisfactory balance would be possible to reduce the burden of our property taxation, and eventually to abolish taxation altogether, as has been done in many towns in England and other countries.

I am also an advocate of Municipal control over the supply of milk and fish. The medical men have formed the opinion, that a lot of our disease is due to bad and infectious milk, not to speak of the aqua salubris of cesspools and ditches our milk men think fit to mix with. The most practical and urgent of all forms of Municipal trading is in the direction of building cheap Municipal dwellings, say, after the fashion of Berlin, in every Ward of the town.

It will not only prevent congestion and its consequences, but also provide cheaper accommodations for hundreds of thirty artisans and clerks, whose hard lot it is now to lodge in dingy huts and smelling messes scattered all over the town. In the Municipality, we have a splendid nucleus of a Socialistic beginning.

Think, my friends, that the Prime-Minister of England has thought fit to select Mr. John Burns, once a fire-brigade Socialist, as the head of local Government.

Imagine a common worker, like those you daily meet in the docks or Mills, is elevated to the Cabinet, for wiser Statesmanship led him to believe, that the control and guidance of a life-long advocate of collectivism and a man from the ranks and file would be a boon to the Municipalities, which are determined to fight the misery of millions.

Gentlemen, I now pass on to a different phase of Socialism. I have tried to show how the re-organisation of society is possible, when class distinctions based on property are abolished, when industries are collectively owned, controlled for the common good, and, when the State ownership of land is gradually introduced, in place of private proprietorship, and I have given an instance how a Municipality can be persuaded to make a proper beginning.

Gentlemen, I do not for a minute advocate State compulsion to achieve these objects, I do not mean that our benign landlords should be swept away by revolutionary organisation, or compelled to renounce by our Government. But an experiment can be made, and the sooner the better by distributing Government Khas and forest lands to indigent ryots, who must, at the same time, be provided with instruments of production, in place of the present mode of handing over huge tracts of Sunderbund and other forest-land to the highest bidder.

As regards reclaiming and embanking, etc., we must have to rely, for the time being, upon the Government.

The experiment can also be introduced by the Government purchase of Taluks sold by the Collectors in default of Revenue, and then distributing the same among the existing Ryots on certain conditions.

I can give you many instances how we can improve community, by introducing co-operation of labor. I believe, it was largely practised by our ancestors; and, even now, we find, in many villages, that co-partnership regarding the produce exists between the ryots and landlords.

Instead of fixing the rent and binding the ryot to find it, good or bad crop, is it not more economic, more humane, if we enter into co-partnership with the ryot, regarding profit, as described before.

Gentlemen, I now pass on to a very different aspect of Socialism. I mean—its moral aspect. Socialism aims at nothing more or less than the improvement of society by society, as Mr. Sidney Ball, of St. John's College, Oxford, has remarked.

Collectivism implies the consciousness of Social ideal and the conception of means to attain that ideal. Let us see what Dr. Clifford, a great English Clergyman of London, has remarked about collectivism. He says:—

- (1) It destroys the occasion of many of the evils of present society.
- (2) It advances, elevates and ennoble the struggle for life.
- (3) It offers a better environment for the development of moral teaching concerning wealth and brotherhood.
- (4) It fosters a higher ideal of human and social worth and well-being.

Then he goes on to describe how individualism it opposed to Socialism, has created a race of merchant-princes, has built enormous industries of coal, iron, cotton.

Here, in Bengal, it has produced wealthy bankers and great lawyers, but, we cannot bind our ideas to the fact that, as a system, it has stirred the most unselfish desire, nor fostered the most generous sympathies on a large scale.

Instead of co-operating in the struggle to save and enrich the lives of others, it tends to make its administrators forgetful of their claims to the protection and defence of weak women to the time of hours for labor and imposition of sanitary conditions of toil.

Our present Secretary of State for India, the Right Honble Mr. J. Morley, in his Life of Cobden, strongly condemns individualistic views on labor questions, when he said Modern Statesmanship has definitely decided that unfettered individual competition is not a principle, to which the regulation of industry may be entrusted.

Half a century ago, Mr. Carlyle said: Democracy has declared itself an inevitable fact. The fact of a democracy is for the security of material existence, and the sharing by the workers of industrial profits, the monopoly of which by capital is felt to be unjust.

But, all this is only a means of intellectual and moral elevation, the demolition of those class-distinctions, which sprung from difference of thought and education and the unfettered development of every human mind. * * *

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. Jnan Chandra Rai, B.A., B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur spoke lengthily of the paper and asked the audience to take care and commence work on the line of co-operation.

Mr. L. Ghosal also spoke a few words. He recommended the gentlemen to think over it, and form societies in every town and district.

The Chairman then made a nice little speech. He highly commended the works of the Society, blessed the Institution and wished it every success.

After another song was sung, the Meeting dissolved with the customary votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer, at 6.15 P.M.

A Short History of the Bansberia Raj

AND

A life-sketch of Kshitindra Deb Rai (Rajah Mahasai of Bansberia).

BANSBERIA—The name is usually held to mean “the place of bamboos”, but another derivation also put forward is that the name means “Bangshobati”, the house of a noble family, the family alluded to being that of the Bansberia Raj. (Vide Lient-Col. D. G. Crawford's Hooghly Medical Gazetteer p. 253).

AMONG the ancient princely Houses, the Bansberia Raj pre-eminently occupies a glorious position in the history of Bengal. The ancestors of this family played an important part during both the Hindu and Mahomedan periods. The far-sighted King Akbar, the æsthetic Jehangir, the magnificent Shah Jehan, and the bigoted Aurangzeb, were all liberal in lavishing honours upon this House.

(Vide “A short account of the Sudramani Rajas” by S. C. Mukerji B.L., Revised by Rev. A.B. Wann M.A. 1902 p. 2.)

DEVADITYA DUTT, the ancestor of the Raj, came from Hardwar to settle at Dattabati in Bengal, at the invitation of King Adisur. His descendants, afterwards, removed to Patuli and thence to Bansberia.

IN 1583, Akbar recognised Sahasraksha as “Zemindar”, and granted to his son, Udaya, the title of “Sabhāpati Rāi” and the zemindary of Arsha Pargana.

IN 1628, the Emperor Shah Jehan granted a Jaigir and the title of “Mazumdar” to Jayananda Rai (son of Udaya). “During the years 1580-82 for the first time after years of unsettled Moslem rule, during which Hindu influence was conspicuous by its absence, a Hindu Minister of Revenue, appointed by Emperor Akbar, visited Bengal. This officer was a person of high culture and military attainments and his dealings with the people of Bengal in 1582, when he compiled his revenue roll, were exceptionally cordial. He confirmed all the Jaigirs and landed properties that had been acquired by the Hindus. He was soon followed by Rajah Mansingh as Governor of Bengal. It was not until 1606 that Mansingh quitted Bengal for the last time so that it may be said that for nearly a quarter of a century Hindu influence was paramount in Bengal. And during this period the Tantric rites of the Bengal Brahmins which had received a great check from the Afghan rulers, acquired a fresh impetus and three Tantric Hindus came into prominence in Sarkar Satgaon (which included the present site of Calcutta and Kalighat). They were Bhabananda who founded the Nadia Raj, Lakshmikanta ancestor of the Savarna Chaudhuries and Jayananda founder of the Bansberia Raj.”—(Vide—History of Calcutta in Census of India, 1901, Vol. VII, p. 9.)

THE Emperor Shah Jehan granted the title of “Chaudhuri” and a Zemindary of twenty-one Parganas, to Jayananda Rai's son, Raghab Rai, on 12th Rabi, 1066 Hijri (1649 A. D.). Raghab established the town of Bansberia, previously a petty village on the right bank of the Hooghly.

IN 1090 Hijri (1673 A.D.), RAMESWAR RAI, (son of Raghab Rai), got two Sanads from the Emperor Aurangzeb,—one conferring upon him the Khilat of Panja Percha (five dresses of honour) and the hereditary title of “Rajah Mahasai” and the other granting four hundred and one bighas of rent-free Jaigirs at Bansberia for his residence* and the zemindary of twelve more Parganas, including Calcutta. The Rajah Mahasai fortified his residence by a moat and a fort mounted with several cannons.

“IN the Khalsa records Rameswar is entered as the Zemindar of Parganas Arsha, etc.† and he certainly had the entire Zemindary under his management.”

IN 1679, he built the VISHNU TEMPLE and established Sanskrit Colleges. His son, Rajah Raghubarb Rai Mahasai got the title of “SUDRAMANI”, from Nawab Murshid Kuli Khan, for an act of magnanimity. He gave away one lakh bighas of rent-free lands to the Brahmins.

“Those Brahmins who do not hold rent free lands of the Bansberia Rajas are tauntingly said by their brethren to be no Brahmins at all.”‡

“WHEN Gobinda Deb died, (1147 B.S. October 1740 A.D.) he had no child living, and, on this account, the Burdwan Raj, with the sanction of the Nawab, (Ali Verdi Khan) took possession of Pargana Arsha, etc.§—in fact, of the bulk of the property on the west side of Hooghly river; while Raja Krishna Chandra (of Nadia) took possession of pargana Halda, on the east bank of the river.

THREE months after Govinda Deb's death, his wife gave birth to a son, who was named Nrisinha Dev. By this time, the family retained only one small mouza, Kulihanda,|| which the Foujdar of Hooghly would not permit the Burdwan Raj to appropriate; and when the posthumous boy had attained manhood, the English had taken possession of all the property.

* The British Government has exempted the lands for the residence of the Rajah from payment of rent since 1st September 1870 under clause 7 (a) of Sec. 2 Chapter XXIII of the existing rules of the Board, (See A. G. Bower's “The family History of the Bansberia Raj” p. 11, 1896.

|| (Towji No. 17 Hooghly Collectorate).

AFTER various petitions to the English Government, the then Governor-General, Warren Hastings, directed that those mahals of his ancestor, (Nrisinha Deb's) that had not been taken possession of by the Burdwan Zamindar but had been included in the 24 Parganas granted to the English Government, should be restored to Nrisinha Dev.*

ACCORDINGLY, he was given possession of nine Parganas from 1779 A.D. Nrisinha Deb Rai was a man of some versatility. He built in 1788-89 A.D., a small temple dedicated to goddess Kali or Swayambhaba, made a map of Bengal for Warren Hastings, translated the Uddisa-tantra into Bengali and assisted Rajah Jay Narayan Ghoshal of Benares, in translating the Kasi-Khanda into Bengali verse. He left his home for Benares in 1792, there became initiated in Tantric rites, and returned in 1799. He then began to build a large temple in honour of Hamseswari, but, died in 1802, before it was finished."

(Vide, O'Malley's Hooghly District Gazetteer, pages 251 and 252.)

HIS renowned widow, Rani Sankari, completed the far-famed temple of Hamseswari, at Bansberia.—"It is the handsomest building in the district, and one of the finest in Bengal. The temple consists of a central spire, 60 or 70 feet high, surrounded by four smaller spires, one at each angle, each of which is again flanked by two still smaller spires one on each side, diagonally. The goddess Hamseswari, a form of Kali is made of nim wood, painted blue. The god Mahadeva is shown, lying on a trikonajatra (three cornered seat) and the goddess Hamseswari is placed on a lotus which springs from the navel of Mahadeva.

THE door of the temple faces south. It was completed in 1814, at a cost of five lakhs of rupees, by Rani Sankari, wife of Rajah Nrisinha Deb Rai, Zamindar and Rajah of Bansberia. West of this temple is a much older temple of Ananta Deva, another name for Vishnu or Vāsudeva, which was erected in 1679.

NORTH of the Hamseswari temple is a shrine of Mahishāardini, or Swambhaba, which was erected in 1788. On the west and south-west of the temple is the palace of the Rajas of Bansberia. The whole ground is surrounded by a broad and deep moat, which encloses 401 bighas of land.

THE moat is crossed by a causeway, leading east-wards, at the west end of which is the gateway of the palace, the only old part, the rest of the palace being quite modern. The gateway is a little south of the temple; it is approached by a fine avenue of bokul trees.

THE palace and temple are situated about half a mile inland from the river-bank. This "moated grange" formed a strong place of refuge for the inhabitants of the neighbouring villages during the incursions of the Mahrathas in the eighteenth century. It is known as Garhbuti (the fortress). It is said to have resisted all attacks by the Mahrathas, who were never able to take it." (Vide, Lieut.-Col. D. G. Crawford's Hooghly Medical Gazetteer, p. 253.)

RAJAH Nrisinha Deb Rai Mahasai's son and grandson (Rajah Kailas Deb Rai Mahasai and Rajah Debendra Deb Rai Mahasai), respectively, died prematurely. His great-grand son, Rajah Purnendu Deb Rai Mahāsai was quite young when his father died.

"RAJAH Debendra's sudden and premature death, in 1852 was a great shock to his old grandmother, (Rani Sankari,) who, six months later, executed a will, by which she devised her estates to the goddess Hamseswari, nominating her three great-grandsons as Sebais, and appointing their mother Rani Kasiswari, as executrix. A few days later, on the night before the day of the Kali Puja, she died at an advanced age.

RANI Kasiswari managed the estate until Purnendu Deb, her son, attained his majority. Rajah Purnendu Deb,† who had been educated in the Hooghly College, was distinguished for his liberality and public spirit. During the Mutiny of 1857, he supplied the local authorities with a number of coolies and one thousand carts. He induced the East Indian Railway authorities to open the Trisbigha Station, and bore a large part of the cost of metalling the feeder road leading up to it.

HE contributed half the cost of metalling the Strand Road, from Keota (north of Bandel) to Tribeni, and made a free gift of a strip of land along the Cockerell Road in Hooghly town. He further maintained a charitable dispensary, kept up an old alms-house at the palace, and did much to encourage education, the present High English School being opened by him in 1893."

THE family of the Bansberia Raj have always been good and loyal subjects of the British Crown. Rajah Purnendu Deb rendered excellent service during the Mutiny and was a man of sterling qualities. He died in 1896 leaving four sons of whom the eldest has succeeded to the title of "Raja Mahasai." (Vide "The Englishman," May 23, 1908.)

AFTER the death of Rajah Satindra Deb‡ who died on 20th November 1918, without leaving any son, Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai, being the eldest of the surviving sons of the late Rajah Purnendu Deb Rai Mahasai, has succeeded to the hereditary title of "Rajah Mahasai" and is the recognised Chief representative of the House.§

RAJAH Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai has received education up to the B. A. standard of the Calcutta University, in the London Missionary Society's Institution, Bhowanipore, and for sometime in St. Xavier's College, Park Street, in which he distinguished himself.

* This was done after representations made to the Directors of the East India Company in London by Warren Hastings.—See Firminger : Introduction to Fifth Report p. X C VI.

† He served the Government in the capacity of one of the Honorary Magistrates, in the Bansberia Bench in the district of Hugli and also as Municipal Commissioner of the Bansberia Municipality. He was a member of the Road Cess Committee and also of the Education Committee in Hugli for some years. He was for some years the President of the Branch British Indian Association at Hugli and of the Hugli District Association.—See A. G. Bowers "The Family History of the Hansberia Raj" p. 28 1896.

‡ He was a Municipal Commissioner and Chairman of the Bansberia Municipality for a number of years. § According to the Magul Sanad, the title belongs to the eldest son of the eldest line. "We know of no family in India enjoying the title of "Rajah Mahasai" except the Bansberia Raj"—See A. G. Bower's "The Family History of the Bansberia Raj" p. 8 1896.

THE Rev. J. N. Farquhar, M.A. (Oxon.) the then Principal, London Missionary Society's Institution, Bhowanipore, spoke of him (on the 26th August, 1895) as follows :—" I am much interested in Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai. He was admitted into our B. A. classes and in the work of these classes he has shown unusual power. He proved himself easily the best philosophical student of the class and his English essays showed that he had made great progress in conquering the idiom, and genius of the tongue. In the English classes, he showed by his questions and his answers the deep intelligent interest he took in the work; and, indeed, in every department of the work he showed a mind matured, and an interest in great questions deepened, far beyond the reach of the ordinary run of even the best students. He has the instincts and the powers of a real student, and the interests and liberality of a cultured gentleman."

THE Rev. Father Neut, S.J., Prefect, St. Xavier's College, spoke of him (on the 19th November, 1895) as follows :—

KUMAR KSHITINDRA DEB Rai Mahasai, of the Bansberia Raj Family, appears to me and to the other Professors to be very intelligent and active and certainly up to the standard of the Calcutta Graduate. His gentlemanly manners are what one has a right to expect from a family such as the one he belongs to".

RAJAH KSHITINDRA DEB Rai Mahasai has the good fortune to belong to a family of high social standing and very ancient lineage, probably, the most ancient in Bengal, the members of which, for many generations past, have devoted their lives to good and charitable causes and for which it is regarded as the recognised head of the Uttararahi Kayastha community, (Patuli Samaj.)

"THE Bansberia House occupies a very high place in the peerage of Bengal. Indeed, it yields to none in the antiquity of its origin and may well be traced back at least to the time of Adisur, the last of the founders of independent Hindu dynasties. Its grand old parent was held in esteem by that famous King and was consulted on all important occasions.

THE family fared well during Hindu supremacy, but when like a bolt from the blue the "canny" Afghan dealt a death-blow to the Sen dynasty, it removed to safer place, and having lurked there in dim obscurity for centuries together, again emerged into light with the dawn of Mogul rule.

WHILE the family was still living at Patuli, in the district of Burdwan, it was ennobled by Emperor Akbar the Great, who decorated it with the title of 'Rai' which, in those days, bore much higher significance than it does now. But, this distinction, high as it was, was only an earnest of greater honors which were soon to come.

SHORTLY after Akbar's demise, the next Emperor, Jehangir raised the status of the Patuli family by conferring upon its then Chief the title of "Mazumdar". This was undoubtedly a much higher distinction than Rai or Zemindar, for while there were a goodly number of Rais and Zemindars there were only four Mazumdars in all Bengal. Of this sacred Vedic number was Bhabananda, the founder of the reputed Nadia Raj.

THUS by the then Lord of India from whom flowed as from a fountain all honors and decorations was the Patuli family placed on the same level with the Premier House in Bengal. But the family was destined to rise still higher. This climb almost to the topmost rung of the ladder, however, was made after the original family had broken up and Rajah Rameswar, the fortunate recipient of the very noble title of "Rajah Mahasai", had settled down for good in Bansberia.

THE merit of this distinction, however, lies not merely in its glorious uniqueness, but also in its moral excellence. Thus, the Bansberia House possesses a rare peculiar eminence of its own, and, to compare great things with small, takes as much pride in it as the Royal House of England does in what is called the brightest jewel on its diadem.

NO other branch of the Patuli family can, as a matter of right, lay claim to it, in as much as it originated at a time when not only the family had separated in estate, but the several branches had left their ancestral abode and settled down in different localities.

THE social annals of Bengal would be incomplete without an account of this family, which has such a long brilliant record to show. The fame of the family is as resplendent now as it was "in the brave days of old", only that its fortune has, to a certain extent, suffered in the rough and tumble of the battle of life.

THE Bansberia House is the only relic of the grand old Patuli family that is worthy of special notice, the other branches having been relegated to the cold neglected region of want and indifference. Like some commanding hill, it has borne its majestic head high above the walks and ways of ordinary humanity for centuries together and is likely to bear it equally high, if not higher still, for centuries more."

(Vide, "THE Bansberia Raj" by S. C. Dey, B. A. B.L., Vakil, High Court, Calcutta, 1908.)

THE following, an English translation of a SANAD, which has been certified to be correct by a good Persian scholar, Mr. Henry Beveridge, I. C. S., (retired), on 23rd January 1900 is given below:—

"AS you have promoted the great interest of Government in getting possession of Pergunnahs and making assessments thereof, and as you have performed with care whatever services were entrusted to you, you are entitled to reward. The Khilat of PUNJ. PERCHA (five cloths i.e. dresses of honour) and the title of RAJAH MAHASAI are therefore given to you in recognition thereof, to be inherited by the eldest children of your family, generation after generation, without being objected to by any one (10 Safar, 1090 Hijri)."

THE Sanad was mislaid for nearly 20 years from the Hooghly Collectorate and was afterwards returned to the late Rajah Purnendu Deb Rai Mahasai on 18th March 1896 by E. Geake Esq., I.C.S. Magistrate of Hooghly.

APPENDIX A.

(Vide, A. G. Bower's "The Family History of the Bansberia Raj" 1896.)

The late Sir John Woodburn, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, was pleased to exhibit the original Sanad at the annual meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal held on 5th February, 1902. (Vide, Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, as corrected by a subsequent memo).

BY another SANAD, in the same year, Rajah Rameswar was granted four hundred and one bighas of rent-free Jaagir for his residence and the Zemindari right of the following twelve Parganas, Viz :—

- (1) Kalikatta (Calcutta). (2) Dharsa. (3) Amirpur. (4) Balanda. (5) Khalore. (6) Manpur. (7) Sultanpur. (8) Hathiagarh. (9) Medamulla. (10) Kujpur. (11) Kaunia. (12) Magura.

AT the Belvedere Conference, which assembled in 1892, to consider the Drainage question of the Mofussil towns of Bengal, in the capacity of Honorary Secretary to the Bansberia Students' Association,* a really very useful Association for the moral and intellectual training of young men, (then under the patronage of the District Magistrate, Mr. H. G. Cooke and his successor, Mr. F. W. Duke (afterwards Sir William) Rajah Kshitindra Deb suggested the re-excavation of the Saraswati river, near old Satgaon which has long been silted up and consequently a hot-bed of Malaria. A scheme has been prepared by the Government to carry out the work of excavation.

RAJAH Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai read an interesting paper on "Sea Voyage" at Bansberia in February 1892 under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. (now Sir) Surendra Nath Banerjee, Minister, Government of Bengal. He supported the "Sea Voyage question" at a meeting of the Uttarrari Kayastha Hitakari Sabha held on 26th Jaistha 1313 B. S. at No. 3, Shib Narayan Das Lane, Calcutta, under the presidency of the late-lamented Maharajah Sir Girija Nath Roy Bahadur, K.C.I.E., of Dinajpur. In this connection he received the following letter from Sir Surendra Nath Banerjee.

The Bengalee Office,
Calcutta, 18th February, 1892.

MY DEAR SIR,

I send you, by to-day's post, some copies of the Vyavasthas. If you want more, kindly let me know. Of course, there is bound to be opposition to our cause. Where was there ever a cause the noblest in the world which did not elicit opposition? Opposition brings out the strength of a cause. I am glad that you have taken up this matter with such genuine enthusiasm. The prestige of your family will help you. You will have Heaven's blessings on so noble a cause.

Yours very sincerely
Surendra Nath Banerjee.

Kumar Kshitindra Deb Roy Mahashoy.

He was presented to His Excellency Lord Curzon at the Levee held at Government House, Calcutta, on the 22nd December 1899 by T. Inglis Esq. I.C.S. Magistrate of Hooghly.

ON 18th March, 1902, Sir John Woodburn, K. C. S. I., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, paid a friendly visit to the Bansberia Rajbati, and visited the famous temples of Hamsesvari, erected by the illustrious Rani Sankari, and Vishnu, erected by the renowned Rajah Rameswar Rai Mahasai.

THESE historic temples greatly impressed His Honor with their architectural beauty and he was keenly interested in the history of the ancient Raj family, who possessed them. He also visited the English High School, the Charitable Dispensary, the Library and the School building, which owed their existence to the munificent liberality of the Raj.

RAJAH Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai was appointed an Honorary Magistrate of Hooghly in December, 1902. He received repeated thanks and special credit for his services in that capacity. He is authorized to sit singly and exercise second class powers in respect of such cases as may be made over to him, sitting at Bansberia, within the limits of the Sadar sub-division of that district. He is also vested with the power to take cognizance of cases arising within the limits of the Bansberia Municipality in that district.

THE Coronation of Their Imperial Majesties at Delhi on the 1st January 1903 was commemorated in a befitting manner at the Bansberia Rajbati.

HE is a member of the Executive Committee of the Bengal Branch of the Sri Bharat Dharma Mahamandal, of which the Maharajah (now Maharajah Adhiraj) Sir Rameswar Singh Bahadur, G. C. I. E., of Darbhanga, is the General President; of the Bangiya Sahitya Parisad and other religious and literary societies.

HE is well-known to the Indian and Anglo-Indian newspapers, who have shown their appreciation of his articles on important questions connected with the welfare of his country, to which he is devoted. He conducted and edited an English daily paper called "The Eastern Voice" for sometime and a first-class Bengali monthly Magazine called "Purnima" since May 1893 jointly with his brothers.

* In this connection Captain Currie, Private Secretary to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal wrote to him on 25th January, 1892., that, "such institutions of local importance should be under the patronage of local officers."

HE had the honour of an invitation of meeting His Imperial Majesty, King George V, when he visited Calcutta as Prince of Wales at the Garden Party held at Government House on 3rd January, 1906.

THE "Englishman" of the 9th August, 1906, wrote of him as follows :—

"We have already mentioned that amongst the candidates for election to the Bengal Council by the Presidency District Boards is Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai of the Bansberia Raj family. The Kumar is well-known to have moderate views and has not identified himself in any way with the extremists, who have done so much harm to the cause of orderly administration. Sober men are particularly needed on the Councils at the present time and therefore there is the more reason to hope that the Kumar's claims will have the attention of the electors".

THE Indian Planters' Gazette, dated 18th August, 1906, in its page 815. wrote of him as follows :—

"AMONG the candidates for election to the Bengal Council to represent the 24-Parganas is Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai, a scion of one of the most ancient families in Bengal.

RADHA CHARAN PAL (The Hon'ble, Rai Bahadur) having got in for the Calcutta Municipality, we think, the moderates might be given a chance. In that case, we think, Kumar Kshitindra, a local zemindar of the best traditions, would be a very active of the class of educated natives we have in mind".

THE "Indian Mirror," of the 2nd, September, 1906, published the following views of the Rajah :—

"THE task of establishing ourselves as a manufacturing and commercial people, sufficiently to enable us to successfully compete with Western nations, is a great and difficult one and can only be accomplished by perseverance and hard work and by teaching the rising generation the value of sound technical and commercial education. I have no sympathy with the extremists, victims of their own folly—who seek to be enrolled among the country's martyrs. We do not want martyrs, we want conscientious, level-headed, hard-working, talented men, who are determined by dint of perseverance to attain a position which will warrant their having a voice in the government of the country and thereby strive to redress all grievances on a sound constitutional principle."

DURING the famine of 1906, he issued appeals for the relief of distress, in the Diamond Harbour Sub-division.

THE Indian Planters' Gazette in its issue of the 6th January, 1907, wrote of him as follows :—

"There will be a vacancy in the Bengal Legislative Council this month by the retirement of Mr. (Rajah Bahadur) Ban Behari Kapur (C.S.I.) of Burdwan and we would again urge the claim of Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai for preferment. As we have stated before, he is a local zemindar of the best traditions and deserves the countenance of a ruler like Sir Andrew Fraser, who has the interest of the landed aristocracy so much at heart that in spite of all opposition he is trying to get for them a model College at Ranchi".

THE Rajah Mahasai's researches, in connection with the Ruins of old Satgaon—the Ganges Regia of the ancient Romans, situated on the river Saraswati, which, since the publication of Dr. H. Blockman's note, in 1870, were not brought to human gaze until November, 1901, when, in company with his friend, Major G. E. Weigall, R. A. of Barrackpore, he discovered the ancient tombs and mosques, which lay hidden beneath dense jungles and had baffled the efforts of many an antiquarian to ascertain their exact sites.

It may be noted that the following paragraph appeared in "The Indian Daily News" dated the 7th May, 1908.

"Mr S. L. Maddox, Commissioner, Burdwan Division paid a visit to the Bansberia Rajbati in the Hughli District on Monday last at 7 A.M. Mr. Maddox motored from Chinsura to Bansberia, a distance of about 6 miles and was received by Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai who introduced him to his brothers. Mr. Maddox shook hands with his brothers and after exchange of cordialities went round the temples and places of antiquarian interest with which the place abounds and with which are associated the name and traditions of the Bansberia Raj. The visit over, Mr. Maddox adjourned to the Rajbati where he inspected the book of coloured designs being the handiwork of Raja Nrisinha Deb Rai Mahasai an ancestor of the Kumar. He also inspected the "Samad" bestowing the hereditary title of "Raja Mahasai" on the founder of the family granted by Aurangzeb as also other heir-looms. After partaking of some light refreshments, Mr. Maddox left for Burdwan, and accompanied by the Kumar halted for sometime at Satgaon where some ancient tombs and mosques were inspected. It may be interesting to note that these tombs and mosques which were swallowed up by jungle and weeds, were brought to human notice by the researches of the Kumar extending for over 3 or 4 years."

MAJOR Weigall, as a token of deep personal friendship, accompanied him in a Steam Launch from Barrackpore to Bansberia, belonging to the Royal Artillery and shortly afterwards was himself present with Major Jellett, R. F. A., and other military officers, with their ladies at the Bansberia Rajbati, on the occasion of a wedding in the Raj Family, on 12th December, 1901.

THE Governor of Chandernagore, Mons. Deville, with his wife, and other leading officials, with their ladies, also honoured the occasion with their visit.

AGAIN, on the 18th March, 1902, the late Sir John Woodburn, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, did him the honour of accompanying him from the Hooghly Imambara to the Bansberia Rajbati. The members of the Calcutta Historical Society also undertook an excursion to Bansberia by the steamer lent by Messrs Macneill & Company and Rev. W. K. Firminger published an account of the Raj Family and the Temples, in the "Bengal-Past and Present"—in 1908.

HE was invited to the Investiture Ceremony held at Government House on 28th January 1908.

He was a member of the Deputation that waited upon His Excellency Lord Minto on 10th March, 1908, on behalf of the Bharat-Dharina-Mahamandal, the All-India Representative Association of the Hindus.

HE was also a member of the Deputation that waited upon His Excellency Lord Minto, to express gratitude for the Morley-Minto Reforms on 24th December, 1908.

AT his suggestion, the Uttarrahi Hitakari Kayastha Sabha was founded at the Belgachia Villa, under the presidency of the late-lamented Maharajah Sir Girija Nath Roy Bahadur, K. C. I. E., of Dinajpur.

The following letter dated Belvedere, Calcutta, the 6th March, 1909, received from Captain Allanson, Private Secretary to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal runs thus :—

"His Honor welcomes cordially the assurance of loyalty and devotion from the members and representatives of the "Uttar Radhi Kayastha" community and for the efforts that you are making for the social, moral and intellectual advancement of your community. He is glad to hear of your gratitude for the proposed concessions recently announced by the Government of India in connection with the new reforms."

THE thanks of the Government of India were conveyed to him in a letter dated 18th July 1910 for his condolence with Her Majesty Queen Alexandra and other bereaved members of the Royal family, on the occasion of the demise of His late Majesty King Edward VII. As a member of the General Committee, his suggestions regarding a local memorial in memory of His late Majesty were accepted by J. Lang Esq. I.C.S. Magistrate of Hooghly and President of the King Edward Memorial Fund, to which he contributed his humble quota. He was present by invitation at Lord Hardinge's arrival on Monday the 21st November 1910 and the Earl of Minto's departure on Wednesday, the 23rd November 1910.

AS a member of the British Indian Association and of the Imperial League, he waited upon Their Excellencies Lord Minto and Lord Hardinge, Viceroys and Governor-Generals of India, on Tuesday, the 15th November, 1910 and on Friday, the 2nd December 1910, respectively.

HE was invited to the Delhi Durbar held in 1911 and to all the functions connected with the Imperial Visit to Calcutta. He was presented at the Imperial Levee held at Government House in January, 1912, to His Imperial Majesty The King-Emperor of India, by Sir William Duke, K. C. S. I., the then Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

"The Coronation of Their Imperial Majesties' at Delhi, on the 12th instant was celebrated at Bansberia with much pomp. Prayers were offered at the temple, adjoining the Rajbati. There were illuminations, feeding of the poor and of the school children. Sankirtan parties sang special songs and the "Proclamation" of the King-Emperor was read at a meeting presided over by Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai, who delivered an appropriate speech. Cheers were lustily given for the King-Emperor, whose photograph was exhibited." (Vide, "The Englishman" 16th December, 1911).

THE Rajah Mahasai's family Coat of Arms, was selected by Mr. Percy Brown, Principal, Government School of Art, as an element in the decoration of the Processional route on the Red Road, during the Imperial visit to Calcutta.

(Vide, "Historical Record of the Imperial Visit to India," Chapter XIII, page 249, 1911.)

HE was invited to the Special Convocation of the Calcutta University held at Government House on the 26th December 1913 for presenting an Address to His Excellency Lord Hardinge, the Chancellor. He was also the fortunate recipient of several courteous communications from His Excellency and his predecessors, Their Excellencies Lord Curzon and Lord Minto.

HE was present by invitation of the Trustees of the Victoria Memorial at the unveiling of the Statues of Lord Clive and Earl Curzon of Kedleston, P.C., K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., at Belvedere.

SIR William Duke, in one of his letters dated the 10th November, 1914, wrote to him as follows:—"As you know, I have always been interested in the ancient family which you represent."

"MR. Prentice, District Magistrate of Hooghly, accompanied by Mr. MacNair, Joint Magistrate inspected the Bansberia Municipality on Wednesday last. He visited the new Municipal Hall built in pursuance of a Resolution passed at a public meeting held by the residents of Bansberia, at the Bansberia Rajbati, on 30th January, 1901, in order to express their deep sorrow at and to concert measures for perpetuating the memory of Her Majesty Queen Victoria.

IN accordance with a second Resolution passed on that date a "pucca" house for the dying and the dead was erected at the Tribeni Burning Ghat. This was opened by Mr. A. G. Hallifax, I. C. S., Commissioner of the Burdwan Division on 31st January, 1914.

THE District Magistrate was received by Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai, the well-known member of the Bansberia Raj Family, and an Honorary-Magistrate of Hooghly, and newly established Bansberia Bench. He was, afterwards, met by the Chairman and two Municipal Commissioners.

THE Bansberia Rajbati and the Temples were recently visited by Messrs. MacNair and Douglas, Joint and Assistant Magistrate of Hooghly and Sir Satyendra Prasanna and Lady Sinha, who were entertained by the members of the Bansberia Raj Family, in honor of the "Knighthood" conferred upon Sir S. P. Sinha (afterwards Lord Sinha of Raipur.) ("Empire," Monday, 22nd. February, 1915.)

He was invited by His Excellency Lord Carmichael on the occasion of the State Dinner held at Government House, on the 1st January, 1915, at an after-dinner reception.

HIS opinion in connection with the Amendment of the Bengal Tenancy Act has been published by the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department dated the 8th January, 1915, in reply to letter No. 11907 dated the 18th December 1914.

F. W. Duke.

THE Rajah Mahasai was connected with the "Lady Minto Fete," and "Lady Carmichael Fete," for providing comforts to the troops at the Front, during the Great European War of 1915, and other similar organisations in connection with it.

HIS efforts, in connection with the WAR LOAN, for which he undertook propaganda work in his part of the district, in response to a request from Mr. Darcy Lindsay, the Honorary Secretary of the Bengal War Loan Executive Committee resulted in the issue of the following Appeal which furnishes an example of his devotion and loyalty to the Throne and Person of His Imperial Majesty The King-Emperor of India :—

“It is known to all that the world is passing through a crisis, at this particular stage and that our King-Emperor, with all his subjects, is in a life-and-death struggle with our common enemy the Germans, known as Huns.

"It should be the principal object of all to help our King-Emperor, in these days of trouble, with all our might, life, blood and money. There is no question of sparing of lives as recruitments all over India are being made and Bengalees of our Presidency are enlisting themselves in numbers.

"THE War Loan was floated and it was highly successful. The Post Office Cash Certificates are appreciated and are in constant demand. In order to enlighten the ignorant mass as to the benefits of these investments it is the bounden duty of us all, the members of the educated community, to instil into their minds the advantages of this system not only to the State, (as money is the sinews of war), but to the investors themselves.

"We should, therefore, make an earnest appeal to the educated members to hold regular meetings and do something substantial towards the fulfilment of this object. There should be no lagging behind in this noble cause. The money should flow in and, it is hoped, it will.

"It is, with this object, in view, leaflets in English as well as in Bengali, are being transmitted by the undersigned for favour of distribution among the loyal and patriotic subjects of His Majesty The King-Emperor.

"IT is earnestly hoped that the appeal will be readily and ungrudgingly responded to without the least delay."

To
The Chairman,
Bansberia Municipality.

(Sd.) Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai of Bansberia Raj.
18-8-1917.

AS a member of the All-India Orthodox Hindu Deputation, he waited upon the Right Hon'ble Mr. Montagu and His Excellency Lord Chelmsford on the 11th December, 1917.

THE lamentable death of his wife, Rani Jabannya Prava, on the 12th February, 1918, at 11 A.M., (the Magh Sankranti Festival, 30th Magh, 1324 B.S.) the daughter of the late Dr. R. Ghosh, L.M.S., author of Materia Medica, and a renowned practitioner of Calcutta, in the prime of her life, remarkable for piety and religious enthusiasm, furnished another example of his equally religious temperament by his strict observance of Shastric rites during the performance of her Sradh Ceremony, known as Chandan Dhenu, (which literally means a cow spattered over with sandal-wood paste, but which is really meant for a Hindu lady, who pre-deceases her husband and children.)

"SHE was an ideal Hindu wife and followed in the footsteps of her illustrious predecessor Rani Sankari of pious memory after whom the above lane has been named. The deceased lady has left behind two daughters and a son and a large circle of friends and relations to mourn her loss." (Vide "The Englishman" 21st February 1918).

THE sad death of the Rajah Mahasai's elder brother, Rajah Satindra Deb, following so close on the death of Rani Labannya Prava, has left behind an indelible mark, which time alone can efface. But, his strong and living faith in God alone, has sustained him in the moments of his direst sorrow and bereavement.

SINCE his elder brother's death, Rajah Kshitindra Deb has succeeded to the hereditary title of "Rajah Mahasai" and is held in esteem both by the high officials, as well as by his distinguished countrymen and the general public, whose love and confidence he enjoys.

AS the oldest representative of an ancient family of hereditary status, he is ranked and seated in order of precedence, at the Hooghly District Durbar along with persons upon whom the title of 'Raja' has been conferred as a personal distinction.

HE has the privilege of maintaining four armed retainers, two in the District of Hooghly and two in the 24-Parganas.

AN enlarged photograph of Emperor Aurangzeb's Sanad conferring the hereditary title of "Rajah Mahasai" upon his ancestor, Rajah Rameswar Rai Mahasai has been accepted by H. E. the President and Trustees of the Indian Victoria Memorial, from Rajah Kshitindra Deb, on 1st September, 1919, as a relic of genuine historical interest.

THE Rajah Mahesai has received numerous kind and sympathetic letters and friendly visits from high officials, and his opinion has been invited on many important occasions affecting the welfare of his country. His interest in antiquarian matters combined with his social virtues, elicited warm appreciation from such eminent antiquarian scholars, as Sir John Woodburn, Sir Herbert Risley, Sir James Dunlop Smith, Messrs. Carstairs, T. Inglia, Hamilton, Walsh, Maddox, Ven. Dr. Firminger 'D. D., J. N. Gupta,* G. N. Roy, A. N.

* On 23rd September 1919, Mr. J. N. Gupta, M.A. I.O.S., M.B.E., Commissioner of the Burdwan Division accompanied by Mrs. Gupta, and the members of his family motored from Chinsurah to the Banstoria Rajbati where he was received by Rajah Kshitrindra Deb Rai Mahasai and the party then visited the Raj Temples.

Moberly, Bradley-Birt and Major Weigall, who honoured him with friendly visits—the two latter gentlemen presented him with their signed photographs, as mementoes. He had the honour of private interviews with His Excellency Lord Ronaldshay, Governor of Bengal, with whom he freely discussed the subject of the "PREVENTION OF MALARIA IN BENGAL" and other cognate matters on the 17th February, 1919 and again on board the "Rhotas" at Chinsura on the 29th June, 1920.

HE congratulated His Excellency Lord Sinha of Raipur, a distinguished ornament of the Uttar-rarhi Kayastha community, on his elevation to the Peerage and for his appointment as a member of the British Cabinet and Governor-Designate of Behar and Orissa. Lord Sinha himself gracefully acknowledged his letters and thanked him for his congratulations.

THE Rajah Mahasai always takes the deepest interest in the welfare of his large and contented tenantry, both in the Twenty-four Parganas and Hooghly. The Chinsura Experimental Agricultural Farm has been established in his zemindary and the Rajah Mahasai encourages his tenants to learn the improved methods of Agriculture from it. It has now been decided that the Government School of Agriculture will shortly be opened there.

THE Rajah Mahasai obtained a First Class Certificate at the Chinsura Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition, for exhibits executed by the ladies of his family. He actively supported the Food Products Exhibition, The Social Service Exhibition and the Child Welfare Exhibition held in Calcutta and Delhi in 1920.

THE Rajah Mahasai is a member of the Executive Committee of the Indian Art School, situated in Bow Bazar Street, Calcutta, and warmly encourages the passed students of that school, some of whom won Medals and First Class Certificates, on the occasion of the Eden Gardens Exhibition held in December, 1919, under the auspices of the Peace Celebration Committee of which he was a member.

THE Eden Gardens Exhibition assigned a place of honour to an enlarged photograph of Emperor Anrangzeb's Sanad conferring the hereditary title of "Rajah Mahasai" upon the founder of the Bansberia Raj Family.

THE Suri Exhibition, in the district of Birbhum, held in February, 1920, also assigned a similar position to an enlarged photograph of the distinguished guests* present at the Bansberia Rajbati on the 6th March, 1919, on the occasion of the Farewell Entertainment given by the Rajah Mahasai to Mr. D. H. Lees, I. C. S., Commissioner of the Burdwan Division.† Both these Exhibitions were opened by His Excellency Lord Ronaldshay, Governor of Bengal.

RAJAH Kshitindra Deb Rai Mahasai presided at the Prize distribution ceremony of the Taltala School held on 4th April 1919, in course of which he said :—

"IT is the duty of every one, who loves and has the interests of his country at heart:—to help institutions like the one which we have come here to encourage by giving such donations and special prizes to keep up the ardent desire for learning in our rising generation. It has always been one of the pleasures of my life to be associated with ceremonies such as the one we have met to celebrate this afternoon. (Cheers.) One naturally feels tempted to encourage the boys by his presence and by giving sound advice which may be of practical use to them in the pursuit of their studies and also to help them in the formation of their character, which alone leads life to sovereign power."

"OUR ancient Rishis enjoined discipline in all stages of life and particularly as the first principle to be observed by the boys during the period of their pupilage. I would, therefore, like to impress upon them the great necessity of imbibing in their youthful days proper ideas of discipline, obedience to authority and to their elders as they themselves, when they grow up and become men, would like their children to reciprocate in the same necessary virtues which make a man a desirable citizen." (Cheers.)

"BE loyal, obedient, truthful and honest in your dealings with your parents, teachers and fellow-men. I do not like to tire your attention by inflicting on you a lengthy speech and I confess that I am not much of a public speaker myself and, therefore, I would turn your attention to the interesting ceremony of giving away prizes and medals to those, who have won them by diligent application to their studies, and as an encouragement, to those, who have failed to win them, I may tell them not to lose heart, but to persevere in their studies, so that they may obtain better and more satisfactory results next year. I would attach more value to good conduct prizes and I should like to see every boy to try his best to win the good conduct prizes of his class. I would insist upon parents and teachers alike to inculcate lessons of plain-living and high-thinking in their literal sense to their young hopefuls, so that they may prove themselves useful citizens respected alike both by the Government and the people."

"ALL lovers of true education would have reason to congratulate themselves if there sprung up among them more men of the type of Dr. Sir Gooroo Das Banerji kt. of revered memory, Dr. Sadler (afterwards Sir Michael), the Hon'ble Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, kt., Saraswati, M.A., D.L., C.S.I., and Sir P. C. Roy, kt., C.I.E., D.Sc., Ph.D., in Bengal (Cheers.)"

"IN conclusion, I must congratulate the Secretary, the Head Master and the teachers for the great progress they have shown during last year. In view of the new light that is dawning over India and the renaissance of the ancient spirit of high ideas, the task of the teachers of the present day is a sacred trust."

"TO them is entrusted the building up of character and the bringing up of our children to such attainments and ideals that they may be each one of them a perfect link in the chain of the Indian nationhood. Our youth should learn to realise that it is against their own and their country's interests not to look upon constituted authority in any other way, but, as a Divine Dispensation. To turn out loyal and useful citizens, is one of the noblest works as tending to raise up our country to attain its proper place in the comity of nations" (Cheers)

* The guests included Mr. G. N. Roy, M.A. I.C.S., District Judge, Hooghly, and Mrs. Roy, Mr. A. N. Moberly, M.A., I.C.S., Magistrate of Hooghly, and Mrs. Moberly.

† This was also exhibited at the Eleventh Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition, Hooghly, held on the 9th March 1921 under the presidency of Sir P. C. Roy kt. C.I.E., D.Sc., Ph.D.

RAJAH Kshitendra Deb Rai Mahasai is a warm friend and staunch advocate of education. His opinion has been published in the famous Report of the Calcutta University Commission. Sir Michael Sadler, K.C.S.I., the President of the Commission writing from the University of Leeds, on 9th July, 1919, gracefully acknowledged his services in that connection thus :—
"IT is a great pleasure to be reminded * * of the courteous help you gave to us in our work in Calcutta."

LIKE his predecessors, the Rajah Mahasai has a taste for Divine Music, which, it is regretted, has now-a-days degenerated into licence. His idea is to encourage the cultivation of classical music and to include it as a subject of study in the University. At a recent Conference of Musicians held in August, 1920, at the residence of Babu Harendra Krishna Sil, Upper Chitpur Road he has been unanimously elected as the Vice-President of the Executive Committee of the Mujlis, organised by Kumar Ganendra Mullick of the Marble Palace, Calcutta.

THE Rajah Mahasai is also a member of the Prajapati Samiti, an (Anti-Dowry Organisation) to which the Rajah Mahasai has set an excellent example on the occasion of his only son's marriage, for which he was much commended. The following extracts from "The Englishman," dated the 11th June, 1920, will be of general public interest :—

"THE special feature was that no demand was made for dowry, for which the Rajah is much to be commended, as he hereby sets an example to be followed by the members of his community."

"THE Statesman" of Friday, the 11th June, 1920, has also the following :—

"THE marriage ceremony of the only son of Rajah Kshitendra Deb Rai Mahasai of the Bansberia Raj, was celebrated in Calcutta at the Rajah's Calcutta residence, in Rani Sankari Lane, Kalighat, on Thursday last. No demand was made for dowry from the parents of the bride, the Rajah thus setting an example for the members of his community in this matter".

HIS son, Kumar Manabendu, is an Under-Graduate of the Calcutta University, having passed his Matriculation Examination in the First Division, from the Edward-George School, Madhupur, where he won the golden opinion of his teachers, under whom he read. He possesses a remarkable capacity for taking pains, which has stood him in great stead in acquiring knowledge in business, in which he is deeply interested.

HE was present, by invitation, at the Reception of Their Imperial Majesties the King-Emperor and Queen-Empress at Prinsep's Ghat, on December 30th 1911 and on the occasion of the arrival of Field-Marshal His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn K. G. on the 28th January 1921.

ON the Anniversary of the Birthday of His Imperial Majesty King-George V., Emperor of India, on 3rd June, 1920, he was married to the eldest daughter of Prof. Rabindra Narayan Ghosh, who stood first in M. A., of his year, and a distinguished alumnus of the Calcutta University.

OF the Rajah Mahasai's two daughters, the eldest was married to the son of the late-lamented Babu Jay Gopal Sinha, B. L., Judge the Court of Small Causes, Hooghly, Serampore and Howrah, and the youngest to the son of Babu Basanti Charan Sinha, M. A., B. L., a distinguished scholar of the Calcutta University and a leading member of the Mazafarpur Bar.

HIS eldest son-in-law, Babu Upendra Nath Sinha, P.L., is a pleader, having passed the Pleadership Examination, and his youngest son-in-law, Babu Ardhendu Bhusan Sinha, B.L., is a Vakil of the Calcutta High Court, and an expert man of business, like his distinguished father, who is the sole proprietor of the Mazafarpur Mangoe Preserving Company.

THE Rajah Mahasai is simple and unassuming in his manners and remarkable for his many-sided activities. The courage of his conviction and the independence of his character often elicited the admiration of all who came in contact with him. In his dealings with his friends and relations, he never allows himself to outstrip the bounds of reason and commonsense, and in extreme cases, he seldom loses the chance of a compromise. He is much admired for the soundness of his judgment and for his love of truth and justice.

THE Rajah Mahasai believes in the dictum that a true gentleman is more than a king. He is respected by the law-abiding and is courteous and affable to all.

HE is economical in his personal habits and is averse to show or display, which, in most cases, bring misery and ruin. He often advises his friends to cut their coat according to their cloth which, they now find, greatly to their advantage.

HE is a strong advocate of the dignity of labour. What the Rajah Mahasai saves by economy, he spends towards the relief of suffering and distress, and other beneficent purposes.

HE has a keen sense and appreciation of merit which has always found ready and liberal recognition at his hands. He has been first and foremost in honouring distinguished personages both European and Indian. He is fair-minded, liberal, and philanthropic. Several improvements have been effected through his efforts, in Rani Sankari Lane, Kalighat, where he has built his Calcutta residence, the structural design of which shows his artistic taste and engineering skill; and as the condition of Bansberia itself has greatly deteriorated in recent times owing to the alarming spread of malaria, the Rajah Mahasai with a view to improving the condition of the place and its neighbourhood, is offering facilities to English and American companies to clear ground which has hitherto been covered with jungle and erect mills, by which the sanitation of the place will be improved and the poverty of the people will be greatly alleviated.

RAJAH Kshitendra Deb Rai Mahasai of the Bansberia Raj, as Chairman of the Deputation which waited upon Sir J. G. Bose Kt. on the 8th January 1921, while handing over the Address of Welcome on behalf of the Calcutta Literary Society, addressed the assembly thus :—

SIR Jagadish Chandra Bose and Gentlemen :—It is with a feeling of deep emotion and great delight that I take upon myself the call of duty in welcoming in our midst one of the greatest and the most distinguished of the scientific men of the present day. I refer to Sir Jagadish Chandra Bose. The name is inspiring in itself—Jagadish, Lord of the world though he is not literally so, as he does not wield a sceptre or wear a crown. He may be called such, in the true sense of the word, as he has towered high and has established a reputation, which will be handed down from father to son for generations to come. I am not a scientist myself and I may confess that to me it is more of the nature of a duty than anything else. The duty of welcoming Sir Jagadish in our midst, might have taken upon myself to do so, and I am sure that it is suitable for this occasion.

WHEN I was first approached by the indefatigable Founder-Secretary, Mr. Chandra Deb, I felt myself greatly diffident, but, I subsequently pulled up as it is the good feeling in the path of duty.

SIR Jagadish has been revered by all the scientists of Europe and upon him has been bestowed the greatest honour in the British scientific world. He has been elected a Fellow of the Royal Society—an unique honour done to him for the researches he has made.

If I mistake not, he is, perhaps, the second Indian, who has been spotted out for this distinction. He has planted the banners of Indian culture in the far-off scientific academies of Europe and his name has become a household word in his own country.

I may claim some indulgence in my personal connection with Sir Jagadish. His father was intimately known in our family circle and was a sincere personal friend of my father, the late Rajah Purnendu Deb Rai Mahasai, one of the oldest members of the Calcutta Literary Society. I may claim, therefore, by right of lineage, to be an admirer and one, if I may so speak, of his personal friends. This idea predominated in my mind when I was requested by the Founder-Secretary and this is why, in spite of all my failings, and my recent ill-health, I am present here in your midst to do honour to the distinguished savant, after his return to his Mother-land.

INDIA has always been pressed with the reproach of doing nothing new. Of course, I mean, the modern India, not the old by-gone India of Vedic times, which has left us a heritage of thoughts in philosophy, poetry and spiritualism, which are real wonders even to the very advanced minds of Europe and America.

MODERN India, it is true, has not done much in the progress of physical science and in the advancement of scientific knowledge. But, that blur is now blotted out, and we are now in a Reformed Age, not only politically, but also scientifically.

NEW Reforms have been instituted and some have misgivings that we have not obtained too much. Whatever it may be in fact—too little or too much—it is not for us to discuss at present. But it may be said safely that we have made a substantial contribution of discovery to the scientific world through the brain power of Sir Jagadish Chandra Bose. It was never dreamt of by any of the European scientists that life similar to that of human beings can be detected in the plant world or in stone and wood. The same life permeates everywhere in more or less developed form. That things which we call inanimate are not inanimate, but animated as we ourselves are. With these few words of introduction, I beg permission to read the Address of Welcome, which it is a pleasurable duty to do now. (cheers).

LIKE his father Rajah Purnendu Deb who welcomed His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, on the 4th December 1883, Rajah Kshatindra Deb also welcomed Field-Marshal His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught K. G. on his arrival at Madras and at Calcutta on the 10th and 28th January 1921.

The following appeared in "The Englishman" dated the 29th January 1921, in connection with the Royal Visit to Calcutta:—

"AT the instance of the Calcutta Literary Society a public meeting was convened in Beadon Park at 7 A.M. on Friday, under the presidency of Raja Kshatindra Deb Rai Mahasai of Bansberia Raj to welcome His Royal Highness. The Presidents said in part:

HIS Royal Highness will, to-day, within a few hours, be in Calcutta, the premier City of the East, and we shall be failing in our duty if we do not all join in according the most sincere and hearty welcome to the illustrious representative of the Royal Family, whose object is great and noble, and who despite his age in years has come all the way to be in our midst for the purpose of inaugurating the new era of Reforms, which, I am sure, will shower blessings upon the millions of His Imperial Majesty's beloved subjects in India."

HE was present at the ceremony of unveiling the Statue of King Edward VII on the grounds of the Victoria Memorial on the following day, and at the Inauguration Ceremony on the 1st February 1921. He attended the Garden Party given by His Excellency Lord Ronaldshay in honour of His Royal Highness on the afternoon of the 1st instant, and had the honour of presentation to His Royal Highness at the Evening Party on the 2nd February 1921, when considerable interest was evinced by His Excellency Lord Ronaldshay, The Earl of Cromer, G.M.V.O., Chief of the Staff of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Mr. J. L. Maffey, K.C.V.B., Chief Secretary to His Royal Highness, and Mr. W. R. Gearlay, C.I.E., I.C.S. Private Secretary to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal, in the Congratulatory Addresses presented to Her Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress of India on the 6th April 1882, and to His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn on the 4th December 1883, on behalf of the Calcutta Literary Society to which the late Rajah Purnendu Deb Rai Mahasai, subscribed his name and which Rajah Kshatindra Deb Rai Mahasai, has preserved as a precious heir-loom in the archives of his family.

HE attended the Garden Parties given by the Hon'ble Maharajahdiraja Bahadur of Burdwan at 'Bejay Manzil' Alipore and by His Excellency Lord Ronaldshay at Government House, to meet His Excellency the Viceroy and the Lady Chatterjee on the 21st and 23rd February 1921. He was also present by invitation at Government House on the occasion of the farewell departure of His Excellency at 4 p.m. on Thursday the 24th February 1921.

AS an Honorary Member of the Calcutta Literary Society, he has also subscribed his name to the Congratulatory Addresses presented to the Hon'ble Justice Sir Asutosh Mukherjee, Kt., Saraswati, D.L., C.S.I., on his appointment as the Acting Chief Justice of Bengal in March 1920, the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson Kt., K.C., K.B., L.L.B., on his assuming the office of the Chief Justiceship of Bengal, in November 1920, His Excellency the Hon'ble Lord Sinha of Raipur Kt., K.C.S.I., K.C., on his appointment as the first Indian Governor of Bihar and Orissa, Field-Marshal His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn K.G., on his fifth historic visit to India on the 10th January 1921, and to the Right Honourable Sir Daniel Isaacs P.C., G.C.B., K.C.V.O., Earl of Reading, Viceroy-Designate of India and an illustrious patron of the Calcutta Literary Society.

In a word, the Rajah Mahasai has shed lustre on the renowned family to which he belongs by his life and example.

May the Rajah Mahasai live long in peace, health and prosperity, to the eternal glory of the Calcutta Literary Society.

On the Hon'ble Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Sham Day, the Founder-Secretary, Calcutta Literary Society, presided the Meeting thus:—

Address by the Secretary:—

Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen,

I feel great pride and honor in welcoming you here. It is most fortunate that we have had such a high personage, you Sir, to preside over our Thirty-third Anniversary Meeting this afternoon with your usual kindness towards the Literary Institution. The Members of the Society hereby tender you their warmest thanks for the favor, and I am most grateful to you for having spared the time in the midst of the multifarious duties of your office to come and side here to-day.

Before commencing the usual proceedings of the Meeting, allow me to express the Society's heart-felt grief caused by the melancholy death of the late Maharajah Sasi Kanta Acharyya Chowdhery Bahadur of Muktaghara, who died in October last, at Deogarh-Baidyanath, at the age of fifty-two! He became a Member of this Society in 1898 and continued it till the last days of his life. He was laid up in his bed for a few days only and his friends and relatives never thought that his end was so near! Letters of condolence were duly sent to his son, their Maharaj-Kumar Sasi Kanta Acharyya Chowdhery Bahadur and Mr. B. Chakerverti, Barrister-at-Law, and the office of the Society was closed for three days, in honor of the memory of the late illustrious deceased.

It is with profound regret I have to announce that the Society has lost the under-mentioned noblemen and gentlemen, who were Members and well-wishers of the Institution, at a very long time; viz:—

- 1) His Highness Dashtanakar Sain, Rajah Sahib of Suket State, in Panjab,
- 2) Sir Lepel Griffin, K.C.S.I., I.C.S.,

Letters of condolence were duly forwarded to the bereaved family of each of the illustrious deceased!

Gentlemen, it will, perhaps, not be considered out of place to acquaint you that the Calcutta Literary Society was founded in Eighteen hundred and seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends, the advanced pupils of various institutions of the town, who were then associated with him in the good work, when His

Most Excellent Majesty Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India, visited these shores, (then as His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales), and to-day we meet here to celebrate its Thirty-third Anniversary.

Gentlemen, I have the honor of being its Secretary since its foundation in 1875 and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching onward in the path of progress ever since its foundation.

Gentlemen, the objects of the Society are to hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities to discuss social, literary and scientific subjects and to create social union between Europeans and Indians.

It is founded essentially upon the principle and strict and loyal adherence to the British Crown and the Society has thus been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and, by so doing, it has achieved a fair measure of success.

The Society celebrated its Silver Jubilee at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 20th March, 1901, at 5 p.m., under the presidency of the late-lamented Vidya Vinada M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avergal, Rai Bahadur, B.L., C.I.E., ex-Madras Member, Viceroy's Legislative Council, before a large and respectable gathering, when Anagarika H. Dharmapala (of Ceylon,) delivered a lecture on the Students' Life in Ancient Buddhist India. (Vide, Englishman, Statesman, Bengalee, 22nd March, 1901.)

It is a matter of congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm. I cannot allow this opportunity to slip away without expressing my heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of Events, for His unusual kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of its various public meetings published in the leading local newspapers, for the last thirty-three years, bear ample testimony to them.

The Society has enrolled among its Patrons and Honorary Members the flowers of the European and Indian communities.

I have much pleasure in submitting to you a synoptical Report of the transactions of the Society, for the year 1908; viz:—

The Thirty-second Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 6th January, 1908, at 4-30 p.m., under the presidency of Rajah Ranjit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur, before a large and respectable gathering, when Mr. K. Chowdhry, late of the Manchester University, delivered a lecture on Socialism. (Vide, Englishman, Statesman, Indian Daily News, Bengalee, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7th, Hindu Patriot, 8th, and Indian Mirror, 9th January, 1908.)

Besides the Thirty-second Anniversary Meeting, the Society convened the following six public Meetings, during the year under review; viz:—

- (i) The Society convened a public Meeting in Cornwallis' Square, on the 23rd January, 1908, at 7 a.m., to celebrate the Seventh Anniversary of the Accession to the Throne of His Imperial Majesty Edward VII, King-Emperor of India, when an Address of Congratulation, signed by twenty-one Members of the Society, was forwarded to His Majesty, through the Right Hon'ble Lord Wenlock, M.P., C.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., Ex-Governor of Madras, to which the following acknowledgment was received:—

26, Portland Place. W.
February, 10th, 1908.

Dear Sir,

I had forwarded your Address, as requested, to His Majesty The King.

The Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society.

Yours truly,
WENLOCK.

- (2) The Society convened a public Meeting at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Saturday, the 23rd May, 1908, at 4.30 P.M., to celebrate the Empire Day, under the presidency of the Venerable Vedic Pandit Umesh Chandra Gupta, Vidya Ratna, when Babu Satish Kumar Banerjea, M.A., Rector, Mitra Institution, delivered a lecture on the virtues of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, Empress of India. (Vide, Journal, 24th, Indian Daily News, 25th, Bengalee, and Indian Mirror, 26th May, 1908.)
- (3) A well-attended Open-Air Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at College Square, on Friday, the 26th June, 1908, at 7 A.M., to celebrate the Sixty-seventh Anniversary of the Birthday of His Imperial Majesty The King-Emperor of India. (Vide, Journal, 28th, Indian Daily News, 29th June, 1908.)
- (4) The fourth public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at College Square, on the 9th August, 1908, to celebrate the Sixth Anniversary of the Coronation of His Imperial Majesty The King-Emperor of India. (Vide, Hindu Patriot, 10th August, 1908.)
- The fifth public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at College Square, on Monday, the 2nd November, 1908, to celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Assumption of the Government of India by the Crown and the publication of Her Majesty the late Queen Victoria's noble Proclamation of 1858. (Vide, Englishman, Empire, Indian Daily News, Indian Mirror, and Bengalee, 3rd and Hindu Patriot, 4th November, 1908.)
- (6) The sixth public Meeting, convened by the Society, was held at College Square, on the 1st December, 1908, at 7 A.M., to celebrate the Sixty-fifth Anniversary of the Birthday of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra of England. (Vide, Hindu Patriot, 4th December, 1908.)

Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen, I must express my deep regret at the fact that owing to the unrest which had, for a time, cast a dark gloom all around, no more meetings could be convened last year for discussing any lecture, or, for the discussion of any literary subject.

Gentlemen, ours is a Literary Society from the beginning. It has nothing to do with politics; and, therefore, expects the sympathy of all, who take a lively interest in literary pursuits, so that the country can really push onward in the march of civilization and advancement, which it so much stands in need of.

Gentlemen, allow us to congratulate His Honor Sir Edward Norman Baker, K.C.S.I., I.C.S., on His Honor's appointment to the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal. We hail His Honor's appointment with a deep sense of loyalty and confidence.

A letter of congratulation, signed by fourteen Members of the Society, was forwarded to His Honor on Tuesday, the 1st December, 1908, to which the following reply was received :—

Municipal Corporation :—

DEAR SIR,
I am in receipt of your letter, dated 6th April, 1908.
I am much thankful for the good wishes expressed therein on my being appointed Treasurer to the Calcutta Municipality.
Sham Lall Day, Esq.,
Founder-Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society.

MUNICIPAL OFFICE,
Calcutta, 7th April, 1908.
Yours truly,
AMRITA LALL MITTER.

Gentlemen, the Society has now to surmount numerous difficulties for want of a suitable building of its own, for its office and congregation, which impair, in a great degree, its rapid and steady progress.

It is, therefore, in contemplation to avail of the first opportunity, to remove this want. I, therefore, sincerely trust that the patrons, members, well-wishers and friends of this Literary Institution of thirty-four years standing will take a lively interest by lending their patronage in the matter, as without their co-operation, it would be difficult to provide it with one.

The Society is, at present, located in some hired rooms, at No. 24, Nimitola Street, Calcutta, and for its public Meetings, it has to go about from place to place. This is hardly a desirable thing and greatly hampered the utility of the Institution.

It is estimated that a sum of a lac and fifty thousand Rupees will be required for the purpose, to enable the Society to have a suitable home and respectful habitation of its own.

The Patrons and Members of the Society are all illustrious personages of the highest rank, great wealth and position, and they are distinguished for their liberality to institutions, which are doing and will do good to the country.

The sum is a most insignificant one, (comparing with any one of them can alone contribute the amount. It is needless to mention that the proposed building erected will bear the illustrious donors' names.

To secure the permanency of the Society and to enlarge the sphere of its usefulness, I sincerely trust that the sum necessary for the construction of the building may be secured alone by them, as it will be a matter of deep regret, if from want of a local habitation of its own, the Society shall cease to exist, or, the sphere of its usefulness contracted, after so many years of its existence.

Gentlemen, the thanks of the Society are hereby given to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasions.

The Society also records its appreciation of the kindness of the editors of the English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their columns to publish the proceedings of its Meetings and other doings of the Society since its foundation, in 1875.

The special thanks of the Institution are also hereby given to the donors and subscribers, who have helped the Society during the last Thirty-three years of its existence.

To the Patrons, Honorary Members, Members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their un-abated interest in the welfare of this Literary Society.

Let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, under whose fostering care the Society has been able to complete Thirty three years of its existence.

May He continue to shower His manifold blessings upon us, grant us strength enough to sustain us in our work and cheer us at the time of our difficulties. (Cheers).

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, had finished his Report for the year 1908, the Hon'ble Chairman blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Hon'ble Chairman then moved the adoption of the Report, which was unanimously carried by acclamation.

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Mr. R. C. Bonnerjee, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his lecture on—

One Aspect of Literature:—

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour, during which time, he was frequently applauded.

He delivered a very eloquent speech, which was listened to with rapt attention. The learned lecturer said:—

Gentlemen, now-a-days, one has to begin a paper, on any literary subject, with something in the nature of an apology, and this for two very good reasons; viz:—

In the first place, so much had been written about Literature, that unless the writer believes in the words of Browning—he sees two points in Hamlet's soul unseized by the German—yet, or is prepared further to elucidate some classic, he must be of a sanguine nature, indeed, if he expects to offer to his readers anything startlingly new.

In the second place, ours is a most matter-of-fact age, in which we all are very much under the thumb of the materialist.

To the new-born race of scientists, who regard science as the end-all and be-all of existence, there is something distasteful in anything that can afford to ignore, what they consider facts worth-knowing and attend to the qualities, which come under the domain of imagination, rather than of varicination, further this generation is one that lives its life in a great hurry and men use the pauser in their every day occupations, not so much to refresh and recoup themselves for their tasks, as to stimulate their jaded faculties.

The reading-matter of to day—with one or two brilliant exceptions—that finds most vogue in the daily press, with its solemn and potentous leaders, society gossip and police court scandal, together with certain books, that can scarcely be called Literature and might be called by a much more ugly name.

Added to this, there is, what Bagehot has called—the tyranny of the common place.—You may talk, said he, of the tyranny of Nero and Tiberius, but, the real tyranny is that of your next-door neighbour.

Public opinion is a permeating influence and it exacts obedience to itself. It requires us to think other men's thoughts, to speak other men's words and to follow other men's habits.

At present, undoubtedly, public opinion is not on the side of Literature. It is no bad custom, therefore, to form literary societies and read papers on literary subjects, as a protest against this tyranny.

Such essays may, perhaps, excuse their lack of originality by the plea, that, if not, by their virtues, at least by their faults, they turn the minds of their readers to considerations of a literary character.

The literary man is the proud possessor of many contemptuous epithets—he is the idealist, the dreamer, the pedant or the dilettante. It is due to the many tangible and beneficial results of modern science that idealism, now-a-days, requires an apology. Here, at all events, no apology will be offered for it.

Materialism is all very well in its own way, but, anything that can prevent its absolute domination, so long as man is or considers himself to be, a spiritual being, is not without its raison d'être. To dream may be unprofitable; but, it is occasionally pleasant and dreams play some part in this life of ours.

Most of us, when the toils of the day are over, are glad for sleep and if there be pleasant dreams therein, who is to complain?

So, in the rush and hurry of this life of ours, amidst all the weariness, the fume and the fret, he plays no un-important part, who can give us, —A tone.

Of some world far from ours,

Where music and moon-light and feeling are one.

As for the pedantry of Literature, that has its objectionable side, but, exactness, whether in language or anything else, is hardly what one would expect a scientific generation to regard as an egregious fault. For the dilettante, too, there is some little to be said. Doubtless character, determination and steadiness are essentials for a successful life.

Unless men in the main exhibited these characteristics, the work of the world would fulfil considerably. Industry and perseverance are, no doubt, two of the most essential virtues, but, all work and no play makes Jack, a dull boy and there are times when a little dilettanteism is not without its uses.

Horace tells us with truth dullest desipere in loco. It is sweet to play the fool in season and unless it tempts us to play the fool out of season as well, we should be grateful to those who help us to do so.

There is, however, from the practical point of view, another very great argument, in favour of the study of Literature. Useful, though it may be, when science reaches forth her aims to feel from world to world and charms her secret from the latest moon, there are other things, in this life of ours, useful also. Taking everything into consideration, to a large extent, the proper study of mankind is man.

How be it are we to study man? We may, by increasing our physiological knowledge, discover many most important details about his structure and his functions and his powers.

Man, however, as countless philosophers have told us, is a gregarious animal and no amount of scientific facts, using with the last two words, in their present accepted sense, will complete our knowledge of his relations with his fellows.

Progress, after all, is not confined to man's victories over nature. There is something to be said of man's victories over himself. Civilisation ought not to be judged, though there is a tendency, so to judge it, by material improvements alone.

The mind, as well as the body of man, deserves our consideration, and where shall we trace the minds of men more clearly than in their art, and, to use a generic term, there more than elsewhere in their Literature.

Science has made this world a much smaller place than it was. New races are continually being brought into contact with each other and if the scheme of things is to proceed at all smoothly, they must begin to understand one another. How shall they best to do this?

After all, the mind of a race plays a very important part in its history. Shall we understand the mind of a race from its scientific inventions? These may—may rather must—give us some indication, but, properly to appreciate men's actions, it is necessary to know that, which prompts them.

Where else are the ideals and the impulses of a nation embodied more clearly than in their Literature? And what of the facts, on which the scientific mind lays so much stress?

The commentaries of Cæsar, though they describe actual events, that is actual facts for future generations to read, are of no more importance in our study of the Roman people, than are the private letters of Cicero to his friend.

The poems of Homer reveal to us as much about the ancient Greeks, as do the histories of Herodotus, or, indeed, further to extend the comparison—as do the recent excavations in Crete and elsewhere.

Immortality is the one thing, most hoped for by mortal men, and, if the world has any scheme at all, properly to study that scheme, we must look before and after. To understand our own minds fully, we must understand the minds of those, who went before us.

The thoughts and ideals and aspirations of an age are embodied by their great writers, and it is just their faculty of embodying the soul of the times that makes the authors great and their works immortal.

Horace declared, at the end of his third book of odes, "I have erected a monument more lasting than brass." —Exegi monumentum aere perennius—and his declaration was not without truth. The things, wrought by the hand of man, pass away.

Build as man may
Time gnaws and tears,
'Midst marble fleases iron rents
Only imagination rears,
Imperishable monuments.

If then it be necessary for us to understand the minds and the actions of those, who have preceded us, in this world, and, if their Literature is the means, whereby we are to make this study, so, also, must we employ the Literature of our contemporaries, if we wish to study and understand their minds and actions.

If there be one bond of union in the world between the different races, it is to be found more certainly in Literature than in anything else. Custom obtains a great predominance over us, as Herodotus says—

"Custom is king and men, who differ from each other, in their customs, are apt to look with distrust on one another."

But, if they pause and consider, they will find that the old truism, that human nature is much the same all the world over, is not so untrue.

They will find a common meeting-ground, when they consider the ideals, which, in the end, prompt the customs, and just as no man can properly understand his own race, unless he knows its mind, which is displayed more in its Literature than in most other things, so, he can only understand another race, if he knows its Literature.

The statement, that Literature is a common meeting-ground for all nations, requires, however much qualification. The scheme of the world seems such, that in it, each nation represents an idea.

Thus we find Greece representing the idea of completion—that which is self-contained and from this idea rose the city State.

Later in the world, when that idea was too narrow, came Rome with her idea of Empire.

The glory that was Greece, and the grandeur that was Rome, live in their Literature. Athens is an un-important city of the world, save for its history. Aeschylus is a world-wide treasure. The temples that the Romans erected are falling to ruins. Vergil holds sway in the whole of the civilised world.

So, too, if ever the dream of Macaulay comes true and his New Zealander sits on the arch of London Bridge, to sketch the ruins of St. Paul, the British Empire will live again in its writers and its Literature.

We shall not, by studying the literature of another nation, expect to find that it is exactly the same as our own—rather we shall look for its difference. Each nation has a different part to play in the world, but, by studying its Literature, we shall realise largely, what part it has played and they will give us no faint indication of the part, that it is likely to play.

Empires are growing large, now-a-days, and men of all races meet in one large hall. How shall the harmonious working of these great Empires be insured, unless men take the trouble to understand one another?

Is there a better way of understanding men, than of understanding that, which prompts their actions? Shall we find their motives or their ideals anywhere more clearly set forth than in their Literature? These considerations bring us at once to the question what is Literature.

I shall attempt no definition of my own, in the short space at my disposal here. Morley, in considering this question, says, Definitions always appear to me in these things to be in the nature of vanity.

I feel that the attempt to be compact in the definition of Literature ends in something that is meagre, partial, starved and unsatisfactory. But, he goes on to define it.

Literature, he says, consists of all the books—and they are not so many—where moral truths and human passions are touched with a certain largeness, sanity and attraction of form.

Poets, dramatists, humourists, satirists, masters of fiction, the great preachers, the character-writers, the maxim-writers, the great political orators—they are all Literature, in so far as they teach us to know man and to know human nature.

This is what makes Literature rightly sifted and selected and rightly studied—not the mere elegant trifling, that it is so often and so erroneously supposed to be, but, a proper instrument for a systematic training of the imagination and sympathies and of a genial and varied moral sensibility.

Literature, like a jewel, has many facets. The aspect, on which I have ventured to-day, stress in one that concerns us in this country.

We are brought into daily contact with another race. Both races must understand each other. In Literature, we shall find a common meeting-ground.

There is so much, that is material in our lives of to-day, that we should treasure anything that is spiritual. Let us, by all means, do our best to take every advantage of any material benefit, the men of science can give us.

Let us hail with delight each new invention, that adds to the material comfort of the world. Let us applaud those, who devote their lives to science. Let us not fail to appreciate the advantages of a technical education. (Cheers.)

Undoubtedly, it is of the utmost importance, that men should be trained, to do useful things, whereby they can earn their daily bread, and put into force all the powers of nature to make life easier.

There is, however, a dangerous tendency to exaggerate this view and to make the earning of the daily bread, the end-all and be-all of life—to look only for what is material and tangible, to follow the busy dance of things that pass away, to neglect the temperate show of others that endure.

If I may again quote Morley, "In the times before us," he says, "that promise, or threaten deep political, economical and social controversy, what we need to do, is to induce our people, to weigh and consider." We want them to cultivate energy without impatience, activity without restlessness, inflexibility without ill humour.

I am not going to preach to you any artificial Stoicism, I am not going to preach to you any indifference to money, or, to the pleasures of social intercourse, or, to the esteem and good will of our neighbours, or, to any other of the consolations and necessities of life.

But, after all, the thing, that matters most, both for happiness and duty, is that we should strive habitually to live with wise thoughts and right feelings. Literature helps us more than other studies to this most blessed companionship of wise thoughts and right feelings."

I will only add, in conclusion, that they, who dwell in the companionship of wise thoughts and right feelings, will not fail to discover in the Literature of another civilised race, a common bond of sympathy, which shall dictate their daily intercourse one with another. (Cheers.)

After the learned speaker had done, Dr. S. K. Mullick, M.A., M.D., delivered a nice little speech. He particularly pointed out that a suitable building for the Society was badly needed. He earnestly appealed to its Members to lend their helping hands in the matter.

The Hon'ble Chairman then rose, amidst cheers. He thanked the learned lecturer for his eloquent speech and endorsed the remarks of the lecturer. He advised the students to imitate what was best in other nations, for that was the only way to make the Indians great.

He recommended the study of the histories of Greece, Rome, England, France, Germany, as well as that of their own mother-land.

Mr. Jnan Chandra Roy, B.L., Pleader, Judge's Court, Alipur, proposed votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the learned lecturer, which were seconded by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan pal Bahadur and supported by Kumar Kshitindra Deb Rai Bahadur of Bansbarea—Hooghly and carried by acclamation.

A charming song closed the

The Thirty-fourth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great clat, at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 5th. January, 1910, at 5-30 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Digambar Chatterjea, M.A., B.L., Judge of the High Court.

The hall was packed to overflowing by a large and appreciative assembly. The Members of the Society, the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University and other gentlemen of the suburbs composed the bulk of the audience. Upon the table, there were nose-gays, bouquets, garlands of beautiful flowers, &c.

On the Hon'ble Chairman's taking his seat, amidst cheers, Master Madan Mahan Chatterjea, a lad of four summers, sang a sweet song, composed for the occasion. His mellifluous and charming voice, enraptured the huge assembly.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, then addressed the Meeting thus:—

ADDRESS BY THE SECRETARY:—

Hon'ble Chairman and Gentlemen,

I feel great pride and honor in welcoming you here. It is most gratifying that we have had such a high personage as you, Sir, to honor the Society with your presence and to preside over the Thirty-fourth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, this afternoon, with your usual kindness towards this Literary Institution of thirty-four years standing, neither gulfing of your time nor labor, in the midst of your multitudinous duties of your exalted office. The Members of the Society hereby tender you their warmest thanks for the favor.

Before commencing the usual proceedings of the Meeting, allow me to express the Society's most heart-felt grief, caused by the melancholy death of the late Mr. Lal Mohan Ghose, Barrister-at-Law; Mr. R. C. Dutt, C.I.E., Prime Minister of Baroda State; Mr. N. N. Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, Editor, Indian Nation, &c.; Mr. Jogendra Nath Srimany, B.A., B.L., Vakil, High Court; and Mr. Peary Mohan Guha, M.A., B.L., Vakil, High Court.

These gentlemen were all well-wishers of the Society, since a very long time. Letters of condolence were duly forwarded to each of the bereaved family of the deceased!

These gentlemen were also foremost in the industrial re-generation of India.

In Mr. Lal Mohan Ghose, Barrister-at-law, we ever found that a tough champion of popular liberty, and he carried our banner across many seas to the land of freedom and planted it in the heart of England, claiming their sympathy and support, for the advancement of the country. His name will always be enshrined in the grateful memory of his countrymen.

As the first Indian, who made his work in England, and showed to the English people the loyalty of the Indian race.

In Mr. R. C. Dutt, C.I.E., we had not only an intellectual giant, but a great administrator and political economist of far-sighted sagacity. He had vindicated for all time, the Bengali genius, for handling large and delicate problems with perfect ease and satisfaction.

In Mr. Nagendra Nath Ghose, Barrister-at-Law, we have lost a man, whose well-balanced judgment and literary attainments shed lustre on any nation. His straightforwardness, and his freedom from cant and hypocrisy, proved him to be a man of great moral strength and integrity of character.

Gentlemen, we have assembled here, this afternoon, to celebrate the Thirty-fourth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society.

If the pride that a gardener feels, on seeing the seed sown by him, blossom up into a full-grown tree, is pardonable, the fondness of the founder of this Society, for taking pride in its growth and development, which had been his sole concern for the last thirty-four years of its existence.

The Calcutta Literary Society started so far back as 1875, by half a dozen young men, with this humble speaker, as its Founder and Secretary, with the object of promoting friendly relations between the rulers and the ruled, of fostering a desire of discussing social, scientific and literary subjects, has succeeded in securing the patronage of illustrious personages.

Men of light and leading—the cream of Indian and Foreign Universities have honored this modest institution, by delivering illuminating lectures, on social, scientific and literary subjects, during the last thirty-four years of its existence.

The Society is founded essentially upon the principle and strict and loyal adherence to the British Crown, and the Institution has thus been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses, in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and, by so doing, it has achieved a fair measure of success.

Gentlemen, it has always been the desire of the Society to contribute, as much as possible, to the material well-being of the young men of the country. If the Society propagated new ideas on scientific, social and literary subjects, by holding discourses thereon, it did not lose sight of the fact that industrial education was the only solution for the great bread-problem—the most pressing problem—before us.

It is a matter of great satisfaction that this question has now arrested the attention of the leaders of our country and we find scores of our young men going abroad in quest of education and coming home laden with scientific knowledge.

But, there are numerous youngmen—whose number is legion—who cannot aspire to any scholarship, for going abroad, or, continuing their studies here—who, being too short of funds to betake themselves beyond the school department, or, after repeated failures at examinations, are idling away their time, for want of occupation—they are apparently left uncared for.

It behoves our benign Government and much more our educated and wealthy countrymen to devise suitable means, for the provision of those unfortunate youngmen, who are, for want of high education, denied a licence in every grade of service. One will not be totally mistaken to conclude, that it is a political blunder to leave such a store-house of energy, at the mercy of designing persons.

Technical education is the crying need of the day, and it must not be forgotten that such education should be made free, or, very very cheap, so that, this poverty-stricken country may be benefitted.

Poverty is alone responsible for the shamefully high percentage of illiterate persons in our country, and it is a grim reality that our great middle-class—whence spring the greatest intellectuals of the day—is perpetually labouring under the grinding curse, which, as a great author has said, keeps down noble aspirations, under a load of ignoble care.

The enthusiasm of these un-employed youngmen of poor, but respectable families, if directed to the proper channel, will be conducive to the economic welfare of the land. A grand idea—a noble mission, no doubt, but it requires considerable money and statesmanship to work it out.

With this glorious object in view, the Calcutta Literary Society, in a very humble way, started a Free Knitting

The Inaugural Meeting of the Calcutta Free Knitting School was celebrated at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 8th March, 1909, 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Sir Charles George H. Allen, K.C., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Member, Bengal Legislative Council and an Honorary Member of the Calcutta Literary Society and one of the most distinguished friends of Indian aspirations.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of the various public Meetings, published in the leading local daily newspapers, for the last thirty-four years, bear ample testimony to them.

Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in submitting to you a synoptical Report of the transactions of the Society, for the year 1907:—

The Thirty-third Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great edification, at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 4th January, 1909, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Ashaosh Mukerjee, Saravali, M.A., D.L., D.Sc., C.S.I., F.R.A.S., F.R.S.E., Judge of the High Court and Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, before a large and appreciative audience, when Mr. R.C. Presidency Magistrate, Port and Municipal Commissioner, &c., when Doctor S.C. Chowdhery, B.A., L.M.S., delivered his first lecture to the Society on Pthisis, its prevalence and spread among young boys and prophylactic measures against it:—

He said that the term Pthisis, or consumption, although applicable to several forms of wasting diseases, is commonly used to designate a milder, having for its chief manifestation, progressive emaciation of body, loss of strength, occurring in connection with morbid change in the lungs and other organs. Medical men call it Pulmonary tuberculosis.

Few diseases possess such sad interest for humanity, as Pthisis, both, on account of its wide-spread prevalence, and its destructive effects, particularly among the young.

In every age of medicine, or in every country, or in every system, Allopathic, Homœopathic, Ayurvedic or Unani, it has formed a fertile field for inquiry, as to its nature, cause, and its treatment.

It is a disease of early life and period, between 15 to 35. The influence of sex is not marked, but, women are, perhaps more frequently attacked, especially, in Calcutta, than men possibly because, they are forced to carry on a sedentary indoor life, in closed ill-ventilated place, where Sun seldom peeps, as it were, for fear of violating the sanctity of our ill-fated parda system.

The pernicious custom of child-marriage, with the concomitant evil effects of early mother-hood, and all the weakening factors attendant thereon, prepares the soil for the reception and the luxuriant growth of Tubercle bacillus.

Occupations, habits and conditions of life have a very important bearing on the development of the disease apart altogether from a inherited tendency, thus occupations which necessitate the inhalation of irritating particles, as minerals, as in the case of stone-masons, needle-grinders, workers in minerals, in sawky mills, in cotton, flour, straw, jute, flax, &c., are especially harmful, chiefly from the mechanical effects upon the delicate pulmonary tissue of the matter inhaled.

The Hon'ble Chairman, in proposing a vote of thanks, on behalf of the Society, to the learned Doctor, said that the lecture was replete with interest, not only to the members of the medical profession, but, also to laymen. He was sure the medical students must have been benefited from the discourse of this evening.

He thanked Mr. Sarin Lal Day, the indefatigable Foundation-Secretary to the Society, for maintaining the usefulness of the Institution, with unflinching zeal, and thus affording opportunities for discussion on literary and scientific subjects to educate community. (Cheers)

Kumar Rameswar Malia Bihalur of Sirsi Raj Estate, having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved at 6 P.M.

Chowdhury, B.A., L.M.S., delivered his second lecture to the Society on

PLAGUE :—

The Meeting was well-attended.

The learned Doctor very ably dwelt upon the subject nearly an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention. He said that Plague has been known to the medical profession, as a distinct infectious disease from the earliest ages of which we have authentic report.

With regard to treatment of Plague cases, I have very little to say. Good nursing, suitable food and stimulants appear to have more to do with recovery, than any special mode of treatment with drugs. So far, as is known to me, there is no Plague-specific.

As for stimulants, Adrenalin solution by the mouth and hypodermatic injection has proved very useful. Saline injection has highly been recommended by Colonel Lukis, I will, I am sure, produce the desired effect.

The serum treatment has proved a failure in practice, possibly, because, the cases are not seen early enough for purpose. Belladonna and Glycerine with Icthyol is a most comforting application to a bubo and is better than ice-bag. Application of ice-bag is serviceable in the case of cerebral congestion. Delirium should be combatted by hyoscyamine. A patient should not be allowed to move, or sit up during the stage of convalescence.

After the learned Doctor had finished his speech, Doctor K. Mullick, M.A., M.D., very eloquently addressed the meeting for half an hour.

The Chairman then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for sometime. He thanked the learned Doctor for his instructive lecture, and blessed Society.

The Meeting dissolved with the customary vote of thanks to the chair.

(5) The fifth public Meeting, for the thirty-fourth session of the Society, was held at the hall of National Medical College, 191, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, 30th, January, 1909, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Doctor S. C. Chowdhury, B.A., L.M.S., Professor, National Medical College, when Mr. Panch Cowri Banerjee, B.A., Editor, Hitabadi, delivered a lecture on

The Life and Teachings of the late Poet Mr. Nobin Chandra Sen :—

The Meeting was largely attended, and the Hon'ble Mr. Anubhai Das, M.A., B.L., Judge of the High Court, honored the Meeting with his kind presence.

The learned speaker addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He very lucidly described the prominent aspects of his poems. Poet Nobin Chandra Sen, he said, was the poet of the renaissance period, just as Rajah Ram Mohan Roy was the religious and the venerable Pandit Eshwar Anandha Vidyasagra, C.I.E. of the social period.

The presence of individuality, in the eastern poetry, began with the late poet Mr. Michael Madhu Sudan Dutt, but, etc were absent in the fervour of religious enthusiasm and patriotism.

The Poet, the speaker went on, composed favorably with the Tennyson. Throughout his writings runs a current of humanitarianism. His was a poetry, where individuality was lit up by patriotism. There was no mysticism in his poetry. It was all sweet and transparent, and touched up with sympathy and love.

The speech was followed by an elegy, in Bengali, composed by Babu Khusomoy Lahiri.

Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjee B.L., then eloquently dwelt upon the spirit of patriotism that pervades through all his works—the Battle of Plassy and the Kurukhetra specially. He also quoted several passages to illustrate his remarks.

He then described the religious enthusiasm of the Poet, as manifested in his writings. The description of Kurukhetra, on the eve of the battle of Plassy, fully shows his strength of imagery.

Rui Surat Chandra Das Bhatnagar, C.I.E., and Babu Durga Das Lohari also spoke a few words, in appreciation of the late Poet Mr Nobin Chandra Sen.

The Chairman then spoke a few words on the subject.

The Meeting dissolved at 7 P.M., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(6) The sixth public Meeting, for the thirty-fourth session of the Society, was held at hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Saturday, the 6th, February, 1909, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Nawab Nasir-ul-Mamalak Muzi Shujaat Ali Beg Sahib, Consul-General for Persia, when Doctor S. C. Chowdhury, B.A., L.M.S., delivered his third lecture to the Society on

The Life and teachings of Sri Sri Ram Chandra :—

Before a crowded Meeting.

He said, that Sri Sri Ram Chandra has ever been regarded as the ideal character among the Hindus and his name is a house-hold word with them. So much so, that they name their sons and brothers after him, so that, they may casually pronounce that sacred word and be sanctified thereby.

He was the eldest son of Rajah Dasaratha, the world-renowned King of Ajodhya, who had three other sons; viz :—Bharat, Satrugna and Lakshman, the last two being twins.

Sri Sri Ram Chandra won the beautiful Sita Devi for his wife, by breaking the great bow of Hara, which baffled the strength of the other candidates for her hand.

The King then desired to crown Sri Sri Ram Chandra as Yubraj, or heir-apparent, but, his second Queen, Kaikeyi, interfered, and on the strength of a promise, previously made by the King, to grant her two boons, secured the banishment of Sri Sri Ram Chandra, for fourteen years in a forest and the nomination of her own son Bharat as Yubraj.

Accordingly, the dutiful Sri Sri Ram Chandra left the kingdom, in company with his brother Lakshman and his dutiful wife Sita Devi, amidst the wailings of the people. The King himself succumbing to the shock.

After fourteen years, Sri Sri Ram Chandra returned to Ajodhya and was made King. His reign was a reign of peace, contentment and prosperity and characterised by even handed dispensation of justice. Theft and falsehood were unknown to his kingdom, and thus property was secure everywhere.

He was the patron of learning, and a defender of religion. He was always the friend of the Munis and Rishis, whom he protected against the attacks of their enemy.

He was the father of his subjects, so far as their education, training, protection and maintenance were concerned.

As the people, in Sri Sri Ram Chandra's time, were passionately devoted to their King and enjoyed unalloyed peace and prosperity, so, it is, by loyalty alone, that a nation can be happy and prosperous in all countries, and under all circumstances.

After the learned Doctor had finished his speech, the Chairman addressed the Meeting for sometime. He said that it was a treat to him and must have been appreciated by every body present.

He thanked the Doctor for the pains, he had taken in collecting materials, and said that he saw no reason, why Sri Sri Ram Chandra should be an ideal character among the Hindus alone. He should, by an ideal character, in all countries and among all races. (Cheers.)

He then compared the epics of different places and said that the epics of Valmiki is higher in sublimity than that of Fradosi. He also spoke in praise of the epic poet Meera Ancees, who has immortalised, in Persian, the character of the great Martyr Imam Hussein.

India, the Chairman said, must be proud of producing such venerable men, as Valmiki, Kalidas, and Meera Ancees.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(8) The eighth public Meeting, for the thirty-fourth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the National Medical College, 191, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 13th. February, 1909, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Mahamahapadhyai Pandit Satish Chandra Vidya-Bhushan, M.A., B.L., Ph.D., F.U.S., &c., Professor of Sanskrit, Presidency College, Calcutta, when Mr. Klierad Chandra Mitra, delivered a lecture on

The Faith in God :—

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour. He said that faith is power. No one can rise to the highest state, without having faith in God.

Faith must be the basis and the foundation, upon which spiritual life should stand. It must be the corner-stone of spiritual buildings. This has beautifully been explained in the Chaitanya Charitamrita, where Sri Sri Chaitanya goes to Sarba Bhowma to infuse in him faith, by showing him his Sarabhuja Murti. (Cheers.)

The late Mr. G. J. Romans, after spending his lifetime in the service of Science, Atheism, and Agnosticism, discovered that men are miserable so long, as they have not this consoling religious faith. That there is a vacuum in the soul of man, which nothing can fill, but faith in God.

The Chairman then thanked the lecturer, for his very able speech, and said faith and devotion bring success in this and the next life. It is required to attain salvation.

The subject is important for both young and old men. He said that Sarba Bhowma, who was a strict logician, was not a believer in God, but, was brought into faith in God by Chaitanya. He also quoted several examples from the Vedas, Puranas, &c.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting for some time. He thanked the lecturer and blessed the Society.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair, proposed by Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjee, B.L., and carried by acclamation.

Pthiases—Its early diagnosis and the way of treating cases :—

The hall was crowded to suffocation.

The learned Doctor very ably dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour and he was heard with rapt attention. He laid much stress upon the determination of opsonic index of tubercle bacilli and explained the possible results that are usually found.

He then impressed upon his audience that a sort of reaction of tubercle may be obtained, which serves as a diagnostic agent.

The microscopic examination of the sputum also did not escape the extension of the lecture.

He also dwelt on the treatment very satisfactorily, which was appreciated by the intelligent audience.

The Chairman then made a nice little speech, thanked the lecturer and blessed the Society.

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to chair and the learned Doctor.

MALARIA AND BLACK WATER FEVER :—

Before a large audience.

The speaker dwelt upon his subject for nearly a quarter of an hour. He said that Quinine, though able to kill off Malaria, was not a remedy for black water fever.

The Chairman then asked Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjee, B.L., to deliver his lecture on Social Reform :—

The speaker very eloquently dwelt upon the numerous social evils, such as early marriage, caste-system, compulsory widowhood of child-widows, that are hampering growth of a robust Indian nationality.

He expressed his delight, in finding political leaders such as the Hon'ble Mr. Gopal Krishna Gokhale, C. Bombay Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, Editor Bengalee and Mr. Meik taking up the task of reforming society with enthusiasm.

He fervently appealed to the student community to quarrel with the Government, but, apply their energy to the destruction of the pernicious customs of the race, were bringing about their ruin.

The Chairman then summed up the proceedings of the evening in a nice little speech. He eulogised the speakers for their very ably dealing with the two difficult subjects.

He also thanked the Society for introducing a new subject at this juncture and lamented the want of suitable organisations to give effect of social reforms.

Principle of Life :—

The learned Doctor very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly a quarter of an hour and he was heard with attention. He spoke mainly on cellular structure, pointed out that cell-salts are essential workers of body. When any of the cell-salts are deficient, disease sets in, and the only method of cure is to supply

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, the chairman spoke a few words and thanked the Director. The Meeting dissolved at 6 P.M., with votes of thanks to the chair and the learned lecturer.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm.

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that sixteen illustrious personages have been pleased to become Honorary Members and three, as Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, during the year, 1909, for which the best thanks of the Institution are hereby accorded to each of them. (Cheers.)

I cannot allow this opportunity to slip away, without expressing my heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Dis-poser of Events, for His un-usual kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

There are many literary societies in the Metropolis, but,
I am glad to say, that the Calcutta Literary Society now stands the oldest Hindu Literary Society.

Gentlemen, the special thanks of the Society are also hereby given to the donors and subscribers, who have helped the Institution, during the year, under review. (Cheers.)

The thanks of the Society are due to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its Meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasions, as well as to those, who lent their hall for holding its various Meetings.

The Society also records its appreciation of the kindness of the editors of the English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their columns to publish the proceedings of its Meetings and other doings of the Society, since its foundation in 1875.

To the Patrons, Honorary Members, Members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I hereby beg to express my deep obligation for their un-abated interest in the welfare of this Literary Society of Thirty-four years standing. (Cheers.)

May God continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength enough to sustain us in our work and cheer us, at the time of our difficulties. (Cheers.)

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report for the year 1909, the Hon'ble Chairman moved that it be adopted.

The proposal was carried by acclamation.

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Dr. Indu Madhab Mullick, M.A., M.D., to deliver his lecture on the—

INTERDEPENDENCE OF LITERATURE & SCIENCE:

The learned Doctor treated the subject specially from a psychological point of view. None of the impressions they received, he said, were ever lost and their experiences were all stored in their subliminal consciousness. While mutually helpful, the one relaxed the effects of the other, and they were, as it were, the two poles of the same mental culture.

Literature viewed things at a distance, which science viewed them more closely over a narrow field. Literature, was, therefore, more attractive and likened the way of science.

Kant conceived evolution long before Darwin. They should wed the two together, thereby disciplining the vagueness of Literature by the exactness and utility of Science.

Broad culture, though elementary, was the aim of the present day education in Europe and America, and they, in India, had made a retrogression in enforcing speciality very early.

He wished the Society to remove this evil by instituting lectures on scientific subjects. He instanced Japan as a case in point, and advised his hearers to devote themselves to the pursuit of Science, while, at the same time, not losing sight of Literature. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman then rose, amidst cheers, and delivered a nice little and instructive speech, which was heard with rapt attention. He congratulated the Society and wished the Institution every success.

He humourously referred to Literature and Science, as two very old friends of his, who had been supplanted by others in his later career. Recently, there had been, to employ figurative language, a judicial separation, and he thanked the Society for their mediation, with a view to effect a reconciliation between his old love and himself.

He agreed with the lecturer that Literature tended to create vague ideas, while science helped to correct them.
He likened Literature to a flower-garden, which afforded pleasure by the variety of its scent and the brightness of colour, while Science, he compared, to a corn-field, which afforded the wherewithal to live. He appealed to the young men to train themselves up in science, in order to raise India amid the constellation of nations. (Cheers.)

Dr. S. K. Mullick, M.A., M.D., on behalf of the Society proposed votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the learned lecturer and also to Master Chatterjea, the little musical prodigy, whose remarkable singing was one of the features of the evening, which were very ably seconded by Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjea, B.L., Pleader, Howrah
Court, and carried by acclamation.

After singing two charming songs, the proceedings of the evening came to a close at 7-30 P.M.

The Thirty-fifth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Thursday, the 26th January, 1911, at 5 p. m., under the presidency of the Revd. Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon and General Secretary of the Moha Bodhi Society.

The Meeting was largely attended by the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University and the public in general.

On the Revd. Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Sham all Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, read the following Report for the year, 1910.

Address by the Secretary :—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,

I feel great pride and honor in welcoming you all before commencing the usual proceedings of the Thirty-fifth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, allow me to express the Society's most heart-felt grief, caused by the sad death of His Most Gracious Majesty Edward the Seventh, King-Emperor of India, on Friday, the 6th May, 1910, at 11-45 p. m.

We have sustained a great national loss on His Majesty's death. It would be inopportune for us to enlarge on His Majesty's illustrious qualities, or, the splendid achievements of His Majesty's brief, but, brilliant reign.

To His Majesty King George the Fifth, the Society tender its most loyal and respectful congratulations, on His Majesty's accession to the Throne of His Majesty's illustrious ancestors.

Only, the other day, Their Majesties King George V. and Queen Mary visited this country. Their Majesties' kindly sympathy for the Indians was a marked feature of their Indian Majesties' tour.

The news of His Majesty's proposed visit to India, for the coronation, at Delhi, has sent a thrill of joy throughout the length and breadth of India. The auspicious ceremonial at Delhi will deeply impress our loyalty to the Throne, and our affection and respect for the person of our Great Sovereign, and, altogether, it will be productive of the happiest results. Our gratification is considerably enhanced that Her Majesty Queen Mary will accompany His Majesty King George V. We fervently pray that the Almighty Giver of all Good may bless Their Imperial Majesties with long life, health, peace and prosperity.

Allow us to congratulate also His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Lord Hardinge, G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, on His Excellency's appointment to the Viceroyalty and Governor-Generalship of India. We hail His Excellency's appointment with a deep sense of loyalty and confidence.

Gentlemen, we have assembled here this afternoon to celebrate the Thirty-fifth Anniversary of the Calcutta Literary Society. It is a matter of congratulation, that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm. We cannot pass this opportunity to slip away, without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of all things, for His unusual kindness, that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

The objects of the Calcutta Literary Society are :—

(a) To hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities.

(b) To discuss social, literary and scientific subjects.

The Society has thus been the means of bringing together the Rulers and the Ruled in one common platform. Our programme has been vast and varied, and we have tried to make it as eclectic and cosmopolitan as possible.

Gentlemen, since the date of the foundation of the Society, in 1875, it has been able to organise hundreds of public Meetings, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and by doing, it has achieved a fair measure of success.

When lectures on subjects delivered in the English language, had been well nigh exhausted, the Society invited some of the most learned men of the city, and those, who visited it, to deliver lectures in Hindi and Bengali, on abstruse subjects.

The Society has enrolled among its Patrons and Members, the flowers of the European and Indian communities.

I have much pleasure in submitting a synoptical Report of the transactions of the Society, for the year, 1910 :—

Abstract Proceedings of Public Meetings of the Calcutta Literary Society, for the Session, 1910.

(1) The Thirty-fourth Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 5th January, 1910, at 5-30 p. m., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Digambar Chatterjee, M.A., B.L., Judge of the High Court. The hall and approaches to the Institute were thronged to suffocation by the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, and the public in general.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the Report for the year 1909, (which showed great progress and which was duly confirmed), the Hon'ble Chairman asked Dr. Indu Madhub Mullick, M.A., M.D., to deliver his first lecture to the Society on

Literature and Science :—

The learned Doctor treated the subject especially from a physiological point of view. He dwelt upon the subject for nearly three quarters of an hour. He said that literature viewed things, at a distance, which, science viewed them more closely over a narrow field. Literature was, therefore, more attractive and lightened the way to science.

Kant conceived evolution, long before Darwin. They should wed the two together, thereby disciplining the vagueness of literature by the exactness and utility of science.

Broad culture, though elementary, was the aim of present day education in Europe and America, and they, in India, had made a retrogression in enforcing speciality very early. He advised the Society to remove this evil by instituting lectures on scientific subjects.

He instanced Japan as a case in point and advised his hearers to devote themselves to the pursuit of science, while at the same time, not losing sight of literature.

The Hon'ble Chairman honourably referred to literature and science, as two very old friends of his, who had been supplanted by others, in his later career. Recently, there had been, to employ figurative language, a judicial separation, and he thanked the Society for their mediation with a view to effect a reconciliation between his old love and himself. He agreed with the lecturer that literature tended to create vague ideas, while science helped to correct them. He likened literature to a flower-garden, which afforded pleasure by the variety of its scent and the brightness of color, while science, he compared, to a corn-field, which afforded the wherewithal to live. He congratulated the Society and wished it every success.

Dr. S. K. Mullick, M.A., M.D., on behalf of the Society, having proposed votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the learned lecturer, and the little musical prodigy Master Madan Mahan Chatterjee, who entertained the audience with his sweet songs, seconded by Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjee, B.L., the Meeting dissolved at 7-30 p. m.

(Vide, Statesman, & Bengalee, 6th., Indian Daily News and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7th., Indian Mirror, 8th., and Hindu Patriot, 10th January, 1910.)

(2) The second public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 10th January, 1910, at 4-30 p.m., to celebrate the First Anniversary of the Calcutta Free Knitting School, established under the auspices of the Society, at No. 24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta, before a large and appreciative audience. Dr. Indu Madhab Mullick, M.A., M.D., was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

On the Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Rector of the School, read the First Annual Report, which stated that the Institution was the only one of its kind in Calcutta. The object of the School is "to impart free practical instruction in the art of knitting," at present.

The Inaugural Meeting of the School was celebrated at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on the 8th March, 1909, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Sir Charles G. H. Allen, Kt., late Chairman of the Corporation of Calcutta, and late Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Mr. Sayendra Nath Tagore, late of the Indian Civil Service, visited the School, on the 6th September, 1909, and expressed his high opinion in the visitors' book.

After the Report had duly been confirmed, the Chairman made a nice little speech, for nearly a quarter of an hour. He blessed the Institution and wished it every success. The customary vote of thanks was then accorded to the chair, and the Meeting terminated at 6-30 p.m.

(Vide, Statesman, & Bengalee, 11th, Indian Daily News, Amrita Bazar Patrika, and Hindu Patriot, 12th, and Indian Mirror, 13th, January, 1910.)

(3) The third public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Tuesday, the 18th January, 1910, at 4-30 p.m., to meet Maharajah Ranajit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur, and to present him with an Address of Congratulation, on his receiving the Distinction of Maharajah, on the 1st January, 1910. Babu Radha Charan Pal, Municipal Commissioner, Corporation of Calcutta, Hony. Presidency Magistrate, &c., took the chair. The Meeting was largely attended.

After the Address had been read and presented by the Secretary, the Chairman spoke highly of the career of the Maharajah Bahadur. He delivered a nice speech. The Maharajah Bahadur then thanked the Society for the Address and wished the Institution every success.

The Chairman also declared open of the Calcutta Type Writing and Copying Institute, established under the auspices of the Society.

After the customary vote of thanks to the chair, the Meeting came to a close. Three cheers were then given for the Maharajah Bahadur.

(Vide, Bengalee & Amrita Bazar Patrika, 19th, Englishman, Indian Daily News & Hindu Patriot, 20th, and Indian Mirror, 21st, January, 1910.)

(4) The fourth public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Tuesday, the 25th January, 1910, at 5-30 p.m., to meet the Hon'ble Mr. G. W. Kuchlar, M.A., and to offer him with an Address of Welcome on his return from England, after aurlongh, and on his assumption of the office of Director of Public Instruction, Bengal.

The Meeting was presided over by Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.A., M.D., and it was very largely attended.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Address, the Chairman, in handing it over to him, said that the Hon'ble Mr. G. W. Kuchlar, M.A., had a most distinguished and brilliant University career in England, and as such, was the fited person to guide the helm of education in the Province, at a time when the country was passing, as it were, through a stage of transition. The Address highly mentioned the respect and affection, in which the Hon'ble Mr. G. W. Kuchlar, M.A., was held by the student community in Bengal.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. W. Kuchlar, M.A., gave a suitable reply. He congratulated the Society, and wished it every success. He assured the Members of the Society his sincerest sympathy with the objects, which the Society had in view, and expressed a hope that the Society would continue the useful work, it had been doing in the past.

The Hon'ble Chairman then called upon Mr. R. Bonnerjee, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his lecture on Progress :—

The learned lecturer, in the course of his speech, observed that progress was a word on every boy's lips, and, like many others, easier to use, than to understand.

In India, they talked much of progress. Such talk was inevitable in the midst of a growing nation. But, they did not pause often enough to consider what it did imply.

The Indians had imbibed a certain amount of western culture, and rather more western political philosophy. Because, they could reason well on the rights of man because, they could quote passages from Rousseau or Mill because, they could talk in anxious tones of liberty and freedom, they thought to themselves their minds had progressed and judged of their advance by their intellectual adherence, asked Mr. Bonnerjee, sufficient to justify the in a statement that they had made progress.

Was there much real progress, if they could quote Rousseau, with regard to the rights of man and look with complaisance, on their own caste system? Or, if they could approve, what Mill had said, on Liberty and forget what he had said of women? The truth was that they were all too busy now-a-days in the hunt for wealth and all the material benefits that progress in science could give them to think of the inner meanings of the movements in which they joined.

Consciously or unconsciously, they had made great progress. They had learnt certain lessons, by practice and others by imitation, but, the time had come for them to merely unconsciously, or slowly to progress, but, to get themselves more closely to consider, whether, were the tending, and how they should use, the many blessings, they hoped to attain.

In politics, they demanded western institutions. But, their demand for such institutions, they forgot that up which they were founded; namely a more or less strong belief in the equality of man. They had made no attempt to reform the Caste System, which they claimed to present. They used western terms and western ideas without considering closely their fundamental meaning and without attempting to make them more applicable, educating themselves and others.

It was, because, they wished to become teachers without having been students, and statesmen without learning the wishes and desires of their fellow-countrymen, that the progress was slow, and, in some cases, not sure.

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. J. C. Rai, B.L., spoke a few words on the subject, supporting Mr. R. C. Bonnerjee, and thanked the speaker for his very able speech. The Chairman then addressed the Meeting. He blessed the Society, and wished the Institution every success.

Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjee, B.L., having proposed vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting separated.

(Vide, Englishman, Statesman, Indian Daily News, Bengali & Amrita Bazar Patrika, 26th, Hindu Patriot, 27th and Indian Mirror, 28th January, 1910.)

(5) The fifth public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 7th February, 1910, at 5 p.m., under the presidency of Lieutenant the Hon'ble Malek Umar Hayat Khan Tiwana Sahib, C. I. E., Punjab Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Mr. Juan Chandra Rai, B.L., to deliver his lecture on Social Progress :—

The learned lecturer dwelt on the necessity of raising the status of the masses and of spreading higher ideals of citizenship among his countrymen. He also pointed to a closer union between the three important sections of Indian Society, viz. :—English, Hindu and Mahomedan. He concluded with an appeal, to all present, to write and work for the suppression of crime and violence and the maintenance of law and order.

The Hon'ble Chairman then thanked the lecturer for his instructive speech and called upon all to co-operate heartily with the authorities, in putting down anarchism. He expressed his gratitude to Lord Minto, for the enlargement of the Legislative Councils.

A Vote of thanks to the chair was carried with acclamation and the proceedings terminated with a song.

(Vide, Statesman & Bengalee, 8th, Amrita Bazar Patrika and Hindu Patriot, 9th February, 1910.)

(6) The sixth public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Friday, the 11th February, 1910, at 5 p.m., to meet the Hon'ble Mr. Bhopendra Nath Basu, M.A., B.L., Attorney-at-Law, and Member of the Imperial Legislative Council, and to present him with an Address of Congratulation, on his being elected a Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. The Meeting was densely crowded. The Hon'ble gentleman was voted to the chair, amidst cheers, and was garlanded.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the Address, enumerating his services in connection with the University, the Corporation, the Legislative Council and Social Reform.

The Hon'ble Chairman suitably replied, and stated that he always did his duty. He never hankered after popular applause, or, Government favors, but, followed the dictates of his conscience. He thanked the Society for its kind wishes and wished the Institution every success.

The Hon'ble Chairman then called upon Mr. Juan Chandra Rai, B.L., to deliver his lecture to the Society on

The Work Before Us

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt on the various phases of national life. He urged the necessity for better organisation in the development of Indian Manufactures, and pleaded for loyal co-operation with Government in their revival.

Without State help, he said, very little could be done. He spoke of the desirability of training the rural population in self-help and co-operation. The District Conferences should not limit their work to ratifying Congress resolutions, but, should create an interest in parochial affairs—they should train village Hampdens. He appealed for support of the National Council of Education, and said there was a vast field of work in the country. He earnestly asked the younger members to devote themselves to the public service.

Mr. Mahmud Khan, (of the Panjab), also spoke a few words on the subject.

The Hon'ble Chairman then addressed the Meeting for nearly an hour. He said that the methods, to be used in practical work, depended upon self-examination, discipline, diffusion, organisation, and on spirit of reverence and respect. He earnestly appealed, to the young men present, to be religious, to practice self-sacrifice and not to hamper after filthy lucre. The eloquent speech of the Hon'ble Chairman was listened to with rapt attention. The huge audience seemed to be deeply moved.

A vote of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the learned lecturer was carried with acclamation.

The Meeting dissolved and the Hon'ble Chairman left the hall, amidst outburst of cheers.

(7) The seventh public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Saturday, the 19th February, 1910, at 5 p.m., to meet the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur R. N. Mudhulkar, Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, and to present him with an Address of Congratulation.

The hall was packed to its fullest seating accommodation. The Hon'ble Sir Nihaladas Damodar Thackersey, Kt., and Bombay Representative of the Imperial Legislative Council, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

Prominent amongst those present were the Hon'ble Mr. G. M. Chitambar C.I.E., the Hon'ble Mr. Bhopendra Nath Basu, M.A., B.L., Attorney-at-Law, Lieutenant the Hon'ble Malek Umar Hayat Khan, Tiwana Sahib, C.I.E. Members of the Supreme Legislative Council, Dr. S. K. Mullik, M.A., M.D., Mr. J. C. Rai, B.L. and others.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, in presenting the Address of Welcome to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur, R. N. Mudhulkar, congratulated him on his elevation to the Imperial Legislative Council.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur, in reply, said that he was very grateful to the Society for the kind Address of Welcome. He said that the country was backward in every respect. In order to improve their condition, they ought to rouse amongst themselves moral fervour and spiritual earnestness, without which, life was nothing. He trusted that the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society would do their utmost to bring about this end, and thus earn the gratitude of succeeding generations.

Lieutenant the Hon'ble Malek Umar Hayat Khan Tiwana Sahib, C.I.E., then asked to deliver his lecture on

Pen and Sword : -

The Hon'ble lecturer maintained that the sword was necessary for the protection of the pen. The country must be protected from invasions, so that, arts and commerce might thrive.

Mr. Juan Chandra Rai, B.L., in thanking the Hon'ble Chairman and the Hon'ble lecturer, said that whatever the gallant speaker might say, in praise of sword, in some cases, pen was mightier than sword.

The Hon'ble Chairman, in addressing the assembly, said that though in the Western countries pen was very powerful, and was advancing with greater speed than the pen, fortunately, or, unfortunately, they were asked not to trouble themselves about sword, at the present, and, therefore, all the energies, that they possessed, should be directed towards their pen stronger.

They required moral and religious education for their children at school. They should impart their boys such education, as might make them future religious men. They also wanted, some enterprise towards industrial undertakings, and in that direction, Bengal, the speaker said, could help them a great deal.

With a vote of thanks to the chair, the Meeting dissolved. (Vide, Statesman and Bengalee, 20th, and Indian Daily News, 21st February, 1910)

(8) The eighth public Meeting for the thirty-fifth session of the Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 28th February, 1910, at 5 p.m.

On the motion of Dr. Birala Prasanna Mazumdar, seconded by Mr. A. N. M. Ali Husan, the Hon'ble Mr. Mahammad Ali Jinnah, Barrister-at-Law, and Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

On the Hon'ble Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read an Address of Welcome, to which the Hon'ble Chairman suitably replied. He said :—

"Mr. Sham Lal Day and Gentlemen:—I thank you for your electing me a Chairman of your Meeting, this afternoon, and I consider it a great honor. It is always a pleasure to me, to meet the people of Bengal.

Your Society is called the Calcutta Literary Society. It is, through literature, that we come to know and understand the different classes of people in Indian nations. Education is the greatest want of our country, and all our efforts should be concentrated towards it.

It is through the medium of education and literature, that great communities of India will come to appreciate each other. This is specially a time, when there should prevail harmony, good-will and co-operation between the two great communities of India : viz :—Hindu and Mahomedans, as I do not wish to stand in the way.

With these few remarks of the lecturer of the evening, I now call upon Dr. S. K. Roy, to deliver his lecture, which is put down in the card.

Dr. S.K. Roy, M.B., C.M., (Glasgow), L.R.C.P., L.R.C.S. (Edinburgh), L. F. P., V.S., (Glasgow), then delivered a very interesting lecture on

The Growth of Medical Service in its several Branches in Ancient Rome :—

The learned Doctor very ably spoke on the subject for upwards of an hour. He chiefly dwelt on the researches of Galen and other ancient medical works. The lecture was heard with rapt attention.

Dr. S. K. Mullick, M.A., M.D., having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried with acclamation, the Meeting dissolved.

(Vide, Statesman, Indian Daily News, Bengalee, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 1st and Hindu Patriot, 2nd March, 1910.)

(9) The ninth public Meeting, for the thirty fifth session of the Society was held at the hall of the National Medical College of India, 191, Bow Bazar Street, on Saturday, the 5th March, 1910, at 4-30 p.m., under the presidency of Pandit Mahendra Nath Vidya Nidhi, M.A., S.B., &c.

On the Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lal Day the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which was duly confirmed.

The Chairman then asked Dr. Heramba Nath Chatterjee, M. R. A. S., (London), to deliver his first lecture to the Society on

The Duty of Human Life :—

The learned Doctor very ably spoke on his subject for nearly an hour and he was listened to with rapt attention. He chiefly dwelt upon the following subjects; viz. :—

- (1) The duty of the students' life.
- (2) Family life.
- (3) Ancient Aryan Life.
- (4) Causes of the falling in health of the Bengalis.
- (5) Prosperity of the human life.
- (6) Evils of early marriage.

After the learned Doctor had finished his speech, Mr. Jitendra Nath Sen, M.A., Professor of the National Medical College, spoke a few words on the subject.

The Chairman then delivered a nice little speech. He agreed with the lecturer, blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Meeting dissolved at 6-15 p.m., with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, Statesman & Bengalee, 6th, Indian Daily News, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7th March, 1910.)

(10) The tenth public Meeting for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Ripon College, 60, Mirzapur Street, on Friday, the 11th March, 1910, at 4 p. m., under the presidency of Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, Editor, Bengalee.

After the proceedings of the last Meeting, had been read and duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Mr. Jyoti prasad Banerjee, B. L., to deliver his lecture

Students and Social Reform :—

The learned speaker appealed to the students to apply all their energies to the destruction of the time-worn tottering barriers, that separate the Indian people. He condemned the pernicious custom of child-marriage and the compulsory widow-hood of their girls. He welcomed the formation of the Hindu Marriage Reform League.

Mr. Girindra Nath Chatterjee then spoke a few words. After him, Dr. Garfield Williams of the Young Men's Christian Association, took part in the subsequent discussion and said that students were the pioneers in every Reform movement, and, if they bestirred themselves, they could make their country a great new India.

If they did not set themselves to do it, the task was impossible. Three years ago, he was in Japan, where he perceived that the national renaissance had been effected by the exertion of one generation of students. They displayed such self-sacrifice, as had been seen nowhere else in the world. The pioneers were always apt to be decried and denounced, but, if they were self-reliant and determined, success would be theirs.

After him, the Chairman said, he was pleased to find Calcutta students bestirring themselves in the cause of social reform. Reform, as Dr. Garfield Williams had pointed out, in all ages, and in all countries, had emanated from students.

The great religious, social and political teachers, appealed to the young, the unsophisticated mind of the rising generation, and they appealed not in vain. It was a source of genuine pleasure to him to find a hope awakening among them in the cause of Social Reform. I put the question of early marriages in the fore-front of any scheme of social amelioration in Bengal.

Twenty-five years ago, he was associated in a student movement, started to put down child-marriages. He asked the audience whether it was not possible to reverse that movement. How could they expect fully developed children, the offspring of immature parents? It was opposed to the laws of nature against the mandate of the Almighty.

Let them recollect that the animal, the individual man or the nation that went against the immutable laws of nature perished. He appealed to them to set their faces against the pernicious custom of child-marriages and ruinous marriage expenses.

Forty-three years ago, he was looked upon as an outcast when he returned from England. To-day the most orthodox pandits were delighted to welcome him to their home and ask him to dine with them. That showed how the feeling had changed and he exhorted them to influence public opinion in favor of social reform.

In conclusion, he urged on them the necessity of forming a regular organisation, with centres all over the country to stamp out social evils. Finally, they should put pressure on the University, to withhold scholarships from students, who contracted early marriages.

With a vote of thanks to the chair, the Meeting separated (Vide, Statesman, Indian Daily News, and Bengalee, 12th. March, 1910.)

(11) The eleventh public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 14 March, 1910, at 5 p.m., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur R. N. Mudholkar, Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. The Meeting was well attended.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting and which having been duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Professor Dr. Bemola Charan Ghose, M.B. M.B., B.C., (Cantab), to deliver his lecture on Alcohol—Its use and abuse:—

The learned Doctor very ably dwelt upon his subject for upwards of an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention. He pointed out, at the beginning, that the medical profession was a good deal responsible for the spread of alcoholism in the country, if not in the West.

The enormous ideas about the pharmacological action of alcohol prevail among the general body of the medical practitioners and have inevitably permeated among the city and one feels helpless when along with the western superstition about draught, the greater superstition of brandy as a stimulus is found current in Calcutta Zenanas.

Professor Schmedchery of Germany has dispelled the superstition about the stimulant action of alcohol. Alcohol is, like other varieties, a depressant from the beginning. Its apparent stimulating action is due to loss of control. The higher centres being depressed, the lower centre run not so to speak.

Speech, after taking alcohol, is lively and brilliant. Because, higher centres are depressed and intellectual power are weakened, and association of words becomes marked.

After the learned Doctor had finished his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman thanked the lecturer for the valuable knowledge and instruction, and warning he had given in the lecture. He quoted statistics and deplored the great increase of Alcohol consumption within recent years in this country.

We urged the learned Doctor to write a pamphlet on the harmfulness of Alcohol, and scatter it far and wide in the country. He also quoted from the Stead's Review of Reviews the opinions of many brain-workers, as to the value of a vegetarian diet, which the learned lecturer pointed out, did away with the need of and craving for Alcohol.

Mr. Benayendra Nath Saha, M.A., Professor, Presidency College and Secretary, Calcutta University Institute, then proposed hearty votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the learned Doctor for their instructive speeches. He said that he had heard many lectures in and outside the hall, in Temperance, but, he had never heard before such able speeches against Alcoholism. He wished the lecture repeated all over the country. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair. (Vide, Statesman, Bengalee, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 16th, Indian Daily News & Indian Mirror, 17th March, 1910.)

(12) The twelfth public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Monday, the 21st March, 1910, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Maulvi Syed Shamsul Huda Sahib, M.A., B.L., Vakil, High Court and Member of the Imperial Legislative Council.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Dr. Sarat Kumar Roy, M.B., C.M., L.R.C.P., (Edinburgh), M.R.C.S., (Glasgow), to deliver his second lecture to the Society on Medical Science during the Arabian Civilization :—

The vast audience listened spell-bound and the learned Doctor very ably spoke on the subject for upwards of an hour. He principally dwelt upon the following points ; viz. :

- (1) Humane treatment of the insane,
- (2) Origin of Chemists' shops,
- (3) Dispensaries,
- (4) Origin of the Medical examination,
- (5) The proper management of a fully equipped public hospital.

After the learned Doctor had finished his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman thanked the lecturer for his speech and said that many people thought that Arabs were far behind the civilization, in ancient times, but, the learned Doctor had, by his well-written essay, clearly and vividly shown that this was not so.

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Mr. Mahammed Khan, (of the Panjab), to read his notes on

The Unity of Religion:—

Mr. Mahammed Khan very ably spoke on the subject for sometime. He said, that unless we learn something about religion, which alone, can be the foundation of high ideal of Society, we cannot draw nearer and unite. We should always take a broader view of religion than we do take at present, and then alone can we be on the right path of unity, without which, no real progress is possible.

What I want to impress is simply this;—that we can sacrifice some of our petty scruples and give up our extreme views for the sake of the convenience of our fellow-brethren and thus peacefully work on, for the progress of our dear mother country, and follow, in peace, the honest employments of life, with sympathy, good will, fellow-feeling and love, (Cheers.)

With the customary votes of thanks to the chair and the two learned speakers, the Meeting came to a close, (Vide, Statesman, Indian Daily News, Bengalee, 22nd., Amrita Bazar Patrika and Hindu Patriot, 23rd and Bengalee, 25th March, 1910.)

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read an Address of Welcome, presented to the Hon'ble Chairman, for which a suitable reply from the chair was given, the Secretary read the proceedings of the last Meeting, and which having been duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked professor Doctor Benala Chandra Ghosh, M.B., B.C., (Calcutta), to deliver his second lecture on

Hindu Ethical Ideas (Dharmartha Kama) :—

The learned Doctor very ably dwelt upon his subject for upwards of an hour and he was heard with rapt attention. He said that the great characteristic of Dharma or, Righteousness, was that it was spontaneous. In the Gita, this teaching of the Righteousness was unfolded step by step. Renunciation of Yuga was three-fold, viz. :

- (1) Renunciation of fruits of labor,
- (2) Renunciation of attachment,
- (3) Renunciation of motives.

We were to listen to the voice of God in our conscience and do nothing that we did not know as Righteous. There was nothing nobler than patriotism, but, patriotism can never justify any unrighteous deed.

The Hon'ble Chairman then made a nice little speech. He thanked the Society for inviting him to the Meeting and giving him an opportunity to listen to the able and learned speech of the evening. He also thanked the learned Doctor, for his very able speech. In conclusion, he blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the chair,

(Vide, Statesman, Indian Daily News, Bengalee, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 29th, & Hindu Patriot, 30th March, 1910.)

(14) The fourteenth public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Thursday, the 31st March, 1910, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Mr W.B. Taylor.

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had read the proceedings of the last Meeting which were duly confirmed, the Chairman asked Dr. H. N. Chatterjee, M. R. A. S., (London), to deliver his lecture on

The Noble Duty of Human Life :—

The learned Doctor chiefly dwelt upon the following :—

- (1) The Duty of a Student's life.
- (2) Family life,
- (3) Life of Devotion,
- (4) Prevention of Early Marriage,
- (5) Health Preservation,
- (6) Habits and Characters,
- (7) Degradation of Bengalis, for the want of noble conceptions of duty,
- (8) Self-sacrifice of Europeans, and their love of Nation,
- (9) Results of adherence to duty,
- (10) How a noble life may be started,
- (11) Social Reform.

The learned Doctor very clearly explained the above points and he was heard such rapt attention.

The Chairman then thanked the Doctor for his very able speech. He agreed with the lecturer, blessed the Society, and wished the Institution every success.

Ayurveda and its Influence :—

The learned Kaviraj very ably dwelt upon the following points :—

- (1) Every thing, (i.e.) Anatomy, Surgery, Midwifery &c., was in Ayurveda, but, has fallen into disuse owing to the negligence of the people.
- (2) In order to revive it, colleges and hospitals should be established.

- (3) It can be shown from the Susrut that there were one hundred and one surgical instruments, in ancient times.

After the learned Kaviraj had finished his speech, Pandit Jmesh Chandra Gupta, Vidya Ratna, Pandit Kanai Lal Goswami, Vidya Venada and Pandit Satish Chandra Vidyaratna discussed favorably on the subject, for some time.

THE FOUNDER-SECRETARY,
CALCUTTA LITERARY SOCIETY,
24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta
Dated, Darjeeling, the 23rd May, 1910

Sir,
I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 7th May, 1910, and to express the sincere thanks of the Government of India for the expressions of sympathy and condolence, which you have been good enough to convey on behalf of the Calcutta Literary Society upon the occasion of the lamented death of His late Majesty the King-Emperor, and to assure you that the message will be transmitted to the proper quarter.

I have the honor to be
Sir,
Your Most obedient servant,
H. D. CITU,

For Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.
(Vide, Statesman, 27th May, 1910.)

(23) The twenty-third public Meeting, for the thirty-fifth session of the Society, was held in Beacon Park, Beacon Square, on Tuesday, the 24th May, 1910, at 7 A.M., to celebrate the Empire Day—being the day associated with the Birth of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria the Good Queen-Empress of India, before a large gathering, when Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society delivered an address, for nearly a quarter of an hour, chiefly dwelling on—

The Virtues of Queen Victoria the Good:—

He pointed out that the Empire Day Celebration has a wider and more important object. He mentioned, in brief, the benefits, which India has derived from British Rule, and which entitled England to India's gratitude and loyalty.

Queen Victoria reigned on Her Majesty's vast Dominion for a longer period than any other Member of the Royal Family. Perhaps, no other personage ever sat on the Throne of England, who did so much for the welfare of Her Majesty's Indian subjects than Her late Majesty.

Queen Victoria fully enjoyed the blessings of the people during Her Majesty's long and glorious administration, and Her Majesty's name will ever be remembered with the fondest of recollections.

Her Majesty's name is associated with many acts of benevolence, which long be remembered. Her Majesty's character, as a daughter, wife and mother, has always been a model to Her late Majesty's Indian subjects.

His Majesty King George V. is also looked upon as the representative of that Divine Being, which rules over the whole universe.

The blessings of a subject-people are the only good things, which a foreign ruler can expect from a subject race.

The Calcutta Literary Society, on this side of India, have been celebrating the Empire Day, year after year, and hopes to continue it for many years to come. (Cheers.)

May His Imperial Majesty live long, and may His Divine Providence shower His choicest blessings upon India and its people. (Cheers.)

No. 965.

From

Captain Cecil Allanson,
Private Secretary to His Honor
The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

To

The Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society.

Dated, the 30th June, 1909.

SIR,

The Lieutenant-Governor desires me to say how glad he was to learn of your loyal celebration of His Majesty's Birthday and he is pleased to hear that this has been done annually since the King-Emperor's Accession.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most Obedient Servant,
Cecil Allanson, Capt.,
Private Secretary.

Gentlemen, we are first celebrating to-day the Forty-fifth Anniversary of the Birthday of His late Majesty's illustrious son and heir—His Most Gracious Majesty George V., King of England and Emperor of India. So, this day is a day of great rejoicings to all His Imperial Majesty's beloved subjects, both in the East and in the West. (Cheers.)

It is a day, which beareth the body of a King-Emperor, whose tradition has come down to us from generation and generation and lives on His Majesty. (Cheers.)

It is, because, His Majesty is an illustrious son and heir of our beloved King Edward VII., who ruled over with a grace peculiar to His Majesty. We are all well aware that His Majesty represents a Royal House, which like is not to be found elsewhere.

Gentlemen, the Indian people are always distinguished their loyalty and devotion to His Majesty's Throne. It is the tie of friendship that binds the two nations together that makes us love each other, with a force peculiar to ourselves.

Gentlemen, it is loyalty and devotion to the Throne of England that attaches us to a foreign people, who has made India what it is to-day. No language can express our sincere attachment to the people of England. We owe to them all the blessings which we enjoy, with such ease and comfort. (Cheers.)

We have, no doubt, that our attachment will increase from year to year, as we grow up in age and wisdom.

Gentlemen, now we all earnestly pray to the Almighty Disposer of Events to pour forth His choicest blessing upon His Majesty King George V., Her Majesty Queen Mary and all the Members of the Royal Family. (Cheers.)

May Their Majesties live long and continue to prosper. With Three hearty cheers for His Majesty King George V. and three more cheers for His Majesty's beloved Royal Consort, Her Majesty Queen Mary of England, the assembly broke up.

(Vide, Statesman, 5th June, 1910.)

(26) The twenty-sixth public Meeting, for the thirty-sixth session of the Society, was held in Beadon Park, Beadon Square, on Thursday, the 1st. Decem. 1910, at 7 A. M., in commemoration of the Sixty-seventh Anniversary of the Birthday of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, Queen-Mother of England, when prayers were offered for Her Majesty's long life, health, peace and prosperity.

A Message of Congratulation was also forwarded to Her Majesty, to which the following reply was received:—

From Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Alexandra, Queen-Mother of England:—

Marlborough House.

21st December, 1910.

SIR,

I have had the honor of submitting your letter to Queen Alexandra, on behalf of the Calcutta Literary Society, and in reply, I am to ask you to kindly thank your Society for their good wishes on the occasion of Her Majesty's Birthday.

Sham Lall Day, Esq.,

Founder-Secretary,
The Calcutta Literary Society,

I am, Sir,
Your Obedient Servant,
Sidney Greville.

Gentlemen, on the 12th January and 16th March, 1910, two illustrious personages have graciously been pleased to become Life-Patrons and twenty-four distinguished persons have joined as members of the Society, during the year under review, for which the most cordial thanks of the Institution are hereby given to each of them. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, our Society is a Literary Society, from its beginning. It has nothing to do with politics; and, therefore, it expects the sympathy of all, who take a lively interest in literary pursuits, so that the country can really push onward, in the march of civilization and advancement, which it so much stands in need of.

The special thanks of the Institution are also here given to the donors and subscribers, who helped the Society during the year, under review.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of the various public Meetings published in the leading local newspapers for the last thirty-four years, bear ample testimony to them.

To the patrons, members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligations for their unshaken interest in the welfare of this Literary Institution.

Let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, under whose blessing and guidance the Society has been able to accomplish these things.

The letters were heard with Applause.

Gentleman,

The Society records its appreciation of the kindness of the Editors of the English and Vernacular Newspapers, who have found space in their columns, to publish the proceedings of its various Public Meetings and other doings of the Society, since its foundation in 1875.

May God bless all the Patrons and Members of the Calcutta Literary Society and those, who detest to scatter thorns in the path of progress, and who devote their lives in the good work of promoting the true interest of their own Motherland.

In conclusion, the Society begs to offer its thanks-giving to the Great God, for the manifold blessings, which His Providence has showered upon it, during the last Thirty-five years of its existence, and now I fervently hope, that by the blessings of the Almighty, the Society may go on prosperous in its career of usefulness for many years to come. (Cheers.)

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, for the year 1911, and which having been duly confirmed, the Revd. Chairman, Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon and General Secretary of the Mohu Bodhi Society, spoke a few words on

The Religion for the Depressed Classes :—

The Rev. Chairman very ably dwelt upon the subject for nearly an hour, and he was heard with rapt attention.

He said :—India is the only country, wherein the people are classified under the nomenclature of jati and gotra. The ancient Brahmin law-givers had not a very comprehensive idea of the world. They made laws to suit their own fancies.

Manu, Asvalayana, Apastamba and Gautama did not, perhaps, know that there were other lands and other races would not recognize the artificial classification. They made stereotyped laws and did not calculate the harm, they were doing for future humanity.

China, Japan, Burma, Siam, Tibet, Afghanistan, Persia Arabia, Europe and the United States of America did not recognize anthropological differentiations.

In other lands, man's ability was the criterion of individual greatness. Brahmin law-givers made birth the criterion of individual greatness. The result is that, while all other lands are on the march of progress, India has fallen a prey to foreign invaders.

Caste has tended to destroy the unity and harmony so essentially necessary to national development. Had the Brahmin law-givers some sort of experience of human nature, beyond the borders of India, they would, perhaps, never have made un-natural distinctions, utterly un-suited to progressive humanity.

They never imagined that in the distant future, nations would develop and advance towards India and subject her ill-literate and ignorant population to a kind of perpetual slavery.

The object of the early law-givers was to keep power in the hands of a specially class, perpetually. They adopted the plan of intellectual lynching, as the white people of the Mississippi valley of America lynch the Negroes.

They adopted the caste distinctions, as the Britishers do to-day, in making laws to keep all Asiatics out of the White man's land. It is simply an exhibition of selfishness and a lust for power.

What the Britishers and Americans, the South Africans and California, respectively, are doing to-day, the ancient Brahmins law-givers did to the teeming millions of India.

The study of the Indian Census Statistics is very interesting in as much as they show how the people in India stand compared with other races and nations in the world.

I gathered the following Statistics from the Census Report of 1891 : viz :—

Population of India, (in 1891), was	2,86,905.
Deduct. Musalman population of	34,348.
" European population of	1,66,428.
" Eurasian population of	81,044.
" Parsi population of	89,610.
" Indian Christians population of	18,07,092.
" Dis-reputable vagrants population of	4,90,969.
" Ascetics population of	27,17,861.

Thus, we have of the Native population (who called Aryans and Dravidians), about two hundred and fifty-two millions.

Of the two hundred and fifty-two millions, the Military Kshatriyas number,

Landers,	2,93,03,170.

So, the number of illiterate people in India is abnormally appalling.

Think of it, 274 millions of people are steeped in ignorance. No wonder, that the people are in a state of perpetual slavery. It is land of darkness, where a plague, famine, poverty, superstitions, and fanaticisms thrive.

If we take the Brahmins, the Military and Agricultural, Kshatriyas, Kayasthas, Cattle-breeders, and Traders and put them under the category of the high castes, and all the rest as low-castes, we have about 126 millions of the high castes, and about 121 millions of the low castes.

It is the profession, that has been made the criterion of manhood. The ancient Brahmin law-givers, like the modern upstart imperialists, wished that the labouring class of people should remain in perpetual slavery.

Manu and other law-givers made laws to suit the interests of the governing class. History is repeating itself in India. Hear! What the Brahminical law-giver said:—
The Sudra is not fit for any ceremony.

In the Veddnta Sutras, Sankara argues in this wise: The Smritis prohibit their learning the Veda, their studying the Veda, and their understanding the Veda, and performing Vedic matters. The prohibition of hearing the Veda, is conveyed by the following passages; viz:—

The ears of him, who hears the Veda, are to be filled with molten lead and lac, and, for a Sudra, is like a cemetery, therefore, the Veda is not to be read in the vicinity of Sudra.
There is, moreover, an expression of the Sudras (studying the Veda), his tongue is to be slit, if he pronounces it, his body is to be cut through, if he preserves it. (Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 34, page. 128.)

Thus, did Sankara argue to show the un-fitness of the Sudras to study the ancient books, containing the wisdom of the Rishis!

In Europe, in the medieval period, the people were kept in ignorance by the Roman Catholic hierarchy. Medievalism reigned and Science had no place.

People, who dared to think, brought before the court of inquisitors, and, if they did not, they were burnt at the stake.

What the Roman Church did in Europe, in keeping the people in a state of stagnation, as Brahmin priest-hood did in India.

Learning was the monopoly of the higher castes, and, the Sudras were only to serve Racial pride generated race hatred, and India was the central arena of sectarian hatred and racial jealousies.

Progress was arrested, and conservatism combined with the conservative class, the Brahmins enunciated the degenerating doctrine of stagnation.

Let each one stick to his own ancestral Dharma. Dharma was the shibboleth of the man in power! No wonder that India remains stagnant.

The law of evolution was ignored, and the law of cat and effect found no devotees. Slaughtering of animals propitiate the he-gods and the she-gods, was the principal part of religion.

The priest became all-powerful: and without him, the soul of the dead man could not be admitted into the presence of God, and the most elaborate ritualistic practices were formulated by a greedy priest-hood.

According to Astronomical calculations, the Mahabharata Kurukhetra War took place about five thousand years ago. At the end of the war, everything that was good, noble and true, it is said, perished.

Chaos reigned, and for nearly two thousand and four hundred years, class-hatred, begot of caste-pride, righteousness, pauperism of the labouring classes, sensibility of the idle, rich, priestly and aristocratic immoral ascetic insanity, sectarian strife, dominated.

Love, compassion, honesty, sexual purity, truthfulness, unity, temperance, mercy had no place in the land. The people were longing for a change, and Lord Buddha, the form of Mercy, then appeared to reform and elevate high and the low.

The Puranas mention that, when the land was full iniquity, and righteousness had declined, that Vishnu comes down, in the form of man, and saves righteous and destroys the wicked.

If the Avatar theory is correct, then it is evident that, the God had to come several times to this earth to reform succeeding generations.

What the preceding Avatar failed to accomplish, succeeding Avatar consummated. Parasurama came to destroy the Kshatriyas and to up-hold the power of Brahmins. Sri Ram Chandra came to destroy the power of Siva, and to obtain victory for Vishnu.

The eighth Avatar Sri Krishna came to destroy whole race of Kshatriyas, and he succeeded in having annihilated the Kshatriya power, as well as those, who were representatives of the good and the true. The heroism of gory with human blood. Verily, the Science of Man will disappear from the earth with Vishnu's departure.

The Pali books say, that about two thousand and four hundred years ago, the gods approached the future Buddha, who was then in the Santhusa heaven, and prayed, that he should be born on earth, for the salvation of the world, and the future having found that the time was ripe to appear on earth, consented, and was born in the family of the Sakyas of the race of Jahnu of the Solar race, in Kapilavastu.

In his twenty-ninth year, he made the great renunciation and having found the cause of human misery, and the remedy for the removal of misery, he, as the Buddha began to proclaim the immortal doctrine of love and holiness as the appanage of all, and that the criterion of human greatness, does not depend on birth and wealth, but, the doing of deeds, in the acquisition of the high knowledge, and in leading a righteous life.

He taught the eternal varieties of mercy, abstinence from cruelty, loving kindness, the science of hygiene, and sanitation and health, of physical purity and chastity, abstinence from alcohol, from slander, gossip, bar words, co-operation, unity, the law of evolution and cosmic decay, the law of Karma, and the law of rebirth, according to Karmic acts, words and thoughts and hoisted the banner of absolute freedom-making man, above the sensual gods, who has annihilated anger, negligence, and sensual and carnal desires.

Science, medicine, architecture, learning, agricultural law, industries flourished, and India, during the Buddhist period, if we are to accept the accounts given by the Chinese and Greek visitors to India, was a heaven upon earth. (Chorus.)

The pride of birth was shown to be evil, and, by the annunciation of emoryological laws, the Brahmin and the ig were shown to be related by Karma, as well as by al development. The low castes and the high castes ixed in a spirit of brother-hood, and the big castes lost e spirit of arrogance.

What the Depressed Classes of modern India need to-day, education of scientific and ethical lines. The teeming millions need the Doctrine of Buddha's love, harmony, concord, unity, education, in science in arts, as emphasised by Lord Buddha.

The Religion for the Depressed Classes, who are outside the pale of caste, is the religion of good deeds of science and of righteousness, the religion, that ignores caste and caste-born wealth.

"I would up lift the masses to a life of greater happiness by giving them better protection by the law's strong hand, speedier justice when they suffer wrong, help in misfortune, sorrow and distress. More of the training, that is brain and hand, to master life's hard tasks and conquer peace. And, crowning all, I would up-lift the mass of the world's toilers, by the mighty power of Faith and Duty, realized in deeds, that make the lowliest toiler cross true, as those, whose fame-wreathed fore head touched the stars."

(C. C. Bombay, Open Court, April, 1902.)

"A wail of human misery is ringing in my ears,
 The sight of wretchedness has filled my eyes with tears,
 The myriad huts of mud and straw,
 Where millions toil and die,
 Are blots upon this fertile land, beneath an Orient sky,
 Here then upon these plains of India, was fountain out the grate,
 Conflict between Selfishness and Love,
 Alas ! old deep-rooted despotism,
 Proved the stronger and Buddha's Christ,
 Like Doctrine of the Brotherhood of man was driven into other lands."

(J. L. Stoddard.)

The Doctrine of Lord Buddha shows the path of enlightenment to happiness and peace.

It is the religion, best suited to the people, outside the pale of Brahmanical caste institution.

The Japanese, Burmese, Chinese, Mongolians, Javanese, Tibetans, Siamese and Cambodians have been brought under the human civilizing influence of the Aryan Doctrine of the Tathagato.

They are progressing, and certainly these nations are better off than the Depressed Classes of India.

The greatness of the Indian Sovereigns was the Emperor Asoka, whose rock-cut edicts, show the enlightened policy which he had followed for the welfare of the people of India.

The Arvan Civilization, under the banner of Lord Buddha, penetrated into distant countries. But, in India, the land made sacred by the Great Teacher, is sunk in ignorance, and, India, without the Buddh's religion of love and progress, is an anomaly.

All reforms,—social, moral and political, have been won, at great sacrifices, and Lord Buteha made the great renunciation, in order to bring happiness to the teeming millions of India's helpless children.

Buddhism has no revelation, has no ritual, no ceremony, no self-appointed priesthood, no Pope to dominate and dogmatise. All are free, under the spiritual Sun-light of Truth.

India's spiritual regeneration depends absolutely on the acceptance of the Tathagata's Religion of Love and Self-help. It is a religion that is alive and active, and most assuredly suited to the Depressed Classes of Indian Society. (Cheers).

After the customary vote of thanks of the chair, the Meeting dissolved at 7 P.M.

Biographical Brief Sketch of Her Highness The Princess Maharani Sree Tara Debi Sahiba of Nepal:—

The great popularity that has by this time gathered round the personality of Her Highness The Princess Maharani Sree Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal is but well-bestowed and well-deserved.

No more interesting personage has visited Calcutta for years past. Her Highness' appearances in the social life of the city have everywhere been welcomed and acclaimed and the story of her life, such as it has been, and the traditions of her royal family, have aroused the keenest interest in her.

The Princess is a lady of varied gifts. Her queenly manners, generous instincts, abiding aspirations after intellectual culture and wide experience of life have all contributed to her distinction as one among many of her sex.

Her Highness is proficient in advanced Sanskrit studies and is considered to be adept in Hindu music. She is the possessor of all her progressive ideas of education and enlightenment and catholic sympathies is typical of her Hindu sister-hood fighting to proclaim herself even to the details of her costume as one of the Sunny East.

During her stay in Calcutta she has made a remarkably favorable impression on those whom she has met in this city and of these notabilities I may mention the following personages.

His Excellency General Sir O'Moore Creagh, V.C., G.C.B.,

G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., Commander-in-Chief in India.

The Right Revd. Dr. Copleston, Lord Bishop, in Calcutta and Metropolitan of India and the Island of Ceylon.

The Hon'ble Sir Lawrence Hugh Jenkins, K.T., K.C.I.E., K.C., Lord Chief Justice of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Sir James Du Boulay, K.C.S.I., Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice and Mrs. Ashutosh Chowdhury, Bar-at-Law, Judge of the High Court, Calcutta.

The Hon'ble Sir D. C. Ballie, K.C.S.I., Rev. Member, Oudh.

The Hon'ble Maharaj-Adhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., I.M.O. Member of the Council of His Excellency the Viceroy.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Cossimbazar, Member of the Council of His Excellency the Viceroy.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Nashipur, Member of the Council of His Excellency the Viceroy and of His Excellency the Governor of Bengal.

The late-lamented Hon'ble Mr. Gopal Krishna Gokhale, C.I.E.

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee, Editor, Bengalee and Member of the Council of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India.

The Hon'ble Amir-ul-Umma the Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad, K.C.V.O., K.C.S.I., Member of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Darbhanga, K.C.I.E., Member of the Behar Executive Council.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Balrampur, K.C.I.E., Member of the Oudh Legislative Council.

The Hon'ble Rajah Sahib of Kakina, Member of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, Member of the Council of H. E. the Governor of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Mr. G. C. H. Ariff, Member of the Council of His Excellency the Governor of Bengal.

The Revd. W. R. Holms, of the Oxford Mission.

Sir Mirza Davood Khan Mirtanos Sultanah Sahib, K.C.M.G., Consul-General for Persia.

Mr. C. B. Perry, Consul-General, United States, America.

Mr. W. R. Czerwenka, Imperial and Royal Consul General for Austria-Hungary.

Mr. E. C. Apostolides, Royal Greek Consul General.

The Vice-Consul for Spain.

Monsr. Y. Shibata, Consul-General for Japan.

But the romance that surrounds the Princess Tara Devi remains untold. Destiny has been very unkind to her, and she had her crosses to bear. She was the central figure in a dreadful catastrophe in her own country.

Her husband, His Excellency the Maharana General Prince Jagat Jung Bahadur, eldest son of His Highness the late Maharajah Sir Jung Bahadur of revered memory, the Maker, Nepal, (who achieved Napoleonic ascendancy over the kingdom, Nepal), was assassinated with his son General Yudhpartap Jung Bahadur, in cold blood, on the night of 22nd November, 1885, within the walls of the famous Palace, The Manohara, as the result of a conspiracy for supremacy of interest in the kingdom, Nepal.

Princess Tara Devi is related to the present Ruler of Nepal, His Highness the Maharajah Maharana Major-General Chandra Shamsher Jung Bahadur, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., D.C.I., Field-Marshal and the Ruler of Nepal and to His Excellency General Sir Maharana Bheem Shamsher Jung Bahadur, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief and Chief Justice of Nepal, for they being the younger cousins of Jagat Jung.

The present King of Nepal is the grand-nephew of Maharana Jagat Jung Bahadur, for his father His Majesty the late King of Nepal the Maharajah Adhiraj Raj Rajeswari, Prachanda Bhujalaud Maharana Prithibibeer Bikram Jung Bahadur being his own eldest sister's son. The Princess is under great obligation to His Highness the Maharaja Chandra Shamsher Jung Bahadur for the provision His Highness has made for her.

The Princess is loud in praises of the present Ruler of Nepal, that during the administrations of the Maharajah Chandra Shamsher Jung Bahadur, the Government of Nepal has greatly improved.

The Maharajah is a great lover of arts, literature and science and is also a promoter of western education. Sir Bheem Shamsher Jung Bahadur is also a man of great culture. The present Ruler of Nepal is a statesman of a very high order.

The services of her husband's family have been invaluable in increasing the prestige of Nepal among the Hill States of India. Her husband's father, the famous Jung Bahadur, was the maker of Modern Nepal. A far-seeing statesman, he laid the foundation of the friendship which the passage of years has only strengthened between Nepal and the British Government and which has worked for the progress of the country.

The Princess' life has been, ever since her husband's death, an unbroken record of tragedy. Sorrow in her case only made a noble character nobler. Adversity, instead of extinguishing the flame of charity in her heart, has only made it burn more brightly. It is impossible to come in touch with her without feeling that she has passed through the vale of tears unscratched. Princess Tara Devi expresses her profound admiration for those who are now working for the cause of the progress of India.

(1) His Highness Asaf Jan Musaffar-ul-Mamalik Nizam-ul-Mulk Nizam-Ud-Daulah Nawab Mir Sir Mahbub Ali Khan Bahadur, Fateh Jangh, C.C.S.I., Nizam Sahib of Hyderabad-Deccan, who died at Secandrabad, on Tuesday, the 29th August, 1911, at 12-30 p.m. His Highness became an illustrious Patron and Member of this Society on Monday, the 1st day of June, 1885.

Gentlemen, it is also my sad duty to express my deep regret at the death of my following friends, who always took very lively interest in the welfare of this Literary Society, since its foundation in 1875; viz :—

(1) Rai Raj Kumar Sarvaadhiary Bahadur, Editor, Hindu Patriot and Secretary, British Indian Association, who died in Benares, on Sunday, the 9th July, 1911, at his ripe old age of seventy-two.

(2) Rai Norendra Nath Sen Bahadur, Attorney-at-Law and Editor, Indian Mirror, who died on Saturday, the 1st July, 1911, at 6 p.m.

(3) Babu Shishir Kumar Ghose, Editor, Amrita Basar Patrika, who died on Tuesday, the 10th January, 1911, at 2 p.m.

Letters of condolence were duly forwarded to each of the bereaved families of the deceased and the office of the Society remained closed for one day, on each occasion, in honor of the memory of each of the illustrious deceased!

Gentlemen, we have assembled here this afternoon to celebrate the Thirty-sixth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society and I beg to bid a hearty welcome to all our Members and friends, who have come here at this Meeting.

The Cal. Lit. Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends,—the advanced pupils of various institutions of the town—who were then associated with him in the good work—in the very year when His late-lamented

His Majesty King Edward VII., Emperor of India, visited these shores, then as His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, and to-day, we meet here to celebrate its THIRTY-SIXTH ANNIVERSARY.

Gentlemen, I have the honor of being its Secretary since its foundation in 1875 and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching onward in the path of progress ever since its foundation.

The objects of the Calcutta Literary Society are—

(1) To hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities.

(2) To discuss social, literary and scientific subjects.

The means hitherto adopted have been the convening of public Meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by eminent Representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects and, by so doing, it has achieved a fair measure of success.

Not only lectures were delivered, but, Messages of Congratulations and Condolences were sent from time to time to high personages in India and England, to which replies have been received.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm.

We cannot pass this opportunity to slip away without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of Events, for His kindness, that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of the various public Meetings, published in the local leading daily newspapers for the last THIRTY-SIX YEARS, bear ample testimony to them.

The Society has enrolled among its Patrons and Members, the flowers of European and Indian communities.

The Society duly celebrated its SILVER JUBILEE at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Wednesday, the 20th, March, 1901 at 5 p.m., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Vidya Vinoda, M. Ry. P. Ananda Charlu Avasal, Rai Bahadur, B.L.C.I.E., Madras Representative of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, when the Revd. Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon and General Secretary of the Moha-Bodhi Society, delivered a lecture on the Students' Life in Ancient Buddhist India, before a crowded house.

(Vide, Englishman, Statesman, Bengalee, 22nd March and Journal of the Moha-Bodhi Society for April, 1901.)

I have much pleasure in submitting to you a synoptical Report of the transactions of the Society for the year 1911.

(1) The Thirty-fifth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Thursday, the 26th January, 1911, at 5 p.m., under the presidency of the Revd. Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon and General Secretary of the Moha-Bodhi Society, when the Chairman delivered a thoughtful lecture on Religion for the Depressed Classes. The Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University and other gentlemen of the suburbs composed the bulk of the audience.

(Vide, Statesman, Bengalee, 27th, Amrita Bazar Patrika, Indian Mirror, 28th and Hindu Patriot, 30th January, 1911.)

(2) The second public Meeting for the Thirty-sixth session of the Society was held at the hall of the City College, 13, Mirzapur Street, Calcutta on Friday, the 7th January, 1911, at 5 p.m., when the Revd. Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon and General Secretary of the Moha-Bodhi Society delivered his second lecture to the Society on Lord Buddha's Love for India.

For Dewan.

Gentlemen,
The Society is founded especially upon the principle of strict adherence to the British Crown and the Institution has thus been the means of bringing together the rulers and the ruled in one common platform.

The thanks of the Society are due to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its various Meetings and to those, who presided on the occasions, as well as to those, who lent their hall for holding its Meetings.

The Society also records its appreciation to the kindness of the Editors of English and Vernacular Newspapers, who have found space in their columns to publish the proceedings of its Meetings and other doings of the Society, since its foundation in 1875.

The special thanks of the Institution are also hereby given to the donors and subscribers, who helped the Society, during the year under review.

To the patrons, members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligations on their un-abated interest in the welfare of this Society.

Let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, under whose fostering care, the Institution has been able to complete the Thirty-six years of its existence.

May God continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength enough to sustain in our work and cheer us at the time of our difficulties. (Cheers.)

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, had finished his Report for the year 1911, which was duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman asked Mr. Bishambhar Mitra, late Professor of College, to deliver his lecture on

Loyalty to the Crown

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt upon his subject and he was heard with rapt attention.

After the learned speaker had finished his speech, the Hon'ble Chairman blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success. He said:—

Ladies and Gentlemen—

I have listened to the lecture of Professor Mitra with profound interest. The learned lecturer treated the subject of Loyalty to the Crown in a manner at once creditable to his knowledge and to his loyalty.

With him, it was a subject that appealed more to practical and actual facts than to sentiment, although the lecturer was not wanting in sentiment of a very high order.

The lecturer pointed out substantial reasons for the earliest support of the British Raj. It was clearly shown that, under British Rule, India had progressed on practical lines, not only in the department of physical wealth, but also in the department of intellectual progress and achievement. Carefully prepared data were submitted by the lecturer to uphold his claim that India had enjoyed under British protection a wealth of peace, she had never known before.

He demonstrated clearly to my mind that Indians of all classes had been so benefited by the administration of Indian affairs under British Rule, that they should feel that they owed a practical loyalty to the British Crown.

While he did not frame his lecture on precise sociological lines, yet, his facts and figures revolved round the essence of positive sociology. While not conforming to the sociological development of his subject, yet, he showed very plainly that the first consideration of every people is not only subsistence, but better subsistence, and that Great Britain, by her wise and considerate administration of Indian affairs, has brought within the ability of the Indian to earn a better livelihood in a more enlightened way, than was their privilege under any previous regime.

His next step demonstrated that India had enjoyed a protection under British Rule, that enabled it to lay a broader and deeper foundation for better protection than it had ever known before.

With these two fundamental sociological steps secured, it was prepared to go on and make society better and stronger by enjoying the privileges of education, of hygiene, of aesthetics, of ethics and religion to the fullest degree.

Any people that have within their grasp the means of not only subsistence, but better subsistence—not only protection, but better protection,—with all the steps that follow, already referred to, are in a position to go on in the enlightened course of progress to the highest achievement possible for enlightened men and women. A part of this has been fully unfolded before you by the lecturer. I trust, that his lecture will be printed and that copies of it will be circulated very generally among Indians, who will undoubtedly, be greatly benefited thereby.

It is one thing to yield obedience to any supreme authority blindly and sentimentally, and it is quite another to have a reason and be able to give a reason for loyalty to that supreme head, or, as in this case—the Crown.

All over India are to be found evidences of progress due to modern thought and activity on modern lines, which are a convincing proof of the conclusion reached by the lecturer that Indians, by an intelligent appreciation of what has been accomplished under British Rule, and co-operating in every particular with that rule, will gradually advance towards a nationality, that will not be altogether British but, Indian as well, of which they will be proud, and for which their descendants will have reason to be thankful.

So that, the loyalty to the Crown contended for, by the lecturer, is not only submission to the head of Government, but, it also a submission to high achievement that makes for strong and successful nationality.

In other words, the loyalty to the Crown, pointed out by the lecturer, is no more nor less than loyalty to the individual and to Indian nationality. The lecture was a beautiful tribute, not only to the Crown, but, also to the Indians, who made it possible for the British Raj to work out splendid results for the uplift of the Indian people.

Being thus impressed by the lecture, I commend it to you for your careful reading, and consideration, and hope that if the lecture was printed in proper form and made a part of the curriculum of Indian schools, colleges and universities, it would go far towards bringing about a loyalty to the Crown justly deserved, and which will be good for all Indians to give. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman and the learned lecturer.

Kumar Sree Manindra Chandra Sinha Bahadur

OF THE PAKPARA RAJ:—

The nobleman, whose name graces the page of Dedication, is a Member of the well-known Paikpara Raj Family, which is one of the oldest and noblest families of Bengal. The family comes originally from Kandi, in the district of Murshidabad. According to the Kulacharyas, (caste-annalists), of Bengal, Anadivara Sinha is said to have been the founder of the line.

Lakshmiyara Sinha, the eighth in descent from Anadivara Sinha, is said to have lived in the time of King Ballal Sen of Bengal, (in 12th century, A.D.), and, it is said that, his son, Vyasa Sinha, was barbarously put to death by the King, because, of his refusal to give his support to some breach of caste-discipline, on the part of the King.

Lakshmiyara Sinha was accepted by all the Kayasthas of Bengal, as their Sabha-pati, (or leader), and was given the title of Karanguru, (or the master of the writer-caste).

Balavan Sinha, son of Vyasa Sinha, is said to have first reclaimed the jungly tract of Kandi and settled there. His son, Vinayak Sinha, was the first Rajah of the place,

From Jivadhar Sinha, (the fifth in descent from Vinayak Sinha), to Hara Krishna Sinha, the seventh in descent from Jivadhar Sinha, nothing was much heard of the family. Hara Krishna Sinha is said to have been born about 1650 A. D.

He flourished during the Subadar-ship of Mursid Kuli Khan. He enriched himself by trading in silk and in banking. The depredations of the Marattas led Hara Krishna Sinha to retire to Boalia, on the east bank of the river Bhagirathi, where the Maratta bands could not advance. The Nawab granted to Hara Krishna Sinha extensive lands near Boalia. Hara Krishna Sinha was a devout adherent of Vaishnavism.

Of the three sons of Hara Krishna Sinha, Gouranga Sinha, the second, (born about 1699), distinguished himself as an able Finance and Revenue Officer, under the Nawab's Government, so much so, that he was given the title of Mazumdar.

Gouranga Sinha founded the famous temple of Radhavallabhji, which is still existing at Kandi, and there are some legends about the image in that temple, which attest to the piety of Gouranga Sinha for his faith. Gouranga Sinha died childless.

He had adopted Radha Kanta Sinha, one of the nephews, and bequeathed him all his property. The name of Radha Kanta Sinha and that of his brother, Dewan Ganga Gavinda Sinha are well-known in the history of Bengal.

Radha Kanta Sinha had helped the East India Company, when Emperor Shah Alam granted to it the Dewani of Bengal. He received certain lands and remunerative offices from the East India Company, as a reward for his services.

He was intimately connected with the politics of the period, and he was placed with Mahammed Reza Khan and Rajah Durlubram, in charge of the Finance Department of Bengal by Lord Clive, when the English made Mir Jafar, Nawab Nazim of Bengal.

Radha Kanta Sinha died in the year 1759. Being childless, he adopted his brother Ganga Gobinda Sinha's son, Pran Krishna Sinha, who also inherited the vast wealth of his own father.

Ganga Gobinda Sinha was born in the year 1739. He was a man of keen intellect, and was a noted Finance Officer. So, Lord Warren Hastings appointed him his Dewan. His position, as the trusted adviser of the English Governor, and as the chief Dewan-in-charge of the Revenue Affairs, having unlimited powers, over the rights of the zemindars, enabled him to amass a vast fortune, a great deal of which he spent in performing the Sradh, (funeral ceremony, &c), of his mother, and in charities to Brahmins and others, and thus made the right use of the immense wealth he got. Ganga Gobinda Sinha died in 1779.

At Brindaban, he built a famous temple, of Rajputana marble. There is a large tank in the Muttra District, called Radha Kundu, and this tank was, by Lala Babu, faced on all sides with steps.

His grandson, Krishna Chandra Sinha, who was born in 1775, is well-known throughout Northern India, under the name of Lala Babu, as a Vaishnava Saint of exceptional piety and sanctity. He had served under the English Government. Latterly, he settled at Brindaban, like many pious Hindus, at their retirement from the worldly life.

At Brindaban, he became famous for his charities, and he erected some of the finest temples in that holy city. Here, at Brindaban, he renounced the world, abandoning his vast wealth, and took up the austere life of a Vaishnav Monk. Many are the stories, which are current, narrating incidents in his life, and showing his love for God Almighty and man.

His saintliness, his humility, his love for all, have made his name a house-hold word, among all sections of people, throughout the length and breadth of Northern India, and his name still stands among all communities in India, for all that is best, all that is noble and God-aspiring, in the Bengali character.

Lala Babu died at Brindaban, leaving a large estate to be inherited by an infant son, named Dewan Sri Narayan Sinha, who, having no male issue, adopted two sons; viz :

(1) Pratap Chandra Sinha,

(2) Iswara Chandra Sinha, who are also well-known as great patron of Bengali Literature, at a period, when, at the hands of the late venerable Pandit Iswara Chandra Vidyasagra, C. I. E., Michael Madhusudan Datta and others, it was just having its new renaissance, and when more than, at any other time, it stood in need of patronage.

Rajah Pratap Chandra Sinha was the Vice-President of the British Indian Association. He received the Distinction of Rajah Bahadur from Government, for his princely donations to the Fever Hospital and other charitable institutions, and for taking an active part in the cause of improvement of the Indian Community.

He was also made a Companion of the Most Exalted Order the Star of India, by her late Imperial Majesty Queen Victoria.—The Good.

It was Rajah Pratap Chandra Sinha, C.S.I., who established the Higher Class English School at Kandi, which is still doing its work satisfactorily. Rajah Pratap Chandra Sinha's son, the illustrious Girish Chandra Sinha, was very widely known as a philanthropist, and among other works of public utility, which owe their existence to his munificence. He established a Charitable Dispensary and Hospital at Kandi, at a cost of a lac and forty thousand Rupees (140,000/). Kumar Girish Chandra Sinha died childless in 1877.

His nephew and adopted son, Sirish Chandra Sinha, was also a true son of his illustrious House, and he bade fair to carry on the glorious traditions of his worthy family, and he early manifested that spirit of benevolence and philanthropy, which peculiarly mark the Paikpara Raj Family. But, unfortunately, his life was cut short by a cruel hand of death, at an early age of twenty-two.

He spent forty thousand Rupees towards the improvement of the hospital, founded by his adopted father at Kandi. He became an illustrious Member of the Calcutta Literary Society on Saturday, the 5th January, 1901, and continued it till the last days of his life. He took great interest in the welfare and prosperity of this Literary Institution of Thirty-eight years standing.

His only son Kumar Manindra Chandra Sinha Bahadur is a worthy son of a worthy father of the Paikpara Raj Family. He is also well-known to be respectable, educated and wealthy nobleman of Bengal. May he live long, so that, he might be enabled to carry out fully all that the noble impulses of his mind, even now, prompt him to do!

It would be needless to tell you particularly how that father, whose death is so much lamented by the country, has plunged me—his only son—into the profound grief. Moreover this sad bereavement has made my most revered affectionate uncle—my present guardian—demented. In this state of utter helplessness and anguish, your consolatory letter and those of my kinsmen have given me great solace. For this reason I am extremely grateful to you.

GENTLEMEN, the Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends—the advanced pupils of various educational institutions of the town, who were then associated with him in the good work—in the very year when His late-lamented Majesty-Edward VII., King of England and Emperor of India, visited these shores, then as His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, and to-day, we meet here to celebrate its Thirty-seventh Anniversary. (CHEERS.)

Gentlemen, I have the honor of being its Secretary since its foundation, in 1875, and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching onward in the path of progress ever since its foundation.

Gentlemen, the main Objects of the Society are :—

(a) To hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities.

(b) To discuss social, literary, and scientific subjects.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of Public Meetings for lectures and discourses, in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and, by so doing, it has now achieved a fair measure of success.

Not only lectures were delivered, but, messages of congratulations and condolences were sent from time to time to high personages in India and England, to which acknowledgments have duly been received.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of sincere congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm.

Gentlemen, we cannot pass this opportunity to slip away, without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of Events, for His great kindness, that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of the various Public Meetings, published in the local leading daily newspapers for the last Thirty-seven years, bear ample testimony to them.

GENTLEMEN, I am glad to announce it to you that three illustrious personages have graciously been pleased to become Honorary Members of the Calcutta Literary Society during the year 1912. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its Public Meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasions and lent their hall for holding its Public Meetings. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the Society also records its appreciation to the kindness of the editors of English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their columns to publish the proceedings of its various meetings and other doings of the Society, during the year under review. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the grateful thanks of the Institution are hereby given to the donors and subscribers, who helped the Society, during the year 1912. (Cheers.)

To the Patrons, Members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation on their un-abated interest in the welfare of this Society.

Gentlemen, let us now thank God, whose fostering care the Institution has been able to complete the Thirty-seventh years of its existence. (Cheers.)

May the Almighty Disposer of Events continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength to sustain in our work and cheer us at the time of our difficulties. (Cheers.)

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary had finished his Thirty-seventh Annual Report of the Society, the Hon'ble Chairman, in confirming the aforesaid Report, made a nice little speech. He blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Hon'ble Chairman then introduced Mr. Lalit Mah Ghosal, Editor, Calcutta Spectator, to the Meeting and asked him to deliver his lecture to the Society on Catholicity of Hinduism.

The speaker very eloquently dwelt upon the subject for nearly three quarters of an hour, quoting many Sanskrit texts from the Hindu Shastras and illustrating with a quotations from the sacred books of various religions of the world.

He spoke upon the exemplary character and personality of Jesus Christ. He referred to a sympathetic spirit to the ideals of the Moslem Religion. He maintained that Hinduism, included all the religions of the world and declared that Hinduism kept its arms open to embrace any nationality in its gracious fold. He also said that Hinduism was a universal religion, although one's own national religion must not be abandoned.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the Hon'ble Chairman congratulated the Society and the lecturer. He wished the Society every success and thanked the blind singers of the Calcutta Blind School for their charming and melodious songs. He said that he had nothing to add nor to criticize anything that fell from the lips of the learned lecturer.

After a song sung in chorus by the Junior Members of the Calcutta University Institute the Meeting terminated with the Bengali rendering of God Save The King.

Dear Sir,
Many thanks for your kind congratulations which I fully appreciate and in doing which, I may be permitted to state the following statement that has appeared in the HINDU PATRIOT.

"In connection with the title of RAI BAHADUR-SHIP conferred upon the editor of this Journal, on the occasion of the late Emperor's Birthday, we have received such a countless number of congratulatory telegrams and letters from the whole host of our kind friends, well-wishers and reporters, constituting the representatives of official and unofficial classes all over the country, including the high-souled Governor of Bengal, and the late worthy Lieutenant-Governor Sir W. Duke, that it is not possible for me to reply to each message individually.

"We are therefore obliged to convey our heart-felt thanks to those kind friends for their kind messages through the medium of this Journal, as well as of other public organs, adding at the same time that the title of RAI BAHADUR-SHIP far from doing any honor to him may have the effect of lowering him in the public estimation, for various considerations, in consequence of which he had refused the honor of that title thrice before, though it is quite inexplicable why the same honour has been thrust upon him by the Government without his knowledge and consent on the present occasion."

A RUNNING SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF Kumar Sree Panchanan Mukhopadhyay Bahadur, I Sc.O., &c., OF THE UTTARPARA RAJ:—

‘What’s in a name that we call a rose, it smells as sweet.’ So, in the person of Bharat Ratna-Raja Sree Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyay Bahadur, M.A., B.L., C.S.I., &c., of Uttarpara, we see the singular spectacle of the unification of the two of the most incompatible positions : Viz : Luxmi and Saraswati. (Wealth and Learning.)

Born on Thursday, the 17th day of September, 1840, of one of the Premier Zemindars of Bengal, Ishwara Joykissen Mukhopadhyay—an enlightened scion of the landed aristocracy of Uttarpara, better known as the Indian Fawcett and the Romulus of Uttarpara, reputed throughout India for his great public services and magnificent public spirit.

Ishwara Joykissen largely contributed towards the cause of education, and as a rule that Charity begins at home, he established a first class Public Library, at Uttarpara, which contains the most valuable works in English, Sanskrit and in other languages. He also founded the college, the school, the charitable hospital, and several other useful institutions in his native place and rendered every possible assistance to the Literary and Charitable Society, called the Young Men’s Association, as also the Uttarpara Hitakari Sabha.

Ishwara Joykissen received a Certificate of Honour at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the 1st of January, 1877, on the Assumption of the Distinction of The Empress of India by Her Most Excellent and Imperial Majesty Queen Victoria—The Good.

Raja Sree Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyay Bahadur,—the worthy son of the worthy father—graduated M.A., and B.L., in the year 1862, as the First Alumnus of the University of Calcutta.

Renowned throughout the country for his splendid public spirit, for his eminent services to the State, his position as one of the leading Zemindars of Bengal, his large charities and his services in the interest of education, he was created a Raja by His Excellency the Right Hon’ble the Marquess of Dufferin and Ava, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., the then Viceroy and Governor-General of India, and Companion Of The Most Exalted Order Of The Star Of India by Her Imperial Majesty Queen Victoria—The Good, on Wednesday, the 16th day of February, 1887, on the auspicious occasion of the Golden Jubilee of the Reign of Her Most Excellent and Imperial Majesty.

Having served on Committees from 1865 to 1879, he was appointed a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council in 1879 and a Member of the Viceroy’s Legislative Council in 1884, and re-appointed in 1886, in which capacity he took a prominent part in the discussions of the Bengal Tenancy Bill,—which drew the highest encomiums from the Official Member, in charge of the Bill, Sir Stuart Colvin Bayley, K.C.S.I., the then Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

With such an illustrious grandfather on the paternal side, and on the maternal side with Maharaja Raja-Chakrabartty Ishwara Rama Ranjana Deva Sharma Bahadur of Hetampur, who, by dint of self-exertion from the early age of ten years rose to the highest pinnacle of fame, within a very short period, and who, whilst spending large sums of money on purely religious Institutions, was, by no means, less alive to the claim of Society and Humanity.—Yes, with such good and great personages, Kumar Sree Panchanan Mukhopadhyay Bahadur, I. Sc. O., &c. of Uttarpara lived, moved and had his being, and it is to such an worthy, that the Thirty-eighth Annual Report of the Calcutta Literary Society is justly dedicated.

Born on Wednesday, the 11th of November, 1891, he lost his mother at the tender age of five. This, though apparently an irreparable loss, proved to the Kumar Bahadur a real blessing in disguise, as his dear grand-father Raja Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyay Bahadur himself nursed and brought him up with all a mother’s lovely care and the solicitude of a father, so that, as he grew up, he developed those early glimpses of the richness of the head as of the heart, which characterise him at the present moment.

A boy of inflexible constancy, the Kumar Bahadur soon traversed the trammels of the school curriculum and passed the Calcutta University Entrance Examination in 1909, with credit to himself, to the Uttarpara Government High School and to his grand sire, under the expert coaching of the then Resident—Professor of the Uttarpara Raj, Mr. H. L. Ganguly, D. Sc. O.—taking up his College studies in Uttarpara Raj College.

While his literary activities were in full swing, the Kumar Bahadur suddenly fell ill and, under professional advice, had to withdraw himself from his studies and sought the hill retreats of Newara Eliya, in Ceylon and Ootacamund, in the Nilgiris, in quest of health. He returned home hale and hearty and started with his College studies in right earnest.

With the living example of the Raja Bahadur—the very personification of punctuality, the Kumar Bahadur never allowed one moment to pass un-utilised, turning his odd moments to account, he brought out an ably written work in English, graphically describing the versatile aspects of his educative tour in Southern India and Ceylon, entitled—“To the Golden Island and back” which has evoked universal applause from one and all.

At this stage, a dire calamity of the blackest hue overtook the Uttarpara Raj Family, in the premature and sudden demise of the eldest son of the Raja Bahadur and this turned the tide of the Kumar Bahadur's life, from an academical career to that of administration. Nor, did he neglect his education, for, although denied the advantage of the completion of an academical erudition, he sought the realisation of his educational ambition, by placing himself under the competent tutorship of no other than the celebrated educationist, J. Owen Evans, Esq., B. A., of the Oxford College repute, under the supervision of the Raja Bahadur himself, and to further enhance his attainments in learning, he gave himself the benenit of another tour, in the Aryyabarta and Western Himalayas, and delivered a lecture and presented an address on the accounts of his Himalayan tour, before the Sahitya Sabha, under the presidency of Mr. H.R. James, M.A., Principal, Calcutta Presidency College, which has also been published in book form, and, no doubt, it will receive, like the former copy, universal applause, from one and all.

Genuine and loyal to the Throne, the Kumar Bahadur is a young man of a deeply religious and charitable disposition and, during the short tenure of his administration, his career is marked with kindness to his tenants and dependents and large-hearted sympathies and public spirit materialising themselves into solid munificences.

These are the traits of his character, combined with a nobility of soul, goodness of heart and sweetness of disposition, which have insured him the love and admiration of all, who happen to come in contact with him.

He attained his majority four years ago, and, within such an incredibly short time, he has become a familiar figure, with the Ruling Princes, Chiefs, Nobles, Officials and Non-Official Personages and reputed public bodies of his beloved mother-country—the worthy eldest grandson of the two illustrious families of Bengal: Viz :—the Houses of the Uttarpara Raj and that of Hetampur. But, the crown and glory of his inner life is the development of his Occult Power, in recognition of which, the President of the Premier All-India Institute of Occultism has conferred upon him the title of I. Sc. O., under the spiritual training of the ex-Resident Professor Mr. H. L. Ganguly, D. Sc. O.

May the young Kumar Bahadur ably and nobly uphold the great traditions of his good and great grandsires, is the sincere prayer of the Calcutta Literary Society, voiced through its Founder and Secretary.

Gentlemen, we have assembled here this afternoon to celebrate the Thirty-eighth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, and I beg to bid a hearty welcome to you all and to our members and friends, who have graced this meeting with their kind presence, this afternoon (Cheers.)

The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends—the advanced pupils of various educational institutions of the town, who were then associated with him in the good work in the very year when His late-lamented Majesty Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India, visited these shores, then as His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, and to-day, we meet here to celebrate its Thirty-eighth Anniversary (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I have the honour of being its Founder and Secretary, since its foundation in 1875, and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching onward in the path of progress ever since its foundation.

Gentlemen, the main Objects of the Society are :—

- (a) To hold friendly gatherings of European and Indian communities.
- (b) To discuss social, literary and scientific subjects.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of both classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and by so doing, it has now achieved a fair measure of success.

Not only lectures were delivered, but, messages of congratulations and condolences were sent, from time to time, to high personages in India and England, to which acknowledgments have duly been received.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of sincere congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm.

We cannot let this opportunity slip away, without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of Events, for His kindness, that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the benefits conferred by the Society, the printed proceedings of its various public meetings, published in the leading local daily newspapers, for the last Thirty-eight years, bear ample testimony to them.

The Society has enrolled among its Patrons and Honorary Members, the flowers of European and Indian communities.

I have now the honour of submitting to you a synoptical Report of the transactions of the Society, (which were records of all-round progress), for the year 1913, viz :

The Thirty-seventh Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great clat, at the hall of the Calcutta University Institute, College Square, on Saturday, the 4th January, 1913, at 4.30 P.M.

The hall was very beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens, and, upon the table, there were nosegays, garlands, bouquets, &c.

The Members of the Society, the graduates and under-graduates of the Calcutta University and other gentlemen of the metropolis and suburbs, composed the bulk of the audience.

The hall was crowded to suffocation and a large number of people having to wait outside for want of even standing space inside the hall.

On the motion of Rai Jogesh Chandra Ghose Bahadur of Dacca, seconded by Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Ashutosh Chowdhury, M.A., LL.B., Judge of the Calcutta High Court, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

After the singing of a welcome song, by the pupils of the Calcutta Blind School, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, read the Thirty-seventh Annual Report of the Society, (which was a record of all-round progress.)

The said Report having been duly confirmed, the Hon'ble Chairman introduced Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, Editor of the Calcutta Spectator, (the lecturer of the evening), to the meeting and asked him to deliver his first lecture on—

Catholicity of Hinduism :

The speaker eloquently dwelt on the subject for near three quarters of an hour, quoting many Sanskrit texts from the Hindu Shastras and illustrating his points with quotations from the sacred books of various religions of the world.

He spoke on the exemplary character and personality of Jesus Christ. He referred, in a sympathetic spirit, to the ideals of the Moslem religion. He maintained that Hinduism included all the religions of the world and declared that Hinduism kept its arms open to the embrace of any nationality in its spacious fold. He further said that Hinduism was a universal religion, although one's own national religion must not be abandoned.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the Hon'ble Chairman congratulated the Society and the lecturer. He wished the Institution every success and thanked the blind singers for their excellent songs. He said he had nothing to add, nor to criticise any thing that fell from the lips of the lecturer.

After a song sung in chorus by the Junior Members of the Calcutta University Institute, the Meeting terminate with the Bengalee rendering of God Save The King.

The Hon'ble Chairman and the lecturer were the garlanded, amidst shouts of applause.

(2) The second public Meeting for the Thirty eighth session of the Society was held at the hall of the National Medical College and King's Hospital, 92, Upper Circular Road, on Thursday, the 9th, January, 1913, at 4.30 P.M. under the presidency of Mr. Panchcowri Banerjee, B.A. Editor of the Nayak, when the venerable Pandit Madhu Sudan Goswami, of Sri Brindaban, delivered a lecture on—

Sri Brindaban—the Kingdom of God:

The learned Pandit very ably and eloquently spoke on the subject for nearly three-quarters of an hour and was heard with rapt attention. He chiefly dwelt upon the means for the attainment of the eternal bliss and exhorted his hearers to consider the fact that their life, in this world, was only for a short period and that they should try their utmost to reach the Kingdom of God, by their good deeds.

After the Venerable Pandit had finished his speech, the Chairman spoke a few words on the subject. He thanked the lecturer and wished the Society every success.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair

(Vide, The Bengalee and The Anurita Bazar Patrika, 10th January, 1913.)

(3) The third public Meeting for the Thirty eighth session of the Society was held at the hall of the National Medical College and King's Hospital, 92, Upper Circular Road on Saturday, the 30th January, 1913, at 4.30 P.M. under the presidency of Dr. Phanindra Nath Banerjee, Professor of the College, when Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjee, B.L., of the Hindu Marriage Reform League and Pleader, Judge Court, Howrah, delivered a lecture on Student Life and its Opportunities:

The speaker dwelt on his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour. He was lustily cheered, when he placed before his audience the ancient Hindu ideal of Brahma Charyya, during the educational period. He rejoiced at the growing abhorrence of the aspiring young men for early marriage, which was largely responsible for early widowhood, premature death, infant mortality and the blighting of the future of shining students.

He thought it was the duty of every young Indian to keep before himself the ideals of ancient Brahmacharya and draw inspiration therefrom. It was the duty of every student to be able to contribute something to the building up of a robust Indian nationality.

Weakness was slavery, weakness was death, the weak would go to the wall in the eternal struggle for existence. Ten years—and only ten—Viz :—from fourteen to twenty-five were the best period of a student's life. Let this great portunity be not overlooked. Let him not sacrifice himself to the interest or pleasure of any body else, during these precious years of his life. Let him be particularly busy with his books and loyal to his ambition for these golden years. He should equip himself first and then come out before the world with his light and energy.

New India was pulsating with animation—there was a th and bubble and fuss all around. All that was good, for excitement generated steam. Who could be more enthusiastic than the young student? Why then his potential energy should be destroyed by putting the halter of early marriage and early family-life round his neck? He was surrounded by an army of children, crying for bread, but what else could the poor enthusiast possibly do than go into service, before completing his education?

Poverty was the eternal curse of India, why then, the speaker asked, should young students increase their trouble by digging their own grave by marrying so early? They could not shut their eyes to the question of expediency, but adapt themselves to the ever-growing exigencies of the changing times.

The learned speaker then lucidly dilated on with the other aspects of his subject and then concluded by saying that they should not simply condemn early marriage, as the thief condemns stealing, or, as the drunkard condemns the glittering liquid. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. D. S. Chatterjaya of Madras spoke a few words on the subject.

The Chairman then addressed the meeting. He thanked the learned lecturer and wished the Society every success.

The Meeting then dissolved with a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

(See The Bengalee, 12th and 14th January, 1913.)

(4) The fourth public Meeting for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society was held at the hall of the National Medical College and King's Hospital, 92, Upper Circular Road, on Wednesday, the 15th, January, 1913, at 5-30 P.M., under the presidency of Dr. Henry Stephen, M.A., Ph.D., Professor of Philosophy, Scottish Churches' College, when Mr. Mahan Ghosal, Editor of the "CALCUTTA SPECTATOR", delivered his second lecture to the Society on the Works of Matthew Arnold:

The learned lecturer briefly touched the main features in the Works of Matthew Arnold, mainly on his Essays in Criticism, his poems, his theological writings and concluded by saying that Indians and Europeans alike should study the works of that great Author.

After the lecturer had done, the Chairman spoke a few words on the subject. He thanked the learned speaker and wished the Society every success.

The Meeting came to a close with a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

(See The Statesman, The Bengalee, The Amrita Bazar Patrika, 16th and The Indian Mirror, 24th January, 1913.)

(5) The fifth public meeting for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society was held at the hall of the National Medical College and King's Hospital, 92, Upper Circular Road, on Thursday, the 21st January, 1913, at 5-15 P.M., under the presidency of Dr. Henry Stephen, M.A., Ph.D., Professor, Scottish Churches' College, when Dr. Kartic Chandra Dutt, M.B., (ex-Medical Officer to His Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad-Deccan, G.C.S.I., and the Government of India, Surgeon to the King's Hospital and Professor of Physiology, National Medical College, Calcutta, delivered his lecture to the Society on—

The Sanitation of Rural Bengal:

The learned Doctor very ably treated his subject for an hour and he was heard with rapt attention.

First of all, he spoke on the importance of the subject, and said that the villages of Bengal were getting worse by day in point of sanitation.

The villages that were once popular and healthy, were now depopulated and most unhealthy. Malaria was endemic throughout the whole of Bengal. No district was free from the ravages of cholera. It is high time, that the inhabitants and rulers of Bengal open their eyes and to improve the sanitation, or, else, Bengal villages will be depopulated in the near future. Even now they are quite inhabitable.

The causes that led to the insanitary condition :

He said that the comparison of the history of the villages and that of Calcutta, for the last fifty years, or, so, would clearly show that the villages, once healthy, have gradually and imperceptibly fallen to their present wretched state through utter neglect, while Calcutta has steadily improved in sanitation, by constant application of scientific methods from its original condition.

Any body, who may chance to pay a flying visit to the mofussils, is at once shocked at the sight of dense jungles, covering swampy tracts with insufficient drainage. No doubt, here is the breeding ground of mosquitoes and the hotbed of malaria. He further finds that the rivers, which were once navigable and mighty, have now silted up and the current in them is very slow, except during the rainy season. In some of the rivers, aquatic plants and rank vegetation have filled up the bed and banks. The water in the shallow bed is quite unfit for human consumption. Similarly the ponds and tanks are mostly silted up and contain filthy water.

Now, what are the causes of this scarcity of water and the consequent epidemics of cholera and malaria? It cannot be that the total quantity of rainfall has diminished during the last fifty years. But, surely, it is the obstruction offered to the natural drainage of the country and the neglect of dredging the rivers and tanks that have produced this evil.

The Remedy :

It was a matter of great satisfaction to the speaker that the leaders of the people had taken the matter in hand and that he could heartily thank His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, for the prompt measures he was taking to improve the sanitation of the districts. But the speaker urged the imperative necessity of awakening the rural population at large to the importance of the subject.

Unless the villagers could be made to understand the main principles of sanitation and try individually and jointly to remedy the existing evils, nothing appreciable benefit could be done.

In this great task the whole of the educated community should be equal to their duty and responsibility to awaken the suffering villagers. Then and then only, the salvation of the country could be expected.

First of all, the jungles should be cleared and the parts so subjected, should be kept clean. The rivers silted and kept in a navigable condition. The tanks excavated and wells sunk and kept clean. The washings from the night-soil, or, heaps of manure should never be allowed to flow into any tank in close proximity to a village. Jute should not be allowed to be dipped and treated near the villages. The district sanitary officers, when employed, should be helped in the matter by the public. Those, who have got bungalows in the villages, should try to live there at least a portion of the year. Unless the educated and well-to-do people make it a point to visit the mofussils, rural sanitation can hardly be expected to improve.

The neglect of a century and the blockings up of the rivers and water passages by railway bridges have made the task of the reclamation difficult and very expensive. It would be very good, if the Road Cess Funds be transferred to this account.

The Imperial Council at Delhi should be moved towards this end. In the meantime, His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, the speaker said, he was sure, would be pleased to lay out sufficient funds for the purpose. He was confident that the people of Bengal would do anything in their power to improve the sanitation.

In conclusion, the speaker asked the audience to exert their influence towards that end, remembering the duty and responsibility they owed to the country, they lived in. (Cheers.)

After the lecturer had done, the Reverend Chairman rose, amidst cheers, and said that Doctor Kartic Chandra Dutt had clearly demonstrated to the audience how very unhealthy the districts of Bengal were. But, by the great discoveries, which have been made within the past twenty years, or so, it was possible that the defects could be remedied and the root cause removed.

The learned Doctor had mentioned the examples of the districts around the Suez Canal and the Panama Canals, which were very malarious. The labourers, that worked there, died by hundreds and now the districts around the Suez and Panama Canals were very healthy. So, Calcutta was very un-healthy formerly, but, now that city was very healthy. But the question involved vast malarial and unhealthy areas. It will, no doubt, take a very long time to reclaim.

The draining of the marshes and the dredging of the rivers are big operations. Now, who is going to do all these?—The Government?—The Government cannot perform this large business single-handed. The Municipalities and the PANCHAYATS need the help of the general public in this great work. There is a great field for Medical men, in this respect. However, what has been done elsewhere, can be and should be done here. The question involves the life and death of a whole population of a great province.

In conclusion, he thanked the Doctor for his lecture and hoped that similar lectures would be delivered everywhere in the districts and the solution of the problem found out. (CHEERS.)

The Venerable Chairman then blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

Mr. Bolai Charan Mullick having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the meeting terminated.

(Vide, The Statesman, 23rd January, 1913.)

Education and National Growth:

The learned speaker very ably dwelt on his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour and he was heard with rapt attention. He spoke on the importance of education as a great means of building up national life. He dwelt on the great importance of female education. He said that without a proper spread of female education, among a people, they would never be able to make any great march along the path of progress and improvement.

He dwelt on the great importance of mass education as a great factor of forming the national growth and development of a people. He stated that newspapers are a great and important part in the development of national life and observed that intercourse with foreign nations is very greatly necessary to the development of national life. He elaborately explained the great importance of scientific, industrial and commercial education and great utility of public libraries, literary societies and other institutions, that help to diffuse education through the whole country.

He then dwelt on the great and important services, well-regulated universities do towards the cause of education of a people. Then he spoke on the great importance of physical education and the great utility of open-air games and play-fields in the formation of national character. He concluded, by saying, that moral and spiritual education should be imparted among a people as they are very greatly necessary and they take a very place in the education of human beings. (CHEERS.)

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Revd. Chairman rose, amidst cheers, and said that he fully endorsed the views of the lecturer and stated that female education is an essential factor in the development of national life and that great men had great mothers, that mothers exercise potent influence over the education and training of their children. He concluded by saying on the importance of physical education and open-air games and expressed satisfaction that the youths of the country are taking such a great interest in open-air games.

(Vide, The Bengalee, 29th, The Statesman 30th and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 30th January and 1st February 1913.)

(7) The seventh public Meeting for the Thirty-ninth session of the Society was held at the hall of the National Medical College and King's Hospital, 92, Upper Circular Road, on Friday, the 31st January, 1913, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Mr. Jamini Nath Banerjee, Principal of the DEAF AND DUMB SCHOOL, when Mr. Prof. Kumar Bosu, the brilliant orator, scholar and poet-dramatist delivered his second lecture to the Society on

The Needs of Mass Education in India and the Best Ways of Educating the Masses of India:

The learned speaker very ably spoke on his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour. He chiefly expatiated upon the great importance of mass education in India as without it, we can seldom make the country take proper march along the path of progress and improvement.

If we want Self-Government, it is absolutely needful that we shall first educate the masses of the people of India. Mass education must be spread among both the males and females. The females exercise a great influence over the minds of men, especially over the growth and development of the minds of children and it is impossible for a country to progress and improve, without a proper spread of female education among its people.

It is also needful for the proper development of industry and commerce in this country that the masses of the people should receive proper education and training. Without properly trained workmen, with some education, industry and commerce would not be able to develop properly in this country and stand in competition with foreign markets of the world.

He recommended the establishment all over the country of societies, for the propagation of mass education, among the males and females of this country and said that trained teachers, of both the sexes, should try to educate the masses in a kindly and sympathetic spirit towards them, attracting their sympathy.

He also spoke on mass education, as one of the best factors that would remove the various social evils that are corroding away the very vital welfare of the people of India. So, mass education is essentially necessary towards the national growth and development of the people of India.

After the lecturer had done, the Chairman rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting. He said, he was gratified to hear the learned discourse of the lecturer and agreed, that mass education is of a vital importance to the progress and welfare of the people of India. He said that we should not give up our efforts to induce the Government that it be made compulsory in India.

He thinks that the matter is one of great financial difficulty, still, it is of so vast importance towards the progress and improvement of the country, that we should try to spread mass education, as far as we can, because, without our industry and commerce would not be able to stand competition with the foreign markets of the world and thereby we may be in danger of national extinction, or, shall have to remain as slaves. (CHEERS.)

The Chairman then thanked the lecturer, blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

(VIDE, The BENGALIAN, 2nd February, 1913.)

(8) The eighth Public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth Session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Ripon College, 15, Harrison Road, on Tuesday, the 4th February, 1913, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of Mr. Sham Lal Ray, the Founder Secretary to the Society, when Mr. Profulla Kumar Bosu, the brilliant orator, scholar and poet-dramatist, delivered his third lecture to the Society on—

The Education that India Needs at Present :

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly two hours and he was heard with rapt attention. He said :—

GENTLEMEN, before speaking on the subject of our to-day's lecture, let me explain what we mean by EDUCATION. The term EDUCATION is often misunderstood by many persons. They think, that the mere reading of a great many books, or the getting of degrees and diplomas from the University,—these alone constitute EDUCATION.

GENTLEMEN, they greatly misunderstand this term. By EDUCATION is meant that, which really improves and enlightens the human mind, fills it up with real knowledge and culture, increases its store of knowledge and takes it march along the path of progress, improvement and enlightenment.

Such an education, India is greatly in need of at present. An education, that would really improve and enlighten the people of India and make them march along the path of progress, improvement and enlightenment, and raise their general national condition and make them take their proper stand with the other nations of the world.

GENTLEMEN, considering the present back-ward state of India, it is absolutely needful, that proper education should be widely spread among both the males and females of all classes of the people of India.

Without this spread of education, among both the males and females of all sects and classes of the people of India, this country would seldom be able to improve and make her proper march along the path of progress, improvement, enlightenment and prosperity and engage, in competition with the other nations of the world. In the great struggle for existence, that is prevailing so greatly over the world at present,

GENTLEMEN, I lay a great stress upon FEMALE EDUCATION IN INDIA and I consider that, without a proper spread of education among the females of this country, it would never be able to march along the path of progress, improvement, enlightenment and prosperity.

The women exercise, directly and indirectly, a great influence over the minds of men and over the society at large and that this influence, which they exercise, may be wholesome and salutary, it is needful that their minds should be properly educated and enlightened.

The women are entrusted with the education and training of children, in their early years, and they form up the development of their minds, in those plastic periods of their lives.

The education and training, that persons receive in the early periods of their lives, are very important and help very greatly to form up the growth and development of their minds and leave permanent impressions over them.

Now, how greatly needful it is, that the education and training, that persons would receive, in the early and plastic periods of their lives, should be a very good and salutary one, and so, it is absolutely needful that the women, who are entrusted with this education and training, should have a proper education and enlightenment.

Moreover, in the various concerns of life, men have to depend greatly on women, and that the influence, which the women would exercise over the men, would be a wholesome and salutary one, it is needful that the women should be properly educated and enlightened.

Indeed, women play a very great and important part in the human society and without a sound and thorough education among them, there cannot be a proper national growth and development.

Next, I lay a great stress upon MASS EDUCATION IN INDIA. It is absolutely necessary to the progress, improvement and prosperity of India and, without it, she would hardly be able to make a proper march along the path of progress, improvement, prosperity and greatness.

Here, in India, among more than thirty crores of people in it, only a microscopic minority of the people receive education, and millions and millions of the people wallow in the deepest ignorance and illiteracy and suffer from all the evils, that deep ignorance and illiteracy bring on.

Now, in such a state of things, how can we expect that India would be able to make any great march along the path of progress, improvement, prosperity and greatness. These ignorant and illiterate millions of people would always form a great bar and obstacle to her progress and improvement.

So, if we want India to make a proper march along the path of progress, improvement, prosperity and greatness, it is needful that we shall educate the masses in India, try to dispel their ignorance and illiteracy, with the bright and radiant rays of knowledge, raise them to the status of human beings and then we can hope for the progress and advancement of India and of forming up a true national growth and development among the people of India.

Again, India needs, very greatly, a proper, industrial and commercial education, extremely poor, as she is now, her lot would not improve, without a proper development of her industry and commerce.

Her industries were once famous, but, it is the neglect of proper industrial and commercial education, among her people, that is the cause of the ruin of these industries.

The other nations of the world are making such fast progress in industry and commerce and their manufactured goods are being sold, in all the markets of the world, even, in our Indian markets, while the people of India are lagging so greatly behind, in the industrial and commercial world and getting poorer and poorer.

The above thing is a matter of extreme regret and, it is high time, if we want the welfare and prosperity of our poor country, that we should employ our greatest labour and exertions, towards the proper growth and development of a sound, thorough and up-to-date industrial and commercial education in this country and, try to spread the above education, in the best way possible, among the people of this country.

For this purpose, Technical Institutes, well-equipped technical laboratories and all institutions, that would help to foster the growth and development of industrial and commercial education in this country, should be established all over the country and good technical instructions, under good professors and teachers, should be imparted to the males and females of this country, the greatest care should be taken to develop properly and improve the indigenous industries of India.

In this connection, I want to say that mass education is absolutely necessary to the proper development of industry and commerce in this country, for, industrial work cannot prosper and stand, in competition in the market, without trained workmen, with some education in them, absolutely ignorant and illiterate workmen, cannot do any work properly and well and, in these days, when competition is so keen in the industrial world, it is needful, that there should be properly trained workmen, with some education in them, otherwise, this country will not be able to stand in competition in industry, with the other great countries of the world, old systems alone cannot stand, we must keep pace with the times, otherwise, we shall lag behind and be ultimately ruined.

Scientific education should be cultivated, as much as possible, in this country, as it is one of the greatest means of developing the industry and commerce of a people and it would keep us abreast with the progress of the world.

There is a great lack of proper scientific education in this country and it is a deplorable fact that India in which science made such a great progress, in ancient times, should, in modern times, contribute so little to the scientific researches of the world.

Great steps ought to be taken for the proper cultivation of scientific education in this country and every care that can be taken, should be taken to foster the growth and development of a proper scientific education in this country.

For this purpose, institutes, having for their chief purpose the development of scientific education in this country, well-equipped scientific laboratories and societies for the cultivation and development of scientific education, should be established all over the country.

Students should be sent to the other countries of the world to acquire a sound and thorough technical and scientific education and they, on their return to India, should be given every encouragement to develop the arts, industries and technical and scientific education of their own mother-country.

Physical education ought also to form a great part in the education of the people of India. They would not be able to make any progress and improvement and engage, in competition with the other nations of the world, in the great struggle for existence, unless their bodies be sound and healthy ones. Along with the general education that the children would receive, proper physical education, and training should be imparted to them.

Open-air games and exercises, in which many persons join together, are good and beneficial, as herein along with the physical exercise of the body, many high mental virtues, such as, presence of mind, promptitude of action, prompt obedience to command and such other various high mental virtues, that help very much to form up and develop the character of a man and of a nation are acquired.

Next, I lay a great stress upon MORAL education. It is needless for me to say that MORAL education is essentially necessary for every one. The merely filling up the mind with intellectual matter, without developing its moral side, would be a most imperfect education, as it is absolutely necessary to develop the character of a man, for, without it, a man would not be a MAN and also moral education is essential to the formation of a great national character, without which, no nation can ever be great.

Next, I want to speak about SPIRITUAL education. Now, this matter is very important and ought to receive a most careful attention.

Religion forms the chief thing in the life of a man. It moulds greatly the character and life of a man and also the character and actions of a nation.

Here, in India, we see all manner of superstitions prevailing and exercising a great influence over the men. Now, this thing acts as a great bar to the progress and improvement of the society and country. It is needful that there should be a proper SPIRITUAL education, among the people of this country, that thereby the foolish prejudices and superstitions may be dispelled from their minds and they may be able to follow and grasp the real truth and light, whereby they would be able to improve themselves and their nation.

Here, in India, it is not unoften, that much trouble, riots and even bloodshed, take place among the people of this country, on account of vain, foolish and narrow religious prejudices and superstitions. This thing does very greatly weaken and enervate the national character of the people, offers a great bar and impediment to their progress and greatly their national strength and sows the seeds of the national ruin among them.

How often ignorance pollutes the nobleness of religion, spreads a deep darkness over its divine radiance and prevents the sacred light of religion and truth from illumining with its bright and celestial rays the human heart.

The human mind should receive a spiritual education, distinguish the real truth from falsehood, the real light from the darkness, to have a better and more rational and enlightened knowledge of the great Creator, and knowledge of the end and destiny of the human life.

It is, in the nature of the human mind, to hanker after religious truths and knowledge, after the knowledge of the great Creator and the deep mysteries of the creation and life and where ignorance prevails, all sorts of false theories, promulgated by crafty and interested persons, prevail over the minds of the people and generate many evil manners and customs among them, that corrode into the vital welfare of the society, vitiate the minds of the people and sow the seeds of debasement, degradation, deterioration and ultimate ruin among them.

History teaches us, in glowing characters, how crafty priesthoods and false religions have brought about the ruin and downfall of nations.

Religion has got a great influence over the up-building of a nation and exercises a very deep influence over national progress, welfare and prosperity.

Next, I want to speak about UNIVERSITY EDUCATION IN INDIA. There can be, no doubt, that a well-directed university is a very great and potent means of the diffusion of education and specially of higher education among a people and the Indian Universities, one of the greatest boons India of the British Government, have undoubtedly done much towards the advancement of progress, civilization and enlightenment among the people of this country, though there yet remains much to be remedied, much to be done.

The Universities must pay greater attention to real education and culture, than to mere external forms and formalities, and try to adapt themselves, as far as possible, to the actual needs and circumstances of the country that thereby their utility may be increased.

We must not think that the University can monopolise all education, and that no education can exist outside the University.

Such a thought is extremely foolish and absurd; no nothing can monopolise education; each thing in the universe, each moment in the universe, can furnish vast education to the human mind and we must not think of receiving education, in a cold, mechanical way within the University sphere.

Vigorous individual enterprises ought to be made for furtherance and advancement of education and culture. University is not the producer of education, but, a great help to the acquirement and diffusion of education and learning.

One great thing, I want to say, in connection with the subject of our to-day's lecture, that we should not neglect the INDIGENOUS education of this country, but, must pay great attention to it. There can be no solid national education, if we neglect the indigenous education of the country. Mere foreign education, with utter neglect of the indigenous education, would not do. It may produce various evils.

Again, India was glorious in the past, with a grand glorious literature, philosophy and the productions of some of the greatest minds, the world has ever seen, we ought to be thoroughly acquainted with them and I think that the establishment of the HINDU UNIVERSITY would be a great help in the diffusion of ancient learning in this country.

The study of the INDIAN VERNACULARS, prevalent in different parts of India, should be studied among the people of India, in all parts of it, as by it, the people of different parts of India would be able to know more of one another, to enter into the inner lives of the different societies, prevalent all over India, and that would help us greatly to bring the different peoples, inhabiting this country, into closer contact with one another and help to the formation in India of a great and powerful Indian nation.

The study of FOREIGN LANGUAGES also should form an important part in the education of the people of India, for, thereby, they would be able to study the thoughts and topics of the other nations of the world and assimilate the ideas from them to their own life and also be able to keep themselves abreast with the progress of the world.

Literary societies, public libraries, and such other institutions should be established all over India, as they would greatly help to propagate education and culture among the people of this country. Efforts should be made by them to propagate education and culture among the masses of the people of India, among the males and females of all classes the people of this country.

Newspapers, edited by able and responsible editors, must also be a very important part in the education of a people, as they greatly tend to diffuse much knowledge of culture among the people and help very greatly the advancement of civilization and enlightenment among them.

Poor students, all over India, should be helped and encouraged to prosecute their studies, and the people of India should not be slow in untying the strings of their resources for the furtherance of the noble cause of education this country, on which, above all, lie the future progress, improvement, prosperity and greatness of India and which could be a great and most effective remedy for many of the greatest evils, that are, at present, corroding into the welfare of the people of this country, and which, in time, raise her up to a lofty and dignified position, make her take her stand with the other great nations of the world, and advance the progress of the world, and humanity, instead of remaining a poor and miserable country overriden by ignorance, superstition, prejudice and poverty.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair at 7.30 P.M.

Aide, The BENGALIAN, 5th February, 1913).

9) The ninth Public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held, with great clat, at the hall of the National Medical College and King's Hospital, Upper Circular Road, on Friday, the 21st February, 1913, at 5.30 P.M., to congratulate the Hon'ble Maharajah Rajit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur, on his election to the Legislative Councils of both Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Governor-General of India and of the First Governor of the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.

The building was very beautifully decorated with garlands of flowers, flags and nose-gays, which imparted a charm to the distinguished audience. The Meeting was very largely attended by the graduates and the under-graduates of the Calcutta University and the public in general.

On the motion of Dr. Amulya Dhone Neogy, Professor, NATIONAL MEDICAL COLLEGE, and seconded by Dr. Karticendra Dutt, L.M.S., ex-Medical Officer to His Highness Nizam Sahib of Hyderabad-Deccan, G.C.S.I., and the Viceroy of India, Surgeon to the KING'S HOSPITAL, Professor of Botany, NATIONAL MEDICAL COLLEGE, Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.A., M.D., was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

The Chairman, on taking his seat, first welcomed the Hon'ble Maharajah Rajit Sinha Bahadur of Nashipur, in a few well-chosen words, and said that, as the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur was elected by the people, they would expect him to be loyal to their trust and voice their sentiments, both before the Imperial and Bengal Legislative Councils.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur was an illustrious representative of our race and, in his amiable personality, has embodied all the virtues of wealth and learning, and it was refreshing to observe that he had annihilated the immemorial jealousy between LUCHMI and SARASWATI. (CHEERS.)

It was a matter of great pleasure that he was a representative of the aristocracy and of the people as well. Great were his responsibilities. His opportunities greater still. He hoped, that his career, in both the Councils, will be a triumph indication of the unique conference that has been reposed in him. (CHEERS.)

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, then addressed the Meeting. He read and submitted the ADDRESS OF CONGRATULATION, presented by the Society to the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Nashipur, on his being elected to the Legislative Councils of both Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Governor-General of India and the Governor of Bengal.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur, who was profusely garlanded and lustily cheered, then made a suitable reply to the ADDRESS. He assured the assembly that he would, above all things, be faithful and sincere to the trust imposed upon him and try his best to justify the selection.

The well-being of his countrymen will be his chief desire and he would always support their cause, in both the Legislative Councils of the State. (CHEERS.)

He thanked the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society and its indefatigable Founder-Secretary, Mr. Sham Lal Day, for the fine Address of Congratulation presented to him and wished the Institution every success. (CHEERS.)

The Chairman, then, in introducing Mr. Jyoti Prasad Banerjea, B.L., the speaker in the evening, said that he was a sincere worker of the HINDI MARRIAGE REFORM LEAGUE and a fine speaker. He had been watching Mr. Banerjea with interest and he was glad to note the progress he was making with the cause, he had so gallantly undertaken.

EARLY MARRIAGE was a veritable curse in their society and Mr. Banerjea had done well, in selecting the subject for discussion among young men. (CHEERS.)

He had begun very well and Dr. Mullick hoped that his efforts would be crowned with success.

He then asked Mr. Banerjea to deliver his second lecture to the society on Young Bengal and Its Potential Energy : -

Mr. Banerjea then rose, amidst cheers, and spoke on the subject for nearly half an hour. He said that the very name of the subject smelt of politics, but, he would entirely confine himself to the social aspects of the subject.

He asked his hearers to concentrate their attention, for one moment, on the condition of their society. He asked them to come out of the narrowness of prejudices and have a look abroad, how nations were on their march! How they were adopting themselves to the exigencies of the changing times! How they were moving forward, full of enthusiasm and hope, uprooting the thorns of customs and prejudices from their wayside! Woe betide the nation, that did not feel the pulsation of an awakened consciousness that was vibrating through the world. It was only to be felt, it was sacred and it was divine. It begot enthusiasm. It generated steam. It killed weakness. It quickened and inspired all that it touched.

Great were the possibilities of the Bengali race. If the stumbling blocks in the social life were removed, if the social shackles were loosened, Bengal could shine with greater lustre. Students of to-day would be citizens of to-morrow. They would be the keepers of the country's future.

The learned speaker fervently asked his hearers to realise what incalculable mischief they were doing to their nation, by marrying their young men, before they finished their education and were competent to manage a family.

They were all poor. The great middle class suffered the pangs of poverty, in grim silence. They all knew that, they all felt that. Why then, by marrying their boys and girls early in life, would they increase the miseries and cut the foundation of the welfare of the race?

Why then should they, by saddling the young student with a miserable married-life compel him to leave aside his books and enter into service. In their country, service meant death of the soul. Struggling with want all through his life, feeling at every turn that life was a burden, running into debts for marrying his daughters and educating his children - half-starved, worried and over-worked, the once youthful enthusiast, now a soulless machine, would drop once into the grave, too early in life.

The speaker next asked his audience to consider that there were more than three lakhs of child-widows, between one year of age and fifteen. The number of infant widows, under one year of age, was eight hundred and fifty-nine! Between one and two years, their number was one thousand and thirty-nine! They were not allowed to remarry. They were denied all the dainties and delicacies of life and were made to fast. Their priesthood had formulated to several by-laws and regulations for them, which would melt the soul of a Draco.

What had they done for them? If they were not bold enough to re-marry those innocent victims of an outrageous custom—they could swear not to marry girls, before they are sixteen. Then, at once stroke, the possibility of widowhood at such low ages would be destroyed. Their benign Government were pledged to a policy of non-interference in their social laws and as much they must set their hands to the plough.

It was nothing revolutionary to marry a youth of twenty-five with a girl of sixteen. That was enjoined by the VEDAS—the SHASTRA of the SHASTRAS, and, by medical authorities. He asked them to ponder upon the subject and appealed to them to form a distinct opinion.

If they thought that EARLY MARRIAGE was responsible for immature offerings, untimely deaths and manifold miseries, they should at once set their face against it. Let them not, like the thief who condemns stealing, but steals himself, condemn the custom and yet follow it with blind veneration.

After the lecturer had done, the Chairman addressed the Meeting. He thanked the lecturer for his lucid speech, blessed the society and wished the Institution every success.

Dr. K. C. Dutt, in a few appropriate words, then proposed hearty votes of thanks to the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur Dr. Mullick and the lecturer of the evening, which were seconded by Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, and carried by a acclamation.

The Meeting terminated in the evening

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur then left the Meeting amidst shouts of applause.

(10) The tenth public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, 13, Mirzapur Street, on Wednesday, the 26th February, 1913, at 5 P.M.

On the motion of Mr. J. N. Chatterjee, seconded by Mr. Mahendra Nath Guha, the Revd. Earnest F. Knight, Minister of the UNION CHAPEL, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

On the Revd. Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, Editor, CALCUTTA SPECTATOR, delivered his third lecture to the Society on:—

The Merits of John Bunyan's Religious Tracts:

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt on his subject and spoke, at some length, on the life of John Bunyan, from his boyhood to the time of his death. He dwelt, at some detail, on his boyish franks—his pulling the chord of the bell-fry—his meeting two women, who were speaking on next life and good and bad conduct in life and detailed the gradual stages of development of his moral consciousness, when, at last, he became BISHOP BUNYON.

He was a devout Christian of the old order, who would not break a Sabbath and his two books, THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS AND THE HOLY WAR were the very manifestations of the gradual changes, that were wrought in the character of the author.

The learned lecturer then proceeded to review the writings of his books, which were brought to a conclusion, by exhorting his audience to imitate John Bunyan in his life, character and writings.

After the lecturer had finished his speech, Mr. S. N. Ghose spoke a few words on the subject.

The Revd. Chairman then, in a neat little speech, desecrated on the merits of John Bunyan's religious tracts and thanked the lecturer for his enlightening and erudite speech. He thanked the lecturer and wished the Institution every success.

A vote of thanks to the chair brought the proceedings to a close.

(11) The eleventh public Meeting, for the Thirtieth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Ripon College, 15, Harrison Road, on Friday, 7th March, 1913, at 3 P.M., under the presidency of the Revd. Earnest F. Knight, Minister of the UNION CHAPEL, when Mr. Lalit Mahan Ghosal, Editor, CALCUTTA SPECTATOR, delivered his fourth lecture to the Society on—

Samuel Taylor Coleridge:

The learned speaker very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly three-quarters of an hour and he was heard with rapt attention.

We read in an English periodical, in our college days, descriptive poem, on some of British poets, by a Cambridge graduate, we presume, of which the following two lines still stick to our memory:—

"SHAKESPEARE'S BOUNDLESS CLOUDLESS HUMAN VISION, OR, THE WEIRD TWILIGHT THAT COLERIDGE KNOWN."

Yes, we find, in Samuel Taylor Coleridge's life and writings, a sort of weird twilight, that is conspicuous by its absence in those or any other British poets.

By the wondrous operation of the magic-wand of genius, he could produce poems, from which we can gather the sacred mysteries of life's songs, enraptured with delights of ecstatic vision, as a critic has rightly described.

Yet, they were leavened with a kind of un-subdued regularity of thought and fantastic expressions here and there—the happy blending of the two phases of the physical phenomenon, the sinking of the sun on the western horizon and the glowing glorious light at sundown—a weird twilight—a prototypical expression in the moral world.

While receiving his education at CHRIST'S HOSPITAL, at Jesus College, Cambridge, where poetry and metaphysics became his favourite studies, he enlisted himself a common soldier in the dragoons, just after leaving Cambridge.

On one of the saddles in the stables at Reading, Nathaniel Ogle, Captain of Coleridge's troop, found the following sentence in Latin.

"EHEU! QUAM INFORTUNUM MISERRIMUM EST FUISSE FELICEM".

The scholastic Captain Ogle was much struck with the circumstance, and, on enquiry came to know, it was work of COMBERBACK, for Coleridge assumed that name in the army—he having at once said:—

"I wrote it." Comberback was discharged and Nathaniel took him on her laps. He was a believer in God and credited atheism, in the following vivid manner:—

"The very name of God

Sounds like a juggler's charm: while bold with joy
Forth from his dark and lonely hiding place
(Portentous sight) the owl Atheism
Sailing on wings obscure—athwart the moon.
Drops his blue fringed lids, and holds them close
And hooting at the glorious Sun in heaven
Cries out—"Where is it?"

With SOUTHEY and LOVELL, he formed happy trios, an enthusiastic notion of reforming the political world gave lectures on the APPROACHING HAPPINESS OF THE HUMAN RACE, which created a great sensation.

They then endeavored to go to the new world, to carry their new theory of PANTISOCRACY into execution. Cupid stood in their way, for the design was broken off the attachment of the three enthusiasts, towards the three Fricker sisters. In all this, it is evident, the same grey light and shade combination played an important part in his nature.

He wrote poetry from REMORSE to PICCOLMINI, but it could never completely assume the dazzling properties of the sun, nor the mellowing properties of the MOON—it was the combination of deep philosophy, sometimes egotistic thoughts and turgid expressions like—
"River, now with bushy rocks o'erbrowed."

Now, winding bright and full, with naked banks, while the whole world seemed imaged in its vast circumference.

In his old age, he lost to an extent his brilliant constitutional powers, but, in spite of his bodily weakness, mental powers did not fail to mark him out, as one of the rarest specimens of humanity, battling with physical rigours, and yet, not a shade falling on his brow to make others understand that he was undergoing bodily disfigurements of the most excruciating nature.

A few days before his death, this distinguished poet and metaphysician wrote to his god-child, Kinnaird—"But I have been, likewise, through a large portion of my later life, a sufferer, sorely afflicted with bodily pains, languor and manifold infirmities... ..that the Almighty Redeemer... has reserved, under all my pains and infirmities, the inward peace, that passeth all understanding, with the supporting assurance of a reconciled God, who will not withdraw his spirit from me in the conflict, and in his own time, will deliver me from the evil one."

The sun of his life set on 25th July 1834, but, in the twilight of his evening career, his epitaph, written by himself in his weird mood, we read :—

"Stop, Christian passerby ; Stop child of God,
And read with gentle breast. Beneath this sod
A poet lies or that which once seemed he—
O, lift a thought in prayer for S. T. C.—
That he, who, many a year with toil of breath
Found death in life, may here find life in death Mercy for praise—to be forgiven for fame
He asked and hoped through Christ do thou the same.

The weird twilight has just come on the next horizon.
The death in life ended and Coleridge found life in death.

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, the Revd. Chairman addressed the Meeting for nearly half an hour. He thanked the lecturer and wished the Society every success.

(12). The twelfth Public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held at the hall of the City College, 13 Mirzapur Street, on Thursday, the 13th March, 1913, at 5 P. M., under the presidency of the Revd. Thomas William Norledge, M. A., Secretary of Christian Literature Society, when Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bosu, the brilliant orator, scholar and poet dramatist, delivered his fourth lecture to the Society on

The Building up of National Life :—

The learned lecturer very eloquently spoke on his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour. He said that one of the chief factors that build up the national life is education ; and that without the proper spread of education among a people, there cannot be a sound national growth and development among them. There should be a great unity among a people, that they may attain to a sound national growth and development.

He spoke of commerce as a great means of enriching a nation and making them march along the path of progress, improvement, prosperity and civilization. He said that, intercourse with foreign nations is also greatly necessary to the progress and improvement of a people and that they should always try to keep abreast with the progress of the world at large and never lag behind.

He dwelt on the great necessity of reforming all social abuses, among a people, to form up a sound and healthy national life among them, as social abuses corrode into the very vital welfare of the society and become great bars and impediments to the progress, improvement and prosperity of the people.

He laid a great stress on a sound growth and development of the national character—as without it, no nation can rise. A healthy national character is the chief basis of a healthy national life.

After the lecturer had finished his speech, the Revd. Chairman spoke a few words on the subject. He thanked the lecturer, blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

Earnest E. Knight, M. A., Minister of the Union Chapel when Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bosu, the brilliant orator, scholar and poet-dramatist, delivered his fifth, lecture to the Society on :—

The Status of Woman in Human Society :—

The learned lecturer dwelt upon his subject for nearly an hour and was heard with deep interest. He said :—

Gentlemen :—what is the status of the woman in the human society? What place should she occupy in the world?—this question is one of the greatest and most burning questions of the day, at present.

It is needful that we should consider this great and important subject with a mind, free from all bias and prejudice and with the greatest sagacity and wisdom that we can command. It concerns the good and welfare of half of the human race. It concerns the very vital good and welfare of the whole human society.

In all things, we should consult, above all, the dictate of nature ; we should accord to all, the position in the society, which they, by nature, ought to occupy in it. any introversion of it, leads to disorder and chaos in the society and mars its progress, improvement and welfare.

The women should occupy that place and position in the human society, which they, by nature, should occupy in it. The women constitute a very great and important factor of the human society. They exercise a great influence over it. The progress and improvement of the human society is inseparably bound up with their progress and improvement, and if we want the proper progress and improvement of the human society, it is needful that we should accord to the women their proper place, position and station in the human society and all the rights and privileges, which they ought to enjoy.

The foolish theory, entertained by many persons, that the women are the born-slaves of the men and are designed by nature, for their sensual enjoyment and the merely menial, tasks of domestic life has been rejected as a foolish and non-sensical theory by the civilized world.

The women have, like the men, got moral and intellectual faculties, that, like those of the men, require a proper culture and development, and as the women constitute a very great and important factor of the human society and exercise a very great influence over it, it is very greatly needful that their minds should be properly educated and cultured. And that the influence, they would exercise over the human society, be a good, sound and salutary one and lead to the progress and improvement of the human society.

Suitable independent livelihoods should be provided for them and they should chiefly be employed in those tasks, which they are specially fitted, by nature, to perform. It is not desirable, that the women should, in all cases, have to depend on men, absolutely for their support and maintenance, but, the means, by which they can earn their livelihoods independently, should be opened up to them.

The women are specially fitted and designed by nature to perform those tasks, that should be done with softness, gentleness and delicacy and they should chiefly be employed in these tasks.

I do not think it desirable that the women, surrendering their natural softness, delicacy, gentleness and modesty, which adorn them so greatly and shed such a sweet and ennobling influence over the whole human society, as the soft and silvery rays of the moon shed such a sweet and charming beauty over the earth, should enter the political or the military world, that must be left to the sterner sex. They should enjoy those rights and privileges, which they are fitted and, designed by nature, to enjoy, and, if they be granted those rights, which they are not fitted by nature to enjoy, that would lead to their own harm and injury and confusion, disorder and chaos and harm in the whole human society.

In conclusion, I want to say, that men and women should live in harmonious union and co-operation with one another, as designed by nature, and fulfil their respective duties, in their respective stations in the world and would thereby lead to the gradual progress and After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, the Revd. Chairman spoke a few words on the subject. He thanked the lecturer, blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

A Deputation :—

A deputation of the Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, headed by Mr. Sham Lall Day, its Founder-Secretary, waited upon the Hon'ble Maharajah Manindra Chandra Nandi Bahadur of Cossimbazar, at his palatial residence, 203, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta, on Saturday, the 5th April, 1913, at 10-30 A.M., to congratulate the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Cossimbazar, on his well-merited election to the Imperial Legislative Council.

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur very courteously received the Members of the deputation.

Mr. Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, after having introduced to the Maharajah Bahadur the Members of the deputation, then read and submitted an Address of Congratulation, presented by the Society to the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur of Cossimbazar, to which the Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur made the following reply :—

"Gentlemen :—Allow me to thank you very sincerely for the Address, which you have presented to me and for your congratulations upon my election as an Additional Member of the Governor-General's Legislative Council."

"I associate myself with you in thanking the enlightened land-holders of Bengal, who have conferred this distinction upon me. Your references to my humble services to our literature and movements of public utility are far too flattering. But, I thank you for your generous appreciation." "In the Imperial Legislative Council, it will be my constant and earnest endeavour to do my duty to the Government and my country and countrymen. I thank you gentlemen, once again for your good wishes, which I heartily reciprocate."

The Hon'ble Maharajah Bahadur shook hands with the Members of the deputation.

The deputation then withdrew at 11 A.M.

(14). The fourteenth Public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held, with great clat, at the spacious compound of a garden-house, in Dakhineswar, (North of Baranagar, Calcutta), on Sunday, the 4th May, 1913, at 4-30 P.M., before a large and appreciative audience.

On the motion of Mr. Mahit Chandra Bose, M.A., B.L., Vakil, High Court, seconded by Mr. Satya Charan Ganguli, a retired sub-Judge, Roy Yataindra Nath Chowdhury Bahadur, M.A., B.L., Zemindar of Taki, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

On the Chairman's taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lall Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, welcomed the audience in a suitable speech.

The Chairman then asked His Holiness 108, Sri Jagat-Guru Shankaracharya Madhusudhan Tirtha Swami Maharaj of Goverdhan Math, Puri, to deliver His Holiness' first lecture to the Society on.

Dharma (Religion) :—

The venerable Sankaracharya very clearly explained his subject for nearly an hour and he was heard with rapt attention.

His Holiness began with a Sloka from Manu, thus:—

"Veda Smriti Sadachara aasyacha priyan Attama, Lakhanam."
Etat Chaturbidan Prantha Sakhyat Dharmashya

(i.e.,) Veda, Smriti, and Customs prevailing amongst the good men, and the satisfaction of one's own conscience.

His Holiness said :—that the latter three to be an authority, as Dharma must be consistent with the teachings of the Veda. Now the misfortune is that, our countrymen are, for the most part, ignorant of the teaching of the Vedas.

If we are to rise in the scale of nations, not to speak of our spiritual development, we should look backward upon the ideals, preached by our Munis and Rishis of old and doctrines promulgated by the sacred Vedas.

If we look to them, we shall find that there is nothing new and strange, observing in the different religions of the world, which we have not already got in our sacred

His Holiness continued that he would be the first to accept any religion, if it can be shown to him that,—the religion is either more perfect than the religion inculcate in the Vedas; or, it is superior to the Vedic religion.

He, on the other hand, is ready to meet any argument which may be put forward against the Vedic religion.

He exhorted all our countrymen to devote themselves to the study of the Vedas, or, to inform themselves of the Vedic religion, through the medium of the Smritis, Puran, Mahabharat, Ramayan, &c.

Regarding the Caste system, His Holiness said that there is nothing in it, which can be said to set one class against another. The four different castes, or, Varnas, were instituted, for the division of labour, intended for the purpose of the harmonious growth and development of the social organisation of the Hindus.

In fact, his illustration that the four castes are merely four brothers in one family, for the better performance of the duties of the family touched the heart of every one present.

His Holiness concluded his learned and impressive speech, with a blessing for all and a prayer to the Almighty God, for raising the Hindu Nation both spiritual and in mundane affairs.

After His Holiness had finished his speech, the Chairman rose and spoke a few words on the subject.

He said, the name of Bhagaban Sri Sankaracharya is not to conjure with amongst the Hindus. The great mission of Sankaracharya's holy life was to re-establish the Vedic religion, amongst the Hindus, whose faith in it was rudely shaken by typified, by the fact that when he, after finishing his Brahmacharyya Asram, would return to Grihasthasram, his Guru asked of him, by way of Dakshin, to devote his life to re-establish the Vaidic Dharma amongst the Hindus.

The worthy disciple accepted the requests of his Guru, and since then, he made the re-establishment of the Vaidic Dharma in India,—his whole life work.

He was such a mighty champion of true theism, (which is only another word for Vaidic Dharma), that he straight went to the place, where was any semblance of Atheism, to dispute it and to eradicate it—because, he believed that there was nothing more injurious to humanity than a belief in Atheism. Well, it is that the Hindus unanimously accept Bhagaban Sri Sankaracharya, as an incarnation of God.

It is worthy of his modern representative. His Holiness 108 Sri Jagat-Guru Sankaracharya Madhu Sudan Tirth Swami Maharaj of Gobardhan Math, Puri, that he should claim before the world that, he is always ready to meet arguments against Vaidic religion. His Holiness' catholicity is proved by his readiness to accept any religion, which can be proved superior to the Vaidic one.

It would be most unfortunate for us, if we deny ourselves the opportunity of acquainting ourselves with the Vaidic Dharma and, having our doubts, therefore removed, by placing ourselves at the feet of spiritual leaders, like His Holiness Sri Sankaracharya of Gobardhan Math, Puri.

The Chairman, in conclusion, humbly expressed the general feeling of the Meeting, that they were all very grateful for the great condescension on the part of His Holiness to come there and instruct them, as the spiritual duties.

The Meeting dissolved with vote of thanks to the chair and the venerable lecturer, at about 7 P.M.

(Vide, The Amrita Bazar Patrika, 6th and The India Mirror 7th May, 1913.)

(15). The fifteenth Public Meeting, for the thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held in Beadon Square Park Beadon Square, on Saturday, the 24th, May, 1913, at 6 A.M.

On the motion of Mr. Sarada Charan Ghose, seconded by Mr. Sham Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, Rai Bahadur Baikuntha Nath Basu, ex-Dewan of His Majesty's Mint, in Calcutta, was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

Mr. Sham Lall Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last year's Empire Day Meeting, held in Chowringhee Maidan, on Friday, the 24th, May, 1912, at 7 A.M., addressed the assembly thus :—

the blessings of God, on this—the auspicious Empire Day. May God preserve for ever Their Most Excellent and Imperial Majesties The King-Emperor and The Queen-Empress of India and shower His choicest blessings on Their Imperial Majesties and the people of India. (Cheers)

The Chairman then called upon Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bosu, the brilliant orator, scholar and poet-dramatist, to speak a few words, suitable to the occasion. Mr. Bosu then rose and made the following speech:—

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen:—we assemble here, this morning, to commemorate the Empire Day—the Birthday of Her Most Gracious Majesty The late Queen Victoria—The good.

It is with very great delight that we perform the pleasant task this morning. The late Queen Victoria—The Good justly surnamed The Good, commanded the universal love, respect and regard of the entire people of India, high or low, rich or poor and when Her late Majesty breathed her last, we all remember the deep, sincere and unfeigned sorrow that broke out from all over India,—from palace and cottage alike, at the bereavement of their dear and beloved Sovereign, who, by her manifold good, kind and benevolent acts, won the hearts of the people of India.

To a sovereign, the greatest honor that can accrue to him is the love and regard of his subjects and Her late Imperial Majesty Queen Victoria—The Good enjoyed that high honor to the fullest extent.

The people of India are a most loyal people and they look upon their Sovereign, as the representative on earth of the gracious God, and, on manifold occasions, they have displayed their great loyalty to the British Throne and bravely stood by it, amidst its dangers and difficulties.

Let us now pray to the Almighty God, to shower down His choicest blessings upon our beloved King-Emperor George V. and upon his beloved consort Queen Mary and may Their Majesties, following the noble example of the illustrious Queen Victoria—The Good, win more and more the love and regard of their Indian subjects. (Cheers)

We also offer our hearty prayers to the gracious God that His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron Hardinge of Penhurst, P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., G.C.B., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., I.S.O., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, has recovered from the unhappy mishap of the atrocious outrage at Delhi, and resumed his high duties amidst the love and respect of the entire people of India. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that the Calcutta Literary Society has been celebrating the Empire Day, since the foundation of it and we hope that this Society may continue to celebrate this day from year to year. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting thus.—“Gentlemen, we have met here this morning to celebrate the Empire Day, which has rightly come to be associated with the Birthday of Queen Victoria—The Good. Her most lamented death has removed from the list of our holidays—a holiday, so long known as the Queen's Birthday and latterly as the Empress' Birthday—a holiday, which had been enjoyed successively by nearly four generations of her loyal subjects, throughout her Dominions all over the world.

It was a happy idea of Lord Meath's to suggest the celebration of this day as the Empire Day, for the expansion of the British Empire into its present dimensions took place during the exceptionally brilliant and beneficent reign of that august Sovereign and the people, on whose will this Empire is broad based, are expected to celebrate the day, in a befitting manner. (Cheers.)

Lord Meath has done a great deal to popularise the movement in England and the Colonies. I have read some of the tracts and catechisms, which have been published by him, for introduction into schools, to enable the young students to realise the vastness of the Empire and the part it has played and is yet destined to play, in moulding and guiding the thoughts of the world at large, in enlarging the domains of literature, arts and science and in advancing the cause of civilisation and humanity.

I remember, Maharajah Sir Pradyot Kumar Tagore Bahadur, Kt., celebrated, the day, at his ancestral temple at Mulajore, on two occasions. On one of these, a Regimental

I am not aware of the continuance of the celebration by the Maharajah Bahadur, or of the celebration of the day by any other noble man or any society, in this—the second city of the Empire, excepting the Calcutta Literary Society which has been regularly observing the day, in its humble and loyal way. (Cheers.)

May all peace and prosperity attend the Empire and may it continue for centuries and centuries in all its glory and integrity—is the heart-felt prayer of all, who have the pride and privilege of being its Members.

The Meeting then terminated, with a vote of thanks to the chair.

(Vide, The Amrita Bazar Patrika, 26th and the Bengalee, 29th May, 1913.)

(16). The sixteenth Public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held in Cornwallis' Square Park Cornwallis' Square, on Monday, the 26th May, 1913, at 4 A.M.

On the motion of Mr. Abinas Chandra Ghose, M.A. B.L. (late Deputy Examiner, Military Accounts Department), seconded by Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder Secretary to the Society, Rai Baikuntha Nath Basu Bahadur, (ex-Dewan of His Imperial Majesty's Mint, in Calcutta,) was voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

The Chairman, on taking his seat, addressed the assembly thus:—

Gentlemen, the object of this open-air Meeting, which is being held under the auspices of the Calcutta Literary Society, is to submit our loyal and respectful congratulations to Her Imperial Majesty Queen Mary of England and Empress of India, on the auspicious occasion of the Forty-seventh Anniversary of Her Most Gracious Majesty's Birthday. (Cheers.)

Apart from the fact of Her Majesty's being the consort of the reigning sovereign, Her Majesty has established a special claim on our regard, by giving the people of this country, an opportunity of meeting her face to face.

Empress Mary is the First Queen of England, who has visited India. As a matter of fact, Her Majesty came to India twice—once as Princess of Wales and once again as Empress of India. On both the occasions, Her Majesty gave ample proof of her affection for the Indian people and specially for Indian women, whom she invariably addressed as her beloved sisters. (Cheers.)

Even in Her Majesty's Coronation robes, Indian art and Indian materials formed a distinctive feature. Those, who had the privilege of coming in personal contact with her here, were struck with her amiability and simplicity of manners.

Shortly after landing in Bombay, in December, 1911, Her Majesty visited an Exhibition, among the exhibits of which were the portraits of herself and the Emperor. These portraits were not very faithful reproductions of the original. Looking at her own picture, she asked the Lady-in-Waiting, who stood by her:—“Do I look like that?” How simple, how expressive, and how in offensive that remark was!

Again, when Her Majesty visited the Botanical Gardens at Sibpur, in January, 1912, she asked the Superintendent why no general visitors were walking about. On receiving the reply, that they had been kept out in view of Her Majesty's visit, she told him in a tone of bitter disappointment:—“You have spoilt my day”. This remark meant that she had looked forward to the pleasure of mixing with the people freely and conversing with them in an unconventional way. Although, as Queen of England, she rolls in wealth, she is known to keep a vigilant eye in house-hold affairs and do her best to check extravagance and waste. Her Majesty spends a good part of the day over her correspondence and in the rearing and management of her children.

Her Majesty's sociability is not incompatible with her sense of dignity or duty and her strictness with kindness of heart. A devoted wife, an affectionate mother, a forgiving mistress, a popular personality, in court and in society at large, Her Majesty is the queenliest of women and the womanliest of queens. I am glad to state that the Calcutta Literary Society has regularly been observing the day in its humble and loyal way. (Cheers.)

Illustrious lord, continue, for many many years to come, to rule the heart of the millions, who come under their sway, is—I am sure, the heartfelt prayer of all, who are in Meeting assembled here. (Cheers.)

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, then read the proceedings of the last year's Queen's Birthday Meeting, convened by the Society, in Chowringhee Maidan, on the 26th May, 1912, at 6.30 A.M.

A Message of Congratulation was then forwarded to Her Imperial Majesty Queen Mary of England and Empress of India, to which the following gracious message was received:—

Buckingham Palace.
26th May, 1912.

"The Private Secretary to The Queen is commanded to thank the Calcutta Literary Society for their kind message of congratulation upon the occasion of Her Majesty's birthday".

The Founder-Secretary,

Calcutta Literary Society,

24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta, India.

The Chairman then called upon Mr. Profulla Kumar Basu, the brilliant orator, scholar and poet-dramatist, to address the Meeting.

Mr. Basu then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting thus:—

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen:—We assemble here to-day, to celebrate the Forty-seventh Anniversary Birthday of Her Imperial Majesty Queen Mary of England and Empress of India,—the blessed consort of His Most Gracious Majesty George V., King-Emperor of India. It is a pleasant task that we have to perform this morning. (Cheers.)

When Their Imperial Majesties travelled in India, in 1911-12, we all know the deep and sincere loyalty that the ever-loyal people of India displayed on that memorable occasion. The people of India are deeply loyal in their hearts and they regard their present beloved Sovereign and his beloved consort with the deepest love, respect and regard.

They highly admire and respect the many great and good qualities of the heart, which Her Imperial Majesty displayed during her tour in India and they would always think with love and affection on the happy event of Their Imperial Majesties' sojourn among them and pray to God for their welfare and happiness. (Cheers.)

May Her Majesty Queen Mary, like her illustrious mother-in-law, the late Queen Victoria—The Good, justly surnamed The Good, for the many great and good qualities of her heart, shine forth more and more, in her goodness and kindness and other great and good qualities of her heart and may Provident grant her a long life and peace, welfare and happiness. (Cheers.)

It is a matter of great satisfaction to us to find that the Calcutta Literary Society only celebrates this auspicious event, year after year, and we sincerely pray to God that it would continue to celebrate it from year to year. (Cheers.)

The Meeting then separated with a vote of thanks to the chair, proposed by Mr. Jyotish Chandra Mitra and carried by acclamation.

(Vide, The Indian Mirror, 28th May, 1913)

(17). To celebrate the Forty-ninth Anniversary Birthday of His Imperial Majesty King George V. of England and Emperor of India, the Calcutta Literary Society convened its seventeenth Public Meeting, for its Thirty-eighth session, (as in previous years), in College Square Park, College Square, on Tuesday, the 3rd. June, 1913, at 6.30 A.M., under the presidency of Rai Bahadur Baikunth Nath Basu, (ex-Dewan of His Imperial Majesty's Court, in Calcutta.)

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last year's congratulatory Open-air Meeting, convened by the Society, in Chowringhee Maidan, on Monday, the 3rd June, 1912, in honor of the Forty-eighth Anniversary of the Birthday of His Majesty King George V. of England and Emperor of India, addressed the assembly thus:—

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen:—We assemble here to-day to celebrate the Forty-ninth Anniversary Birthday of His Majesty King George V. of England and Emperor of India, and to pray to the

It is Divinity, which headeth the body of a King-Emperor, whose tradition has come down to us from generation and we have great regard and love on His Imperial Majesty King George V. of England and Emperor of India (Cheers.)

It is, because, His Majesty is an illustrious son and heir of our late beloved King-Emperor Edward VII, who ruled over us with a grace, peculiar to His Majesty. We are all well aware that His Majesty represents a Royal House, whose like is not to be found elsewhere. (Cheers.)

The Indian people are always distinguished for their loyalty and devotion to His Imperial Majesty's Throne. It is the tie of friend-ship that binds the two nations together, that makes us love each other, with a force peculiar to ourselves. It is loyalty and devotion to the Imperial Throne of England, that attaches us to a foreign people, who has made India what it is to-day.

No language can express our sincere attachment to the people of England. We owe to them all the blessings which we enjoy, with such ease and comfort. We have no doubt, that our attachment will increase from year to year, as we grow up in age and wisdom. (Cheers.)

Now, let us pray to God to pour forth His choicest blessings upon His Majesty King George V., His Majesty's beloved consort Queen Mary and all the Members of the Royal Family. (Cheers.)

May Their Imperial Majesties live long and continue to prosper, is the earnest prayer of this Literary Institution of Thirty-eight years standing. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked Mr. Profulla Kumar Basu the brilliant orator, scholar and poet-dramatist, to address the Meeting.

Mr. Bose then rose and spoke as follows:—

Gentlemen, we assemble here to-day, to perform a most pleasant function, viz:—the celebration of the Forty-ninth Anniversary of the Birthday of His Imperial Majesty George V., King of England and Emperor of India. (Cheers.)

This day is a day of great and universal rejoicings throughout the entire India and from every home in its fervent prayers are rising up to the Almighty Being from every loyal bosom, full of the deepest love and respect, for their dear and beloved sovereign, to shower down His choicest blessings upon the Emperor and prolong his life, that he may rule in peace and glory over his Indian subjects. (Cheers.)

We all know, the deep and profound loyalty that broke out so enthusiastically, from the hearts of his Indian subjects, when Their Majesties travelled in India.

It was a most happy thing that the King-Emperor came to India and showed himself to its loyal people, who thus had an opportunity of seeing their dear and beloved Sovereign, whom they love and regard so much. (Cheers.)

India is a most precious part of His Majesty's Dominions and it is needful that His Majesty should pay greater attention to and take a deeper interest in this country. Let there be a closer touch between the Imperial Throne, the Imperial country, England and India that would rebound both to the welfare of England and India and contribute to the progress and welfare of the entire British Empire. (Cheers.)

We all know the great good that resulted to India from His Majesty's visit to it and one of the greatest benefits, that the people of India had at that time was the great impetus that His Majesty gave to the noble cause of education in this country by commanding the Government of India to spend the magnificent sum of half a Crore of Rupees towards the education of His Majesty's Indian subjects. There should be, at present, a very wide education among the people of India. (Cheers.)

It is education that would bring home to the minds of the people of India, the manifold benefits and blessings of the British Government and unite them in a closer touch with the British Government. We all know how deeply grateful the people of India are to His Majesty, for this noble act, on his part, towards the cause of education among his Indian subjects. (Cheers.)

We say again that there is needful a closer touch between the Imperial Throne, the Imperial country England and India, that would help towards the better government of this country and make the people of

want to say, in this connection, that India ought to have some representatives of her in the Imperial Parliament to represent her interests there. (Cheers.)

In conclusion, we all pray to the Almighty God to grant our dear and beloved Sovereign King-Emperor George V., and his beloved consort Queen-Empress Mary, a long life, peace and happiness and we hope that the Calcutta Literary Society, which has been celebrating the Anniversary of the King-Emperor's Birthday every year, would continue to celebrate it from year to year. (Cheers.)

The lecture being over, the Chairman said:—

Gentlemen, at the instance of the Calcutta Literary Socy., we are met here this morning to celebrate, in our humble way, the Forty-ninth Anniversary of the Birthday of our beloved King-Emperor George V. (Cheers.)

For us, Hindus, to sermonise on loyalty, would be committing a ridiculous excess,—for loyalty is part and parcel of our constitution and we look upon our Sovereign at the embodiment of Divinity. To the generality of the Indian people, however, the British Sovereign was, until lately, an abstract idea. (Cheers.)

It was King George V., who rendered it possible for them to worship their Sovereign as a concrete, and I may add, an ideal personality. His Majesty's love for the Indian people was practically demonstrated by his coming to this country and giving them the opportunity of meeting him literally face to face.

Whether in Bombay, or in Delhi, or in Calcutta, His Majesty was seen to deliberately and slowly drive or ride close to the crowds, who hungered to have a close view of His Imperial Majesty's august person. And this His Majesty did, regardless of personal safety,—such was His Majesty's unbounded trust in his Indian subjects.

Amidst the rejoicings, unique as they were, with which His Majesty's advent to India, with his noble spouse, was associated, a feeling of anxiety coupled with a sense of responsibility, not less keen than that of the authorities, dominated the Indian people, who did not feel relieved, till they heard of Their Majesties' safe return to England.

Nothing, but the most intense affection for his Indian subjects could have induced His Majesty to undertake that risky and troublesome trip. That sympathy, which, His Majesty, as Prince of Wales, had said, should be the key-note of the Indian administration. (Cheers.)

He, as King-Emperor of India, has practically and uniformly evinced for His Majesty's Indian subjects. While troops are being paraded and salutes are being fired this morning, throughout His Majesty's vast Dominions, let us celebrate this joyous occasion with a united prayer to Heaven for His Majesty's long life, health and happiness and sing in the words of Henry Carey, the composer of the National Anthem.

"God save our Gracious King,
Long live our Noble King,
God save The King." (Cheers.)

Mr. Tej Chandra Bose, ex-Accountant, Military Works Department, Fort William, having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting came to a close, at 7-30 A.M.

(Vide, The Bengalee, 5th and The Indian Mirror, 6th June, 1913.)

(18) The Calcutta Literary Society celebrated the Fifty-sixth Anniversary of the Birthday of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron Charles Hardinge of Penshurst, P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., G.C.B., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., I.S.O., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, by convening its eighteenth Public Meeting, for its Thirty-eighth session, in College Square Park, College Square, on Friday, the 20th June, 1913, at 7-30 A.M., under the presidency of Mr. Mahamahapadhyaya Pandit Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhusan, M.A., Ph.D., M.R.A.S., F.A.S.B., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, and Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Syndicate of the University of Calcutta, &c.

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having explained the object of the Meeting, in a few well-chosen words, the venerable Chairman called upon Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bosu to address the Meeting.

Mr. Bosu very ably delivered a speech, suitable to the occasion and he was heard with rapt attention.

He said that all India is filled with the greatest joy and delight at the happy recovery of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, from the atrocious and dastardly outrage, that was perpetrated on His Excellency, just beyond the block-tower, in Chandey Chowk, Delhi, on Monday, the 23rd. December, 1912, and the resuming again by him of his high duties.

The happy recovery of His Excellency is to-day being commemorated by a very happy event; Viz:—the feeding of the children throughout India. He thanked Lady Hardinge for the great labour she has been taking for the feeding of the children in India, as in commemoration of her dear and beloved husband's speedy recovery and her motherly love and affection towards the Indian children, especially, towards the poor orphans.

He prayed that the remaining years of Lord Hardinge's Viceroyalty in India, would be attended with peace, happiness and prosperity. (Cheers.)

The Chairman Dr. Vidyabhusan then brought the proceedings to a close, by offering the sincere and respectful congratulations of the Meeting to Lord Hardinge, on his happy recovery and on his Anniversary of the Birthday. "Lord Hardinge," he said, "is a most sympathetic and liberal-hearted Viceroy, who has done much to ameliorate the condition on the teeming millions of India. It is, therefore, proper that we should express our respectful gratitude, by praying to the Almighty, for the long life of His Excellency, on this the most blessed day of his birth."

Mr. Nagendra Nath Mitra, ex-Deputy Magistrate and Collector, having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved.

Hundreds of beggars were then sumptuously fed by the Calcutta Literary Society, to commemorate the happy event. (Vide, The Empire, 21st June, 1913.)

(19) This Society convened its nineteenth Public Meeting for its Thirty-eighth session, in Chowringhee Maidan, on 22nd June, 1913, at 7 A. M., to commemorate the Second Anniversary of the Coronation of Their Most Excellent and Imperial Majesties King George V. and Queen Mary of England, Emperor and Empress of India, when congratulatory speeches, suitable to the occasion, were delivered by Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary and other Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, before a large and appreciative audience.

Prayers were also offered to pour the Heaven's choicest blessings on Their Imperial Majesties and the Members of the Royal Family for their long life, health, peace and prosperity.

In conclusion, alms were freely distributed to the poor, in celebration of that happy event.

(Vide, The Empire, 23rd June, 1913.)

(20) As in previous years, the Calcutta Literary Society convened its twentieth Public Meeting, for its Thirty-eighth session, in Beacon Square Park, Beacon Square, on Monday, the 1st. December, 1913, at 8 A. M., to celebrate the Seventieth Anniversary of the Birthday of Her Imperial Majesty Queen-Mother Alexandra of England, when Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bose addressed the Meeting, suitable to the occasion. He said:—

Gentlemen, It is with great delight that we assemble here this morning, on Monday, the 1st day of December, 1913, to commemorate the Seventieth Anniversary of the Birthday of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen-Mother Alexandra of England. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I am glad to inform you that the Calcutta Literary Society has been celebrating the Anniversary of the Birthday of Her Majesty Queen-Mother Alexandra every year, since Her Majesty became The Queen-Empress of India, in 1901, along with her late illustrious husband, H.M. King Edward VII., Emperor of India. We hope that the Society shall continue to celebrate this happy anniversary for many years to come, and we earnestly pray to God that He would give Her Majesty a long life, health, peace and happiness and that the Queen-Mother would be a solace to her illustrious son, our present beloved King George V., Emperor of India, who has, by his kindness of heart, generosity and high-mindedness, won the love and esteem of the people of this vast Indian Empire. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with a prayer.

(Vide, The Bengalee, 2nd December, 1913.)

(21) The twenty-first Public Meeting, for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held in Chowringhee Maidan, Chowringhee, on Friday, the 12th December 1913, at 7 A.M., to celebrate the First Anniversary of the Delhi Coronation Darbar, when Mr. Sham Lal Day the Founder and Secretary to the Society, spoke a few words on Loyalty.

(Vide, The Bengalee and The Indian Mirror, 16th December, 1913.)

(22) The twenty-second Public Meeting for the Thirty-eighth session of the Society, was held in Cornwallis' Square Park, Cornwallis' Square, on Tuesday, the 23rd December, 1913, at 5 P.M., to accord to His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron Charles Hardinge of Penshurst, P.C. G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., G.C.B., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., I.S.O., Viceroy and Governor-General of India and Lady Hardinge, the Society's most hearty and respectful greetings on Their Excellencies' first arrival in the Metropolis, since the abandonment of Calcutta, by the Government of India, when Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society delivered a speech, suitable to the occasion.

Gentlemen, I am glad to announce it to you that twenty-five illustrious personages of America, England and India have graciously been pleased to become Honorary Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, during the year 1913 (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the Society is founded specially upon the principle of strict adherence to the British Crown, and the Institution has thus been the means of bringing together the rulers and the ruled in one common platform. (Cheers.)

The grateful thanks of the Society are hereby given to the gentleman, who delivered lectures at its various Public Meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasions, as well as to those, who lent their hall for holding its various Public Meetings. (Cheers.)

The Society also records its appreciation to the kindness of the editors of English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their respective columns, to publish the proceedings of the Society's Meetings and other doings of the Institution, during the year under review (Cheers.)

The grateful thanks of the Institution are also hereby tendered to the donors and subscribers, who helped the Society, during the year 1913 (Cheers.)

To the Patrons, Members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligations, for their unabated interest in the welfare of this Literary Society of Thirty-nine years standing (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, whose fostering care the Institution has been able to complete the Thirty-eight years of its existence.

May God continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength to sustain in our work and cheer us at the time of our difficulties. (Cheers.)

The reading of the Report being over, the Chairman, in confirming it, addressed the assembly thus :—

Gentlemen :—You have done me an honour, by giving me the chair, this afternoon, to preside over the Thirty-eighth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, which I scarcely deserve.

If this work expresses any thing, it does display the nobility of your disposition, in encouraging an humble self like me, to actually deserve such honors, with deep dividence, therefore, I accept the high honor you so kindly bestowed upon me and hoping to be worthy of it. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I am very glad, indeed, to associate myself with the Calcutta Literary Society, which is one of the oldest educational Institutions in Bengal, and many men of letters and importance have associated themselves with it, and I wish this Literary Association every success, with all my heart. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen :—Our cordial thanks are also due to Sriji Sham Lal Day, the indefatigable worthy Secretary and Founder to the Society, for his trying his utmost to make the Calcutta Literary Society highly praiseworthy, since its foundation in 1875, or upwards of Thirty-eight years. (Cheers.)

With these few words, Gentlemen, I confirm the Thirty-eighth Annual Report of the Calcutta Literary Society, just read by its Founder and Secretary. (Cheers.)

I beg your leave now to ask Mr. Chandra Sekhar Shane, Barrister at law, to deliver his first lecture to the Society on :— Life After Death :—

Mr. Chandra S-khar Shane, Barrister-at-law, then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the Meeting for nearly three-quarters of an hour. He said that "constant remembrance of the fact that our physical body, with which we generally identify ourselves, is bound to be disintegrated, in course of time, tends to keep one away from many improper acts."

The word Death is a misnomer, as there can never be anything like destruction, or annihilation, in the universe. Every form is only undergoing change in appearance, the life within being changeless and eternal."

"After so-called death, the ego or self leaves the physical body and goes to the astral world in a suitable subtle body, where, after a stay of certain period of time, marches on to the spirit-world."

"Heaven and hell are not localities, but conditions of existence and consciousness. The so-called hells are on the lowest subplanes of the Astral plane." "The Roman Catholics call that state purgatory. The heaven-world is a condition of perfect bliss, nothing unpleasant can approach that state of existence. Those who have sat loosely on things of earth and done unselfish deeds, are entitled to enjoy heaven for a very considerable period."

"After having enjoyed heaven, the ego or self gradually comes down again to re-incarnate on earth to enjoy and suffer for their past deeds in the objective world."

"From the above facts, it is manifest that what we generally call death, is mere change of condition. Life after death is more vivid and real than the one we enjoy in the physical body."

"After departure from the physical world, we become lighter and more free, and our consciousness becomes much keener. We should, therefore, rather rejoice than mourn for our departed friends."

"Another pleasant fact we should bear in mind, that we shall meet all our so-called dead relatives and friends on the higher planes and enjoy their company to our heart's content." (Cheers.)

After the learned lecturer had finished his speech, the Chairman asked Mr. Hari Mahan Banerjee, to speak a few words on the subject."

Mr. Banerjee spoke a few words on the subject for nearly a quarter of an hour and he was heard with rapt attention.

Kumar Panchanan Mukhopadhyay, Bahadur I.Sc.O., &c then thanked the day's speaker and about a few touching words about Salvation the most important stage of life after death. He addressed the Meeting thus, Gentlemen :—

"Good actions tend inevitably to proper reward at the hands of God. Our ancestors, the Rishis of old, gave themselves up to devotional exercises, with a view in obtaining salvation and freeing themselves from the trammels of desires."

"Gentlemen, God is possible of attainment even in this world and salvation is but another name for the attainment of God. The dispensation of God, with regard to man, is a just and there is no element of defect or partiality in it."

"The rich may enjoy all the good things of the world and have enough and to spare of the world's luxuries, but, the poor are privileged to enjoy a peace of mind, tranquility of soul, equanimity of spirits and consequent happiness, which the rich may well envy."

"Gentlemen, I have been to many places and have come in contact with the highest personages in the land and I found that the so-called poor are really happier than the Maharajahs or other territorial magnates."

"This fact has been testified to by the Maharajah themselves, who have said that there is more happiness in the true sense of the term, in the meanest cottage than in the prandest castle."

"Gentlemen, God is impartial and deals out rewards and punishments according to the Karma done by man. The results of good actions are earned by our own efforts and what we sow, we are bound to reap. Under such circumstances, it were idle to find fault with the dispensation of God. God's reward to man, out of His boundless mercy is nothing but salvation, whereas the pleasure or pain that we feel in life, is the outcome of our own deeds. God's mercy alone admits us to the privilege of salvation.

"Gentlemen, let us, therefore, consecrate our efforts to make ourselves worthy of this sublime privilege, let us try to free ourselves from the bondage of the world, so that the mercy of God may descend upon us and save us from the pain incidental to birth and life." (Cheers.)

"Let us be up and doing to regulate our lives, according to the glorious ideal of religion, implicitly obey the mandates of God in our everyday life, submit ourselves totally to the will of Providence, so that, we may be admitted to God's mercy and have the privilege of beatific vision and living in the bosom of God, which no human words can adequately describe."

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair (Vide, The Statesman and The Indian Mirror, 14th and The Amrita Bazar Patrika, 5th January, 1913.)

Born, Thursday, 1st. December, 1853.

SHORT BIOGRAPHICAL ANECDOTES
OF
Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur, MILLIONAIRE, ZEMINDAR, ETC.

The Millionaire Mullick Family of Chorebagan, Calcutta, has now three grandsons of the late Rajah Rajendro Mullick Bahadur, whose name has been made memorable by his Princely Endowment, for the daily feeding of a large number of poor, without distinction of caste, color or creed, viz. :—

- (1) Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur, son of the late Kumar Debendro Mullick Bahadur,
- (2) Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur, son of the late Kumar Girindro Mullick Bahadur,
- (3) Kumar Ganendro Mullick Bahadur, son of the late Kumar Surendro Mullick Bahadur.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur is the present head of the family. He was born on Thursday, the 1st December, 1853, and is now sixty-two years of age. He received his education first at the Government Sanskrit College, Calcutta, where he completed his course of studies at the age of sixteen years, and, having passed the Entrance Examination of the Calcutta University, he joined the Presidency College, Calcutta, and there he studied for four years. Then he prosecuted his studies privately, under some distinguished Professor for several years.

During his College career, he showed signs of sterling merit, and by his assiduity in his studies, and frank and generous bearing, he won for himself the love and respect of his fellow-students and the admiration of his Professors, with whom he was a great favorite.

His thirst for acquiring knowledge is so intense, that he is very often seen pouring over the works of great authors and he has gained thereby a fair knowledge on diverse subjects, especially, in literature, art, and natural History.

Like his illustrious father, Kumar Debendro Mullick Bahadur, he is proficient in English and Sanskrit, and has an inherited taste for art, which, as master-passion of his life, has enabled him to enrich the Art Gallery of his princely house, which is one of the best that can be seen in India, and the menagerie, which is one of the notable sights of Calcutta.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur, with the help of his two esteemed brothers, Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur and Kumar Ganendro Mullick Bahadur, has accomplished what his illustrious forefathers began, and, by dint of great labor and at enormous expense of both money and time, has succeeded in adding considerably to the vast collections of Art in the rooms, halls and galleries of their mansion, which is known by the name of Mullick's Marble Palace, and, with considerable trouble, he has also catalogued the whole collection for easy reference of visitors.

Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Minto honored the magnificent Marble Palace of Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur with their kind visit on Saturday, the 26th March, 1910. Their Excellencies spent a couple of hours in going round the various halls and corridors of the mansion and its twelve acres of ground, stocked with a gallery of marble and bronze statues, classical, mythical and heraldic.

Their Excellencies were immensely delighted with what they saw, and, having congratulated Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur, on being the proud possessor of this valuable collection, which the Viceroy pronounced to be truly a most wonderful one, Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Minto were pleased to send their autographed Photos, with permission to be kept in the hall as a memento of their visit.

Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Hardinge also paid a visit to the Marble Palace, on Monday, the 4th March, 1912, on the occasion of the marriage ceremony of a nephew of Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur.

Their Excellencies were shown round the galleries by their hosts, and, on leaving, expressed their high appreciation of the valuable Art collection they had inspected, and, besides Their Excellencies were pleased to send their autographed photos, as a present to the Kumar Bahadur.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur has inherited all the noble qualities of his great ancestors, and he worthily continues their princely liberality and charity. His natural talents and accomplishments are of a very high order, and, in his heart-felt loyalty and devotion to His Most Excellent Majesty, The King-Emperor of India, he unswervingly follows the traditions of his illustrious House. He fulfilled his religious obligations in the Orthodox way.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur has given a considerable attention to public life. He is the President of the Subarna-Banik Samity, the Vice-President of the Bow Bazar Art School, one of the Trustees and Vice-Presidents of the British Indian Association, and a Member of the Executive Committee of that body, a Member of the District Charitable Society and various other institutions of public benefit.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur is a man of spotless character and piously devoted to his own Hindu Religion. In private life, the Kumar Bahadur is a model of what a man in his high position ought to be. His amiability, gentleness, intelligence and particularly, his noted urbanity have made him a general favourite. Owing to his social position, Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur is recognised as the Dalapati, or the head of a large number of families of his own caste. In short, he is a man of exemplary character.

He is held in an honour by the entire Hindu Community and his example of plain living, high thinking and deeds of constant beneficence and charity are worthy of imitation.

In recognition of his munificence and charity, he was awarded a Coronation Medal at the Delhi Durbar of 1912.

The poor and destitute of all castes of Calcutta and its neighbourhood attend daily in large number at the Mullick's Marble Palace, in Chorebagan, to receive the family bounty.

Although the Will of the late Rajah Rajendro Mullick bahadur provides for the feeding of five hundred people daily, yet, the number has now run to nearly one thousand souls daily, as will be seen from the statement given below, for the Bengali year 1320, viz. :—

Baisak	29,126
Jaistha	30,263
Asharh	31,613
Sraban	30,860
Bhadra	31,013
Ashvin	30,898
Kartik	29,712
Aghran	27,974
Poush	27,043
Magh	29,330
Falgun	29,040
Chaitra	26,202
Total	3,53,074

On religious occasions, or at times of famines, and other emergencies, there is no limit to this laudable dole, when the number exceeds one thousand. For, whoever comes, is never disappointed.

The considerable increase beyond the provision of the Will, is purely due to the profuse liberality of Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur, the present head of the family, who really feels for the poor in these days of scarcity and hardship.

Mullick's Marble Palace is situated in the congested part of the city. The people of that quarter felt the want of a park. To remove this keenly-felt want of the people, Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur acquired twenty bigahs of land at an enormous cost of over ten lakhs of rupees and converted the whole plot into an open park, with a garden for the use of the public.

Mr. Greer, the then Chairman of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation, inspected the Park, on Friday, the 15th July, 1902, and was good enough to fix a moderate tax on this plot, as it has been set apart by the Kumar Bahadur, for the use of the public, as a place of recreation.

The Kumar Bahadur has been doing a great service to the Bengali Community by his practical efforts to induce young Bengalis to pay due regard to physical culture.

He has formed an Athletic Club, now known as the Star Athletic Club, for the purpose of fostering the development of physical culture amongst the members, by the introduction of cricket, hockey, football, tennis, badminton, etc.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur maintains nice play-grounds in the park of his Palace for the use of the Star Athletic Club, as well as for others. Besides, Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur has acquired a play-ground in the Calcutta Maidan, Chowringhee, with a view to bring the Star Athletic Club, into close touch with other Clubs and thereby to improve his own.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur has also erected a nice building on the west side of the Park, at a cost of about Thirty thousand Rupees, for a library, for the use of the public, and has instituted a Debating Club, for intellectual and spiritual amelioration of younger generations.

For the convenience of the public, the Marble Palace, or, the Art Gallery, is kept open daily from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M., when visitors from every quarter of the globe are most cordially received.

Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur contributes the amount, detailed below, to the following charitable societies ; viz. :—

Widows and Orphans and other persons deserving charities	...	Rs. 500 monthly.
District Charitable Society 100 ..
Mayo Native Hospital 100 yearly.
British Indian Association 100 ..
Calcutta Nurses Institution 32 ..
Little Sisters of the Poor 32 ..
Calcutta Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals 24 ..
For feeding the poor, at Belur Math 50 ..
Marriage Fund of the Subarna Banik Samaj 120 ..
Srikishna Goshala Gorakhani Sava 14 ..
Gorakhini Sava 12 ..

Besides these, Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur has made several donations for the benefit of the public, when required.

Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur, son of the late Kumar Girindro Mullick Bahadur, was born on Wednesday, the 15th September, 1875. He received his education first in the Hindu School, Calcutta, where he completed his course of studies and then his education was continued, under the supervision of some distinguished Graduates of the University of Calcutta.

Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur is possessed, from his very boyhood, of deep spiritual thoughts and these have been the guiding principles of his life, even in the management of his temporal affairs.

He is strongly attached to the faith of his ancestors, viz. :—Vaishnavism. He has devoted himself heart and soul as a Hindu to the realisation of that Supreme Truth, which was pronounced and promulgated, say about four hundred and fifty years ago—by Chaitannya, the great seer of Nadia, has received a sound religious education, and he, it is hoped, will, in the fulness of time, prove a worthy son of worthy father. He performs religious duties, in accordance with the injunctions of the SHASTRAS.

From his boyhood, Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur is charitably disposed, and many instances of his kindness of heart are narrated by his class-mates. He is by disposition extremely courteous, kind and liberal.

Most of the charities of Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur are of a private character, in which respect, he follows the Scriptural teaching of—not letting the left hand know what the right hand doeth. He is a staunch supporter and the President of the Star Athletic Club, and the Secretary of the Indian Sangit Samaj.

In recognition of his liberality, and charity, Kumar Brejendro Mullick Bahadur was awarded a Coronation Medal at the Delhi Durbar of 1912.

Kumar Ganendra Mullick Bahadur, son of the late Kumar Surendro Mullick Bahadur, was born on Sunday, the 16th June, 1876. He was educated in the Hindu School, Calcutta, and having completed his course of studies there, he continued his studies privately, for some years, under the supervision of some distinguished Graduates of the Calcutta University.

He is a young man of considerable taste and culture and is an enthusiastic lover of fine arts. He has acquired considerable skill in painting and is as clever as a sculptor.

He is a pleasing, well-educated energetic young man of thirty-nine years of age, having a good knowledge of practical engineering and surveying. He is a good all-round athletic, indulging in all kinds of manly sports. He has a keen insight into fine arts and it is purely due to his unwearied exertions the stock of the Art treasury of the Marble Palace is increasing day by day.

In recognition of his liberality and charity, which are the characteristics of the family to which he belongs, Kumar Ganendro Mullick Bahadur was awarded a Coronation Medal, at the Delhi Durbar of 1912.

The three brothers, Kumar Nogendro Mullick Bahadur, Kumar Brojendro Mullick Bahadur and Kumar Ganendro Mullick Bahadur have one son each, viz. :—Kumar Jitendro Mullick, Kumar Dinendro Mullick and Kumar Gopendro Mullick, respectively.

The family holds vast properties in Calcutta as well as in the suburbs.

Municipal taxes for the Calcutta properties and outside, amount to Rupees Forty-five thousand, four hundred and two, annas eleven, and Government revenue for the same, amount to Rupees three hundred and seventy-four, fourteen annas and five pies, per annum.

Government have been pleased to grant twelve retainers in the family, who are exempted from the Arms Act.

May God bless the Kumar Bahadur and his happy family with long life, health, peace and prosperity.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, in seconding the proposal, addressed the meeting thus:—

"Your Highness, Maharajah Bahadur, Rajah Bahadurs, Rai Bahadurs, Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have much pleasure to second the motion proposed by my young and esteemed friend Kumar Sree Panchanan Mukhopadhyay, I.Sc.O., I feel both pride and pleasure in associating myself with this motion for more reasons than one.

"First, I consider it a great pleasure to respond to the request of my friend, the young hopeful of Uttarpara, and, second, I consider it a pride and honor to welcome the distinguished Lady President, Her Highness The Princess Maharani Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal, who, by her nobility, benevolence, philanthropy, kindness and amiability, has won the heart of her fellow-countrymen and countrywomen throughout the length and breadth of India. (Cheers.)

"It is a significant fact of the rapid stride India is making for her moral and intellectual evolution that a lady of royal and reigning family of India has condescended to take the chair at this—the Thirty-ninth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. (Cheers.)

"This day thirty-nine years ago, or even I should say, ten years ago, this was an impossible sight. But, thanks to the progress India has made under British rule, the distinction not only of race and creed, amongst the people of this glorious land of Aryavarta, but, even the distinction of sex, has been obliterated, and men and women, Brahmins and Sudras, Khatris and Kayasthas are all banded together to uplift this dear mother-land. I am sure, every one present will hail with acclamation the presidency of Her Highness the illustrious Princess Maharani Sree Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal, over this great gathering." (Cheers.)

On Her Highness taking the presidential chair, amidst shouts of joy, Bharat Ratna Rajah Sree Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyay, C.S.I., M.A., B.L., congratulated Her Highness in the following terms, viz.:—That he accorded Her Highness the Princess Maharani Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal a most cordial welcome on behalf of the Uttarpara family and the Calcutta Literary Society. It was a matter of very great pleasure that a noble lady like Her Highness the Princess, who was no less than the illustrious descendant of the distinguished Royal Family of Nepal, had been very kind to come over here to take the presidential chair. (Cheers.)

The Rajah Bahadur pointed out that it was rather by her life and deeds than by her high rank and status that Her Highness deserved their gratitude all the more. Her Highness' devotion to the many private and public acts of humanity, and the strong and unflinching moral principles of life and conduct, made her charming, and he deemed her presence ennobling and instructive. (Cheers.)

It was certainly one of the most auspicious of events, that a lady like herself would take the chair and the Rajah thought all present would join him in expressing their most sincere and heartfelt gratitude to the august and ennobling personality present before them. (Cheers.)

The following noblemen and gentlemen sent telegrams and letters of regret for their being unavoidably prevented from attending the meeting that afternoon, viz. :—

BHUT NATH PAUL

Gentlemen, we have assembled this afternoon to celebrate the Thirty-ninth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, and I beg to offer a hearty welcome to you all and to our members and friends, in particular, who have graced the assembly with their kind presence.

The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends—the advanced pupils of various educational institutions of the town, who were then associated with him in the work—in the very year when His late lamented Majesty Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India, (then His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales,) visited these shores, and to-day, we meet here to celebrate its Thirty-ninth Anniversary.

Gentlemen, I have the honor of being its Founder and Secretary, since its foundation in 1875, and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching onward in the path of progress ever since its foundation.

Gentlemen, the main objects of the Society are :—

(a) To hold friendly gatherings of both European and Indian communities.

(b) To discuss social, literary and scientific subjects.

The means hitherto adopted have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of all classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and, in this respect, the Society has now achieved a fair measure of success.

Not only lectures were delivered, but messages of congratulations and condolences were sent, from time to time, to high personages in India and England, to which gracious acknowledgments have duly been received.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of sincere congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period it has weathered many a storm.

We cannot let this opportunity slip away, without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of events, for His unusual kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

Gentlemen, I will not dwell at length on the work done by the Institution : the printed proceedings of its various public meetings, published in the leading local daily newspapers, for the last thirty-nine years, bear ample testimony to the same.

The Society has enrolled among its Patrons and Members the flower of the Eastern and Western communities.

I have now the honor of submitting to you a synoptical report of the transactions of the Society for the year 1914 :—

(1) As previously announced in the Bengalee, Amrita Bazar Patrika, etc., of the 1st January, 1914, the Thirty-eighth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, in the hall of the Aryya Mission Institution, 161, Mukhtaram Babu Street, on Saturday, the 3rd January, 1914, at 3 P.M., under the presidency of Kumar Sree Panchanan Mukhopadhyay Bahadur, I. sc.O. of Uttarpara Raj.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, having read the Thirty-eighth Annual Report of the Institution, (which was a record of all-round progress), and on its having been duly confirmed, the Chairman addressed the assembly thus :—

"Gentlemen, you have done me an honor in giving me the chair this afternoon to preside over the Thirty-eighth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society, which I scarcely deserve.

"If this work expresses any thing, it does display the nobility of your disposition, in encouraging an humble self like me, to actually deserve such honors. With deep diffidence, therefore, I accept the high honor you so kindly bestowed upon me, and hoping to be worthy of it. (Cheers.)

"I am very glad, indeed, to associate myself with the Calcutta Literary Society, one of the oldest institutions in Bengal, and to see many men of importance associated with it, and I heartily wish the Institution every success.

"Gentlemen, our cordial thanks are hereby due to Srijut Sham Lal Day, the indefatigable worthy Secretary and Founder of the Society, for his trying his utmost to make the Calcutta Literary Society highly praiseworthy since its foundation in 1875, or, upwards of thirty-eight years. (Cheers.)

"With these few words, gentlemen, I confirm the Thirty-eighth Annual Report of the Calcutta Literary Society, just read by its able Founder and Secretary." (Cheers.)

The Chairman then called upon Mr. Chandra Sekhar Shane, Barrister-at-Law, to deliver his first lecture to the Society on—Life after Death.

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly three quarters of an hour and he was listened to with interest.

The Chairman then addressed the meeting and the assembly dissolved with a vote of thanks to the chair.

Gentlemen, I am glad to announce to you that four illustrious personages have been pleased to become Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, during the year under review.

Gentlemen, the Society is founded especially upon the principle of strict adherence to the British Crown and the Institution has thus been the means of bringing together the rulers and the ruled on one common platform.

Now, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby submitted to Her Highness The Princess Maharani Sree Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal, to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its various public meetings, and to those, who presided on the occasions, as well as to those, who lent their halls for holding its various public meetings. (Cheers.)

The Society also records its appreciation of the kindness of the editors of English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their respective papers for publishing the proceedings of the Society's various public meetings and letters connected with the Institution, during the year under review.

The grateful thanks of the Institution are also hereby tendered to the donors and subscribers, who helped the Society during the year 1914. (Cheers.)

To the Patrons, Members, Friends and Well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the welfare of this Literary Society of Thirty-nine years standing, and to invite their attention to the fact that it has not yet secured a habitation of its own.

Gentlemen, let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, whose fostering care the Institution has been able to complete the Thirty-nine years of its existence. (Cheers.)

May God continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength to continue in our work, and cheer us at time of difficulty. (Cheers.)

The Lady President (Nepal Princess Tara Devi) then rose, amidst cheers, and addressed the assembly thus:—
Noblemen and Gentlemen,

I thank you most cordially for the great honor you have done me by asking me to take the chair at this Thirty-ninth Anniversary celebration meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. I feel honored, because, distinguished men have graced this occasion from time to time and occupied the chair.

Before addressing the assembly, I must say that the task which you have entrusted to me is a very heavy one. I say this with a heavy heart, because I know how much I could hope to perform such task creditably in the presence of you all, who represent the culture of the land.

The country which I belong to is famous for its achievements in the Sanskrit language, in the arts of armoury and is powerful in swordsmanship, indeed. But, gentlemen, knowledge is power and it is mightier than the sword itself.

Real knowledge can command everything in the world. In my humble view, English language is one of the richest languages of the world, by virtue of which one can have glimpses into the glorious literature of the English people as well as have a knowledge of the various sciences of the world.

In our country, there are neither Schools, Colleges nor Literary Societies for ladies to move in public life. Such institution have not as yet come into existence.

It is knowledge alone, which can improve the morality of the society we live in, and thereby it promotes the welfare of our fellow-beings.

To lead an ideal life, it behoves one to be humble, loyal, honest and religious. In our country the children, whether male or female, are taught these few moral precepts at the very outset of their education by their parents and guardians and the effect of their teachings uplifts even the hilly people in the beginning of their life.

Gentlemen, during my stay in this country,—the country which is the land of learning and which I have adopted as my home for the remaining days of my chequered life, I have been ushered into public life by friends who have indeed been very kind and considerate to me. I consider that there is no more worthy task to me—to a poor Hindu widow like myself in her advanced age, than to continue advising young people of this country like an old mother hailing from the Himalayas, those few simple moral teachings which have been instrumental in moulding my own life.

India is the land of learning and wisdom where great men have been born to uplift their fellow-beings. Saints and Sages roamed over this ancient land carrying messages of Salvation for mankind.

Gentlemen, you will pardon me for being much frank in my humble expressions before this learned assembly. But your kindness and indulgence encourage me and I am so happy to be in your midst, surrounded by brother-men as I am on all sides on this happy occasion.

I am grateful to my friend Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder and Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society, who is always earnest in carrying our loyal messages on behalf of the members of his society to the benign Ruler of India, and to our August Sovereign, for having given me this opportunity of coming before you this afternoon.

He has won the heart of one and all by the noble objects of his Society and by his indefatigable labours towards the attainment of a noble enterprise in trying to spread healthy views through this Society amongst people of all classes.

I am deeply grateful to the learned Bharat Ratna Rajah Bahadur Sree Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyaya, M.A., B.L., C.S.I., whose fame is wide spread and Kumar Sahib Panchanan Mukhopadhyaya, his worthy grandson, for the cordial reception accorded to me this afternoon.

My pleasure has been all the greater to have been in such noble company and to be able to meet the distinguished Rajah Bahadur of Santosh and the Hon'ble the Raj Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, son of Raj Kristodas Pal Bahadur, of revered memory, the respected Panditji Maharaj Haridev Sastry and my much-esteemed friend the Rev. Dr. Canon Brown and you all who have been so kind to me.

Gentlemen, it has touched my heart deeply to meet you all here and I once more thank you from the bottom of my heart for your kindness towards me this afternoon. (Cheers.)

Rajah Minmathi Nath Roy Chowdhury Bahadur of Santosh, in proposing the vote of thanks to the distinguished Lady President of the evening, then addressed the meeting for nearly a quarter of an hour. In the course of which he said that owing to an unfortunate accident in the way, he arrived late at the meeting. He deemed it a great privilege to be associated with the functions of the evening. He thanked Her Highness The Princess Maharani Sree Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal for kindly gracing the occasion with Her Highness' august presence and expressed great felicitation at the presence of Rajah Peary Mahan Mukhopadhyaya Bahadur, C.S.I., M.A., B.L., of Uttarpara—the patriarch of Bengal. (Cheers.)

The Rajah Bahadur expressed that the Calcutta Literary Society was a very old and useful Institution and doing splendidly very good work by its worthy and indefatigable Founder and Secretary Mr. Sham Lal Day. He was glad to be there and to be associated with its Thirty-ninth Anniversary General Meeting. He wished the Institution every success with all his heart. (Cheers.)

Raj Mahendra Chandra Lahiri Bahadur, M.A., Government Pleader of Serampur, in seconding the proposal, then addressed the assembly thus:—

"Your Highness, Maharajah Bahadur, Rajah Bahadur Ladies and Gentlemen:—I really feel not a little embarrassed at the request to speak, just made to me by Kumar Sri Panchanan Mukhopadhyaya, whose youthful zeal and many-sided activities I so greatly admire and whose steadfast devotion to duty I so fully appreciate.

My embarrassment, gentlemen, is due to the stubborn fact that it is no easy task for one, who is not a speaker in the strictest sense of the term, except, perhaps in his own element to offhand address to a brilliant assembly of light and leading like the present, presided over by no other than Her Highness the Princess Maharani Sree Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal.

"Nevertheless, I must make an endeavour to speak as best as I can, relying on the truth of the old saying—Out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh.

Gentlemen, we have just listened with rapt attention to the many splendid speeches and fortunately for me another speech will not perhaps be necessary. Suffice it to say then that we all rejoice at and glory in the presence in our midst of Her Highness, whose unbounded kindness to us we shall ever remember with feelings of gratitude we showed profited a good deal by her instructive speech fraught with so much importance to us from social and religious points of view, which ought to be brought home to all of us.

Uttarpara is particularly fortunate in view of this unique occasion, which is indeed a red-letter day in the history of this well-known town. With these few words, gentlemen, I have much pleasure in seconding the vote of thanks to the chair, so ably proposed by the Rajah Bahadur of Santosh. In commending it to your unanimous acceptance, I am confident it will be carried by acclamation. (Cheers.)

Dr. H. L. Ganguly, D.Sc.O., then read the Kumar Bahadur's paper on the—

Mighty Potentialities of the Thought World

He showed a few practical demonstrations on the above for nearly half an hour, which greatly pleased the audience.

The Hon'ble Raj Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, in supporting the resolution, addressed the meeting thus:—

Gentlemen, the vote of thanks could not be complete without associating with it the name of Rajah Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyaya, C.S.I., M.A., B.L. We are all grateful to him and his young hopeful, the amiable Kumar for celebrating the Thirty-ninth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society at Uttarpara with befitting éclat.

Ever fervent in all good work possessed of well-cultured mind always ready to promote and support all good institutions.

I congratulate the Founder and Secretary of the Calcutta Literary Society, Babu Sham Lal Day, on the good fortune of the Society. We all assembled here, not only the people of Uttarpara, Bally, Konnagar and Serampur, but, a good many have come from Calcutta, I am sure, I give expression to the sense of the meeting when I say that we have come here with such large number, not only to celebrate the Thirty-ninth Anniversary Meeting of the Society, and to welcome the illustrious Royal Lady of Nepal, Princess Tara Devi, but, to pay our respects also to Bharat-Ratna Rajah Peary Mohan Mukhopadhyaya Bahadur, the venerable Grand Old Man of Bengal. (Cheers.)

For nearly fifty years or so, he has worked unremittingly for the benefit of his fellow-countrymen. He is a zemindar, and, he is not only the fitting representative of the aristocracy of wealth, but, also of culture.

May he live long and guide by his wise counsels his countrymen in their onward career. I propose that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded to the Rajah Bahadur, and the Kumar for celebrating in a befitting manner the Thirty-ninth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society at Uttarpara. (Cheers.)

The vote of thanks was carried by acclamation.

Her Highness' presence was highly appreciated and she was photographed in the distinguished company.

The proceedings of the meeting closed after the singing of the National Anthem.

Nawabzada Syed Ashraf-ud-din Ahmad Khan Bahadur.

Matwali of Hooghli Imambara, since 1875, (or, for forty-one years).

Fellow of the University of Calcutta, Trustee of the Aligarh College, Honorary Magistrate of Hooghli, Secretary, Hooghli National Mahomedan Association,

Honorary Member of the Calcutta Literary Society, &c., &c., &c.,

Born Saturday, 6th January, 1855, and took charge of the Hooghli Imambara, in 1875.

History of the Grand Hooghly Imambara.

Imambada Syed Ashraf-ud-din Ahmed Khan Bahadur is the present Mutawali of the Hooghly Imambara. He was born on Saturday, the 6th January, 1855, and is the eldest son of the late Nawab Ameer Ali Khan Bahadur, C.I.E., who so much distinguished himself in several spheres of life. He was appointed as Mutawali by Government on the nomination of the late Syed Keramat Ali Sahib, (who was the recognised head of the Muhammadan community), on Friday, the 25th June, 1875. He took charge of the Imambara, in 1875. He is a Fellow of the University of Calcutta, a Trustee of the Agharkh College, an Honorary Magistrate, and Secretary, Hooghly National Mohammedan Association. His good services, in the public cause, have been much appreciated by the Government, and subsequently the Distinction of Khan Bahadur has been conferred on him. He is a quiet man, and he has been discharging his duties in a manner, which quite becomes the head of a religious Institution. He has one son and two daughters, and all of them are married. From his daughters' side, he has three grand-sons and two grand-daughters. His son is Sub-Registrar of Buxi, in Patna District. His youngest brother is the Hon'ble Mr. A. Ahmed, C.S., I.S.O., Commissioner of Excise and Salt and Inspector-General of Registration in Behar and Orissa. His other relatives are Sir Ali Imshuk C.S.I., the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Imam, and the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sherafuddin and several others.

During the rule of Murshid Kuli Khan, Governor of Bengal, a Persian merchant, named Aga Mohammed Mutahar, came down with his family and settled in Hooghly and purchased the site of the present Imambara. In 1717 A.D., he built thereon an ordinary one-storied house, which he dedicated to God, calling it Nazargah Hussain.

In 1735 A.D., his son-in-law, Mirza Saleh-ud-din, Mohammed Khan, (alias Mirza Saleh), extended the building, by adding a portion, which he termed Talea Khana. It was upon the ruins of this ordinary looking-house that the present grand edifice was erected. He was a good Persian Poet.

Aga Mohammed Mutahar, bequeathed his whole property to his only daughter, Mannoo Jan Khanum, to whom he was most tenderly attached. This Mannoo Jan Khanum was married to Mirza Sahib, the founder of Talea Khana.

The widow of Aga Mohammed Mutahar married Haji Faizulla, the nephew, (sister's son), of her late husband. She had only one son, by his second husband, and he was The Great Mohammed Moshin, the founder of the Imambara. He was born in 1732 A.D. Haji Faizulla died in 1818, after attaining a ripe old age.

Mohammed Moshin grew up under the fostering care of his mother. He was an intelligent boy and soon became well-educated in all the branches of study. He wrote a very good hand, a specimen of his hand-writing has carefully been preserved in the Hooghly College Library and which is highly praised by the Moulvis.

He had a taste for music and could play very well on the Sitar. He was also a good hand at the most attractive of the fine arts, that hath charms to soothe the savage heart. He seemed to find great pleasure in walking long distances and could dexterously play with the sword. His words were of the purest. He became a strict, religious man and was more an ascetic than a man of the world. Being of a contemplative turn of mind, he left his abode and set out on travels. His travels had a wide range, and included even Arabia. He thus acquired a valuable stock of knowledge, which could not have been got together by the mere study of books. The property of his affectionate sister Mannoo Jan Khanum was being looked after by her able husband.

He had an eager desire to pass his days in this way, but, on the sudden death of Mirza Saleh, the husband of Mannoo Jan Khanum, in 1754 A.D., his plans had to be changed, and, at the earnest request of Mannoo Jan Khanum, he had subsequently to return home, accompanied by two chosen friends, Rajab Ali Khan and Sakar Ali Khan, (the latter was the son-in-law of the former). His return was the occasion of great rejoicings amongst the inhabitants of the place. As for Mannoo Jan Khanum, her joy knew no bounds.

Mannoo Jan Khanum was an intelligent lady and she at once selected her brother, The Great Mohammed Moshin, as a worthy heir to this immense estate, and, accordingly, bequeathed her whole estate to him, as she had no nearer heir.

Soon after the death of this pious lady, The Great Mohammed Moshin became the sole owner of this vast property, but, he never cared to spend more money than was necessary for his maintenance in the most ordinary style.

In spite of this vast acquisition, he remained what he was—an intensely pious man. He had no heir or kinsmen to inherit his vast property and he made God and man his heirs. He, however, did not forget his two staunch friends, who had accompanied him from abroad, and appointed Rajab Ali Khan, (son of Shekh Mohammed Sahib), and Sakar Ali Khan, (son of Ahmed Khan), as Mutawalis, (trustees or supervisors), of the said endowed State.

The Great Mohammed Moshin has, by his educational benefactions, left his own imperishable monument in Bengal. To him Muslim Education is more indebted than to any other individual, living or dead.

The noblest building in Hooghly is its Imambara, with its splendid river-revetment. It is situated on the banks of the river and the view from the river Ganges, or from the roadway, is as imposing as the interior of the edifice is charming.

The late Babu Bholu Nath Chunder, author of Travels of a Hindu, wrote thus regarding the Imambara:—

"The courtyard is spacious and grand. The trough in the middle is a little-sized tank. The two storied buildings, all around, are neat and elegant. The great hall has a Royal magnificence. But, it is profusely adorned in Mahamedan taste, with chandeliers and lanterns and wall-shades of all the colours of the rain-bow. The surface of the walls is painted in blue and red inscriptions from the Koran. Nothing can be more gorgeous than the doors of the gateway. They are richly gilt all over, and upon them is inscribed, in golden letters, the date and history of the Musjeed."

But, this splendid Imambara, as it stands to-day, is not the one, which was built by The Great Mohammed Moshin.

The credit of the construction of the present day mansions is due to Syed Keramat Ali, the then Mutawali of the Imambara, who commenced the work in August 1845, and completed it in May 1848. The original estimate of costs of the building was Rupees two lacs and eighty-five thousands and the revetment Rs. 60,000 and the tower clock cost Rs. 11,721.

The deed, after giving some account of the founder and of the property, which formed the subject of the endowment, went on to state that the proceeds were to be divided into nine equal shares of which three shares were to be applied to the celebration of the Maharam, (the greatest festival among the Mahamedans), and other festivals and feasts and the repairs of the Imambara Buildings, and the cemetery, (which is situated in a garden adjoining the Hat), attached thereto.

Two-ninths to be allotted as remuneration of the two Mutawalis, appointed to supervise the affairs of the endowment, and the remaining four-ninths to be devoted to the expenses of the establishment and the pensions and allowances.

The Mutawalis were given ample powers, and it was also provided that, in the event of either of them finding himself unable to conduct the business of the endowment, he might appoint a fit and competent person to act in his place.

This deed of Endowment, the beneficial efforts of which are still enjoyed by the people, was executed on the 9th Baisakh, 1213 B.S., corresponding to Sunday, the 20th April, 1806 A.D., some six years before the death of the endower.

Learned man as he was, Mohammed Moshin was not slow in providing means for the education of others. He established a school, where Persian and Arabic were taught by two well-known Munshis. It was, of course, a free institution and was open both to Hindus and Mahamedans. Mohammed Moshin died on Sunday, the 29th November, 1812, A.D., after attaining his eightieth year.

The remains of The Great Mohammed Moshin were interred in the Imambara gardens, close to the tombs of Aga Mutahar, Haji Faizulla, Mannoo Jan Khanum and Mirza Saleh-ud-din. The Maktura is lighted every night and passages from the Koran are read morning and evening, for the spiritual benefit of the departed souls.

After his death, the two Mutawalis, appointed by him, continued to act in harmonious concert for some months. They established the Imambara School, which was afterwards amalgamated with the Hooghly College, in 1836 A.D. When proceedings of the Fortieth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held, with great eclat, at the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 4-3A., College Square, East., on Tuesday, the 4th January, 1916, at 4-30 p.m., under the presidency of Dr. Henry Stephen, M.A., D.D., Professor, Calcutta University.

(Vide, Empire, 5th, Bengalee and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7th January, 1916.)

The hall was handsomely decorated and the Meeting as very largely and influentially attended. The Members of the Society, the Graduates and under-Graduates of the Calcutta University and other gentlemen of the metropolis and suburbs composed the bulk of the audience. Bouquets of beautiful flowers were placed upon the Chairman's table.

On the motion of Mr. Sudhindra Nath Tagore, Zeminar and Vakil of the High Court, and seconded by Kavaraj Prasad Sen, Vidyabenada, land-holder, etc., Dr. Henry Stephen, M.A., D.D., Professor, Calcutta University, is voted to the chair, amidst cheers.

On the venerable Chairman taking his seat, Mr. Radham Dutt entertained the audience with a welcome song. The Chairman was then garlanded amidst deafening cheers. Mr. Kali Prasanna Pyne, Publisher, Kuru-Pandava Ghini, then read a Bengali Poem composed by him, in honor of the Chairman, which was greatly appreciated.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder of and Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, then addressed the Meeting thus:

Address by the Founder Secretary to the Society:—

Gentlemen, we have assembled here this afternoon to celebrate the Fortieth Anniversary General Meeting of Calcutta Literary Society and I beg to offer a hearty welcome to you all and to our patrons, members and friends in particular, who have graced the assembly with their presence.

The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-five by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends—the advanced pupils of various educational institutions of the city—who were then associated with him in the work in the very year when His late Majesty Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India, (then His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales), visited these shores and to-day we meet here to celebrate its Fortieth Anniversary.

Gentlemen, I have the honour of being its Founder Secretary since its foundation in 1875 and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching

Gentlemen, the main objects of the Society are :—

- (a) To hold friendly gathering of members of both European and Indian communities.
- (b) To discuss literary, scientific and social subjects.

The means hitherto adopted have been the convening of the meetings for lectures and discourses in English and in Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and quarian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of all classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and, in this respect, the Society has now achieved a fair measure of success.

Not only lectures were delivered, but, messages of congratulations and condolences were sent, from time to time, to high personages in India and England, to which gracious acknowledgments have duly been received.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of sincere congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence, during which period, it has weathered many a storm.

We cannot let this opportunity slip away, without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of events, for His unusual kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

Gentlemen, I shall not dwell at length on the work done by the Institution, the printed proceedings of its various public meetings, published in the leading local daily newspapers for the last forty-years bear ample testimony to it.

The Society has enrolled among its Patrons and Members the flower of the Eastern and Western communities, and have now the honour of submitting to you a synoptical report of the transactions of the Society for the year 1915 :

From Prafulla Kumar Basu, Esq. :—

77, Garpar Road,
Calcutta, 7th September, 1915.
Dear Mr. Day,
I have been much pleased with a copy of the Annual Report of the Calcutta Literary Society.

The book has been excellently made in all respects and the fine and eloquent speeches of various learned speakers which it contains will certainly give great pleasure and benefit to its readers.

I greatly admire the assiduity and zeal with which you have been conducting the useful Institution, viz. :—
The Calcutta Literary Society.

To the Patrons, Members, friends and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the welfare of this Literary Society of Forty year's standing and to invite their attention to the fact that it has not yet secured a habitation of its own.

The Calcutta Literary Society is now the oldest and the only surviving Literary Institution of its kind in Bengal. We have grown grey in its service, and the day is not distant when a new generation will step into our shoes, and we, its oldest members, may be judged by the richness of the legacy we have left behind.

We have done our work in a workman's apron in an old fashioned work-shop, but, nothing will so much incite the new generation to work hard, and in the spirit of its ancient captains as modern equipment in the shape of a beautiful building of its own, a library of well-selected works and decent furniture for the accommodation of those intellectual pilgrims that will seek to elevate their souls under its peaceful roof.

Now, the grateful thanks of the Society are hereby submitted to Her Highness The Princess Maharani Sri Tara Devi Sahiba of Nepal, who was pleased to preside at our Thirty-ninth Anniversary General Meeting, to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its various public meetings, and to those who presided on the occasions, as well as to those, who lent their halls for holding its various public meetings, during the year, 1915.

The Society also records its appreciation of the kindness of the editors of the English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their respective papers, for publishing the proceedings of the Society's various public meetings and letters connected with the Institution, during the year under review.

The grateful thanks of the Institution are also hereby tendered to the donors and subscribers, who helped the Society during the year 1915.

Gentlemen, let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, by Whose fostering care the Institution has been able to complete Forty years of its existence.

May God continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength to continue in our work, and cheer us on.

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder of and Secretary to the Calcutta Literary Society, had finished his Fortieth Annual Report of the Society, the learned Chairman, in confirming the Report, made a short address, in which he congratulated the Founder-Secretary of the Society, on the long continuance of the Society founded by him.

It had already had a longer life of usefulness than any other one of the numerous literary societies, with which he had been acquainted in the city, and he hoped that its career of usefulness would continue for many years to come.

Swami Rambakwella Siddhartha Sastravirarada
Vinayacharyya (a Buddhist Monk), then spoke a few words congratulating the Society.

The venerable Chairman then asked Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu to deliver his lecture on

Peace on Earth.

The speaker very ably dwelt upon his subject for nearly half an hour and he was heard with rapt attention.

He said that the noble principle of right over might,
(and not the barbarous and brutal principle of might over right), should prevail among the human race. The rights and privileges of every man and of every nation in the world should be respected and regarded by all.

If the nations of the world, in their dealings with one another, adhere to the principle of right over might, and, if they be not guided by base, mean and selfish motives, by unjust, unrighteous and unscrupulous ambition, there would be less wars, and less bloodshed; and peace and progress would shine forth with bright radiance among the human race.

Religion—true religion—is one of the greatest means of establishing peace. It raises, ennobles and elevates the heart of man. Let the human races strive for peace, that would secure and further the progress, improvement, welfare and prosperity of the nations. (Cheers.)

Mr. Kanai Lal Day, then very eloquently addressed the assembly for nearly a quarter of an hour, in the course of which he said that in these days of International War in Europe, where sacrifices are being on the altar of Moloch it is high time that the Powers should declare peace.

Europe seems to have been swayed by the proverb that might is right. But, we should remember that might is not the criterion of civilization. It is the might of the spirit that wields a domination over the world, and our Aryan forefathers tried to make themselves strong in the strength of the spirit.

Peace is essential for the preservation of social polity and nothing hinders so much the progress of society as devastation and carnage. Man longs for peace amidst the din of war.

After the speakers had finished their speeches, the learned Chairman addressed the meeting for nearly half an hour, in the course of which he said :—

Gentlemen, I feel great pleasure in presiding at the Fortieth Anniversary General Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. It is a matter for great satisfaction that the Institution has been carrying on its good work for Forty years, and its Founder and Secretary, Mr. Sham Lal Day, is, therefore, to be congratulated for that.

Though peace and goodwill on earth had been preached by the Prince of Peace, twenty centuries ago, His great ideal had not yet been realised, and the subject of to-day's lecture is a very appropriate subject for reflection at the present time, when the Greatest European War, the world has ever seen, is raging in the west.

I feel entire sympathy with the Calcutta Literary Society in its expressions of regret at the sad death of the great leader of the Labour Party, Mr. Keir Hardie, and of Sir Henry Cotton, whom I know to have been sincere friends of India.

I hope, the Calcutta Literary Society would continue to do its good work for many years to come. (Cheers.)

Mr. P. L. Roy having proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which was seconded by Mr. S. Dutt, and carried by acclamation, the meeting dissolved at 6-30 P.M.

SHORT BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

OF

The Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., K. C., M. A., LL. B., Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

THE Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., K. C., M. A., LL. B., Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal is, at present, in the full enjoyment of his powers of manhood, being fifty-three years of age.

Lordship was educated at Elastree, and Harrow, and finally graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he obtained the Degrees of B.A. and LL. B., in 1885, and his M. A. Degree, in 1895.

HIS Lordship was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, on Tuesday, the 26th January, 1886, and practised with success in London and on the Northern Circuit. He was elected to the General Council of the Bar, in 1895.

HIS Lordship was of general popularity, being liked immensely by his colleagues and friends, as well as all those who came in contact with him.

THOSE, who know him well, speak of him as a sound lawyer and a man to inspire confidence and respect.

IN the field of sport, His Lordship also achieved distinction. He was an excellent cricketer and played in the Harrow School eleven as did the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Greaves, who was also a pupil of the famous school on the hill, and represented Cambridge in the Double Racquet match against Oxford, in 1885.

The Calcutta Literary Society,

PROCEEDINGS of the Forty-first Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society held with great eclat, in the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 4-3-A, College Square, East, on Wednesday, the 17th January, 1917, at 5 P.M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., K.C., M.A., LL.B., Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal and an illustrious Patron of the Calcutta Literary Society. (Vide Empire and Statesman, 18th, Bengalee and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 19th, and Hindu Patriot, 20th January, and 10th February, 1917, respectively.)

As previously announced in the Empire, 15th, Englishman, Statesman, Bengalee, Amrita Bazar Patrika, and Indian Mirror, 16th January, 1917, the Forty-first Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held, with great eclat, in the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 4/3-A, College Square, East, on Wednesday, the 17th January, 1917, at 5 P.M.,

The hall was very beautifully decorated and upon the table there were heaps of nose-gays and bouquets of beautiful flowers, and it was crowded to suffocation. A large number of people had to wait outside, for want of even standing space inside the hall.

The Patrons and Members of the Society, the Graduates and Under-Graduates of the University, and other gentlemen of light and leading composed the bulk of the audience. The meeting was very largely and influentially attended and amongst those present on the occasion were :—

Maharajah Bhupendra Chandra Sinha, Surma, of Susang,
Rajah Manmatha Nath Roy Chowdhury, of Santosh,
Kumar Rajendra Narayan Roy, of Jorasanko Rajbati, Hony. Presidency Magistrate, &c.

Mr. R. Palit, (Journalist),
Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu, (Author),
Mr. Sarat Chandra Sen, B. L., (Pleader), and others.

Just prior to the commencement of the meeting, the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., K.C., M.A., LL.B., Chief Justice of Bengal, (who, on arrival, was warmly welcomed by the Members of the Society) was photographed with others. The Hon'ble President was then conducted to the lecture hall and was received with deafening cheers by the distinguished audience.

Mr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.D., Secretary, Bengalee Regiment Committee, in proposing the chair, addressed the meeting thus :—

My Lord and Gentleman :—It does not require many words from me to introduce the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson. We most cordially welcome His Lordship, not only as the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal, but, as one of the most sympathetic friends and well-wishers of India. Sir Lancelot Sanderson, during the short time he has been here, has shown remarkable sympathy with our aspirations and has already made himself felt in Indian Society. I only wish that there were many others of his stamp amongst us, for, it may be said, without exaggeration, that it is character and nobility, such as his, which makes British Rule in India deservedly valuable (Cheers.)

THE High Court of Calcutta has well been called the palladium of the liberties of the citizens. As a man in the street, I desire to pay my sincere tribute to the sagacity and the sturdy independence, with which he jealously guards the supreme interests, the dignity, and honour of this high tribunal. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, without further speech, I now submit to your acceptance the proposal, that the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Chief Justice of Bengal, do take the presidential chair, this afternoon. (Cheers.)

MR. J. Chaudhury, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, Editor, Calcutta Weekly Notes, in seconding the proposal, addressed the meeting thus :—

Gentlemen :—It gives me a great and genuine pleasure to second the proposal. The Calcutta Literary Society has been greatly honoured by the acceptance of the post of President at its Forty-first Anniversary Meeting by Sir Lancelot Sanderson. As the Chief Justice of Bengal, he occupies a position in this Province, which is next to none except that of His Excellency the Governor of Bengal. (Cheers.)

He also occupied a very high position in England as a Member of Parliament and Recorder of Wigan, which latter he had served his predecessor in office as a stepping-stone to a High Court Judgeship in England. We are, indeed, fortunate in having for our Chief Justice, a Member of the English Bar, with such a splendid record behind him. (Cheers.)

SINCE coming out to India, he has made himself deservedly popular with every section of the community, and with none more than the sporting section of our youngmen. Being a good sportsman himself he has been ungrudging in his support and encouragement of the sporting spirit amongst the Indian youths, which has gone such a long way in developing an honourable and manly spirit amongst our young hopefuls. (Cheers.)

IT gives us no less pleasure to find His Lordship to-day amongst an audience, chiefly composed of Graduates and Under-Graduates of the Calcutta University, who are no less keen in their search for knowledge and who have come here to receive some new light from our honoured Chairman, who, by his high position, uniform courtesy, great culture and sound judgment, is so eminently fitted to guide us with his words of wisdom and advice. I, therefore, most heartily second this proposition. (Cheers.)

MR. Henry Stephen, M.A., Ph.D., Professor, Calcutta University, in supporting the proposal, remarked that the Calcutta Literary Society might well be proud of attracting the interest and sympathy of a gentleman of such noble distinction, as the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal. (Cheers.)

THE Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., K.C., M.A., LL.B., Chief Justice of Bengal, and an illustrious Patron of the Calcutta Literary Society then took the chair and was garlanded by the Founder-Secretary to the Institution, amidst Cheers.

A Poem, in English, dwelling on the qualities of head and heart of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal, was read by its author, Mr. Sarat Chandra Sen, (B.L., Pleader), which greatly pleased the audience.

THE Hon'ble President then asked Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, to read the Report of the Institution, for the year 1916.

THE Founder-Secretary addressed the Meeting thus :—

Address by the Founder-Secretary to the Society :

*Your Lordship and Gentlemen :—*I feel great pride and highly honoured in welcoming you here. It is most gratifying that your Lordship has graciously been pleased to honour the Calcutta Literary Society with your Lordship's august presence, as President of its Forty-first Anniversary Meeting, in spite of your Lordship's fully occupied time, with your usual kindness towards this Literary Institution, of Forty-one years' standing, neither grudging your time nor pains. The Patrons and Members of the Society hereby beg leave to tender your Lordship their warmest thanks for the honour. (Cheers.)

At the outset, it is my melancholy duty to express the Society's heart-felt grief caused by the sad death of the following illustrious personages during the year 1916 :
Viz :—

1. THE Right Hon'ble Field-Marshal Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum, Bart., K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., K.P., O.M., P.C., Secretary of State for War, since 1914, which tragic death occurred on Tuesday, the 6th June, 1916.

The Office of the Institution remained closed for one day, in honour of his memory. A letter of condolence was duly forwarded to his son and successor, Maharajah Bhupendra Chandra Sinha, Sarma, to which the following reply was received :—

From the Maharajah Bahadur of Susang :—

Susang Rajbati,

Dear Sir,

The 30th October, 1916.

I must thank you for the kindness with which you have written about my lamented father, Maharajah Kumud Chandra Sinha. My only consolation is to know how widely and deeply he endeared himself to all among whom he moved. I am still a mere student and quite inexperienced in the ways of the world. I need in every walk of my life, in a greater measure than before, that love, sympathy and affection help, which you all gave to my late father, and, I am confident that, you would give me them all most grudgingly. This is my humble prayer to you all.

I am so overwhelmed with grief, that I cannot write to anything more to-day. I humbly express my heart gratitude to you and the Society for the kind message of condolence.

Sincerely thanking you again,
Babu Sham Lal Day,
Founder-Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society.

I am,

Yours Sincerely,
Bhupendra Chandra Sinha
Maharajah Bahadur of Susang.

MR. Behari Lal Gupta C.I.E., ex-Judge of the Court and ex-Dewan of Baroda State, who died Simultala, on Saturday, the 21st October, 1916, A.M., of heart-failure, at the age of sixty-eight. He was a Member of this Society, since 7th October, 1909.

The Office of the Society remained closed for one day in honour of his memory. Letters of condolence were forwarded to his two sons, Mr. Satish Chandra Gupta and Mr. Asoke Chandra Gupta, respectively.

5. MR. Amarendra Nath Datta, died on Friday, 7th January, 1916, at 3 A.M., after a short illness.

A letter of condolence was duly forwarded to his brother, Mr. Hirendra Nath Datta, M.A., B.L., Attorney-at-Law, to which the following reply was received :—

From Mr. Hirendra Nath Datta, Attorney-at-Law :—

139, Cornwallis Street,

Dear Sir,

Calcutta, 14th January, 1916.

I have received your letter of condolence for which accept my best thanks.

Babu Sham Lal Day,
Founder-Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society.

Yours truly,
H. N. Datta.

Gentlemen, we have assembled here, this afternoon, to celebrate the Forty-first Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society and I hereby beg to offer a hearty welcome to all and to such of our Patrons, Members and friends as have graced the assembly with their presence.

The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, by the humble individual, who is now standing before you, with the help of some of his young friends—the advanced pupils of various educational institutions of the city—who were associated with him in the work, in the very year when His late lamented Majesty Edward VII., King-Emperor of India, (then His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales) visited these shores, and to-day we meet here to celebrate its Forty-first Anniversary.

Gentlemen, I have the honour of being its Founder-Secretary since its foundation, in 1875, and I am glad to be able to say that the Society has been marching on the path of progress, ever since its foundation.

The main objects of the Society are :—

- (a) To hold friendly gatherings—of members of both European and Indian communities.
- (b) To discuss literary, scientific and social subjects.

The means, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian Vernaculars, on subjects of literary, historical and antiquarian interest, presided over by men of high standing and leading, and, in this respect, the Society has achieved a satisfactory measure of success.

Messages of congratulations and condolences were also sent from time to time, to high personages in India and England to which gracious acknowledgments have also been received.

Gentlemen, it is a matter of sincere congratulation that the Society has passed through so many years of its existence during which period, it has weathered many a storm.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE 41st ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF THE CALCUTTA LIT. SOCIETY.

...ent, we cannot let this opportunity slip away, without expressing our heart-felt gratefulness to the Almighty Disposer of Events, for His unbounded kindness that has been vouchsafed to the Society.

...men, I shall not dwell at length on the work done by the Institution; the printed proceedings of the various public meetings, published in the leading local daily newspapers, for the last Forty-one years, bear ample testimony to it. The Society has enrolled among its patrons and Members the flowers of the Eastern and Western communities.

...lemen, I have now the honour of submitting to you a Synopsis Report of the transactions of the Society, for the year 1916.

As previously announced in Amrita Bazar Patrika, 3rd, Bengali, and Indian Mirror, 4th January, 1916, the Fortieth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society was held in the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 1-3-A, College Square, East, on Tuesday, the 4th January, 1916, at 4-30 P. M.

The hall was very prettily decorated and the Meeting was very largely and influentially attended. The Patrons and Members of the Society, the Graduates and Under-graduates of the University, and other gentlemen of the city and suburbs, composed the bulk of the audience.

The motion of Mr. Sudhindra Nath Tagore, B.A., Takil and Zemindar, seconded by Kaviraj Girija Prasad Sen, Vidyavinode, (landholder) Dr. Henry Stephen, M.A., B.D., Professor, Calcutta University, was voted to the air, amidst cheers.

The Chairman's taking his seat, a welcome song, composed for the occasion, was sung by Mr. Radha Shyam Dutt, a little boy of seven summers, which charmed the audience. The Chairman was then garlanded, amidst shouts of joy. Then Lall Day, the Founder and Secretary to the Society, then read the Fortieth Annual Report of the Institution, which was a record of all-round progress, and which having been duly confirmed, the Chairman called upon Mr. Rafulla Kumar Basu to deliver his lecture on—

Peace on Earth :—

The learned lecturer very ably dwelt on his subject for nearly half an hour and he was heard with rapt attention. He urged that the nations should be governed by the laws of righteousness. The different States should forget their own petty interests for the sake of international peace.

Harmony among the different nations must be the basis of true civilization. If every person has his rights, which are protected by laws against encroachment—so, in the case of a nation, its rights should not be violated by a stronger power. Even, if wars are sometimes necessary, they should be conducted without needless and brutal cruelty.

The Buddhist monk and Mr. Kanai Lal Day also spoke a few words on the subject.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting, in the course of which he said that, he felt very great pleasure in presiding at the Fortieth Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society. It afforded him great pleasure that the Society had been carrying on its good work for forty long years and its indefatigable Founder-Secretary was, therefore, to be warmly congratulated. (Cheers.)

The theme of peace and good will on earth was preached by the Prince of Peace, Twenty Centuries ago, His great ideal had not yet been realized, and the subject of that day's lecture was a very suitable one, specially at the present time, when the greatest European War, the world has ever seen, was raging in the world.

The Chairman expressed great sympathy, on behalf of the Calcutta Literary Society, at the sad and untimely death of the great Labour Leader, the late Mr. Keir Hardie and of Sir Henry Cotton, K.C.S.I., who were sincere friends of India. He fervently hoped that the Society would continue its good work for many years to come and wished the Institution every success. (Cheers.)

P. L. Roy having proposed a vote of thanks to the Chair, which was seconded by Mr. S. Dutt and carried by acclamation, the Meeting dissolved at 6-30 P. M.

The proceedings were reported in Empire, 5th, Bengalee, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 6th January, 1916.)

On Friday, the 14th April, 1916, a copy of the Fortieth Annual Report of the Society was forwarded to Her Imperial Majesty Queen Alexandra of England, and, I am glad to state that the copy has graciously been accepted, and the following acknowledgment was received :—

Form H. M. Queen Alexandra of England :—

Marlborough House.

8th May, 1916.

Dear Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 14th ultimo, and have submitted to Queen Alexandra the copy of the Fortieth Annual Report of the Calcutta Literary Society, which Her Majesty is graciously pleased to accept.

The Secretary,
Calcutta Literary Society,
24, Nimitola Street, Calcutta.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours faithfully,
Henry Streatfield, Colonel,
Private Secretary to Queen Alexandra.

2. An extraordinary public meeting was convened by the Society, in College Square, East, on Sunday, the 2nd January, 1916, at 7-15 A.M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhushan, M.A., Ph.D., M.B.A.S., F.A.S.B., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate and Examiner of the Calcutta University,

To Offer Intercessory Prayers

For the speedy termination of the Great European War, and for the complete victory of the British Arms with its Allies, when Mr. R. Palit said :—

Gentlemen :—The old year has rolled away, leaving behind its doleful memories of a devastating war. A new year has dawned upon the world, with all the sweetness of an angelic smile. It is customary, at the dawn of a New Year, to take stock of the old and review its features.

No year in the history of mankind, had ever witnessed the grim spectacle of such a Titanic war. Its features are indelibly stamped upon the minds of all of us—crimes that can never be buried in oblivion and that will stand, for all time, an imperishable disgrace to Germany and the Germans.

Through all the chapters of this most eventful year in human history, there runs a deathless story of heroism and endurance that has no parallel in any time. The world is passing through a crisis, the outcome of which it is difficult to prognosticate. But one thing is certain that the cause of right and of justice, for which the Allies are fighting, will ultimately prevail, and that the rule of might will be crushed and overcome.

India has taken a prominent part in this war and she cannot be kept apart from the new ideas. They will permeate the rulers and the ruled alike. Any other supposition is wholly inconceivable. To imagine, that after this war, for justice and righteousness, for the defence of the weak against the wanton aggression of the strong, for the protection of national life and existence, England will continue her Indian administration precisely in the old style is a moral impossibility.

The British democracy, we are sure, will not tolerate it. Situated, as we are, at present, wherever we turn our eyes, we do not fail to see our national life cribbed, cabined and confined. Our aspirations must find their fulfilment in the atmosphere of British rule in India. The brand of inferiority that is stamped on our brow by the maintenance of a rigidly bureaucratic form of government has to be effaced. (Cheers.)

Mr. P. K. Basu, and Mr. K. P. Pyne also addressed the Meeting.

The Chairman then made a nice little speech, suitable to the occasion.

The Meeting dissolved at 9 A. M., with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

(Vide, Empire, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 3rd, and Ben. ale, 4th January, 1916.)

The proceedings of the Meeting were duly forwarded to Her Imperial Majesty Queen Alexandra of England, to which the following gracious reply was received :—

From Her Imperial Majesty Queen-Mother Alexandra of England:—

Dear Sir,
I have submitted your letter of the 3rd instant to Queen Alexandra, together with the account of the Meeting, which was held by the Calcutta Literary Society on the 2nd instant.

I am desired by Her Majesty to say that she fully appreciates the loyal sentiments expressed therein

The Secretary, I am, dear Sir,
Calcutta Literary Society, Yours faithfully,
24 Nimitolla Street, Calcutta Henry Streetfield, Colonel.
Private Secretary Queen Alexandra.

3. THE Third Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held in the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 4-3-A, College Square, East, on Monday, the 28th February, 1916, at 5-30 P. M., under the presidency of Nawabzada Syed Ashraf-ud-din Ahmed, Khan Bahadur, Matwali Sahib of Moshin Imambara at Hoogli, Fellow of the Calcutta University, Hony. Magistrate and Municipal Commissioner, Secretary, Hoogli National Mohammedan Association, when Dr Vaman Baji Kulkarni, Medical Adviser, Indian Alkaloidal Co., of Bombay, delivered a very interesting lecture on:—

The Extraordinary Virtues of Common Salt:—

The Chairman, in introducing Dr. Vaman Baji Kulkarni, Medical Adviser, Indian Alkaloidal Co., of Bombay, to the meeting, said:—

Gentlemen, I have much pleasure in introducing the learned Doctor, who comes from Nagal in Kolhapur State, where the late lamented Mr Gopal Krishna Gokhale, C.I.E., came from.

He was educated in the same school as the late Mr. Gokhale, and after matriculating, he entered the Bombay Medical College, where he studied for several years, but, on account of serious breakdown in health he failed to secure the Medical Diploma.

Be it noted here, that Dr. Vaman got scholarships in all the examinations—as a matter of fact, he paid his expenses with money that he got as scholarships. Then he began practising at Kolhapur and he was a great favourite of the late Dr. Bahadurji, from whom he learnt Hydropathic mode of treatment, and since 1898, he began to study the Effect of Salt on the Human System. He has made it his mission in life to impress upon the people the extraordinary properties of Salt and it is now eighteen years that he has been doing it. (Cheers.)

He then asked the Doctor to deliver his lecture on:—

The Extraordinary Virtues of Common Salt:—

The learned Doctor, who, on rising, was received with cheers, then addressed the meeting thus:—

Gentlemen, the uncommon virtues of common Salt was the subject of that evening's lecture. When Plague first broke out in Bombay, he had a survey of the whole thing and resolved to combat Plague by Medical treatment. The lecturer, being trained under the late Doctor Bahadurji, had made a special subject of Hydropathy and he wanted to make Hydropathy a popular thing at Kolhapur, where he had medical practice.

The three principal factors were made popular: viz:— (1) Vomiting, (2) Purging, (3) Bathing. These are the three means used by any physician. Lavage of the stomach, high enemas and hot tub baths, followed by cold douche all over the body, were made a play-thing in his dispensary.

Patients, with colic fever, skin-diseases, and many a sick were relieved with wonderful results in a short time. People gave a verdict in fatal cases, that patient died, though he was given enema and bath, while, in the beginning, ignorant people said he died, because he was given enema.

But, the lecturer had observed some bad results of water in certain fever cases. Generally in all fevers where the plain temperature, say, from 105 to 106, but, before water-bath was given, there was no rising of the re-action took place, the temperature rose to 105.5 or 106, and when there was great uneasiness in healthy subjects re-action took place and this made him hesitate to give bath in popular hands.

The lecturer had a Cholera case; which had suffered weeks before from Typhoid, where he gave no saline enemas. Four pints of hot water and a half of kitchen Salt were given every two hours, and no urine appeared for twenty-four hours, two dry were applied over the loins and the kidneys acted wonderfully, and the bladder poured out half a bucket of urine.

Soon after, there appeared in the press the review book Common Salt, by Mr. Cumpel, which gave to his future work.

In Plague, Dr. Vaman tried in a few cases and he was convinced of the efficacy of brine-baths. He explained the action of Salt on the secretion of bile and how the starchy food is converted in the stomach into sugar, and, how the process of digestion is improved by fletcherism.

The world's miseries will be reduced by half, if lessons were given to youths, to masticate the food before swallowing. Salt will cure the diseases of gums and bad teeth much more effectively than emeline hydrochloride, and Salt water wash will place all dentifrices of high prices.

The lecturer then explained the action of Salt on the gastric juice of the stomach. Digestion in the stomach depends on the quantity of hydrochloric acid, the chief source of which is NaCl. (sodium Chloride) chemical decomposition takes place with the ferrous acids of the stomach, chiefly Butyric Acid is evolved for the stomach and the Soda goes to the Liver for the formation of bile and the organs of digestion are stimulated.

There is no disease of the stomach, where NaCl is injuriously, and the lecturer gave instances of ulcers of the stomach improved rapidly under hot Salt. Vomiting, of all cases, is stopped in a short time, Cholera vomiting of pregnancy, post-chloroform, vomit and all are relieved with wonderful results by hot water drink.

Liver functions improved and the bowels move naturally and there will be no constipation and all the diseases arising from auto-intoxication are prevented.

The lecturer then explained the action of blood corpuscles, how the Biconcave red blood corpuscle distended and are unable to absorb oxygen or through lung capillaries and how efficient oxygenation takes place and sudden deaths occur, and they can be prevented by judicious and liberal Salt-solution. How the premature heart-failure occur and, if this point is looked to, how many may be saved!

The lecturer then explained how the Bacteria and Blood of various fevers invade the blood and if the corpuscles, red and white, are strong, they digest the Bacteria, but, if they are watery and distended the Bacteria find an entrance and kill the corpuscles.

How the fight between the two can be arranged successfully and the blood may win is the problem of the day and the lecturer proved that instead of going through various physiological series to which the medical profession is now resorting, can conveniently be displaced by one physiological water or Artificial serum, other than for Salt-solution, or Amritjil, as the lecturer named it.

ases, like Plague, Cholera, Malaria, Typhoid, Smallpox, and Yellowfever, must vanish, if regular use is made of Salt-water. Poisons are neutralized by Salt-solution. Scorpion bite's pain is easily relieved by drinking large amount of Salt-water, and putting a compress of Salt-water; so, in the case of poisonous medicines. The Doctor dealt with active principles, which are deadliest poisons, and in his careful practice, he has observed the fact that these drugs, though pushed a little more, do not give poisonous effects, when the system is thoroughly Salted in the beginning.

Nitine causes tingling sooner, when no Salt is given first, Struchmines becomes more stimulating, when given without giving Salt-water.

Lecturer then explained the action of Alcohol on the stomach, blood, brain and other organs and then quoted his cases of drunkards, relieved by hot-Salt-water, before their drink. The stomach is in an inflamed condition, and you get the same kind of unpleasant sensation, as you get, when you have got itches or scabies on your palms. The man loses all shame and tries to scratch. Now, put some Salt, after scratching the palm, and you will find the itch cured. In the Alcoholic stomach, full of mucus, that causes the burning of the surface of the stomach, a hot cup of one per cent Salt-solution will dissolve the mucus and the pure mucus membrane will be acted upon by Alcohol powerfully and a small amount of wine will satisfy the craving. With little will-power, the man can be a total abstainer from drink, which will enable him to be loyal and to follow King's order. The same is the case with other habits, formed by taking opium and too much of tea or coffee.

In the fecundity of the world, the lecturer gave his cases where barren-women were fertile and gave birth to healthy sons, and discussed the controversial point of the theory of sex. It depends more on the blood of the mother, than on the mind of the woman, that the sex question is settled.

It increases the power of blood, and we get male issues. The fecundity of the animals will increase, if they get liberal supply of Salt. On the mammary glands, Salt has stimulating action, and women get greater supply of healthy milk. In the vegetable world, Salt has the same action, and, hence, use of Salt, as manure, will be very productive. When you give Salt, you should give water and phosphates as well. Salt has got destructive action on lower organisms, hence manuring the soil with Salt will prevent zymotic diseases, if they are from the soil.

It depends upon the organic decomposition of animal droppings, but, if animals get liberal Salt, their excreta will have the bactericidal property. If gutters of towns were flushed by sea-water, the lecturer expects a great deal of improvement in public health.

Lecturer then explained the causes, where Salt is withheld with a superstitious feeling in Bright's disease, epilepsy and in Lactic acid therapy. Dechlorination theory he wants to upset and wants to prove that dropsy cases and epilepsy cases will be cured very easily with liberal supply of Salt by mouth, by baths, or, injections rectal or intraveins. Salt and medicines will work wonders, but, if one is asked to choose either, he will choose the sub Ras-Salt. He will require no medicine, but, one santonine or anything that will expel the worms from bowels.

Lecturer made a bold remark, that they are dying not of Plague, Malaria, or Cholera-germs, but, of round worms. Cancer is reported by Capil Rost, L.M.S., to be cured by Salt alone. If man is given a hot brine-bath, when death is certain, he will get death in communion with Ram or Rahim as the case may be.

Lecturer implored the professional men and the scientists, to study common Salt with greater vigilance and bring to the land health and plenty, to which has disappeared by their indifference the mineral food. (Cheers.)

After the learned Doctor had finished his speech, the venerable Chairman addressed the assembly with a nice little speech. He thanked the lecturer and congratulated the Society for its having secured such an able Doctor, to lecture on such a very important subject that evening.

The Manager of Wandell's Vacuum Washer then stepped near the dais and explained his experience of hot-Salt-water-drink. He used to be out of breath with small exertions, but, he was feeling vigorous day by day.

Some of the audience were given lemonade bottles, with a half-tea-spoon of Salt, and the verdict of those was that they had never tasted such a pleasant drink before.

The Meeting dissolved after 7 P.M., with the usual votes of thanks to the Chair and the learned lecturer.

(Vide, Bengalee, 27th, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 28th February, and 6th March, 1916, respectively.)

4 The Fourth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at Cornwallis Square, on Tuesday, the 4th April, 1916, at 7 A.M., under the presidency of Rai Baikuntha Nath Basu Bahadur, ex-Dewan of His Majesty's Mint in Calcutta, and Hon'y Presidency Magistrate—

To welcome the arrival of His Excellency, the Right Hon'ble Sir Frederic John Napier Thesiger, Baron Chelmsford, G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor General of India :

The Chairman, on taking his seat, amidst cheers, asked Mr. R. Palit, (Journalist), of Howrah, to address the Meeting. Mr. R. Palit addressed the assembly thus :—

Gentlemen, at the instance of the Calcutta Literary Society, we have assembled here, this morning, to give expression to our loyal greetings, on the assumption of the most exalted office of Viceroy and Governor-General of India, by His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron Chelmsford, G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E. (Cheers.)

The exalted position, which His Excellency now occupies, as Representative of the Crown of England, is invested with a degree of responsibility, which, we believe, will make His Excellency follow in the wake of those liberal Statesmen, who, by their benevolent administration, have endeared themselves to the teeming millions of India. (Cheers.)

The debt, which India owes to Britain, for what she had done, in this respect in the past, is nothing to what she (India) may reasonably hope for in the future, and we earnestly pray, that Almighty God, in His infinite Mercy, may perpetuate in India the beneficent protection of England, so that the two streams of learning—the Oriental and the Occidental—may flow uninterruptedly, each nourishing and enriching the other, ultimately, to form one mighty stream, hitherto unparalleled in the annals of the intellectual world.

Loyal, as we are, we look upon the King, as the veritable embodiment of Divinity, and our veneration for him borders on such worshipful reverence, as can scarcely be found among other nations of the earth. (Cheers.)

Loyalty with us is not a mock conventionality, but it is a spontaneous overflowing of that Divine feeling, which lifts humanity—to the position of gods. Those of our valiant men, who have had to drink the bitter cup of untold hardships in the present titanic struggle in Europe, have given tangible evidence of their loyalty to the Crown. How easy it is to rule India, if those, who rule over us, could only touch the sentimental side of our nature. (Cheers.)

The removal of the capital of British India, from Calcutta to Delhi, has taken away from our midst, much of that swing and swirl of life, which attracted many a magnate from all parts of India.

Since the British occupation of India, the head of the Government has always resided in Calcutta, and, thus gained the advantage of acquiring a first-hand knowledge of all things appertaining to the administration of India. In the circumstances, we believe, His Excellency the Viceroy would make it a point to visit Calcutta, at least once in the year—residing, in our midst, for a few months in the cold weather, which, we venture to hope, would be prolific of immense good to His Excellency's administration. (Cheers.)

The people of India are over-burdened with heavy taxation, in some shape or other, and they do not know what it is to have two meals a day! They look forward to His Excellency, in the hope that His Excellency will do something, before His Excellency lays down the reins of his high Office towards relieving them of this burden of taxation and thereby enshrine His Excellency's name in the grateful recollections of our countrymen. (Cheers.)

Of all the countries in the world, the largest percentage of illiteracy prevails in India. Education is the war-cry of India at the present moment. It was a Divine dispensation that linked India with England into a bond of comradeship, and, as such, India to-day looks forward to England to hold forth the torch of knowledge to those of our countrymen pining away in the darkness of ignorance.

We hope, before His Excellency lays down the reins of government, His Excellency will have signalized his regime by a liberal grant of money for the diffusion of education all over India. We look upon the illiteracy of India as a blot on the escutcheon of England. India educated, would not only be a source of strength to England, but a great moral victory to her. (Cheers.)

His Excellency's career, as Governor of Queensland and of New South Wales, and, subsequently, as Governor-General of Australia, has enabled His Excellency to study questions affecting justice and administration of the lands, upon which depends the welfare of the subjects.

The political training of His Excellency will, we believe, be productive of much good to the administration of India. Besides, His Excellency does not come to India, as a new man. His Excellency's stay in Jutogh, last year, in connection with His Excellency's regimental duties, has afforded His Excellency singular opportunities of coming into personal contact with the princes and people of this country, and thereby of acquiring a first-hand knowledge of their desires and aspirations.

His Excellency's participation in the deliberations of the London County Council has enabled His Excellency to acquire a thorough knowledge of those civic duties, which, we hope, will stand His Excellency in good stead in giving the boon of Self-government to India, wherein lies the real unity and solidarity of the united Indian nation. Ours must always be a composite nationhood.

The Indian nation must be a federal nation. It will be a new type of nationhood, approaching more closely, than any existing European type has been able as yet to do, to the ultimate ideal of that universal humanity, towards which human history and evolution have been moving since the dawn of history. We believe, His Excellency will give such facilities to our countrymen as will help their ideas to expand, and this would, no doubt, be an invaluable blessing to the Indian community.

In conclusion, let us pray to God to vouchsafe to His Excellency long life, health, peace and prosperity. (Cheers.)

The chairman's speech:—

Gentlemen, about this hour, (7 A.M.), this morning, His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron Chelmsford, accompanied by Lady Chelmsford, arrives at Bombay and in the course of the day, assumes charge of the Most Exalted Office of Viceroy and Governor-General of India. (Cheers.)

The Patrons and Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, at whose instance this Meeting is being held and on whose behalf, I have the honour of addressing you, are unable, (in flesh), to join the crowd that assembles at Bombay to greet Their Excellency but they will do the next best thing. They will, through this public Meeting, offer them, in spirit, the loyal and respectful welcome. (Cheers.)

Lord Chelmsford's appointment, as Viceroy and Governor-General of India, is marked by exceptional features. With the exception of Sir John (afterwards Lord) Lawrence, the civilian Viceroy, who had served many years in India, prior to his appointment, Lord Curzon who had travelled in the East, including India, sometime before he was appointed as Vice and Governor-General of India, no one ever came to India with a fresher knowledge of the country and people than His Excellency Lord Chelmsford. (Cheers.)

For a period of a year and a half preceding the announcement of his appointment, he was in India in connection with his regimental duties near Simla. As a matter of fact, scarcely had he gone out of sight from the harbour of Bombay, on his voyage back home, when the country rang with the news of his Viceregal appointment.

It must be remembered that, during his stay here, he came into personal contact, not only with the Upper Ten, but also with the Lower Ninety, of Indian society and made himself acquainted with their wants, aspirations, and had studied some of the outstanding questions of the day.

Gentlemen, as you all know, he was Governor of Queensland and of New South Wales, and, for some time, Governor-General of Australia, and had exceptional opportunities of studying educational questions. Member of the London County Council.

We feel, therefore, that we have every right to expect that under his rule, India will thrive in a variety of ways. It is a matter of regret that Her Excellency Lady Chelmsford will not accompany him to Calcutta on the 11th April, 1916, when His Excellency comes here, on only a three days' visit.

That His Excellency will be here even for such a short time, undertaking an uncomfortable journey, in grilling weather, is practical proof of the fact that he does not ignore Calcutta's claims on his attention.

May his rule, supported, as it surely will be, by sympathetic co-operation of Lady Chelmsford, be a blessing to India, and may Providence shower both, the blessings of health and happiness, be the united prayer of the people placed under their protection and care. (Cheers.)

The following Address of Welcome was then read unanimously adopted at the Meeting:—

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Frederic Napier Thesiger, Baron Chelmsford, Of Chelmsford, in the County of Essex, P.C., G.C., Chancellor of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, Fellow of the All Souls College, M.A. (Oxon.), Knight Grand Master of the Most Exalted Order of the Indian Empire and Knight Grand Master of the Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, Viceroy and Governor-General of India, &c., &c., &c.:—

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

The Calcutta Literary Society craves leave to approach Your Excellency with a most cordial welcome on Your Excellency's arrival here and Your Excellency's assumption of the Most Exalted Office of Viceroy and Governor-General of India, which His Most Gracious Majesty The Emperor has called upon Your Excellency to fill.

The Calcutta Literary Society, which is an Institution of one years' standing, has had the privilege and honour of counting among its Patrons, Members and well-wishers some of the illustrious representatives of British Power.

The main objects of the Society are:—

- To hold friendly gatherings of members of European and Indian communities.
- To discuss literary, scientific, and social subjects.

ans, hitherto adopted, have been the convening of public meetings for lectures and discourses in English and Indian languages, on subjects of literary, historical, and anti-arian interest, presided over by eminent representatives of all classes of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, and, in respect, the Society has achieved a fair measure of success.

Excellency's career, as Governor of Queensland, and of New South Wales, and, subsequently, as Governor-General of Australia, has enabled Your Excellency to study questions affecting justice and administration, both civil and literary, with an advantage that falls to the lot of a few statesmen.

During the last year and a half, Your Excellency's stay in Simla, in connection with Your Excellency's governmental duties, and Your Excellency's travels in some of the principal cities of India, afforded Your Excellency similar opportunities of coming into personal contact with the princes and people of this country and of acquiring a first-hand knowledge of their wishes and aspirations.

Excellency has, for sometime, been in Delhi with Lord Hardinge Your Excellency's distinguished predecessor in office, and, while there, Your Excellency must have acquainted Yourself with some of the burning questions of the day, including those of education, that are awaiting consideration.

Excellency's departure home from India, after closing our military career here, synchronised with the happy announcement of Your appointment as Viceroy and Governor-General of India. No representative of the Government sent out from among English statesmen, is come to rule the country with a wider knowledge of and a closer touch with its people. This is a circumstance, which well justifies the hope, entertained by His Majesty's Indian subjects, that the rule begun will not fail to succeed in popularising in India, more than ever British rule, broad-based, as it is, on their undying affection and unswerving loyalty.

Calcutta Literary Society also takes the liberty to associate with this humble Address of Welcome the name of Her Excellency Lady Chelmsford, to Whom it respectfully offers its most cordial welcome, and to express a fervent hope that from Her place, at the head of Society, She will exert Her best influence to promote the welfare of the women of this vast Indian Empire, not only by affording them relief from physical distress, but, also, by raising their status in the intellectual world.

the God of all nations shower His choicest blessings on Your Excellency, under whose benign care, Providence has been pleased to place the princes and people of this ancient land, and Your Excellency's Noble Consort!

Calcutta Literary Society, We have the honour to be,
24, Nimtola Street, Your Excellency, Calcutta, 4th April, 1916. Your Excellency's most devoted and humble servants.

Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair.
(Vide, Empire, 4th, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7th April, 1916.)

Proceedings of the Meeting, together with a copy of the above Welcome Address, signed by Forty-six Members and well-wishers of the Society, were then forwarded to His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, to which the following gracious reply was received :—

From H. E. the Viceroy & Governor-General of India :

Viceroy's Camp, India.

12th April, 1916.

Sir,

I am desirous to acknowledge, on behalf of His Excellency the Viceroy, the receipt of the Address of Welcome and also the abstract of the proceedings of the extraordinary General meeting held by the Calcutta Literary Society.

His Excellency much appreciates the goodwill of your Society, and I am to thank you for your communication.

Sham Lal Day, Esq.,

Secretary,

Calcutta Literary Society,

24, Nimtola Street, Calcutta.

Yours truly,

J. L. Maffey.

The fifth Public Meeting of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at Cornwallis Square, on Saturday, the 6th May, 1916, at 7 A. M., to commemorate the Sixth Anniversary of the Death of His Majesty the late Edward VII., King-Emperor of India :—

UNDER the presidency of the Founder-Secretary to the Society, when Mr. P. K. Bose made appropriate remarks on the career of His late Majesty, who had the greatest sympathy for his Indian subjects, in whose welfare His Majesty always took a keen interest.

The Chairman also made similar observations.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

6. The Sixth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at Cornwallis Square, on Wednesday, the 24th May, 1916, at 7 A. M., under the presidency of Rai Baikuntha Nath Basu Bahadur, ex Dewan of His Majesty's Mint in Calcutta, and Hony Presidency Magistrate—

To celebrate the Empire Day :—

When Mr. R. Palit, (of Howrah), said among other things thus :—

"Gentlemen, another year has gone on its cycle, since we addressed you last year, under the shadow of a devastating war. We had hoped then, that the din of war would merge ere long into universal peace, but our expectations have ended in smoke, and the war is being continued with as much vigour to-day, as when it began.

Gentlemen, one great lesson we have derived from this great War. It is the mighty strength of the soul before the prodigious munitions of war. Perhaps, you ever remember well, with what tenacity of purpose, the enemy tried to storm the fortress at Verdun, and what mighty engines of war were brought into action to crush the Allies, who, on the other hand fought with undaunted spirit and thereby exhibited to the world at large, what mighty potency the soul of man is possessed of.

The brute strength of the Huns bowed before the mightiness of the soul. It is the strength of the soul that triumphs over the brute strength of man. And this has proved true to the very letter at the battle of Verdun.

On this Empire Day, we meet here to show our loyalty to the British Crown. When England will hold aloft the olive branch of peace, and the din of War will be hushed in silence, we believe, the help, thus rendered by the Indians, in the present war, will surely be compensated by the grant of some boons by our benign Government—boons that will go to uplift India in the scale of nations.

Wherever floats the banner of England, there runs the spirit of freedom. Will not she hold aloft the banner of freedom to benighted India, and thereby enshrine her name in the grateful recollections of the teeming millions of India?

May she be guided by that spirit and may the present War bring Victory to England is our fervent prayer on this Empire Day. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked Dr. Vaman Baji Kulkarni Medical Adviser, Indian Alkaloidal Co., (of Bombay) to address the Meeting. The Doctor spoke very highly of the day, which gave birth to the Lady, who has played the greatest part in the history of mankind. The British Empire, to-day, stands first among the nations of the world, and, no nation has excelled the British Empire in the past.

The Empires built by the Romans, Greeks, and Moguls do not come to the level of the British Empire, not only in physical extension, but, in the moral development of mankind. It was, during the long reign of Queen Victoria, that the moral and intellectual progress of the Empire had taken place in a remarkable measure. One hundred years ago, a Marhatta from Bombay would have been looked upon with great suspicion in Bengal, but, to-day, we are the best friends. (Cheers.)

This auspicious day, which is held sacred by the Empire, has got peculiar value in cementing the ties of brotherhood. He thanked the Chairman for having given him the opportunity to express his feelings of veneration towards the Angel, who had kept the peace of the world, during her lifetime, and, who, if she were alive to-day, would not have allowed her grandsons to struggle with each other. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then addressed the assembly thus :—

Gentlemen, for more than six decades, the Twenty-fourth of May has been associated with the beloved name of Her late Imperial Majesty Queen Victoria—the Good, the Anniversary of Her Birthday being celebrated on that day.

Since Her lamentable demise, this day has come to be styled The Empire Day, and very rightly, too, for it was, during her glorious reign, that the British Empire reached its high-water mark—an Empire, over which, figuratively and literally, the Sun never sets,—an Empire, broad-based on the people's affection and good-will.

It was a happy idea of the Right Hon'ble Lord Meath to help in founding this day, when all the peoples, who have the proud privilege of calling themselves British subjects, can meet under the Flag and express their gratitude to the Almighty, who has given them such a high place among the nations of the world.

The Empire Day is the bond that knits together British subjects who live scattered all the world over. The bond has been tightened by the Great European War, which has convulsed the world, for British subjects, irrespective of their geographical location, are actuated by one common wish, namely, the success of Britain and her noble Allies, and the maintenance and advancement of her prestige and power. (Cheers.)

May God vouchsafe to us for all time to come the Pax Britannica, so that, under its benign shade, we and ours, for generations unborn, may live and thrive and send up a prayer to Him, for the uninterrupted prosperity of an Empire, the existence of which, both as an abstract idea and a concrete fact, we are met to celebrate this morning. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, Empire, 24th, Englishman, and Amrita Bazar Patrika 25th May, 1916.)

7. THE Seventh Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society was held in Cornwallis Square, on Friday, the 26th May, 1916, at 7 A. M., under the presidency of Rai Baikuntha Nath Basu Bahadur, ex-Dewan of His Majesty's Mint, in Calcutta, and Hon'g. Presidency Magistrate—

To Celebrate the Golden Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Mary of England and Empress of India.

When Mr. R. Palit, (of Howrah), addressed the Meeting thus :—

Gentlemen, the name of our Queen is associated with those womanly virtues, which have played so conspicuous a part at the asylums of wounded soldiers. The solicitude and motherly tenderness, shown to the wounded and the maimed, have made her name a household word among the Indians.

Our veneration for the womankind borders upon that worshipful reverence, which can hardly be witnessed among any other nations of the earth. She has been a veritable incarnation of Mother to the people of India, and her sentiments of kindliness—an exhibition of which she gave to our men, when she came to this benighted land of ours—shall ever remain engraved on the tablets of our memory. (Cheers.)

Our rejoicings, to-day, have been marred by the present war, at the altar of which the flower of the Indian army have sacrificed their lives. Their fealty to the British Crown is unquestionable, for they have sacrificed their all to bring victory to the British nation.

Our hearts are really heavy to-day, at the thought those stalwart sons of England, who have smilingly offered their lives at the altar of the Moloch as the sponsors of universal freedom. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, We cannot but regard with unmitigated abhorrence a people, whose kultur is synonymous with the meanest savagery. The brutality of Huns reached its high-water mark when that entering angel Miss Cavel met with her doom. And was her fault? She was instrumental in giving aid to the wounded Belgian and English soldiers.

May our Gracious Queen Mary live long and reign. Her vast Dominions is the united prayer of to-day. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked Mr. Bhuban Krishna Mitra to address the Meeting. Mr. Mitra rose and spoke words dilating upon the many womanly virtues of Her Imperial Majesty Queen-Empress Victoria.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting thus :—

Gentlemen, we are met here, this morning, to offer loyal congratulations to Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Mary, of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India, on the auspicious occasion of Golden Jubilee, or, the Fiftieth Anniversary of Imperial Majesty's Birthday. (Cheers.)

Queen-Empress Victoria was born on the 24th of May and Queen-Empress Mary on the 26th. Is not the closeness to each other of the dates of their birth typical of the closeness to each other of the virtues possessed by them?

Queen Victoria—The Good, for, that is the name, we light to call her by—was to the people of distant lands an abstract object of worship. Empress Mary, a concrete figure, for the Indian people have had an inestimable good fortune to see Her Majesty her two different occasions; viz :—(1) as Princess of Wales and (2) as Empress of India. (Cheers.)

And, what ineffable impressions of dignity, amiable and kindness has she left on their minds! And, outbursts of enthusiastic loyalty were evoked by Her gracious presence among them! She lives all up to the poet's utterance :

" 'Tis only noble to be good,

Kind hearts are more than coronets."

She is a model Consort, a model Mother, a model Mistress and a Model Queen. She is the queenliest of women and the womanliest of queens. The Great Britain that is now raging in Europe, has brought to fore several latent traits in her character. She is shown in abundance—

"The reason firm, the temperate will, Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill."

And verily she has proved—

"A perfect woman nobly planned,
To warm, to comfort, and command."

She has proved a worthy help-mate to our beloved Emperor, in these days of storm and stress.

While we pray fervently to God, for Her health and happiness, during the year, into which she has stepped to-day, we join the poet in addressing the bells—

"Ring out old shapes of foul disease,
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold,
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace."

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to the speaker and the learned speakers.

8. THE Eighth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held, in College Square on Saturday the 3rd June, 1916, at 7 A. M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhusan, M.A., Ph.D., M.R.A.S., F.A.S.B., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate, and Examiner of the Calcutta University, to celebrate—

Fifty-second Anniversary of the Birthday of His Imperial Majesty George V., King of England and Emperor of India :—

Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu addressed the Meeting thus :—
Gentlemen, we assemble here, this morning, to celebrate the Fifty-second Anniversary of the Birthday of His Most Gracious Majesty George V., King of England and Emperor of India. We all know the great troubles that England has had to face in the present dreadful War. But this War has shown how all the several parts of the British Empire have stood bravely and manfully by England, in her dreadful struggle with her foe, and how they have helped her to the utmost of their power with men and money.

We are all well aware, what great help India has now rendered to England, and how the people of India have stood by her side. We hope that our benign Government would grant the most loyal request of the people to have them enlisted as soldiers in the British Army, that they may fight for their noble King.

May the Almighty God grant a long life to our beloved King-Emperor and His noble Consort, and may He shower His choicest blessings upon them. (Cheers.)

R. Palit then addressed the Meeting thus :—

Gentlemen amidst the deepening gloom of a devastating War, we witness to-day, in the horizon of the conflict, the streaks of a rising dawn. The gallantry of the Allies, at Verdun, brings home to our mind that victory is near at hand. (Cheers.)

During this great War, His Imperial Majesty has set forth an ideal example in the cause of Temperance. He has prohibited the sale of Alcoholic liquor all over the United Kingdom. His feelings of kindness to our people are still green in our memory. (Cheers.) There are other traits of His Majesty's character, which have brought him, during this War, to the fore-front of world-wide reputation like the Great King Yudhishthira of old. (Cheers.)

On his happy 52nd Anniversary of the Birth-day of His Majesty, I should like to ask, Are you conscious, to-day, of the great responsibility that rests upon you as individual subjects of the Crown?

I am quite certain that no one can estimate, in the very best degree, the effect that this desolating conflict is going to have upon the peoples of the world—and, more especially, upon India.

To our people, even in India, I am afraid, realize fully the significance of the part, India is playing in the War. She is, whatever the reasons may be,—whether it is from any particular affection for the English people, or, whether it is merely, because, she recognises that her interests are bound up inseparably with the interests of the British Empire—she is asserting her right to be treated as a portion of the Empire, and to take her share in the responsibilities of that Empire—to be treated as a partner and not as a mere dependent.

In short, India, to-day, is vindicating the principle of Nationality—a principle round which are entwined the sweetest dreams of our life. (Cheers.)

Remember, that there is a great responsibility that rests upon you, as individual members of society. Your very utterances—nay, your movements, are very likely to colour, in a great degree, the position that you will hold in India, in the near future.

Our brothers are mingling their best blood, with the Allies, upon the battle-field, in the various theatres of this great European War, and this will considerably weigh in the balance, when questions concerning the future of India will come up before the public opinion of the world. (Cheers.)

May His Majesty The King-Emperor of India long reign over his vast Dominions, and may this titanic War be brought to a speedy termination, in favor of the British and their Allies, is our fervent prayer to-day. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then made a nice little speech. He congratulated the Calcutta Literary Society for holding such Meeting every year, and offered up a prayer to the Almighty Disposer of Events for the long life of His Imperial Majesty and his beloved Consort, and for the speedy termination of the War and for the complete victory of the British Arms with their noble Allies.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair. Alms were then distributed to the poor.

9. THE Ninth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held in College Square, on Friday, the 23rd June, 1916, at 7. A. M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Tidyabhusan M.A., Ph. D., M.R.A.S., F. A. S. B., Principal Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate and Examiner of the Calcutta University, to celebrate :—

The Twenty-second Anniversary of the Birthday of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales :—

When Mr. R. Palit, (of Howrah), addressed the Meeting thus :—
Gentlemen, we have assembled here, this morning, to celebrate the Twenty-second Anniversary of the Birthday of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales—A Birthday with an Englishman is always a day for joy and merriment. (Cheers.)

But, to-day, our hearts are heavy, for a gloom of sorrow seems to have settled over every English home. Those places in Europe that had, ere this, been strewn with flowers of peace and contentment, have, of late, been converted into hunting grounds for the demon of War.

During this great War, His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, born of a Royal Lineage, and nursed on the best examples of noble heroism, has sacrificed his life to-day for the ministrations of the wounded soldiers in the battle-field. (Cheers.)

He has been raising subscriptions to provide the best medical treatment and comfort to those warriors of humanity, who have shed undying lustre on English civilization by their deeds of heroism. Such self-effacement has a great educative value.

The destiny, the character, the life of India—are at this moment, in the crucible. Into what mould will that future life issue? It depends very largely upon the respective roles, that you play to-day on the stage of Argyavarta.

May His Royal Highness live long and grow in the wisdom of this spirit is our fervent prayer, this morning, to the Almighty God, and may this titanic War be brought to a speedy termination in favour of the British and their Allies. (Cheers.)

The venerable Chairman then prayed for the long life of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, and for the complete victory of the British Arms with their Allies. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, Empire, 23rd, Englishman, and Anrita Bazar Patrika, 24th June, 1916.)

10. THE Tenth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 43-A, College Square, East, on Thursday, the 13th July, 1916, at 5-30 P. M. :—

To Congratulate the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Chara Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., Vakil, Faridpur Bar, President of the Thirty-first Indian National Congress etc :—

On his election to the Bengal Legislative Council.

The Meeting was well-attended. On the motion of Mr. Jna Chandra Roy, B.L. seconded by Kumar Hari Prasad Roy (Posta), Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.D., M.S., Principal National Medical College and Secretary, Bengalee Regiment Committee, was voted to the Chair, amidst applause.

On the Chairman taking his seat, Mr. Shaikh Lall Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the following Address, which was very nicely printed on gold.

To

THE Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M. A., B. L., Vakil, Faridpur Bar, Member of the Legislative Council of His Excellency The Right Hon'ble the Governor of Fort William in Bengal, &c :—

SIR,

ONCE before, in 1904, (i.e., on 21st August, 1904), the Calcutta Literary Society offered you its most sincere congratulations on your election for the first time as a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, under the presidency of the late lamented Mr. Lal Mahan Ghose, Bar-at-Law, and before a distinguished assembly, and, now, twelve years after, we beg leave again to offer you our heartfelt congratulations on your election to the Legislative Council of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Fort William in Bengal.

THE people of this country are dumb and voiceless : and you, with others, have been elected as their chosen and accredited spokesman. This is a high honour : but, in your case, you fully deserved it.

FOR Forty years and more you have been intimately associated with the public life of India and have given to your country of your very best. You began work in the heyday of youth, in the full vigour and strength of life. The shades of evening are beginning to close in now over the path : but you are still at the post—alert and watchful as ever—the old pilot, weather-beaten, wind-buffed, but staunch and faithful till the last.

THE record of your life is glorious ; and we can touch only upon portions of it here. After a brilliant educational career, you joined the Faridpur Bar and at once distinguished yourself by your sturdy independence and your remarkable professional skill. Since then you have been closely associated with every phase of life and movement in your district, and have justly earned the title of The Grand Old Man of East Bengal.

YOU have been one of the pillars of the Indian National Congress from the inception of the national movement. Often has your noble eloquence rung forth from the platform of our Indian Parliament ; and your country has shown its appreciation of your services by twice electing you as President of the Bengal Provincial Conference.

YOU successfully led the movement against the Legal Practitioners' Bill, which threatened the independence of the Mofussil Bar, and seriously affected the interests of the Mofussil public.

AGAIN, in 1894, when the independence of the Bengal Municipalities was threatened by the Mofussil Municipal Amendment Bill, your efforts materially contributed to the abandonment of the more objectionable features of that Bill.

WHEN East Bengal was visited by a famine, you did yeoman's service by raising large sums of money and distributing them for the relief of the distressed people.

EAST, though not the least, you fought strenuously for the annulment of the Partition of Bengal—a measure, the iniquity of which was so patent, that it was ultimately set aside by His Most Gracious Majesty George V., King-Emperor of India, in 1912.

ALSO, you were one of the foremost leaders of that Swadeshi Movement, which has been prolific of such beneficial results throughout the country.

YOU have ungrudgingly sacrificed your wealth, health and time for the service of the Mother-land—and, we doubt not, that in the fullness of time, you will be rewarded by full fruits for your labours.

NOW, in your old age, when men retire from the affairs of life, you have again come to the Bengal Legislative Council, and, that at a time, when great efforts will have to be made for the re-adjustment of the Indian Administration. We sincerely hope and trust that in you, Sir, we shall ever find a sturdy champion of popular rights in the Bengal Legislative Council.

MAY God bless you with long life. May peace and prosperity be your constant companion, and may the Omnipotent continue to endow you with those virtues, which have made you such a strong champion of our country, and gained for you such dear love from our beloved countrymen.

The Calcutta Literary Society. Yours Obediently,
24, NINTOLA STREET, Sham Lal Day,
Calcutta. 13th July. 1916. Founder-Secretary to the Society.

The Chairman having submitted the aforesaid Address, to the Hon'ble host of the evening, the Hon'ble M. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M. A., B. L., addressed the assembly thus :

Dr. Mullick and Gentlemen.

I use no language of mere convention, when I say, that I find no words adequately to thank you for the great honour you have done me this evening. It would be the barest pretension, for even the most modest among us to say, that he is either indifferent or impervious to such a demonstration, as the one, in the midst of which I am placed this evening ; but, just believe me that my only regret is that I cannot honestly say to myself that I deserve the compliment, you have so lavishly bestowed upon me and the many kind things you have in your beautiful Address said regarding myself.

Gentlemen, you have referred to my past services. But what are they ?—not even a drop—in comparison to the vast field of work, which is lying altogether barren before us ! What have we done in the past to faithfully discharge our duty to our country, in ameliorating the condition of our people, and in safeguarding their rights and liberties ?

Demonstrations, like this, are, no doubt, intended to serve one useful purpose. They may serve as an incentive to public life—a great invigorative to public activity. But, gentlemen, there is a limitation in nature, beyond which even the immortals cannot go.

You cannot whip a jaded horse to run, when it has nearly run out its course and is almost down on its knees. God grant it may be vouchsafed to me at this evening of my life faithfully to wait on my country till the moment of my release. For, as the Poet says the also serve, who stand and wait.

Gentlemen, you certainly expect me to say something about the burning topics of the day. But, I cannot abuse the hospitality of the Calcutta Literary Society, by treading upon the forbidden ground of politics.

Politics have fallen on evil times and on evil tongues. They are condemned, even by those, who do not deprecate them, as well as those, whose very existence would have been wiped out, but, for political consideration. It was, indeed, an angel of mercy, who would not allow the grand-father to kill the blue-bottle—because, she wished to kill it herself. Not many years ago, the Lord Mayor of London had to preside at a non-political function.

On rising, to open the meeting, he said :—Gentlemen, this is a non-political function, but I know of no subject which is wholly divorced from politics, so, all I can do, is to sit down.

Gentlemen, I am almost tempted to follow the precedent of the Lord Mayor. My only difficulty is that, I am not the Lord Mayor, nor is Calcutta, London.

Leaving politics aside, there are a number of questions which are agitating the public mind in this country. We are in the midst of a great transition. It is the beginning of modern Indian Renaissance evolved out of a providential contact between Western and Eastern culture—a struggle between matter and mind, and race between science and philosophy. It is, therefore, quite natural—nay, almost inevitable—that the public mind in this country should be in a state of ferment such a period.

Now, the first and foremost among these burning questions is that of Education. One hundred and fifty years of British rule have established a State regulated system of public education, which has been successful in developing education throughout the country.

That development is, no doubt, remarkable and the question now is,—Is it, or is it not, adequate for the growing demands of the country ? Reviewing the present situation, a cry has been raised, in certain quarters, that we are getting too many people educated, and people are not wanting who would cry ha

Now, if education means only a passport for entrance into the State services, it need not be disputed that the number of educated people, even in this country, is far in excess of the demand of the State. But, is there any country in the world, where education is regulated by this standard? Is there any Government, which can profess to absorb more than an infinitesimal fraction of its educated population?

That were the condition of the growth and development of education, even the most advanced countries in Europe would have remained up to this time steeped in darkness and ignorance.

Gentlemen, education has a value of its own, and it is the most important factor in evolving the civilization of a people, in developing its moral and material strength, and, in determining its position in the scale of nations. Judged by this test, it must be admitted that India occupies a very low place among the civilized nations of the world.

Education is very poor. Whether the number of educated men be either too many or too few, it is a fact that only six per cent of the vast population are literate and ninety-four per cent have been allowed to grow in dense ignorance.

Let me go further, it may be pointed out that this proportion of literacy and illiteracy is exactly reversed in the small principality of Baroda State. We cannot afford to be very proud of this educational progress during a period of more than one hundred and fifty years.

Gentlemen, on the other hand, a cry has been raised among us as to the future of our young men. What are their prospects? And what are our educated men to do? This is often said to be a great problem of the day.

I am bold enough to venture to say that this question seems to be wholly unimportant and beside the real issue. It is practically the same question, to which I have already referred, and which proceeds upon the assumption that we have got a larger number of educated men than we can provide for.

What the future prospects of our children will be—the future alone can solve. It is not for us to provide suitable berths for each of them, before sending them to school.

We have to give them a liberal education, store their minds with useful knowledge and properly equip them for the battle of life. If we have done that, we shall have done our duty. It will be then their duty to find out their own way.

A man's life-chart can be pre-arranged and drawn to scale and compass. It cannot be regulated to the precision of a Utopia. On a railway platform there often appear to be a much larger number of passengers than a train can apparently carry. But, all the same, when the train starts, none is left behind. The passengers may bustle and jostle for a time; ultimately, all are accommodated and they proceed on their journey.

We are sometimes asked—what are our Graduates and Under-Graduates to do?—Where will be the Matriculates?—Why?—they will be in the shops, in the fields, in the factories and many other places, where the ignorant are now working indifferently.

There will be a glorious day for the country, when the carpenter, the smith, the artisan, and the cultivator will be all more or less educated, and the dignity of labour established throughout all classes of people.

Gentlemen, if we have to provide for our children, there is the vast field of industries, which we can build and leave to them as a legacy. Here, again, a cry has been raised that India is essentially an agricultural country and the people should turn rather to the fields than to the factories, or, in other words, India should produce only raw materials out of the soil, leaving the more finished articles to be manufactured by other countries.

I would like to see the covenant of Providence which contains this clause disinheriting the Indians from participating in the illimitable bounties of science and art. There never was a classification of this kind in the past history of the world, nor can there be such a pigeon-hole arrangement in the future.

The economic problem of every country is to develop its resources, whether natural or artificial, to the utmost advantage of its Government and its people. And, in this, both the Government and the people of a country should be united, helping and co-operating with each other to solve this problem.

India is admitted to be the poorest country in the world. More than one-fifth of the population, in normal years, live on the verge of starvation, while the authoritative accounts record more than twenty famines within the last forty-two years.

The Public services and the professions are too few and over-crammed. Where is the vast population to go for their existence? Surely, the industries must come to their rescue. And, in this, the Government of this country is naturally expected to come to their assistance as far as practicable.

The history of modern Japan is often cited as a precedent: but, I confess, I do not know much about the actual condition of Japan's economic development, although the extent and rapidity of that extraordinary development are visible on all sides.

The Royal Commission that has recently been appointed is expected to throw some light on this subject and help the industrial problem in this country. No doubt, the people have grown sceptic of commissions and committees: but, I hope, something will come out of the present Royal Commission. (Cheers.)

It seems to me that if Government cannot, and, if it be also undesirable for Government, to build industries, it can, at any rate, show the way to the people for each industry suited to any particular locality, and when the people under its guidance should have started any industry, it can guarantee a certain percentage of profit until it is able to stand on its own legs.

This will go a great way to help the people and I hope at least something of this nature will result from the labours of the Royal Commission. (Cheers.)

Then, gentlemen, there are quite a number of Social questions demanding our earnest attention, and it seems to me that one of the foremost among them is the growing evil of Marriage Dowries, which is eating into the vitals of our social system, impoverishing one half of the people and leading to the tragic deaths of our innocent girls.

It is an inhuman and extortionate practice, and what is still more regrettable is that it is more prevalent among the educated people. There seems to be no justification for this mean and nefarious practice.

You educate your son at considerable expense, no doubt, but you do so for your own benefit. His earnings return to your pocket and not of his father-in-law. Then, why should you fleece that father-in-law for your son's education?

You are not Nairs that your sons are incorporated upon their marriage into their father-in-law's families. It is perhaps useless to appeal to the Shylocks, who have made it a veritable traffic of their male children.

I appeal to the bright young faces, whom I see before me. You Graduates and Under-Graduates of the University, to you I appeal to maintain the honour and dignity of our race, to save the situation, and preserve the integrity and purity of our social organization.

I ask you to stand up and protest. Assert your rights as human beings and refuse to be sold to the highest bidder as chattles or live-stock in the market.

One word more and I have done. Gentlemen, lawlessness has tarnished the fair fame of Bengal. Try to erradicate this evil. In no age and in no country has any righteous cause been served by dastardly methods. Grievances we have, but, they cannot be removed by dark and foul deeds. (Cheers.)

"Beware of desperate thoughts: The darkest day, Live till to-morrow, will have passed away" (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjia, Vakil, to address the Meeting.

Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjia, Vakil, said:—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen; We are met together here this afternoon to pay the tribute of our respect and regard to the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, whose election to the Bengal Legislative Council, for the second time is indeed a matter of national congratulation. (Cheers.)

He is a veteran in the field of public life, having behind him a splendid record of public services extending to more than thirty years—a clean and glowing record of which any public man may be proud. (Cheers.)

He is our political sage—a Rishi in appearance and character, wisdom, and foresight, who has consecrated his life to the services of his country. The love, esteem, and confidence of his countrymen, he enjoys in a bundant measure for his admirable qualities of head and heart.

His statesmanlike insight and mellow wisdom, his broad outlook and large vision, his patriotic devotion to the best interests of the country and the sacrifices, which he has willingly made to fulfill his life's vocation, as a teacher of the community. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar lives his daily life far away from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife. Had he been more in evidence before the public eye and made pushing in his nature, he would have long ago been acclaimed to the highest honours by the united suffrages of his countrymen, for, there is, indeed, no honour too high for this gifted leader. (Cheers.)

He has just written a book, which is a masterpiece in our political literature, showing his intimate acquaintance with our political conditions and his keen and penetrating insight into our political requirements.

His book is a vade mecum of all earnest students of Indian politics, for it gives in a nutshell the whole political history of India of our own times.

Sir, to my mind, it is a supremely inspiring sight to see the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, bent down under the weight of years and bodily infirmities, crushed under the heavy burden of family cares and bereavements, still in harness for the good of his country and giving the best of himself to the services of his people. (Cheers.)

Age has failed to lay its withering hand on his great powers or throw a wet blanket on his robust enthusiasm. His ardour and optimism, again, are never chilled by any difficulty. Undaunted by difficulties, before which any ordinary man would have quailed, he has never allowed himself to go in sackcloth and own any defect.

He is our war-scarred veteran, the hero of a hundred fights, the leader, who holds his sway over the hearts of his people by the magic of his personality and character, and who has brought over the altar of his country's cause the gift of reverent thought and the burning and glowing love that rejoices in service.

God grant him long life, so that the great work in which he is engaged, the work in which he has spent himself with a supreme disregard of his personal interests, may be carried on by him with the fullest measure of success. Here's, Sir, to you and yours, May you live and prosper. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, Mr. Juan Chandra Roy, B. L., and Mr. Parfulla Kumar Basu also spoke at the Meeting.

The Chairman's Speech:—

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting. He said that Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar was always practical in all he says and that was the reason why in this dethroned city he has been enthroned in our heart.

The speaker said that he saw many young men before him and he asked them to drink deep from the fountain of wisdom, which their leader Ambika Babu provided. He asked them to consider why it was that India was a country without much industry. It cannot be said that, because, a country was agricultural, it could not be industrial as well. In fact, it was more natural that a country that produced raw material would be in a better position to turn out the finished article.

Much had been said about the industrial movement in Japan, and they were asked to take Japan as a model to be followed. But, it ought to have been quite the other way about.

India had been under the tutelage of the greatest industrial country in the world. For, there was none to beat England for industry, and, by right, India should have been the leader of the Eastern world in matters commercial.

However, there is a great industrial revival, and Government as well as the people are combining to make India attain her rightful place in the comity of nations.

Our people require some help to create confidence in a new enterprise. That confidence could be created by Government in various ways, direct and indirect. One simple example was the Government Aided Light Railways and Dr. S. K. Mullick ventured to say the capital would show no shortage, but would come in amounts more than required.

He could not do better than refer the audience to the protective and legislative methods adopted by England in the early days to create her industry.

The Chairman then thanked, on behalf of the audience, the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar for his brilliant speech, and he felt sure that the new openings of life he indicated would be followed by our young men.

Dr. Mullick added that at no distant date, the military profession would also be opened to Bengalis, and he had every confidence that Bengalis would prove themselves courageous and resourceful in the field of battle, as they had done times without number in the discharge of the highest civic duties. He looked forward to a great revival of Bengali enterprise in the furtherance of the best of national advancement. (Cheers.)

Let us pray to God that He may grant to Ambika Babu many more years of active life, so that he may serve his country and countrymen with that unflinching zeal and devotion, which characterized his activities. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chairman at 7 P. M.

(Vide, Bengalee, 14th, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 14th and 20th July, 1916.)

11 The Eleventh Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Bengal Theosophical Society, 43-A, College Square, East, on Thursday the 13th July, 1916, at 7 P. M., under the presidency of Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.D., M.S., Principal, Natal Medical College and King's Hospital, and Secretary, Bengalee Regiment Committee, when Mr. Pradyumn Kumar Basu delivered an extempore lecture on—

Technical Education in India.

The lecturer dwelt upon his subject for nearly a quarter of an hour. He said that Technical Education in India is now very essentially necessary to the growth and development of commerce and industry in India. Small Technical Institutions should be established in the villages in India, with special evening classes for the agriculturists and artisans, while big technical institutions should be opened in the principal towns where higher technical education should be imparted.

serving students should be sent to foreign countries for the acquirement of higher technical learning and training, and when they would return to their motherland, their technical learning and training must be fractionally utilised for the benefit of the country. Mills and factories should be established all over the country, where practical technical learning and training may be acquired and practical experts may be turned out.

Some technical education, especially to the women, is a very great and important necessity in this country. The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, Bengalee, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 14th July, 1916.)

(3) The Twelfth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at the Alfred Theatre, 91, Harrison Road, on Friday, the 14th July, 1916, at 5 30 P.M.—
b Congratulate the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, Hony. Presidency Magistrate, Municipal Commissioner of the Corporation of Calcutta, on his re-election to the Bengal Legislative Council :—

The Meeting was largely attended. On the motion of Kumar Rajendra Narayan Roy of Jorasanko Rajbati, seconded by Kumar Hari Prasad Roy of Posta Rajbati, the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M. A., B. L., Vakil, Faridpur Bar, and Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, was voted to the Chair, amidst applause.

On the Chairman taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the following Address, which was very nicely printed in gold.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, Member of the Legislative Council of His Excellency The Right Hon'ble the Governor of Fort William in Bengal.

I, the members of the Calcutta Literary Society, beg to offer you our sincere congratulations on your re-election to the Bengal Legislative Council, as the representative of the City of Calcutta.

We feel double gratification on this occasion, for not only you, but your illustrious father, the late Hon'ble Rai Kristodas Pal Bahadur, C.I.E., who was an well-wisher of the Society, and to whom the Society is indebted for much valuable help, advice and guidance in its early career.

We feel, therefore, that in honouring you, we honour the memory of the great and good man, who was a glory to Bengal,—nay, to the whole of India.

Worthy son of a worthy father, you have maintained the traditions of the great name you bear. It is not often that we find in our country the descendant of a great man following in the foot-steps of his ancestor and consecrating his life for the good of his fellow-countrymen.

But, in your case, you have shown an example how a worthy son can successfully maintain the name and fame of his father. You are not only the inheritor of a great name, but you are also the inheritor of many of his virtues.

Like your noble sire, your motto is Loyalty to the Crown and Justice to your fellow-men. Like him, you have correctly realised that the salvation of our poor country depends upon the good-will, sympathy, and generosity of the British Rule. And you have consistently worked to that end.

Highly independent and out-spoken and fully sensible of the wants and wishes of our countrymen, you have voted your life to the ventilation of their grievances, and to fight for them, individually or collectively, as the case demands.

You have thrown yourself heart and soul into the civic affairs of the Premier City of India. You entered the Corporation of Calcutta, not long after you had passed your teens, and your wonderful success in the Municipality of Calcutta, and in the Improvement Trust has been a matter of great satisfaction, not only to your friends and relatives, but to your father's friends and admirers. Of you, it may be said, without exaggeration, that you are pre-eminently a people's man. Whether in the Corporation of Calcutta, or in the Calcutta Improvement Trust, you are foremost fighting for any aggrieved person. You are, at the present moment, one of the most popular men in Calcutta.

The transcendental talents, abilities, depth of learning, wise and far-seeing statesmanship, combined with moderation, tact and temper, made your father the foremost leader of Indian thought and aspiration, and his services embraced the whole of India.

But, in Calcutta, in the sphere of Municipal and parochial politics and activity you are not the less a true friend and representative of the people. India would be distinctly benefitted if there were a larger number of publicists, like yourself, in every city, in every village, and in every hamlet.

In conclusion, we again offer you our sincere felicitations on your re-election to the Bengal Legislative Council, where you have already established a reputation, and where your presence and activity would be highly serviceable in the forthcoming deliberations over the Calcutta Improvement Act Amendment and the Calcutta Municipal Act Amendment Bills.

May you live long and be more and more useful to your fellow-citizens is our sincere prayer.

The Calcutta Literary Society. Yours Sincerely,
24, NIMTOLA STREET, Sham Lal Day,
CALCUTTA, 14th July, 1916. Founder-Secretary to the Society.

The Chairman having submitted the aforesaid Address to the Hon'ble host of the evening, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur addressed the assembly thus :—

Gentlemen, I do not know why I have been summoned here to receive, in a public manner, this mark of your approbation and confidence. Speaking frankly, I must confess, I am not a little blushed at the demonstration, when I consider your Society has honoured distinguished men, like our venerable and venerated Chairman and others, who have left their mark in the history of our country. (Cheers.)

I feel the smallness of my claim upon this great honour, which you are doing me. Before the august presence of our Chairman, I feel like a pigmy before a giant.

I do not know how to thank you adequately for the tribute that you have paid to my humble services in the Address, just read by my friend, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the indefatigable Secretary and Founder of the Calcutta Literary Society.

I thank you most heartily for the Address and for the kindly words in which it is couched. You have referred in your Address to my dear father. You acknowledge with gratitude the help and guidance of my father in the early days of your Literary Institution.

You allude to his services to the country and the devotion and zeal, with which he served our fatherland, and his great influence and his great personality. As a son, I naturally feel an emotion of pleasure and pride that, after thirty-one years of his exit from this world, his memory is remembered with gratitude, love and affection by the succeeding generation. (Cheers.)

I am fortunate to be the bearer of that great name and I can honestly and truthfully say that whatever success I have attained in my career, is due to the inspiration, which the life, character and writings of my dear father afforded to me and to the indulgent and sympathetic support of my beloved countrymen. (Cheers.)

The Calcutta Literary Society is one of the oldest literary institutions of this city. It can look back to a glorious past. Founded in the early seventies, by the patriotic and indefatigable Babu Sham Lal Day, it attracted the sympathy and co-operation of men of light and leading of the community and it soon became the centre of intellectual activity. (Cheers.)

Thanks to the unwearied exertions and devotion of its founder, it has not lost its vitality, on account of its age, nor showed any sign of decay or senility. It is in its full vigour and manhood, but we cannot expect the amiable and willing worker, I mean, the Founder-Secretary, to retain the vitality of youth and to sustain the burden of this Literary Institution for ever. (Cheers.)

I see around me young men, the future hope of our country, many of whom glowing with patriotic fire to serve the mother country. I invite them, not only to join this Society, but to make it the centre of literary and social activity. There ought to be a regular organization of lectures and social gatherings. Young men should join the discussion, and, by mutual interchange of views, uplift their thoughts and ideals to a higher plane. Thus, the Society will live—and live for ever and will continue as a medium for diffusion of knowledge and as a common ground for social reunion. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, you have referred, in your Address to my work, to my labours in the Calcutta Municipal Corporation, and in the Calcutta Improvement Trust. I confess I am deeply interested in Municipal and Parochial work of this city, and I have made the affairs of the city of my birth my special study.

I do not soar high in the regions of higher politics,—I mean, the politics of the Empire. Not that I am not interested in the great political questions, which appertain to the great Empire, of which I am a humble citizen. I am as keen as the most ardent politician of my country for the consummation of those ideals of political progress and advancement, which constitute the birth-right of every subject of the great British Empire. (Cheers.)

What, in my humble opinion, is best conducive to the interest of the country—is the division of work. Local politics and local affairs, I grieve to say, are much neglected, as most of our capable and worthy men seem to be in pursuit of higher politics and are immersed in Imperial affairs.

If you analyse fully and carefully, you will find our happiness and comfort depend not a little upon the due administration of local affairs and larger and effective control of those affairs by the people themselves.

Local Self-Government, in its true and literal sense, is the lowest rung of the ladder of popular Government. We have not yet got that measure of true Self Government, which we have a right to expect, after nearly two centuries of British rule. (Cheers.)

We must strive to get it, and in the prospective change in the angle of vision our hope lies. In the constitutional struggle for larger powers for the administration of local affairs, none is better fitted to lead us than the venerable Grand Old Man of Bengal, whom we have fortunately got back in our Provincial Council this year. (Cheers.)

The attention of the country and our public men must be devoted to the development of Local Self Government, in the forthcoming battle on the Calcutta Municipal Act Amendment Bill.

As the Hon'ble Mr. Nathan Mathews justly observed, "The questions that will touch you oftenest and closest in your personal relations are questions of Municipal, rather than of State or National Government—the problem of Local Self-Government, or, democratic principles for great bodies of people congregated together, in a single neighbourhood and without the controlling power of a superior Central Government."

I would, therefore, ask your co-operation to strengthen the hands of your representatives in the Council, by unmistakable expression of public opinion, from every nook and corner of the city, on this momentous question.

You have referred to the proposed amendment of the Calcutta Improvement Act. I believe that I echo the voice of the entire community, when I say that in the abstract, we do not object to the improvement of the city—structural or sanitary.

What we object to, is the practical autocracy or one-man-rule, despite what may be urged that the administration of the Trust is in the hands of the Board. Time will not permit me to expose the hollowness of the argument or the clever interposition of a sham board to cover the despotic sway of the Dictator.

Suffice it to say, that the autocracy is so thinly veiled that any man in the street will tell you that it is a one-man show. I do not make any reflection upon individual. Human nature is human nature, however well-intentioned the man may be, he will retain powers in his own hand and tries to free himself from the restraining influence of any power-body, but the evil of such a constitution has a reaching effect when the Dictator is strong-willed, unyielding and carries his own will, fully conscious of the fact that there is no tribunal or board of arbitration, whom the aggrieved party might approach.

The law is defective in this respect. Large areas of surplus land are taken and the poorer, middle-class people are threatened with extinction, if they do not pay the exemption fee demanded. They cry, they lift their heads, they beat their breasts, they shed tears.

If they do not agree to submit to the exorbitant fee, they are asked to quit. Religious attachment of the people stands in the way. They bleed, yet they do not submit to it, though deeply discontented and dissatisfied. The Act does not permit the unfortunate man to appeal to a tribunal, so that a third party might decide whether the fee should be, say, six thousand or ten thousand, instead of, say, ten thousand.

I know there is a deep and wide-spread discontent. Government cannot for ever shut its eyes and ears. Agitation, persistent and constitutional, should be carried on to bring about an amendment of the law to break the autocracy of one-man-rule.

Gentlemen, before I sit down, I should like to say a few words about the Legislative Council. You must build up high hopes on the reformed Council. My experience of nearly nine years has convinced me that much can be done in carrying out the wishes of the people in the Legislative Council.

True, we have a non-official majority, but, if you are on the list of Hon'ble Members, it will be quite easy for you to find that the Government has practically the standing majority.

Within our limited powers and scope, we can do very much if the Government sets its face against our progress. But, it must gratefully be acknowledged that persistent agitation has awakened a sympathetic response in the hearts of the British nation and Government is now more willing to accede to popular demands than in days gone by.

Do not lay the flattering unction on your soul that, after you have got the reformed Council, your hopes and aspirations are bound to be fulfilled. In my humble opinion, and as a humble worker, and a hereditary publicist, I can say this, that much effective work is done and will be done by educating public opinion, by organising and strengthening public associations, by systematic and unceasing emphatic reiteration of public demands from every nook and corner of the country, by gathering in large volumes of the scattered expressions of public opinion of the country and, by proper organisation, loyal, respectful and united representation, and, in the end, by loyal and constitutional agitation, you will attain, though slowly, but surely, the goal you are aiming at.

Agitate, agitate, agitate, and the victory will be yours. populi Vox Dei. The genius of British rule is Justice, Liberty and Humanity, and that genius is present while Britannia unfurls her flag and that genius is never far from Vox populi.

It is that genius, in days of yore, the guardian angel of Rome and now of England, which has raised the populi to Vox Dei. Trust that genius, worship that genius, and, I am sure, that in the fulness of time, you will receive your reward.

Gentlemen, I thank you once more for your kind congratulations this afternoon, and, I, with all my heart, wish the Society every success. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman then asked Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukherjea, Vakil, to address the Meeting.

Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukherjea, Vakil, said :—

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, on the last occasion we met to pay the tribute of our respect and regard to the venerable personality of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., the leader of the popular wing in the Bengal Legislative Council.

To-day, it has given us unbounded satisfaction to do similar honour to our friend, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. By so honouring our representatives in the Council, I need hardly say, we are but honouring ourselves. To my mind, it is no meaningless formality or empty convention that has brought us here this evening, but a duty that we owe to ourselves—a duty, which can only be partially discharged, that has imposed upon us the obligation of the present inadequate demonstration. (Cheers.)

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is essentially the representative of the people. High politics has never held forth any fascination for him. But he has gone in with all the enthusiasm of his robust and virile nature for such form of Self-Government as vitally affects the daily interests of the people.

Every day, he holds a sort of levee in his house, attended by hundreds of aggrieved rate-payers of this city, to whose grievance he lends a ready and willing ear.

Some go to him for advice affecting such questions as the Municipal assessment. Others, again, seek his help, who find it so hard to make the building department relax a little and sanction the plans for extensions and improvements of their premises, the Municipality setting itself as strongly as is its wont against building enterprise.

There is, again, quite an army of persons, who pour forth into his ears the tales of their woe brought about by the operations of the Improvement Trust, how the houses occupied by them for generations, with which are imperishably entwined their dearest and most cherished associations, are taken on the plea of improving the amenities of the city, which they think might not have been altogether improved away, how western methods of town-planning would be seen introduced with a disregard of the peculiar conditions and requirements of a pre-eminently Eastern city, thus causing the separation of ties upon which something of venerable sanctity was obtained.

All these find in him a veritable guide, philosopher and friend, —a wise councillor, ready to put his shoulders to the wheel and to do what in him lies for the redress for their grievances.

Let me have not mentioned what a vast amount of good in the way of the relief of human suffering the Rai Bahadur does by stealth in his capacity as Secretary to the Indian Committee of the District Charitable Society.

Hundreds of poor and helpless widows, having none in this wide world to lend them a helping hand, invoke upon him the blessings of the Almighty for the little sunshine he has brought to their dreary and cheerless lives.

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is, in the truest acceptance of the expression, the worthy son of a worthy father. He tries to follow in the footsteps of his father as a filial duty sternly imposed upon him.

The duties and obligations of public life he has not accepted in an amateurist or light-hearted fashion, but as a solemn trust bequeathed from sire to son. To him, public life is no bed of roses, not a stepping stone to the main chance which has such a powerful attraction for the vulgar eye, but a chaplet of thorns, an avenue, it may be, to distinction and honour, but scratching the feet of the weary traveller with its hard stones and flints.

The road is long, the journey tiresome and tedious, and, no wonder, that the number of travellers is so few and far between. And among them, our honoured guest is well-known for the enthusiasm with which he has girded up his loins, the readiness with which he gives others the fruits of his labours.

Sir, to my mind, the best memorial of a man is a man. Not iron or brass or stone, nor the painter's, or the sculptor's art, but a man is the best memorial that a great man can have—a man to carry forth his name with veneration, to be true to his traditions, to be loyal to the lessons of his life, to continue his work from where he left it, to bear aloft the torch which has dropped from his frail hands.

Judged by this standard, Rai Kristo Das Pal Bahadur has left his memorial in the person of his son, who carries on his work in his spirit. (Cheers.)

May the word "success" be writ large upon his labours in the vanguard of public life! May the work which has been handed down to him by his father to which he has addressed himself with vigour and earnestness be carried forward to successful fruition! (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Mr. Z. R. Zahid Suhrawardy, Mahamedan Representative in the Bengal Legislative Council. Mr. Jnan Chandra Roy, B. L., and others were then asked to address the meeting.

The Hon'ble Chairman's speech :—

The Hon'ble Chairman, in addressing the assembly, said, that he warmly greeted both Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur and Mr. Z.R. Zahid Suhrawardy. The latter was a worthy representative of the educated Mahamedan community and is a friend and co-adjutor of the leaders of the Hindu community. His election has strengthened the educated community and we look forward to him for much useful work in the Bengal Legislative Council. (Cheers.)

As regards the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, he paid a warm tribute to the memory of his father, to whom Bengal—nay, India owed much of its public life. More enduring than his marble statue is the memorial which he has bequeathed to his country in the person of his worthy son. (Cheers.)

Rai Kristo Das Pal Bahadur was not only the tribune of the people, but was the confidential and minister without portfolio to the Government of his day. He was called Her Imperial Majesty's opposition in India. Yet so great was his marvellous influence, that his voice was a potent factor in moulding the legislature and other measures affecting the administration for over a quarter of a century. (Cheers.)

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has inherited many of the good qualities of his father, and it might be truly said of him that he is the most popular man in Calcutta. Ever accessible to the rich and the poor alike, ever ready to help the people in distress, he is truly a people's man. (Cheers.)

No more suitable representative of the city of Calcutta could be selected than the hereditary legislator, who has established his claim upon the community.

We warmly congratulate him for the laurel that he has won. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble Chairman also congratulated the Hon'ble Mr. Z. R. Zahid Suhrawardy, who was present at the meeting, on his election to the Bengal Legislative Council.

The Hon'ble Mr. Z.R. Zahid Suhrawardy, in accepting the congratulation, said that he was not prepared for the honour, with which he was just greeted. He assured his countrymen that he was glad that he was in company with the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar and the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, that afternoon, both of whom were veteran public men. He was glad to be associated with such men and nothing will be wanting on his part to further the interest of his country. He wished the Society every success. (Cheers.)

The Meeting separated with a vote of thanks to the Chair. (Vide, Amrita Bazar Patrika, 15th and 18th July, 1916.)

(13) The Thirteenth Public Meeting, of the Forty first session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Alfred Theatre, 91, Harrison Road, on Friday, the 14th July, 1916, at 7 P. M., under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mr. Ambika Charan Mazumdar, M.A., B.L., Vakil, Faridpur Bar, the Grand Old Man of Bengal and Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, when Mr. P. K. Basu delivered an extempore lecture on—

The Growth and Development of Commerce and Industry in India.

The lecturer spoke on his subject for nearly a quarter of an hour, in the course of which he said that the Growth and Development of Commerce and Industry is the crying want in this country.

Special weaving classes should be opened for the artisans and agriculturists, while higher Technical colleges should be established in the principal towns of India for imparting higher technical learning.

Students should be sent to foreign countries to acquire higher technical learning and on their return to this country, their services should be properly utilised.

Great attention should also be given to the development of the indigenous industries of this country. Mills and factories should be established all over India. Limited companies should be started in all parts of India, and the share-holders should strictly observe that the directors and managers do not commit any dishonesty and defrauding.

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chair.

- (14) The Fourteenth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held, at College Square Park, on Friday, the 4th August, 1916, at 7 A. M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhushan, M.A., Ph.D., F.R.A.S., F.A.S.E., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate and Examiner of the Calcutta University. —

To commemorate the Second Anniversary of the Declaration of War, between England and Germany.

When Mr. R. Palit of Howrah addressed the Meeting thus :— Since we met last year to commemorate the First Anniversary of the out-break of the war, the tide of battle has rolled on as furiously as ever. Little did we anticipate, at the commencement of the war, that it would bring about the terrible spectacle, which now confronts the Allies—a contest, which, for the number and importance of the Powers engaged, the scale of their armaments and armies, the width of the theatre of conflict, the outpouring of blood and loss of life, the incalculable toll of suffering levied upon non-combatants, the material and moral loss accumulating day by day to the higher interests of civilized mankind—a contest, which, in every one of these aspects, is without precedent in the annals of the world.

Though we are at times appalled at the magnitude of the resources of the enemies, yet, we are confident that God is with the Allies, for theirs is a righteous cause. Righteousness exalteth a nation, and, if we go through the pages of World's history, we shall find therein ample evidences of the ultimate triumph of a righteous cause.

Gentlemen, have we learned anything in these two years? We have learned at least one great lesson from this war—the necessity of prayer for the ultimate triumph of the British Arm. Brothers, let us raise our united voice to-day to the Almighty, supplicating Him to shower His benedictions upon the Allies. (Cheers.)

With regard to the result of the war, let me tell you, gentlemen, that the defeat of the German Fleet off the Danish coast has proved to be, as it were, like the pulling of the trigger in the discharge of a gun.

It has let loose the whole vast energy the Russians had accumulated during the past twelve months, and, as a result, the continuity of the German front has been destroyed, its flanks deprived of the support they hitherto derived from neutral States or disputed sea command, and the stalemate, from which the English have begun to move with an acceleration undreamt of before. The great Colossus of Europe is now roused, and, we believe, the Huns will ere long have to kiss the dust.

On the other hand, in the Western theatre of war, the Allies have taken the offensive and the Germans have begun moving backwards. A glorious victory for the Allies looms in the horizon of this titanic conflict. What have you seen during these two years of the German Kultur?

Gentlemen, when I recall to mind the occupation of Brussels, with all its splendid traditions and memories, the gradual forcing back of the patriotic defenders of their father-land to the ramparts of Antwerp, countless outrages suffered by them, buccaneering levies exacted from the unoffending civil population, and finally, the greatest crime committed against civilization and culture—the sack of Louvain, with its superb buildings, its magnificent pictures, its unique library, its unrivalled associations, a shameless holocaust of irreparable treasures lit up by blind barbarian vengeance, I feel myself constrained to say that the German Kultur is synonymous with the meanest savagery. Their so-called Kultur reached its consummation in the murder of that ministering angel Miss Cavell. And what was her fault? She was instrumental in giving shelter to the homeless British and Belgian soldiers.

Coming to more recent times, the murder of Captain Fryatt, a fortnight ago, by order of the German Government, has excited horror and indignation all over the civilized world. He has been the victim of a most cruel and cowardly act of vengeance. His death would not have thus impressed all civilized countries if they were not in the conduct of the German Government a peculiarly revolting injustice and savagery.

Gentlemen, is it proper that victory should be achieved by such people whose Kultur is another name for savagery? Compare this with the humanity shown by Great Britain towards the crews of German submarines, even when they have been engaged in the devilish work of sinking passenger vessels and consigning woman and children to a watery grave. I cannot really understand how German civilization and German savagery could run conjointly. Pride goeth before destruction, and as such their doom is sealed.

One word more and I shall be done. Ever since the beginning of the war, when India, in one stupendous burst of patriotism, offered her troops and her money to the Empire, the Indian Warrior has reigned supreme in the hearts of the British public. Whether it be the cheerful mien of a handsome Sikh, or the quaint face and merry eyes of a little Gurkha, they are all an object of worshipful admiration. Perchance, it is that there is a certain halo of romance, which envelopes the form of an Indian Sepoy, but, whatever it is, they have come and conquered the hearts of the British public.

The very thing, that statesmen and politicians have been striving so strenuously to accomplish for so many years, namely, a better understanding between the people of Great Britain and the people of India, has been brought about in this singular way. The exploits of the Indians in Flanders, Gallipoli and Mesopotamia are stories that will be handed down to the generations yet to come, and sung to the babe in the cradle and told to the child at the mother's knee, when this Great War has become a thing of the dim past—a nightmare at which we shall look back with relief to know it is over. We are proud of the part India played in this War.

May the Lord of all nations bring about a speedy victory the Allies is the heart-felt prayer of United India to-day. (Cheers.)

(Vide, Empire, 4th and Amrita Bazar Patrika 5th August, 1916.)

- (15) The Fifteenth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held in College Square Park, on Saturday, the 12th August, 1916, at 7-30 A. M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhushan, M.A., Ph.D., M.R.A.S., F.A.S.E., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate, and Examiner of the Calcutta University. To celebrate the Forty-eighth Anniversary of the Birthday of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Sir Frederic John Napier, Thesiger, Baron Chelmsford, M. A., G. C. M. G., G. M. S. I., G. M. I. E. Viceroy and Governor-General of India.

When Mr. R. Palit delivered an excellent speech, in the course of which he said :—

Gentlemen, we meet here, this morning, to commemorate Forty-eighth Anniversary of the Birthday of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Viceroy and Governor-General of India. (Cheers.)

[should like to mention, in this connection, only one instance of His Excellency's Statesmanlike policy, with which His Excellency has signalized his administration, within a few months of his Viceroyalty. His Excellency's government has allowed the Bengalis to be enlisted as soldiers, who would fight shoulder to shoulder, with the English at the front. (Cheers.)

The Bengalis, who were so long looked upon as a weak and timid nation, have given ample evidences of their gallantry in Mesopotamia, by their services in the Ambulance Corps. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, it will, no doubt, be a red-letter day, in the annals of India, when the much-maligned Bengalis would fight for the British Raj—nay, lay down their precious lives for the success of the British Arms. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, under Hindu rule, only the Khattirja were privileged to bear arms, and we do not come across any instance of a miscellaneous regiment of Brahmins, Vaidyas, Sutras, and Rajputs, under any of the Hindu Kings, who reigned in ancient days.

Gentlemen, Bengalis do not appear to have ever constituted a regular army, under the Hindu-lords who reigned as Kings or Emperors. In later times, when Bengali Kings, like the Sens and Guptas, reigned in Bengal, a Bengali army must have existed, but it was evidently a mixed army, composed of mercenaries of various nationalities, for, we hear of the Portuguese and the Dutch frequently invited by the Bengal Kings to protect them from internal revolution or outside aggression.

Gentlemen, under Mahomedan rulers, a few Hindus attained to high administrative and military posts, but none of them were Bengalis. There never was a Bengali army, nor were there Bengali soldiers in the proper sense of those terms.

The Bengali soldiers will go down to history, as the product of British administration in India. How we wish to-day, the spirit of Lord Macaulay were present at the place, where the Bengalis would be showing their deeds of gallantry, side by side with the English at the front. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, let us now pray to God to grant long life, health, peace and prosperity to our gracious and beloved Viceroy and Governor-General of India. With these few remarks, I beg now to resume my seat. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then asked Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu to address the Meeting. Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu said :—

Gentlemen, we assemble here this morning to celebrate the Forty-eighth Anniversary of the Birthday of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble Baron Chelmsford, Viceroy and Governor-General of India. (Cheers.)

It is with great pleasure that we have learned that His Excellency has graciously been pleased to allow the Bengalis to fight for their beloved King, and the glory of the British Raj. (Cheers.)

s, in the midst of great troubles, that His Excellency has undertaken the administration of this country, and we fervently hope that with his broad-heart and great and wise statesmanship, His Excellency the Viceroy would bring peace and prosperity to this country, and when His Excellency would depart from this country, after the completion of the term of his Viceroyalty, he would carry with him the love and esteem of the teeming millions of the Indian people. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the administration of India, with its vast and varied population, and the complicated political problems that face her, at present, is very difficult, and the rulers that would successfully rule it, must try to learn the real needs and wants of its people from those who are competent to make them known, and thereby make their administrative measures efficient and useful.

Now pray to God that He would grant His Excellency long life, health, peace and prosperity. (Cheers.)

Chairman then addressed the Meeting. He congratulated the Viceroy, on His Excellency's attaining the Forty-eighth Anniversary of his Birthday, and prayed for his long life. He also prayed for the speedy termination of the Great European War and for the complete victory of the British Arms with the Allies. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with a vote of thanks to the Chairman. According to Hindu custom, alms were then distributed to the poor.

(Vide, Empire, 12th, Bengalee, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 15th August, 1916.)

A congratulatory Message was forwarded to His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India, to which the following acknowledgment was received :—

(16) The Sixteenth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at the hall of the new buildings of the National Medical College, 301, Upper Circular Road, on Friday, the 19th August, 1916, at 5. P. M.—

To Congratulate the Hon'ble Nawabzada Syed Altaf Ali Sahib, of Bogra

On his election to the Bengal Legislative Council.

There was a very large and influential gathering the hall being filled to its utmost capacity by both Hindus and Mahomedans. Amongst those present, were the Hon'ble Nawabzada Syed Altaf Ali Sahib, of Bogra, the Hon'ble Mr. Aminur Rahman, the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ashraf Ali, the Hon'ble Mr. Bhabendra Nath Roy, (of Narail Raj Estate), Kumar Hari Prasad Roy Bahadur, (of Posta Rajbati), Kumar Sankar Roy Bahadur, Dr. Upendra Nath Chakravarti, Dr. Amulya Charan Neogy, Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, Dr. S. B. Kundu, Mr. Nibaran Chandra Mukerjee, Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu, and others.

On the arrival of the Hon'ble Nawabzada Sahib, Mr. Sham Lal day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, garlanded him and the Members of the Society received him very courteously.

On the motion of Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, seconded by Kumar Hari Prasad Roy Bahadur, (of Posta Rajbati), Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.D., M.S., Secretary, Bengali Regiment Committee, was voted to the chair.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, made a felicitous speech, explaining the objects of the Meeting and dwelling on the excellent qualities of head and heart of the honoured guest of the evening.

Mr. Sham Lal day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, then read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which having been duly confirmed, he read the following Address of Congratulation, which was very nicely printed in gold :

To

The Hon'ble Nawabzada Syed Altaf Ali Sahib, of Bogra Estate.

Member of the Legislature Council of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Fort William in Bengal, Member of the Bogra District Board, Chairman of the Bogra Municipality, Honorary Magistrate of the Independent Bench, Bogra Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Member of the Governing body of the Hasting House School, at Alipor, &c., &c., &c.

Hon'ble Nawabzada Sahib,

The Calcutta Literary Society begs to offer you its heartfelt congratulations on your well-merited election to the Legislative Council of His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the First Governor of the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.

The Society embraces this opportunity to offer its hearty thanks to your constituency for setting the zeal of its choice upon you.

It is in the fitness of things that it has pleased the Almighty Disposer of Events to make you a Councillor of the Government of Bengal. You have devoted your time and energy to securing the good of your country: you have acted in various public capacities, with credit to yourself and the approbation of your fellows, such as Chairman of the Bogra Municipality and Honorary Magistrate of that district, and by your splendid services, you have already secured the high esteem of all sections of the community and of the local authorities.

It is fervently hoped that you would not only spare any pains to further the interests of the community, but sincerely endeavour to ameliorate the condition of your beloved countrymen and help the benign Government with practical suggestions and wise counsels, which may hereafter prove beneficial to the people of Bogra.

Kindly accept our humble respects and hearty congratulations. May God shower His choicest blessings on you and grant you a long and prosperous life, to enable you to serve your country in a manner befitting the high position you now hold.

The Calcutta Literary Society, Yours Obediently,
24, Nimitola Street, Sham Lal Day,

Calcutta, 18th August, 1916. Founder-Secretary to the Society.

The Chairman then submitted the Address to the Hon'ble guest of the evening, amidst deafening cheers of the distinguished audience.

The Hon'ble Nawabzada Sahib, in a nice little speech, expressed his hearty thanks to the Society, for the handsome way in which he had been honoured. He thanked the Chairman for the complimentary terms in which he had referred to him and the work he had been able to do for his own district. The work before him in the Council was arduous and he hoped to do his best according to his lights, with the best wishes of his friends. He blessed the Society and wished the Institution every success.

The Chairman then asked Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, to address the Meeting.

Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, then delivered an eloquent and impressive speech, dwelling at length on the moral of the election of the Hon'ble Nawabzada Sahib, who had been sent to the Council, as the representative of the mixed electorate of Hindus and Mahomedans.

The learned Vakil made an impassioned appeal to the two communities to sink their differences, and make a common cause, and quoted the well-known words of Sir Syed Ahmed, comparing Hindus and Mahomedans, as the two eyes of a fair maiden, injury to one being inevitably followed by injury to the other.

The Vakil expressed his gratification at the fact that the Hon'ble Nawabzada Sahib had already gone through a full course of training for his arduous duties, by his work in the Municipality and the District Board, and said that those, who aspired to higher civic responsibilities, must have their apprenticeship in these self-governing institutions. The speech was very highly appreciated and created profound impression.

Short speeches were then delivered by the Hon'ble Mr. Bhabendra Nath Roy, Hon'ble Mr. Aminur Rahman, Hon'ble Mr. M. Ashraf Ali, Kumar Sankar Roy Bahadur, expressing their high appreciation of the personality and public services of the Hon'ble Nawabzada Syed Altaf Ali Sahib, and gratification at the success of the function in his honour, which testified to the esteem and confidence, in which he was held by the community.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting, in the course of which he said that he was glad that the New Bengal Legislative Council contained so many Members, who carried wise head over young shoulders being buoyant in heart and fresh in hopes. He gave them wholesome words of advice, exhorting them to prove themselves worthy of the confidence reposed in them and equal to the serious responsibilities, which they had incurred, saying that their countrymen expected each one of them to do his duty.

After the Chairman had finished his speech, the Nawabzada Sahib promised to do all he can for the welfare and prosperity of the people.

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to the Chair and the Hon'ble Councillors, present, after 8/30 P.M. (Vide, Empire, and Bengalee, 20th August, 1916.)

(17) A Deputation, consisting of Kumar Manindra Chandra Sinha Bahadur, (of Prikpara Rajbati), Kumar Hari Prasad Roy Bahadur, (of Posta Rajbati), Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu and other Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, waited on the Hon'ble Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi, K.C.I.E., Maharajah Bahadur of Cossimbazar, by appointment, at his palatial residence at Calcutta, No 302, Upper Circular Road, on Saturday, the 19th August, 1916, at 2 P.M.,

To present him an Address of Congratulation.

On his un-challenged and un-contested election to the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

The Nineteenth Public Meeting, of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held in College Square, Park, on Friday, the 1st December, 1916, at 7-30 A. M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhushan M.A., Ph. D., M.R.A.S., F.A.S.B., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate and Examiner of the Calcutta University :—

Celebrate the Seventy-third Anniversary of the Birthday of Her Imperial Majesty Queen Alexandra of England :—

The Chairman taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the proceedings of the last year's Seventy-second Anniversary of the Birthday Meeting of Her Imperial Majesty, convened by the Society, on the 1st December 1915, and the following Message then received from Her Majesty Queen-Alexandra of England, on the 2nd December, 1915 :—

Queen Alexandra thanks Calcutta Literary Society for kind Congratulations.

The Chairman then asked Mr. R. Palit, (of Howrah), to address the Meeting. Mr. R. Palit said :—

Chairman and Gentlemen, since we met here last year to commemorate the Seventy-second Anniversary of the Birthday of our beloved and esteemed Queen-Mother Alexandra, of England, we had hoped that this ill-fated War, which has brought Christian Europe into contempt before all the nations of the world, would, sooner or later, be brought to a termination, and that the Dove of Peace would hover over the Continent of Europe. But our expectations have been doomed to bitter disappointment.

Others sacrificing brothers at the altar of Moloch : What a grim mockery of European civilization ! In this season of Yule tide, when peace and good will should reign in every home, we see to-day the demon of war stalking over the land bringing devastation and ruin everywhere.

Coming here to celebrate the Seventy-third Anniversary of the Birthday of H.M. the Queen-Mother Alexandra, under the shadow of a world-wide sacrifice, we offer our supplications, this morning, to the Almighty, not only for the speedy victory of the British Arms, and its Allies, but, also for long life of Her Majesty the Queen-Mother. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I should like particularly to speak a few words to-day, on the Loyalty of the Indians. A wave of loyalty has flowed throughout the length and breadth of the land inundating every creek and corner. It is, no doubt, one of the most gratifying signs of the times. Our spontaneous loyalty, our steadfast attachment and devotion to the Throne have, touched the hearts of all Englishmen. The grumbings of discontent that were audible before the outbreak of the War, and which were misinterpreted in certain quarters as the portent of a revolution, have died down altogether.

Agitation for political reforms is not vigorously pursued. The consideration of contentious messages has been tabooed. Loyalty with the Indians is not a mere abstract sentiment, but the welling up of that virtue of the heart which makes gods of men.

Our flower of our young men have voluntarily offered their services to fight as common soldiers for H.M. the King-Emperor of India, undergoing unheard of privations. Do not these things bespeak of our loyalty to the Throne ? I do not wish to detain you long for nothing. Remember always that we have our duty in the present crisis in Europe, and the manner in which we perform it will redound to our glory or shame.

The Chairman then said :—It is with great delight that we assemble here, this morning, to commemorate the Seventy-third Anniversary of the Birthday of H.M. Queen Alexandra. The Calcutta Literary Society has been celebrating this Anniversary since Her Majesty became The Queen-Empress of India, in 1901. We hope the Society will continue to celebrate this happy Anniversary for many years to come, and we earnestly pray to God for the complete victory of the British Arms and for the long life of Her Imperial Majesty. (Cheers.)

(20) The Twentieth Public Meeting of the Forty-first session of the Society, was held at the hall of the Mahammed Taik's Jubilee Institution, 29, Mirzapore Street, on Saturday, the 19th December, 1916, at 6 P. M., under the presidency of Rai Srinath Pal Bahadur, Zamindar & Merchant, Sir Dorabji Tata, Kt., of Bombay, the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mahan Malavia, Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, and others, graced the Meeting with their kind presence. On the Chairman taking his seat, Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which having been duly confirmed, Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, delivered an eloquent and highly impressive lecture on—
The Need of Technical Education in India.

At the outset, the speaker offered the honoured guests a cordial welcome. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, he said, was their respected and beloved leader, who very ably represented the popular points of view in the Industrial Commission. He was doing his best there to place the standpoint of his countrymen on the great question of their industrial regeneration, and great expectations had already been built upon his labours.

Sir Dorabji Tata, Kt., of Bombay, continued Mr. Mukerjee, was the worthy son of a worthy father, bearing a name that is one to conjure with in the whole country. He gave wise words of advice, as President of the last Industrial Conference, and was one of the foremost captains of Industry, of whom the country was well proud. (Cheers.)

Proceeding, Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee made a rapid survey of the whole field of industrial possibilities in Bengal. The cry has gone up, what to do with our boys. The learned professions are over-stocked, so much so that there is hardly any standing room in them, and, yet, hundreds of bright-faces and promising youths are crowding the legal and other professions and impairing the National efficiency. Not lawyers or schoolmen, who are not wealth-producing agents, but industrialists that are badly wanted in the best interests of the country.

Mr. Mukerjee suggested there should be a network of technical schools all over this Presidency, to prepare the boys for their vocation as manufacturers or pioneers of industry, so that there should not be a single district without a properly equipped technical, school and special schools for teaching weaving, agriculture, and carpentry, so that, the industrial craft should come into existence in all parts of the province.

The sphere of usefulness of the Civil Engineering College, at Sibpur, deserves to be widened. The speaker expressed surprise that the College only existed to supply District Boards, with a handful of Engineers and overseers. A Mechanical Engineering College, in the opinion of the speaker, was a great desideratum to impart higher training in mechanical engineering, while a College of Sanitary Engineering, on the model of the Royal Sanitary Institute of London, is a crying want that should not long remain unfulfilled.

Electrical branches of work have opened up such unlimited vistas of usefulness that a separate Electrical Engineering College has become an urgent and imperative necessity. For proper instruction in mining, the speaker suggested the establishment of a Mining Institute at Ranigunge, or any other suitable place, on the lines of the Royal School of Mining in London.

Proceeding, Mr. Mukerjee said, that commercial education in Bengal has become an intolerable farce. There are a few struggling schools, with no co-ordination between them or proper control over them, that only aim at teaching short-hand, type-writing and book-keeping.

The Government Commercial Institute, unlike the Sydenham College of Commerce, in Bombay, was content with a low and grovelling ideal and its raison d'être seemed to be to produce only a few drudging quill-drivers. Madras is looking up, in this respect, but Bengal is doing nothing to keep abreast of the present day requirements of commercial education.

The scheme of the Government Commercial Institute, urged the speaker, should undergo a radical change for the better, so that, it might turn out trained experts to devote themselves to the work of exploitation and not office-clerks to receive more kicks than halfpence for their patient drudgery.

Turning to Agricultural education, Mr. Mukerjee complained that the policy of the Government has been in this matter, that of non-possumus, Bengal is the only Province that has no Agricultural College, being, in this respect, worse off than Behar or Nagpur. The Sibpur Engineering College has not turned out much of a success, but the fault lies in the Government not making the prospects of the schools suitably effective. The Cirencester scholars of the older days were generally drafted to magisterial and judicial duties and deputed to try cases of theft or larceny, while their knowledge and experience could have been turned to better account, if more of them had manned the Agricultural Department and the Demonstration Farms.

Agriculture should be systematically taught in the village schools and to crown them, there should be a Provincial Agricultural College to provide the much-needed supply of trained men to introduce innovations in the antiquated system of our agricultural work and set up as agriculturists, on the lines suggested by Sir Daniel Hamilton, Kt.

The speaker concluded with an impassioned appeal to the Indian Members of the Industrial Commission to lay their heads together with the leaders of the country and others, who have devoted careful attention to the subject, devise suitable measures for the Industrial regeneration of the country and press them hard upon the Industrial Commission and the Government, so that the economies of the Bhadrakolue class, which is at present faring so deplorably, might look up, and the wealth of the country and the efficiency of the people might increase, followed by the spread of happiness and contentment all round. (Cheers.)

Mr. Prafulla Kumar Basu then addressed the Meeting.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, in a few well-chosen words, thanked the Meeting, on behalf of Sir Dorabji Tata, Kt., and himself for the cordial welcome accorded to them on the occasion. He bestowed a warm eulogy upon Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, Vakil, for his interesting and inspiring speech, and thanked him for his instructive and useful suggestions, which, he said, should receive proper attention at the hands of those interested in the industrial salvation of the country. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting. He said:—
Gentlemen,

Before we part, I wish to make a few remarks, and I can assure you that I will not detain you much long by the infliction of a speech at the far end of the day, when your patience must have been well-nigh tired by the day's work.

In the first place, I beg to offer you my most cordial thanks for electing me as Chairman of this Meeting. I could have wished the business had been entrusted to some worthier hands, and there is no shadow of a doubt that I am voicing the views of the Meeting in saying that it would have more befitted the occasion and harmonised with the subject-matter of to-day's lecture, if the Chair had been taken by the Hon'ble Sir Dorabji Tata, Kt., who, in the midst of his innumerable engagements, has, with considerable sacrifice of his valuable time, spared a few moments to grace the Meeting with his kind presence.

You are well aware that he is a Member of the Indian Commission, now holding its sittings in our city. Chairman of the Directorate of the well-known Comp The Tata Iron and Steel Work, a brilliant model deshi enterprise, he is closely identified with all makes for the organisation, development, and improvement of the indigenous industries of the country.

A better selection you cannot imagine. I doubt not, suggestions and recommendations will have great weight with the Commission, and ultimately with the Government in the solution of the Industrial problems of the day.

On behalf of the Meeting, I beg also to offer our hearty thanks to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Mal for his very kindly taking part in its proceedings. Interest and activities in all matters, educational, especially in connection with the inauguration of the Hindu University, are well-known, and I fully associate myself with Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee's remarks regarding him. (Cheers.)

As for the subject-matter of the lecture, which has been ably dealt with by both the lecturers, I cannot pretend to know much about it, and, therefore, it would be an arrogance on my part to offer any remarks. As a congenial subject, closely allied to the Industrial topic of the day, I could only suggest the discussion of their views and recommendations in the press, to which they would undoubtedly be a valuable contribution. (Cheers.)

The Meeting dissolved with votes of thanks to the Chair and the Hon'ble guests of the evening.

(Idé, Bengalee, 10th, Empire and Amrita Bazar Patrika, December, 1916.)

(21) The Twenty-first Public Meeting, of the Forty-first anniversary of the Society, was held in College Square Park, on Tuesday the 12th December, 1916, at 7-30 A. M., under the presidency of Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidya-shan M.A., Ph.D., M.R.A.S., F.A.S.B., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Secondary Examinations, Fellow and Members of the Syndicate Examiner of the Calcutta University, to celebrate Fourth Anniversary of the Delhi Coronation Day.

Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, having read the proceedings of the last Meeting which was duly confirmed, the Chairman
Mr. R. Palit, (of Howrah), to address the Meeting.

Mr. R. Palit said:—

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, we have begun to-day upon the day, on which His Imperial Majesty King-Emperor of India, set his feet on Indian soil with feelings of elation. We, as a nation, are proud of the memorable day. The day on which His Excellent Majesty graced the Throne of Delhi with His Majesty's august presence, in company with the Indian Chiefs and Princes of India, and it will be handed down to posterity, as a red-letter day in the annals of Hindustan for it represented the wealth, the power, and the culture of the land. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, it reminded us of the eventful R. Yagna, commemorated by the Hindu Emperors to proclaim the suzerainty of their rule. It was, indeed, a spectacle to conjure with—the Royalties of India with traditions of their great past assented to offer the homage of their heart with fervent loyalty and devotion at the feet of His Majesty King-Emperor of India. This sentiment of loyalty permeated the inarticulate masses, and a huge wave of loyalty passed over India.

All India—from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin throbbled with sentiments of loyalty. From every village or town His Majesty passed, people flocked from all places to have a glimpse of the King-Emperor for the sight of an Emperor, to a Hindu, is filled with many blessings from Heaven. Yea, it was an auspicious day with a Hindu. His Majesty's interest in the welfare of the masses was evinced by the grant of Fifty lakhs of Rupees yearly for the illumination of those men pining away in the darkness of ignorance—as His Majesty's noble desire to see every home in India lighted by the torch-light of knowledge. Knowledge, power, and what wonders it has wrought in Japan, America and the United Kingdom, can very well be gauged by the rapid strides education has made in those places.

India, especially, is much in need of national life and something so vitally affects our interests, or is so deeply calculated to wound our susceptibilities as the policy that will put a spoke in the wheel of education. Illiteracy runs rampant everywhere in India. The masses could be converted into true sterling manhood of the nation by education what a mighty dynamic force they would become in the uplift of India. Education is the war-cry of India to-day in her struggle for existence. Linked as India is with England to-day, the education of her masses will not only be conducive to immense service to England, but England will be strengthened in the strength of India and this has been well demonstrated in the present Great European War. Her men have not only opened their purse-strings freely, but the best and the noblest of her sturdy sons have willingly sacrificed their lives in the present War in Europe, to save England from the ignominy of an invasion by the infernal Huns.

The thought of the Delhi Coronation Durbar Day will ever remain green in our memory, for it was, on this day, that His Most Gracious Majesty made a permanent grant for Primary Education in India, and, may those who rule India to-day take a leaf out of his book, is our fervent prayer. (Cheers.)

Chairman then made a nice little speech. He offered up a prayer to God for the long life, health, peace, and prosperity of His Imperial Majesty The King-Emperor of India and for the speedy termination of War and complete victory of the British Arms with the Allies. My Lord, I am glad to announce it to you that twenty-six illustrious personages have graciously been pleased to become Patrons and Honorary Members of the Calcutta Literary Society, during the year 1916, for which the grateful thanks of the Institution are hereby given to each of them. They have duly been elected.

My Lord, it is a matter of great satisfaction, which must cause legitimate pride to all connected with the Calcutta Literary Society, that the Right Hon'ble David Lloyd George, P.C., D.C.L., (Oxon.), M.P., late Secretary of State for War, (who is an illustrious Patron of this Institution, since 7th August, 1913), has now risen to occupy the most exalted and honored position of Prime-Minister of the British Empire. (Cheers.)

We sincerely congratulate him on the fresh honor bestowed upon him by this appointment and we sincerely hope that he may long live to enjoy the honour. (Cheers.)

Two other prominent Foreign Members of this Society, Viz:—

(1) The Right Hon'ble the first Viscount Milner, Bart, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., D.C.L., L.L.D., M.A., P.C., M.P., (an illustrious Patron of this Society, since 7th November, 1902, or, upwards of fifteen years), and

(2) The Right Hon'ble Arthur Henderson, P. C., M. P., President of the Board of Education, in England, since 1915, (an illustrious Patron of this Society, since 9th July, 1915), also now promoted to high places in the British Empire, a fact upon which the Society may well congratulate itself. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the Society hereby tenders its grateful thanks to the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., K.C., M.A., LL.B., Chief Justice of Bengal, for His Lordship's graciously condescending to become one of its Patrons and Honorary Members, in succession to Sir Lawrence Hugh Jenkins Kt., K.C.S.I., K.C., Chief Justice of Bengal, who is its Patron since 2nd May 1909.

One great desideratum of the Society, which serves to no inconsiderable extent to handicap it in its operations, is that the Society is not yet possessed of a local habitation of its own, although it has been the eldest child in the family of the societies of its class in Bengal, and in spite of its numerous distinguished patrons, members, and well-wishers. If the Society has lacked in any thing, it is in the spirit of ostentation and advertisement, without which very few things seem to flourish in the age in which our lot has been cast.

Even the most progressive and prosperous society cannot hope to have a permanent lease of life without a building of its own. So, a decent local habitation for the Calcutta Literary Society is the supreme and most pressing necessity. It is to be hoped that the Society will not long be without a permanent building, which is urgently called for in view of the growth in its sphere of usefulness.

The humble individual, who is now standing before you, has devoted his whole life and earnings to the work of this Literary Institution, since the last Forty-one years. Most of his former colleagues and fellow-workers have left the world, and he feels that his days of labour, too, will have ceased before many years are over. It will be a great consolation to him, in the evening of his life, and before its close, if he is assured that his works will be continued and the Society, for which he has laboured all his years, will have a habitation of its own. He can claim for the Society that it has proved to be a loyal, useful, and patriotic Institution in Bengal, and, as such, deserves public sympathy and support. (Cheers.)

He, therefore, ventures to appeal to its generous Patrons, Members, and well-wishers, to come forward and assist in the perpetuation of the Calcutta Literary Society. A commodious lecture-hall, with suitable accommodation for the Library of the Society, is a crying necessity, which cannot any longer be ignored. It is sad to reflect that a Society having a creditable record of work stretching for Forty-one years has no place to call its own and co-ordinate its activities.

The Society is now the oldest and the only surviving Literary Institution of its kind in Bengal. We have grown grey in its service, and the day is not distant when a new generation will step into our shoes, and we, its oldest members, may be judged by the richness of the legacy we have left behind.

Gentlemen, it is now to be earnestly hoped that under the august presidency of His Lordship the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal, at to-day's Forty-first Anniversary Meeting, will be of happy augury in opening a new chapter of increased usefulness in the history of this Literary Society of Forty-two years' standing, and that, before long, this much-needed want of a permanent building will be removed.

My Lord, I hope it would be deemed neither very ambitious, bold, nor venturesome, if I suggested that your Lordship should touch the trowel of its foundation and the silken strings of its future purses.

I fervently hope and trust that, by the grace of God, the next Anniversary Meeting of the Society will be marked by the laying of the Foundation Stone of the building of the Institution by your Lordship himself, who is one of its illustrious Patrons, Members and well-wishes. (Cheers.)

The Society is founded specially upon the principle of strict adherence to the British Crown and the Institution has thus been the means of bringing together the rulers and the ruled on one common platform.

To the Patrons, Members, friends, and well-wishers of the Society, I beg hereby to express my deep obligation for their unabated interest in the welfare of this Literary Institution of Forty-one years' standing.

The sincere thanks of the Society are hereby submitted to Dr. Henry Stephen, M.A., Ph.D., Professor, Calcutta University, who was quite pleased to preside at our last Fortieth Anniversary Meeting, to the gentlemen, who delivered lectures at its various public Meetings, and to those who presided on the occasions, as well as to those who lent their halls for holding its Meetings, during the year under review. (Cheers.)

The Society records its grateful appreciation of the kindness of the editors of the English and Vernacular newspapers, who have found space in their respective papers, for publishing the proceedings of the various public meetings and letters connected with the Institution during the year 1916.

The grateful thanks of the Society are also hereby tendered to the donors and subscribers, who voluntarily helped and thereby encouraged the Institution last year.

Gentlemen, let us now thank the Almighty Disposer of Events, by Whose fostering care this Society has been able to complete Forty-one years of its existence.

May God continue to shower His choicest blessings upon us, grant us strength to continue in our work, and cheer us in times of difficulty. (Cheers.)

In conclusion, let us pray to the Giver of all things that He may shower His choicest blessings on your Lordship and on your Lordship's amiable consort Lady Sanderson, who has already endeared herself to the teeming millions of India. (Cheers.)

After Mr. Sham Lal Day, the Founder-Secretary to the Society, had finished his Report, Kumar Rajendra Narayan Roy Bahadur, of Jorasanko Rajbati, (Honorary Presidency Magistrate, &c.), in proposing the adoption of the Forty-first Annual Report of the Calcutta Literary Society, addressed the assembly thus :—

Kumar Rajendra Narayan Roy Bahadur's speech :—

My Lord the Honble Chief Justice and Gentlemen :—

The task of proposing the adoption of the Forty-first Annual Report on the working of such an important and useful Institution like the Calcutta Literary Society has fallen upon me.

I need hardly assure you that I consider this as an honour but I wish the task had devolved on some other member connected with the Society for a longer period than I am. Nevertheless, it is with the greatest pleasure that I take up the duty.

In the first place, I venture to add my humble expression of gratefulness to the richly deserved encomiums passed by friends, Dr. Sarat Kumar Mullick, M.D., M.S., Dr. Henry Stephen, and Mr. J. Chaudhuri, Bar-at-Law the kindness and generosity with which the distinguished official, the Hon'ble Sir Lancelot Sanderson, K.C., M.A., LL.D., Chief Justice of Bengal, has, at the numerous calls on His Lordship's valuable time, found time to grace this meeting with His Lordship's august presence, this afternoon. (Cheers.)

The Calcutta Literary Society was founded in the Eighteen hundred and seventy-five, and we have here to-day to celebrate its Forty-first Anniversary. It has performed a most useful function by holding two public meetings, in which lectures and discourses on subjects, not only very important, but of the most agreeable character, have often been discussed by distinguished scholars and persons of acknowledged renown and reputation, for, during the year under review, no less than twenty-one such meetings have been held and reports of these meetings have been forwarded to personages of the highest dignity and position and expressions of kinship sympathy were received in reply.

The Society has been and is still performing one of the most agreeable functions amongst us, and I most fervently hope that it will continue to do so for years and years to come. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, with these few words, I beg to propose that the Forty-first Annual Report of the Society, now before you, be formally adopted. (Cheers.)

Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhusan's Speech :—

Mahamahopadhyaya Dr. Satish Chandra Vidyabhusan, M. Ph.D., M.R.A.S., F.A.S.E., Principal, Government Sanskrit College, Secretary to the Board of Sanskrit Examinations, Fellow and Member of the Syndicate of the Calcutta University, in seconding the proposal, addressed the Meeting thus :—

My Lord and Gentlemen :—

We have listened with great interest to the Report of work of the Calcutta Literary Society done during the year 1916. It is a brilliant record of the useful work done. There were twenty-one sittings during the year under report.

The indefatigable Founder-Secretary to the Society, Mr. Sham Lal Day, has the knack of utilising the services of all literary men worth the name, not only resident in Calcutta, but also those who may happen to visit our city now and then.

The vigilant Mr. Day is sure to fall upon even chance visitors and give them no rest till they have done something for his Society. It is no small matter that during the Forty-two years of its existence the Calcutta Literary Society has never done anything likely to displease the Government or the public. (Cheers.)

But, there is one thing which the Society is badly in need of ; Vis.—its own house where it may be located. At present it is a peripatetic Institution moving from place to place when its meetings are to be held. The Founder-Secretary, with his usual zeal, is trying to secure it a suitable habitation and the presence to-day of Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal at this Forty-first Anniversary Meeting is a sure guarantee that the Secretary's efforts are sure to be crowned with success, in no distant future. Now I wish the Society every success. (Cheers.) With these few words, I beg to second the adoption of the Report that has just been so ably proposed by my friend Kumar Rajendra Narayan Roy Bahadur. (Cheers.)

Mr. J. Chaudhuri, M. A., Bar-at-law's speech :—

Mr. J. Chaudhuri, M.A., Bar-at-Law, Editor, Calcutta Weekly Notes, in supporting the proposition, said :—

That he would welcome the idea of a well-organised Calcutta Literary Society being housed in the neighbourhood of the College Square. If it could be furnished

h. a reading-room and library, he was sure it would be a favourite resort for the young and the old. If the Founder-Secretary, who is so well-known for approaching all classes of people, from the noblest to the commonest, for lending their kind patronage to the Society, would pursue with the zeal and consistency, which is so characteristic of him, there can be little doubt that he would be able to accomplish the object he has in view. The only practical obstacle to it would seem to be the present War, but this has only taught them the lesson that by persistence and perseverance every obstacle may eventually be overcome. If the Founder-Secretary would take courage from the lesson and never despair of accomplishing it, there could be little doubt that he would be able to find the Society suitably housed at no very distant date. (Cheers.)

The President then confirmed the Forty-first Annual report of the Society. He asked Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee, B.L., Vakil, to deliver his lecture on—

The Hindu Ideal of Culture :—

Mukerjee began by referring to the excellent work done by the Calcutta Literary Society during a long period of more than forty years. A Literary Society is a true measure of culture of a community and judged this standard, the Calcutta Literary Society has deserved well of the community in this great city by holding a larger interest in life. The Society had grown up in small beginnings and when he contemplated its growth and development, he was reminded of the words of Lowell.

Old small beginnings ! Ye are great and strong,

Based on a faithful heart and tireless brain.

Ye build the future fair, Ye conquer wrong.

Ye earn the crown and wear it not in vain.

It has yet been for the Society to earn the crown, but he hoped that by the blessings of God and the sympathy and best wishes of all, the Society would grow from more to more and find an abundant measure of success for its varied useful activities.

He referred to the want of a suitable building for the Calcutta Literary Society and appealed to the public to remove this long-felt want.

Sachindra Nath Mukerjee then referred to the inhuman atrocities perpetrated by the Teutons in the name of Kultur and said that if it was the recent development of the ideal of culture, the sooner God's thunder crashed upon it, the better for the civilization of the world and the progress of humanity.

The ideal of superman was condemned in unmeasured terms and contrasted with the sweet Hindu conception of harmony. While brute strength was the measure of man's perfection with the modern Huns and aggressors, the dormant principle in their code of ethics, the Hindu laid stress on peaceful development and love and goodwill among men.

Truth, as sweetness and light, as the study and the pursuit of perfection, as growth in wisdom and beauty as explained at length and with great force and the speaker dwelt impressively on the quest of the Infinite, the distinctive peculiarity of the Hindu mind.

Mukerjee concluded, with a glowing and rapturous creation dwelling on the spiritual renaissance of the East in which, he said, India will fully participate and be as inspired as she now is, with the stirrings of new life and new hopes and aspirations. (Cheers.)

Mr. R. Palit's speech :—

Hon. the President then asked Mr. R. Palit to read his paper on the subject which was as follows :—

Lords and Gentlemen—

A maxim, perhaps worth repeating, that more than ever to-day are our children, and the children of the nation, generally, the most precious asset of the Empire ; and how best to equip them for the battle of life with the best sort of culture, is one of the most difficult problems that one has to solve. Never before have we felt, so seriously, or with such awe, the responsibility which rests with us, with regard to the sort of culture to be given to our young men. It ushered in a new era, so to speak, in 1797, when King Charles Grant submitted his Observations on the state of society among the Asiatic subjects of Great Britain, and suggested culture as a remedy of the situation. So it was that institutions were established to bring the light of culture into the minds of our countrymen.

Ram Mohan Roy was our first nation-builder, and, after him, came David Hare, who built the Hindu College. The Missionaries then opened their institutions. Macaulay's rhetoric settled the controversy between 'Anglicists and Orientalists,' and English became the medium of instruction. Wood's despatch of 1854 led to the foundation of the Indian Universities.

What is the situation, gentlemen, after a century of this educational experiment ? The situation, to say the least, is one of perplexity. The strong leaven of English culture has brought about a complete transformation in the character of our young men. English culture, with altogether a different ideal from that of ours, has converted our students into a sort of godless men, with hardly any faith in religion. In a fine passage, a great Irish poet, who calls himself "A. E.," has the following words :—"The wild riders went forth to work their will." In a similar manner, the wild riders of the education department, since the days of Lord Macaulay, have gone forth to work their will on Indian minds ; and the result is educational disequilibrium. Free trade, in English categories of life and thought, has been the free wreckage of old beliefs. Greco-Latin culture has communicated a new impulse to our life ; it has not solved our problem ; and you, who read every day of the great conflict of nations in Europe,—you may easily understand what have been the results of the new scientific culture in the West. The burning of Louvain, the destruction of Rheims, the sinking of ships, the slaughter of men and women—such has been the outcome of a culture, which has devastated Europe. Science, technique, organization, efficiency have their place in life ; but left alone to rule unchecked, they have produced the whirlwind of an aggressive civilization. If education is to be a saviour of our society, its programme must be controlled by the spirit and ideals of Hindu culture. Any deviation from such ideals in the task of nation-building is doomed to failure. Any attempt at moulding the life of our young men on the ideals of western culture would go to make of them a total wreck of humanity.

What is the meaning of culture ? Culture may be summed up as the organized context of the mind of a nation or an individual, the sum-total of their strivings, aspirations and their ideals, the context of the life in man. This life has three forms ; Viz :—

The first is the theoretic, appearing as man's longing to know, man's disinterested desire for truth.

The second is the practical, appearing as man's desire to realize the good.

The third is the aesthetic, appearing as the desire for beauty and worship,— the longing to have repose in art and religion. Some savants in Europe limit culture to the beautiful, while others, like Kant, identify culture with the intellectual life of man. The Hindu's is a comprehensive view of culture and refers to the full context of the mind, enlightened, disciplined, refined.

Every great civilization is the objective realization of a type of culture. Thus, the German civilization is shaped by a culture, which makes the will to dominate over everything else. A Spanish writer, Senor Melgar, has remarked that the German system of education has created the sumum of material civilization and the absolute absence of moral civilization. Greek civilization was shaped by a culture, which regarded activity as the essence of virtue and which trained the young men as citizens. The English are a practical people with a sense of kindly humour and a dislike for dogma ; they are instinctive pragmatists. Culture, from the English standpoint, is, essentially, related to practical life. "Knowledge is power": and what is true must work.

"*Life is not an idle ore,
But iron dug from central gloom,
And heated hot with burning fears,
And dipped in baths of hissing tears,
And battered by the shocks of doom
To shape and use.*"

The Hindu civilization was controlled by a harmonious culture. The Hindu conception of the perfect man is that of the Yukta, the harmonized one. Voltaire would have us work without thinking, else would life become unbearable. The Hindu ideal of culture does away with this antithesis of work and thought, action and morals. So it is, we read over and over again in the Gita, that the Sankhya of thought and the Yoga of action are both necessary. He seeth who seeth that the Sankhya and Yoga are one. Sri Krishna is, you know, regarded in the Hindu books as the model man ; and why ? The word Krishna is radically connected with Krish, which means culture : and Krishna may well be interpreted to mean the man of culture. The life of Sri Krishna, indeed, is a significant illustration of the Hindu conception of the life of culture, which is the life of balance, of harmony. Karma and Gnan and Bhakti are beautifully blended in the blessed life. In the council of the kingdom, he speaks and behaves as a man of action, a statesman-warrior : in the Gita, he speaks as a great teacher and has given the world a wisdom-scripture of matchless beauty, and something of his Bhakti, his wondrous love for nature and man and the Eternal Unseen is revealed to us in the stories, which tell of how he moved with the flute upon his lips, moved from place to place, from village to village, and hamlet to hamlet chanting the song of sacred love and ravishing the hearts of the Gopis, the simple innocent milk-maids in the distant past. In Krishna, knowledge and action and emotion were not sundered, but were harmonized in their highest form so far as his earth environment could permit. Krishna is our symbol and our model of the life of culture.

This life of culture in its three forms :—

- (1) Theoretical,
- (2) Practical,
- (3) Aesthetic,

is beautifully represented by three significant Hindu terms ; viz :—

- (1) Darshana (insight),
- (2) Dharma (social good),
- (3) Sanga (fellow ship),

And I proceed to interpret each one of these aspects of culture. Culture, in the first place, is the life of Darshana. What is Darshana ? The word means seeing, sight, perception, and vision, we may call it synthesis ; culture is synthesis of knowledge. It is not mere accumulation of facts : modern curriculum of studies involves a survey of too many subjects, too many text-books ; neither specialization nor encyclopaedic teaching constitutes true culture. Passion for knowledge is good, but, knowledge should be a synthesis. Therefore, the student should develop, at once, his intellect and his intuition. Bergson has rendered service to his generation by indicating the value of intuition, but he misses the right link, when he postulates a complete cleavage between intellect and intuition. The Hindu books regard the two, as interpenetrating one the other. Culture may be summed up as the means of salvation.

Culture, in the next place is the life of Dharma. They err, who condemn the Hindu Ideal as unpractical ; the great Hindu teachers of the past were wiser than the critics of to-day ; the life of culture regarded as more than a synthesis of knowledge. It was life of Dharma, a life practical. Dharma involves a sense of social solidarity ; Hindu believed in the social value of education ; he believed that the desire to realize the good was an instinct operative in each individual. The theories of Karma and Re-birth were philosophical foundation of belief in social solidarity. I work for society, for the social order of the future, which, I know, cannot be secured in my life—because, my real self will not die, but will abide and return in another body to share in the life of society, which I seek to shape to-day. I do not if, in the literature of the world, there is a loftier conception of social solidarity than the Hindu one, which permits me to think, to believe that I may be linked birth after birth with the social life of my people. Hence, too, the peculiar reverence for the social order in ancient India.

Yet another element which entered into the Hindu conception of Dharma, was a consciousness of universal immanence of the Divine. The Hindu knew that physiological explanations of life explained little, that true culture must make its appeal to the soul. So it was that the school was a part of a temple, and it was around a temple that the central civilisation was built. In the University of Nalanda there were hundred pulpits for preaching the religious ideals, and students, we read, attended these discourses without fail even for a minute. The school became thus a temple of wisdom. Culture, in the third place, regarded as a life of communion—fellowship (Sa- Modern educational machinery was conspicuous for its absence ; education included both training and teaching ; and to draw out the sentiment of the higher self, the method of fellowship was emphasized in all educational work. And, first, the student was to have fellowship with Nature ; schools and colleges, the great ashramas of old, were situated in places invested with beauties of Nature. Every student lived as a child of the open-air ; he felt the significance of the magic of the earth ; he had his daily bath in open exercise in the open air ; so it was that he enjoyed the daily exercise, he developed the character, improved the appetite, trained his sensory nervous system, developed his brain and, in the process, and worship of Nature's great life and the beauty of common things, he realized his kinship with the mystery that is God. He learnt to love flowers, offered them as a sacrifice to Saraswati. (Godde-learning).

To feel one's kinship with the flower, with Nature's order and beauty, is to receive education, which books and libraries cannot give. Students in the old ashramas were given silent periods, when they could commune with Nature ; so, their hearts became purer, their impulses finer ; and, in these silent periods, were born the resolves, which revolutionized their lives. The silent child is wiser than the Aurileus speaking. The student in the old ashramas was such a silent child ; silent, healthy, self-controlled, full of tender emotions, that when he matured in the years of his manhood, to become an efficient citizen, a true Aryan house-holder, a guardian of the great Ideals of Mother India.

The student was to have fellowship, not only with Nature, but, also with his Guru. The Guru was not a paid teacher ; no fees were received in schools and colleges of ancient India. A Guru is defined in the books, as one "who performs the purification ceremonies over a boy and instructs him in the science of knowledge." The Guru, (the teacher,) was to be a man of purity, of scholarship and great intuition. He did not interfere much with the life of the pupil. He never regarded his pupil's mind as a tabula

(a blank page); he believed in the organic growth of the pupil; and the method, he employed in order to bring about the development of his pupil's personality, was one of suggestion and sympathy; he had the child-like eagerness to share his knowledge, his experience, his lives with those whom he accepted as his pupils. How unlike he to the modern teacher in India, who admits the pupil to his office-room, but not to his heart, who behaves as an official dressed as an authority, not as father anxious to bless the students, and so be blessed. No wonder, students hastened from all sides to such Gurus; they came, says an ancient book, like waters to the deep; they came with the fuel in their hands as a symbol of their sacred vow to serve their Teacher and maintain the sacred fires of the Race-ideals and Race-culture; they lived in the Guru's house, as members of his family, his spiritual sons; the schools and colleges were centres of social Ideals, not mere academies of learning; the Guru was not a pedagogue, but a great man, the burden-bearer of a great Ideal, the witness to a great life. The pupil's fellowship, with such a teacher, trained him as no books and academic addresses can: obedience to the teacher and service were conditions of knowledge; the very meaning of the word Ashrama is the place of austerities, (i. e.,) the place, not simply of learning, but of discipline and service; the student's intellect and will and emotions were disciplined; he learnt the power of concentration, the control of thought activity; he learnt to avoid prejudice in the quest of knowledge; he learnt to control his vague desires, to organize his impulses, to practice Brahmacharyya; he learnt at the feet of his Guru of his essential kinship with Cosmic Reason; he learnt to discern the values of the inner world, and so to reverse the inner principles of conduct and life.

Great was the discipline imposed upon the pupil; and great the reverence inspired by the teacher. During the seven hundred years, since the foundation of the Nalanda University, says the Chinese traveller, there has been not a single case of guilty rebellion against the rules. The Gurus of old won their pupils' hearts; for, teaching was, with them, not a profession, but a ministry, a service, an apostolate, and the pupils lived in the Guru's universe of Love. If only the modern world had many such Ashramas, centres of Truth and Love and Beauty—there would not be, I am confident, the sordid evil things that have scarred the great civilizations of the modern world.

The student was trained, in the third place, to a fellowship with national traditions. The modern mistake of the multiplicity of subjects was scrupulously avoided by the wise ones, who framed the curricula of studies in ancient India. The student of to-day reads so many subjects and so many text-books, which have no living relation whatsoever to the problems of his people; and he feels that culture ends in headache or dyspepsia.

The student in ancient Aryyavarta read a few books including the great classics of the nation—the Ramayana and Mahabharata—and he felt the inspiration of the past. The classical literature of the West is of great value for modern India engaged to-day upon the various problems, arising out of the new national consciousness; Greco-Latin culture has a message for the sons and daughters of the soil; but the new Renaissance, for which the world is waiting, will not come until we, in India, recognize the vital value of Hindu literature. The poets of ancient India are become a part of our race-experience; they enter into the daily life of India's masses; they are the veritable exponents of our race-ideals; race-mystics were those great savants, who wrote the Ramayana, Mahabharata, Sakuntala, the Vedas, the Upanishads, and the Bhagabadyita. These books will introduce India's young men to a world surcharged with a national, a spiritual, and an ethical atmosphere; they will enrich the life of the world. For Hindu poetry is charged with the creative power of the soul, that is above the dust and heat of the controversial, secular aspects of things; it throbs with the joy and worth of life and living; it vibrates with a message of the Glory and the wonder of the AUM. It is a literature of intense realization and thrills with notes of a lovely music, like the singing of those celestial ones, of whom we read again and again in the ancient books.

The student was to have fellowship, not alone with Nature, the Guru and the national Past; he was to have fellowship with the Present. God is the great inspirer of the Past and the Present, and every one, who studied in the great Ashramas was expected to be in touch with the social life; he had to go out of his Ashrama every day and get clothes, food, bedding and medicine from house-holders in villages; he also had to serve his teacher in a variety of ways. So developed the student-life full of tender grace and beauty; full of work power and character-power; the pupils' lives grew like the lily, in purity and spontaneity;—lives marked for purity, humility, passion for truth, and loving service; the students were in knowledge like a child, in intellectual force like a giant.

Great universities sprang up in different parts of India, one of them having as many as three thousand students; great thinkers, poet-seers, writers, astronomers appeared; and great women, like Gargi and Maitreyi spoke on Mimansa (Philosophical Inquiry); over forty thousand volumes were written and Hindu culture made its influence felt in distant lands, like China, Persia, Egypt, and Rome.

Not many of India's students to-day are aware of the rich and varied contents of Hindu culture. It was a fashion, some time ago, to damn the Hindu literature with faint praise and call it the product of fancy. Ueberweg thought that the Hindu revelled in mere imagination and could not produce Philosophy; and Hegel wrote his Philosophy of History with the idea that the evolution of World's thought was exhausted at the shores of the Mediterranean. A careful study will show that Hindu Culture is significant and varied. We have books on Mathematics; read them and you will know that the Hindus invented the decimal system, and were well-versed in Geometry, Algebra, and Trigonometry. We have books on Astronomy; and these show that the ancient Hindu discerned the diurnal motion of the earth. We read of the greater knowledge of Bhaskara, of the observatory of Raja Jaya Singh; there are books, again, showing how great was the progress made by the Hindus in experimental chemistry; there are books, which record the Hindus' knowledge of Physics, Optics and Acoustics; the ancient Hindus were familiar with Medical Science, with anatomy, and the methods of observation and experiment; Charaka, the head physician of King Kanishka was a medical expert; Panini's book is a monument to genius and is one of the world's few great books on Grammar and Etymology. Then, we have books on Lexicography, Prosody, Rhetoric, Painting, Music, Sculpture and Architecture. Hindu Nyaya presents a new synthesis of Logic, not inferior to Aristotle's; Hindu Philosophy is a contribution to the study of the sub-conscious; Hindu Metaphysics influenced Neo-Platonism and German Idealism.

We have books, too, on History, the idea being recognized that history must be a record and interpretation of civilization; the Puranas give splendid materials for history. We have a beautiful history of Harsavardhan, the Emperor of North India; Rajatarangini is a good chronicle of Kashmir. We have books, too, on Economics (Artha-Shastra), and beautiful suggestions are thrown out concerning moralism, which avoids the extremes of Capitalism and hunger-born Socialism. We have books, too, on Politics basing Hindu government, not on national egotism and superiority, but trust in human nature interpreted as rooted in the Eternal Self.

Hindu Ethics is inspired by the lofty idea of Nishkama, the service of the whole, without the personal gain or the motive of applause; Hindu sociology with its emphasis on the doctrine of the deed (Karma), its recognition that human personality is a relationship, and its message of social solidarity sets forth a socio-religious type of civilization, which the world will do well to study. Again, study Hindu Epic, Hindu Drama, and you find that the Hindu writers had a profound perception of the truth that the secret of life was self-renunciation. Study, again, Hindu Theology, and you find how piteous is the world's need to-day of the Doctrine of the Self concerning which these books speak again and again.

Rich and varied, more than my feeble words may tell, are the contents of Hindu culture; and the spirit of that culture was so catholic, so liberal, so beautifully detached from influences of narrow nationalism and from race-prejudices. It will be a great day when India's young men undertake their studies in this catholic spirit, learning in humility and with enthusiasm what England has to teach in the departments of Sciences, Technics, Literature, Social efficiency and Industrial organization.

Sad it is to think that Hindu culture has been ignored for a long time. India has been the home of religion and religious philosophy; yet, Professor Jastrow, in his "Study of Religion, its History and Character" says nothing of India. Hindu Philosophy has not yet found the place it deserves in the great volumes in the History of Philosophy written by European thinkers. Nor is the situation satisfactory in India; Hindu Literature has but a small subsidiary place in the programme of studies for India's young men. Calcutta is the only University, which has a Chair—only recently established, for the study of Indian culture. Hardly fifty-three, out of every one thousand males, can read or write; not more than five per cent of our population is literate. The Atmavidya is neglected; secularism has set in; and in our studies of politics, philosophy and literature, we forget that the concepts, which are not symbols of our own experience and our race ideals, can have no future in India.

And, as I survey the situation, sometimes I feel embarrassed, depressed, yet in the calm hour of faith, when I ask myself the question "Shall India be born again?" I say to myself, "I believe." When, how, I do not know. The Mother will be great again, if you, young men of India, could kindle in your hearts this flame of faith and work up to that great ideal.

Perhaps, many of you have read the Phalguni,—a four-act play by our Poet Sir Rabindra Nath Tagore, Kt. It speaks of the blind singer, who finds the ancient good within the cave of the heart and sings of that, as the secret of life; he has but one passion—to sing; but one idea—the song; and is to all else blind.

Locked up in the hearts of children of the soil, is the ancient good, the Dharma Sanatana; in you, are rich powers of the creative life; in you, the pent-up splendour of the spirit that bends all matter to its sacred purpose; in you, the hidden forces, the treasures, that ye know not of. But the ancient good will not be discerned, the ancient Dharma will not be fulfilled, till you become as was the blind singer—filled with one idea, the song—to all else blind.

The lands and peoples of the west need piteously the song of the ancient Dharma, to still the storms of modern civilization. It is India, who shall call Europe back to the quest for the inner spirit. But where are the singers and the song? Many activities and organizations, many sounds and strifes—ah, but where are the singers and the song? India's ancient sky—blue as blue can be—still bends tenderly; India's ancient earth—green as green can be—still smiles lovingly; the woodland flowers still bloom wildly; ah, but where are the singers and the song?

Old mantras are recited; old rites are still repeated; but the Mother,—the hoary-headed Mother seated within the veil of Eternity—the Mother, with loves and longings in her eyes, asks you, asks me, asks every one, who loves to call himself a child of India—the Mother asks, "Where are the singers and the song?" Sons of the sages of India, do but strive to surrender yourselves in faith and love to the Lord; keep alive the sacred flame of your race-consciousness; be the burden-bearers of the nation; retain your loyalty to the ancient good, the eternal Dharma, that has given India, age after age, gracious souls, prophets, poets and sages—gifted with tongues of fire, and the song—the long-lost song—shall come home back to you.

You, then, will weave new wonders; you, then, will fashion for India a future fairer even than her past; your heritage—the race of Rishis and Kings, the heritage of noble immortal things will enrich the world.

India the ancient, India the beloved, then, will be a new Beacon in this world of strife. India, then, will give back to England a hundred-fold, give back voice and pen, wisdom and faith and beauty, that will build a brotherly civilization, for the saving of the sorrow-smitten nations of the world; Europe's Science and Literature, Philosophy and Civilization may then be studied in the West; the Universities of Europe will then do homage to Hindu culture; the ancient culture of India and the Mother's ancient message shall travel on and on, as century shall follow century, conquering centres of civilization and magnifying the name of the Eternal, in whom is the abiding home of the nation of the East and the West. (Prolonged Cheers.)

The Revd. Anagarika H. Dharmapala's Speech:

The Hon'ble President then asked the Revd. Anagarika H. Dharmapala of Ceylon to address the Meeting. Mr. Dharmapala dwelt upon the subject for nearly a quarter of an hour. In the course of his remarks he said that in his tours throughout India, Japan, England and America, he had seen a good many concrete examples of culture, which gave ample evidence of the stuff the nations were made of.

But, where is the Hindu Ideal of Culture? It now lacks the essential spirit which once made Hinduism so great over the world. He asked the audience to give up the spirit of hatred against one another, holding aloft the banner of real Aryan Culture to which both Hindu and Buddhism have made their glorious contributions to which would, he believed, at no distant future, make the Hindus one of the foremost nations of the world. (Cheers.)

Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bosu's Speech:—

The Hon'ble President then asked Mr. Prafulla Kumar Bosu to address the Meeting. Mr. Bosu then rose and in the course of his speech said:—

Your Lordship and gentlemen:—The ancient Aryans of India had very lofty ideals of culture. They had very high spiritualistic ideals and they devoted their thoughts more to the greatness and spiritual improvement of the eternal soul than to temporary terrestrial welfare.

Though they worshipped various gods and goddesses yet they knew and preached that there was One ultimate Great Being, who was the Creator of the vast universe. Their religion was a sublime monotheism in polytheism. The ancient Aryans had very high and lofty ideals of education, and the unselfishness and devotion to learning and culture among the ancient Aryan preceptors are really deserving of the greatest praise.

They held in very great holiness and veneration the relation between the preceptor and the pupil and no mercenary thoughts entered into the mind of the preceptor in imparting education to the pupil. (Cheers.)

The Hon'ble The Chief Justice of Bengal's Speech:—

The Hon'ble President then got up amidst deafening applause and delivered an eloquent and sympathetic speech for half an hour, in the course of which His Lordship said that it had afforded him sincere pleasure to preside at the Forty-first Anniversary Meeting of the Calcutta Literary Society.

He was very glad to see the useful work that the Society carried on from year to year, and bestowed high eulogy upon Mr. Sham Lal Day, its indefatigable Founder-Secretary for his work and zeal. He was greatly pleased to see that so many young men had come to listen to the subject of the lecture, for that indicated promise for Culture. (Cheers.)

The lectures delivered that evening amply testify to the good work done by the Calcutta Literary Society. Great is the influence of literature on men and Society. He was very much struck with the facility of speech and the mastery of the English language and literature acquired by the Indians in this country. The existence of societies of this kind no doubt promoted a love of literature among them. (Cheers.)

His Lordship was much impressed with the strong plea put forward by speaker after speaker with such convincing force, for a suitable building for the Calcutta Literary Society. He had no doubt that with a building of its own, the Society would be placed on a secure foundation and its sphere of usefulness would greatly increase.

The Society had many years of good and useful work to its credit and it was really surprising that it had not yet possessed a permanent habitation. His Lordship hoped that before long, this want would be removed and the Society would be accommodated in a building of its own, worthy of itself and suitable for its purposes.

His Lordship then referred to the speeches delivered on the occasion and said they were of high literary merit. He made some remarks on the influence of literature on men and how it had helped towards the formation of character.

His Lordship also related the story of a well-known person, whose passion for literature was so great, that even when laid up in what proved to be his death-bed, he was reading "Rob Roy" and as one day, he was poring over the book, a friend of his came to enquire of his health. The reader replied "I don't know and I don't care, I am reading Rob Roy."

His Lordship then made a glowing reference to the immense sacrifice made by the Indians on the battle-fields of Mesopotamia and Frontiers and joined issue with those who said that Indians were not capable of self-sacrifice. He congratulated the speaker Mr. Sachindra Nath Mukerjee upon his eloquent speech. The reading of too many books, however, observed His Lordship, does not necessarily make a good scholar. He advised the audience of the evening to read a few well-chosen books and read them thoroughly and thus have a stable foundation to build upon.

His Lordship gave humorous anecdotes, showing how the description in good books leads people to forget even their ordinary interests. He then wished the Society every success and expressed the hope that the Institution might do much useful work in the near future, and would come to be regarded as a centre of literary activity in this great city. (Prolonged Cheers.)

The Rajah Bahadur of Santosh's Speech ;—

Rajah Manmatha Nath Roy Chowdhury Bahadur of Santosh, (who has made his marks as an orator), in an eloquent speech proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair, which was listened to with rapt attention.

The Kumar Bahadur of Uttarpara's Speech :—

Kumar Sree Panchanan Mikhopadhyay Bahadur, B.Sc.O., F.R.S.A. (London), F.R.Met.S. (London), &c., of Uttarpara, in seconding the proposal, addressed the assembly thus :—

Gentlemen :—The Calcutta Literary Society feels indeed highly honoured by the kind presence of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal, and in having such a celebrity to grace to-day's most auspicious function—the commemoration of its happy Forty-first Anniversary Celebration. (Cheers.)

Well are we proud of the unique presence in our midst, this afternoon, of such a worthy unification of the aristocracy of head with the aristocracy of heart in the person of the noble President. (Cheers.)

Personally, now delighted I am to find my esteemed friend, Sir Lancelot Sanderson, as my successor this evening, as I had the honour of presiding over the Twenty-eighth Anniversary celebration of this Literary Society, on Saturday, the third January, 1914, or just three years ago. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, the presence of the Hon'ble President, whom Divine Providence decorates with man's richest ornaments—simplicity, sweetness of disposition, and, above all, goodness of heart, whose many-sided activities, and keen and noble-hearted interest in, and practical encouragement of social, public, educational and literary movements, calculated to benefit the Province, and whose position as the supreme Dispenser of Justice in our sacred Fatherland, have not only made him a person of versatile genius but only marked him out a conspicuous figure in Bengal, but have really won and captivated the hearts of Bengal, in such a short period, adds especial significance to the joyous occasion that has brought us together here. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, such a person has so kindly graced the function with his presence and taken the leading part in the proceedings, and I have very great pleasure in performing the pleasant task devolved on me of seconding the proposal of offering a hearty vote of thanks to the Chair, so ably moved by my friend, the worthy Rajah Bahadur of Santosh, and am equally delighted to find that it is going to be supported by my young friend and brother, the Maharajah of Susang. May God bless Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Chief Justice of Bengal. (Cheers.)

The Maharajah Bahadur of Susang's Speech :—

Maharajah Bhupendra Chandra Sinha Surua Bahadur of Susang, in an eloquent speech supported the Resolution. The Meeting dissolved at 8 P. M.

(Vide, Empire and Statesman, 18th, Benjalee and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 19th, and Hindu Patriot, 20th January, and 10th February, 1917, respectively.)
